Mr. Maples: The available details inward and outward investment (distinguishing direct, portfolio and other flows) are contained in table A8 of the December 1991 issues of "Economic Trends" published by the Central Statistical Office, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library. Annual figures for 1991 are not yet available.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much Japanese capital is currently invested in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maples: The latest available information relates to the book values of direct investments in branches, subsidiaries and associates of Japanese companies in the United Kingdom at the end of 1989 and is published in table 2.6 of "Business Monitor MA4 (1989 Overseas Transactions)" published by the Central Statistical Office, a copy of which is in the Library.

Local Authority Borrowing

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the total local authority borrowing requirement for each year from 1978-79 to 1991-92, estimated.

Mr. Mellor: The total local authority borrowing requirement (LABR) for each year from 1978-79 to 1990-91 is as follows:

	LABR £ billion
1978-79	1·3
1979-80	3·0
1980-81	2·1

1981-82	−0·2
1982-83	0·1
1983-84	1·2
1984-85	2·4
1985-86	1·7
1986-87	0·1
1987-88	1·4
1988-89	0·3
1989-90	1·3

An estimate for the LABR in 1991-92 will be published in the 1992 FSBR.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total corporation tax raised from companies in regard to their activities in Wales in 1990-91.

Mr. Maude: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the gross domestic product of (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Greater London in (i) cash and (ii) real terms in each year from 1980-81 to 1991-92, estimated.

Mr. Mellor: Current price figures for Greater London up to 1989 are published in "Economic Trends" No. 457, November 1991 page 96. These include the income from employment of non-residents who work in Greater London. Alternative estimates given on page 92 exclude the income of non-residents. These do not measure the whole of the economic activity taking place in Greater London, but annual estimates are available up to 1990. Both pages include comparable figures for the United Kingdom. Only calendar year estimates are made.

Constant price estimates of regional GDP are not made because there are no regional deflators. Comparable constant prices figures for the United Kingdom are given in table 1.3 of the Central Statistical Office Blue Book, 1991 edition, "United Kingdom National Accounts".

Government Revenue

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total Government revenue, including all taxation and other income accruing to both central and local government, for the year 1990-91; and what was the revenue per capita.

Mr. Mellor: The information on total general Government revenue, defined as total current and capital account receipts, is published in the Central Statistical Office monthly publication "Financial Statistics" in tables 2.1 and 2.2 and is £220,347 million for the financial year 1990-91. The total revenue divided by the home population for mid-1990 as published in "The United Kingdom National Accounts" (CSO Blue Book) table 17.1 gives a figure for revenue per capita of £3,838.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish identifiable general Government expenditure, by area and function, consistent with the figures in tables E10 and E11 of Cm. 1920 for (a) Greater London and (b) the south-east excluding Greater London.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not available.

Market Testing

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list any areas within his Department that have been identified since 18 November (a) by individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial activities they are involved in or other clients they represent.

Mr. Maude: A study to determine the most promising areas for market testing within the Department is not yet complete. Guidance on the ethics of conducting business with the private sector is contained in the Treasury's public competition and purchasing units guidance—CUP No. 16—which has been circulated to Departments.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November 1991 (a) in determining areas within his Department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised him of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants; the total fees or other costs to date charged to his Department by them and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. Maude: Following the evaluation of proposals from six firms, Touche Ross has been appointed to provide the private sector input to the study being undertaken to determine the scope for further market testing in Treasury in accordance with the White Paper "Competing for Quality" (Cm 1730). Information on the level of fees charged is commercially confidential.

Uniforms

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will approve the introduction of uniforms to those employees in the public departments and executive agencies who currently wear individual clothes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have no plans to do so.

Tax Deductions (Training Courses)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether expenditure by a proprietor of a business on attending a training course (a) to obtain new knowledge or skills or (b) to upgrade existing knowledge is tax deductible.

Mr. Maude: Where a business proprietor incurs expenditure on training to extend or improve his or her professional knowledge or skills, capital expenditure and tax relief will not normally be available for the expenditure when calculating the profits of the business for tax purposes. But money spent to update his or her professional skills or knowledge would generally be of a revenue nature and therefore allowable. It will be a question of fact in each case.

Company Cars

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people presently have cars registered for ownership in a company's name; and if he will give a comparable figure for each year since 1973-74.

Mr. Maude: I assume that the hon. Member is interested in the numbers of employees with cars provided by their employers which are available for private use. It is estimated that in 1991-92 there were just under 2 million such employees. There are also about 2 million cars used by self-employed people for which relief is claimed against schedule D income tax liability. Available information on the numbers of employees who were taxed on the benefit of the provision of a car for private use for earlier years is as follows. Information for earlier years of numbers of self-employed people with cars used for business is not readily available.

	Numbers with taxable car benefit (thousands)
1978-79	560
1980-81	650
1981-82	790
1983-84	850
1985-86	1,070
1987-88	1,550
1988-89	1,750
1989-90	1,850
1990-91	1,950

Pensioners

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what are the most recent estimates of the number of people who are (a) under state retirement age and (b) over state retirement age, and receiving a pension from a recognised scheme, giving in each case the number who are (i) non-taxpayers, (ii) basic rate taxpayers and (iii) higher rate taxpayers;

(2) what are the most recent estimates of the number of people who are (a) under state retirement age and (b) over state retirement age, and receiving a pension from a recognised scheme, giving in each case the number who are (i) non-taxpayers, (ii) basic rate taxpayers and (iii) higher rate taxpayers in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Maude: Available estimates are for United Kingdom taxpayers with occupational pensions and are as follows:

	Basic rate taxpayers (thousands)	Higher rate taxpayers (thousands)
Aged under 65	930	50
Aged 65 and over	1,540	70

Purchasing Initiative

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in implementing the Government's purchasing initiative since 1989-90.

Mr. Maude: A report by the central unit on purchasing (CUP) on progress in Government purchasing during 1990-91 is published today. This will be the last report from CUP; following the publication of the Government's White Paper "Competing for Quality" Cm 1730, a new public competition and purchasing unit (PCPU), based in the Treasury, has been established to promote the Government's programme as part of the citizens charter initiative for extending competition in the provisions of public services as well as subsuming CUP's other work.

The report records the high level of activity and considerable progress in Government purchasing in 1990-91. The main features include:

- in 1990-91 Departments achieved value for money savings of £153 million exceeding their target by some £36 million. For 1991-92 Departments have set themselves a target of 3·4 per cent;
- since 1985-86 Departments have achieved savings in excess of £1·5 billion;
- further strengthening of purchasing as a professional specialism in central Government;
- a core specification for purchasing information systems for all Government Departments;
- in the construction field, a database was established in 1990-91 which will offer departments a better system for tracking performance, so that projects can be properly managed within time and cost parameters.

The report also records progress on other areas of the purchasing initiative and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Taxpayers

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for how many people who pay tax have earnings below the upper earnings limit in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 February 1992]: Latest estimates for 1991-92 indicate that about 16 million taxpaying employees had earnings below the upper earnings limit.

Marginal Tax Rates

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people faced marginal tax rates (a) including and (b) excluding social security, of (i) over 40 per cent., (ii) over 50 per cent., (iii) over 60 per cent., (iv) over 70 per cent., (v) over 80 per cent., (vi) over 90 per cent. and (vii) over 100 per cent. in every year since 1978-79, including 1991-92, in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 February 1992]: Estimated numbers of taxpayers liable to income tax at rates above the basic rate are in the table. Estimates of the numbers with marginal net income deduction rates (taking account of the withdrawal of social security benefits) at or above certain levels were published in figure 20 of "Social Security. The Government's expenditure plans 1992-93 to 1994-95" (Cm 1914).

Income Tax

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the revenue cost in 1992-93 of a reduced rate of income tax of (a) 20 per cent., (b) 23 per cent. and (c) 24 per cent., on the first (i) £1,000 and (ii) £2,000 of taxable income, in the United Kingdom giving the numbers with taxable incomes less than £1,000 and £2,000.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 25 February 1992]: Estimates at 1992-93 levels of income are as follows. They assume that the basic rate limit (higher rate threshold) would not be affected by the introduction of the reduced rate band.

Full year costs (£ million)

Taxable income subject to reduced rate (£)	Reduced rate 20 per cent.	23 per cent.	24 per cent.
2,000	2,280	910	460

Approximately 2 million tax-paying individuals have taxable income less than £1,000 and 4 million tax-paying individuals have taxable income less than £2,000 in 1992-93.

Tax Relief, Isle of Dogs

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total cost of tax yields forgone as a result of the reliefs associated with the Isle of Dogs enterprise zone, showing the total for each tax, for each year from 1981-82 to 1991-92 (estimated).

Mr. Maude [holding answer 28 February 1992]: Information on capital allowances claimed for investment in individuals enterprise zones is not held centrally. Estimates of investment in each zone are given in the HMSO publication "Enterprise Zone Information 1988-89" and earlier annual editions, copies of which are in the Library.

Denatured Wine

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the reasons for leaving duty on denatured wine products for culinary uses; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 28 February 1992]: Excise duty is charged on wine and made-wine, whether or not denatured, under sections 54 and 55 of the Alcoholic Liquor Duties Act 1979. There is no general relief for culinary use but, subject to certain conditions, duty is repayable under sections 56 and 60 to manufacturers of products in which wine or made-wine is used as an ingredient.

PRIME MINISTER

Lord Chief Justice

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will describe the procedure whereby the Lord Chief Justice is appointed;

(2) if he will list the parties consulted before the nomination of the new Lord Chief Justice was submitted;

(3) what consideration was given to the custom and practice that an outgoing Government should not seek to bind its successors before appointing the new Lord Chief Justice.

The Prime Minister: As with other senior appointments to the judiciary, the Lord Chief Justice is appointed by Her Majesty the Queen on the advice of the Prime Minister following confidential consultations in appropriate quarters. It has never been the practice to list the parties consulted nor to reveal the nature and source of any advice or recommendations received.

Secondees

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the external secondees among the personnel of the efficiency unit, the "next steps" unit and the citizens charter unit, together with the seconding organisation or company where appropriate.

The Prime Minister: The external secondees working in these areas are:

	Seconding organisation	Location
N. R. Cribb	Unilever	Efficiency unit
Dr. I. V. Howell	British Petroleum	Efficiency unit
B. R. Ross	Bass	Efficiency unit
C. Purbrook	Ernst and Young	Next Steps unit

Alice Hyde

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister how he proposed to respond to the petition from Alice Hyde.

The Prime Minister: I have acknowledged Alice Hyde's petition on the effect of the proposed east London river crossing on Oxleas wood and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will arrange for a full reply to be sent shortly. It will confirm that the impact of the road on the wood was carefully considered at the public inquiries held in 1985 and 1986, and subsequently by the Secretaries of State for Transport and the Environment before they approved the line of the road.

The route has been aligned to preserve the largest part of Oxleas wood intact. The slopes of the cutting through the wood, and the new area of open space to be given in exchange for that required for the road, will be landscaped to recreate, as far as possible, the woodland habitat that existed before the road was built.

The Government place much weight on environmental matters. However, we have to balance the environmental impact of measures associated with road schemes with the benefits of those schemes in order to reach decisions that are in the best interests of the community as a whole. We believe that the right decision was made in this case.

Mirror Group

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received from the committee representing the staffs of Mirror Group Newspapers in regard to the recovery of pension assets from the banks which are holding them; if at an early date he will meet a deputation from the committee; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have recently received a request to meet a deputation and it will be considered in the usual way. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security, and other ministerial colleagues met representatives of trustees of all Maxwell pension schemes on 6 February.

WALES

Home Ownership Schemes

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homes are currently under the flexi-ownership scheme operated by the Development Board for Rural Wales; and how many households have taken advantage of the scheme.

Mr. David Hunt: To date the Development Board for Rural Wales has received 300 expressions of interest, dealt with 115 formal applications and completed 53 sales under the flexi-ownership scheme. To be eligible for the scheme, tenants must not have been in receipt of housing benefit or rent rebate in the preceding 12 months. When the scheme was launched approximately 850 households were eligible for flexi-ownership.

A40, Abergavenny

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had regarding safety for pedestrians on the A40 between Abergavenny town centre and Hardwick roundabout, Abergavenny; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Two inquiries have been received regarding pedestrian safety on this section of the A40, one from a Plas Derwen resident and one from the hon. Gentleman.

Grants to Industry

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 19 February Official Report, column 214, on the effects of grants to companies in Wales, what information is available in his Department to assess the cost-effectiveness of grants in aid to industries located in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department participates in a programme of evaluation studies of regional policy instruments such as regional selective assistance and regional enterprise grants which are available in the assisted areas of Great Britain. These evaluations include an assessment of the cost-effectiveness of the grant schemes.

The two most recently published studies are: "Regional Selective Assistance 1980-84," an Evaluation by DTI, IDS and WOID (HMSO 1990), and "Evaluation of Regional Enterprise Grants—Second Stage," a report by Segal Quince Wicksteed Ltd (HMSO 1991). Further evaluations of both grant schemes are currently taking place.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what amount of poll tax income is still owed to local authorities for 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: It is estimated that at 31 December 1991 about £76 million of community charges remain to be collected in 1991-92, including arrears of 1990-91 charges. Many payments made by instalments will have been made during the final quarter of the year.

Market Testing

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November 1991 (a) in determining areas within the department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised him of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants; the total fees or other costs charged to the department by them to date and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. David Hunt: Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte has been engaged to help the Department draw up its forward programme of market testing. The amount of its fee is commercially confidential information.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list any areas within his Department that have been identified since 18 November (a) by individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial activities they are involved in or other clients they represent.

Mr. David Hunt: The study to identify potential market testing candidates is not yet complete. My Department observes the guidance on the ethics of conducting business with the private sector which has been prepared by the Treasury's competition and purchasing unit.

Agriculture, Gwent

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding the implication of the MacSharry proposals on agriculture in Gwent.

Mr. David Hunt: I have received a number of representations from industry bodies in Wales and individual farmers, including some from Gwent, on the implications for the industry generally of the EC reform proposals.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next proposes to meet the European Agriculture Commissioner to discuss the effects of the MacSharry proposals on agriculture in Gwent.

Mr. David Hunt: I met Commissioner MacSharry most recently on 21 February in Brussels when I again emphasised the deep concern of the Welsh farming industry over the EC's proposals for CAP reform.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current level of employment in agriculture in Gwent.

Mr. David Hunt: There were 3,761 persons engaged in work on main holdings in Gwent in 1991, excluding wives/husbands of farmers, partners and directors.

Hospital Closures, South Glamorgan

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with South Glamorgan health authority concerning the proposed closure of Rookwood hospital, Prince of Wales orthopaedic hospital and the Cardiff royal infirmary and the timing of announcements relating to such closures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: None.

Independent Farm Units

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many independent farm units there were in Gwent in 1981 and 1991.

Mr. David Hunt: There were 2,129 main holdings in Gwent in 1981 and 2,143 in 1991.

Heartbeat Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West on 26 February, Official Report, column 526, if he will institute an independent evaluation study of the costs and benefits of Heartbeat Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Health Promotion Authority for Wales has published its Heartbeat Wales evaluation strategy entitled "The Welsh Heart Programme Evaluation Strategy: progress, plans and possibilities", which has been subject to a scientific peer review. HPAW, in developing its strategy, has sought the advice of a wide range of external consultants. The evaluation was reviewed during 1989 by two international experts in the field of community programme evaluation, Professor Murray (University of Minnesota) and Professor Bosse Haglund (programme director of the Stockholm cancer prevention project), both of whom continue to give advice. In addition the Health Promotion Authority for Wales has an evaluation advisory group comprising United Kingdom-based experts.

Political Advisers

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the political advisers employed for each Minister in his Department since 1979, the period for which each was employed, the salary range applicable in each case, and the total annual cost to public funds of political advisers.

Mr. David Hunt: Mr. Christopher Butler served the then Secretary of State, the right hon. Nicholas Edwards MP, from 1983 to 1985. Mr. Rod Richards served as my special adviser from 1990. It would not be appropriate to reveal the salaries of special advisers, nor in consequence the total cost of individual appointments, as these are individually negotiated taking into account previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential.

Unemployment Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of long-term unemployed in each of the counties of Wales for the latest available date and for May 1979 giving the increase expressed both as a total and as a percentage.

Mr. David Hunt: The earliest month for which data comparable with present coverage are available for local areas is July 1983. The numbers of long-term unemployed in each of the counties of Wales in July 1983 and January 1992 are as follows:

Long term unemployed[1]

	July 1983	January 1992	Change
	Total	Total	Total	Percentage
Clwyd	8,970	3,403	−5,567	−62·1
Dyfedd	5,576	3,361	−2,215	−39·7
Gwent	11,378	6,144	−5,234	−46·0
Gwynedd	4,109	3,237	−872	−21·2
Mid Glamorgan	13,494	8,423	−5,071	−37·6
Powys	1.262	648	−614	−48·7
South Glamorgan	9,000	6,138	−2,862	−31·8
West Glamorgan	9,538	4,546	−4,992	−52·3

Alder Hey Hospital

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future prospects of Welsh patients in relation to treatment at Alder Hey hospital, Wirral.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This is a matter for individual health authorities in Wales as purchasers of quality health care for their resident populations.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to make a statement on cancer treatment for north Wales patients.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: We are currently considering the far reaching implications of the Deloitte Haskins and Sells report in the light of the responses to consultation. We hope to announce our decision on the further development of the service before too long.

Kytril

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning the use in Wales for patients undergoing chemotherapy treatment, of the drug Kytril to combat nausea.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Kytril became commercially available from January this year after being licensed for use in December 1991. Any new drug is considered by the appropriate local drugs and therapeutic committee prior to its approval for either general or limited use. The use of Kytril is a matter for health authorities, as purchasers of health services for their residents, to consider.

Monmouth

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 February, Official Report, column 56, if he will now state what delegation, representing what bodies, he intends to meet in relation to the application for assisted area status for the Monmouth travel-to-work area.

Mr. David Hunt: I have agreed also to meet the Monmouth chamber of commerce on a date still to be fixed.

On 6 January 1992 I received a document from the chief executive of Monmouth borough council arguing the case for the Monmouth travel-to-work area to be designated an assisted area and asking for a meeting with the council and other bodies. On 24 January a reply was sent from my office acknowledging the document but pointing out that in 1988 it was announced that there would be no changes made during the lifetime of this Parliament. Mr. Roger Evans then contacted me to argue the case for a meeting and raising some new issues in favour of a change which were not contained in the document. Today I met the leader, deputy leader, planning and development officer, and chairman of the industrial site sub-committee from Monmouth borough council, the town clerk of Monmouth town council, county councillor White and Mr. Evans.

I shall now be considering the points raised and responding in due course. I am, of course, willing to see the hon. Gentleman on these issues should he make a request for a meeting.

Departmental Staff

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the numbers of (a) men and (b) women in his Ministry in each of grades (i) 1, (ii) 2, (iii) 3, (iv) 4, (v) 5, (vi) 6, (vii) 7, (viii) SEO, (ix) HEO, (x) administrative trainee, (xi) EO, (xii) CO and (xiii) CA.

Mr. Curry: The information has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and is as follows:

Notes:

1. Includes one Grade 2 who has been on secondment to the European Community for a number of years and excludes one female Grade 2 appointed shortly after 1 April 1991.

2. Part-time staff are counted as half-units and numbers are rounded to whole units.

3. The table covers all non-industrial staff and includes equivalents of the grades listed.

Consumer Panel

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the operation of his Department's consumer panel.

Mr. Maclean: Since it was set up by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in November 1989, the consumer panel has proved to be a fruitful means of obtaining the views of the ordinary consumer. I have therefore agreed that it should continue. I have today announced the names of the persons who have agreed to serve on the panel for its second term. They are: Mr. Philip Bell, Mrs. Judy Brander, Mrs. Dorothy Craig, Mrs. Harriet Kimbell, Mrs. Suzi Leather, Mrs. Jean McVitty, Mrs. Maeve Robertson, Mr. Gareth Morgan, Mrs. Karen Powell and Mrs. Noel Whamond.

Although individuals have been nominated by specific consumer organisations, they are appointed in a personal capacity to serve as ordinary consumers and to represent the views of ordinary consumers. I look forward to their playing a part in the continuing development of Government policies on food safety, diet and nutrition and consumer protection issues.

In order to help better focus the panel's discussion on the issues it considers, I have revised the terms of reference for the panel. These are now:

- (i) to bring to the attention of Ministers food issues of concern to consumer;
- (ii) to advise on the transparency for consumers of Ministers' food policies;
- (iii) to advise on the transmission to consumers of advice and information relating to Ministers' policies on food safety, diet and nutrition.

Agricultural Development Advisery Service Support Staff

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what account has been taken by his Department of the conditions of service of support staff following the establishment of the Agricultural Development Advisery Service as a Government agency in April.

Mr. Curry: ADAS support staff remain civil servants, subject to civil service terms and conditions of service. As civil servants, staff are eligible to move between the agency and MAFF, the Welsh Office or other Government Departments, for example, for career development.

Horse Manure

Mr. Alex Carlisle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has which would prohibit the sale of horse manure for spreading on private gardens; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I have no such proposals and have no intention of doing so.

Market Testing

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November 1991 (a) in determining areas within his Department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised him of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants; the total fees or other costs to date charged to his Department by them and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. Curry: None. The Department is in the process of awarding a contract covering a preliminary exercise to assist with the selection of areas for more detailed examination.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list any areas within his Department that have been identified since 18 November (a) by individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial activities they are involved in or other clients they represent.

Mr. Curry: No individuals or organisations from the private sector have identified any areas within the Department since 18 November 1991.

As indicated in the "Competing for Quality" White Paper, the Department already has a programme for extending competition through market testing. Since publication of the White Paper, our officials have been reviewing further areas that could be considered suitable for market testing.

The Department is conscious of the risk that conflicts of interest could arise as a result of contracting work out. The risk would be assessed very carefully on a case-by-case basis both in framing invitations to tender and in attaching conditions to any contracts subsequently awarded.

Fish Conservation

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is yet able to draw up a detailed commissioning scheme to secure access to EC funding for British fishermen.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend the Minister gave on 27 February to the hon. Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Trotter) at column 612-14.

Intervention Stores, Coventry

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the EC intervention stores located within 20 miles of Coventry and tabulate the tonnage, value and type of stock held at each; how many storehouses for EC surplus foodstuffs there are in Britain; and what is the aggregate tonnage, value and type of the stocks they hold.

Mr. Curry: Since the question concerns matters which are the direct responsibility of the chief executive of the Intervention Board executive agency, I am asking him to write directly to the hon. Member.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Restrictive Covenants

31. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received about the law on restrictive covenants; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor has received around 100 letters from Members of Parliament and the public expressing a range of views on the Law Commission's report on obsolete restrictive covenants published in July 1991.

West Midlands Police

33. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General when he expects to reach a decision regarding prosecutions of West Midlands police officers arising from the West Yorkshire inquiry.

The Attorney-General: The Crown prosecution service will take these decisions when consideration is completed of 73 files submitted to CPS headquarters by the West Yorkshire inquiry team.

Legal Aid

34. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Attorney-General what is the current annual cost of legal aid.

The Attorney-General: In the financial year 1990-91 expenditure on legal aid in England and Wales was £852 million gross and £684 million net. In addition, for the same period £33 million was spent on legal aid administration. In the current financial year it is estimated that expenditure will be around £1,150 million gross and around £900 million net plus £39 million on legal aid administration.

Maxwell Pension Funds

35. Mr. Hind: To ask the Attorney-General if the Director of the Serious Fraud Office has reached any decision on prosecutions relating to the Maxwell Communication Corporation and Mirror Group of companies pension funds; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney General: No decision on prosecutions has yet been made. Inquiries will continue for some time.

Serious Fraud Office

36. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a further statement about the work of the Serious Fraud Office.

The Attorney-General: The aims of the Serious Fraud Office remain to increase the efficiency of the criminal justice system in dealing with serious fraud, thereby detering fraud and maintaining confidence in our financial systems. The Serious Fraud Office has, since its inception, prosecuted 171 individual defendants of whom 115 were convicted on one or more charges (67 per cent. of those brought to trial). Establishment of the Serious Fraud Office brought together the skills of several disciplines in a way which has made it possible successfully to investigate cases which previously might have proved impenetrable. The Serious Fraud Office has utilised modern technology extensively to ensure that cases can be presented succinctly and clearly to juries. Suggestions of overcharging are fallacious.

Of the 20 cases since September 1990 in which the jury were asked to return verdicts, six indictments contained one count only and only three indictments involved in excess of 12 counts. Each of those three indictments related to investor fraud involving up to several hundred instances of alleged criminal conduct.

37. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Attorney-General what recent representations he has received about the operation of the Serious Fraud Office.

The Attorney-General: In 1992 I have received seven parliamentary questions on a variety of subjects which fall under the broad heading of representations about the operation of the Serious Fraud Office. Those are in addition to the questions on today's Order Paper. I have also received representations from one hon. Member and one constituent.

Immigration

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey of 17 February, Official Report, column 19, what plans his Department has to speed up the determination of appeals against refusals of applications for visitors' visas by visitors to the United Kingdom from Bangladesh.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor's Department plans to increase by 10 per cent. the staffing resources available to the immigration appellate authorities (IAA), and is improving and expanding the IAA's existing accommodation to provide more hearing rooms for adjudicators. Furthermore, a multi-terminal case-tracking computer system has recently been installed. These measures will help the IAA to tackle more effectively their rising workload, including visitor visa appeals from Bangladesh.

High Court Judges

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Attorney-General how many High Court judges are (a) men and (b) women.

The Attorney-General: As at 1 March there were 83 High Court judges in office, of which 81 were men and two were women. In addition, a further female High Court judge, Mrs. Justice Ebsworth, is being sworn in today.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Market Testing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte has been retained to conduct a single study, in conjunction with an internal review team, to advise me on the future market testing programme for my Department as a whole. It was selected through competitive tendering.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November 1991 (a) in determining areas within the Department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised him of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants; the total fees or other costs charged to the Department by them to date and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte has been retained to conduct a study, in conjunction with an internal review team, to advise me on the future market testing programme for my Department. The review is not yet complete and no decisions have been taken on areas that are suitable for market testing. The value of contracts is a matter of commercial and contractual confidentiality.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list any areas within his Department that have been identified since 18 November (a) by individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial activities they are involved in or other clients they represent.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: In reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) on 5 December at column 219, I set out plans for further private sector involvement in court escorts, custody and security and in prison management.

Private sector consultants, together with an internal review team, are conducting a study to advise me on my Department's overall market testing programme, but their work has not yet been completed.

Contracting out of Home Office work to the private sector is carried out in accordance with guidance issued by the Treasury's public competition and purchasing unit.

Dorset Police

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the increase in police manpower in Dorset since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Dorset police had 1,280 police officers at the end of December 1991, 140 more than in May 1979. The authorised establishment of the force will increase by 15 police posts to 1,302 with effect from 1 April 1992.

Effra House

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what decision he has taken on funding by his Department for 36 bed spaces at Effra house, 45 Effra road, London, SW2; and what representations he has received from the Effra Trust on that subject.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office provides funding for 25 of the 26 bed spaces run by the Effra Trust at five different addresses including 45 Effra road, London SW2. I have received representations from the Effra Trust and five other organisations based in London that the probation service should take on the care payments to residents currently paid by the Department of Social Security and due to be transferred to local authorities in April 1993. I shall be replying shortly.

Professional Jurors

Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to introduce professional jurors in serious fraud cases.

Mr. John Patten: We have no plans to do so. The procedures for serious fraud cases will be kept under review, taking account of anything which might be said by the Royal Commission on criminal justice.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what number of immigration and customs officials will be permanently in place upon the opening of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The staffing levels which will be required when the channel tunnel opens will depend upon the nature and frequency of the services which will use it at that time and the estimated passenger volumes. These are matters about which officials are in touch with the service operators, but it is still too early to put a figure on the staffing requirement.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) summonses and (b) liability orders have been issued for poll tax debt in (i) England and (ii) Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: About 11 million summonses have been issued alleging non-payment of community charge during the period 1 April 1990 to 31 December 1991, about 10·4 million in England and 0·6 million in Wales. During the same period about 8·1 million liability orders were made, 7·7 million in England and 0·4 million in Wales. In both cases, some will have involved the same persons in respect of different financial years.

Drug-related Crime

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the proportion of crime which is drug-related.

Mr. John Patten: The latest estimates are published in paragraph 2.4 of the 1991 report "Drug Misusers and the Criminal Justice System: Part 1 Community resources and the probation service" by the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs, a copy of which is in the Library. These however relate only to heroin misusers and do not include estimates for crimes by other drug misusers.

Wolds Prison

Mr. Archer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the total estimated cost of running Wolds prison during the financial year 1992-93; and how much of the total will be met by the remand contract unit.

Mrs. Rumbold: The estimated cost of running Wolds prison in 1992-93 will be published in the "Supply Estimate" on Budget day.

Police Forces

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) women and (b) men are employed by each police force in Britain; at what grade they are employed; and what percentage this is at each grade.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I will write to the hon. Member.

Re-offenders on Bail

Mr. Andrew Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in the West Midlands police force area have committed offences while on bail during 1991, or for the latest year available.

Mr. John Patten: The requested information is not available.

Football Stadia

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the work of the Football Stadia Advisory Design Council.

Mr. John Patten: This body was set up and funded jointly by the Football Association and the Football League following a recommendation of Lord Justice Taylor in his report on the Hillsborough disaster. He recommended that the council should:

(a) conduct and marshal research into the improvement and design of football stadia and

(b) disseminate regularly such information and expertise as they acquire in this field to members of the Football League and, on request, to other football and sports clubs in England, Wales and Scotland.

The council has already published some helpful guidance and I understand that discussions as to its future role are taking place with the Football Association.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his latest estimate of the average cost per sitting hour of a magistrates court.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 27 January at column 415.

Electoral Registration

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision exists for homeless people to register; what guidance has been given to electoral registration officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Under the Representation of the People Act 1983, in order to be entitled to vote a person must be resident at an address in a constituency or electoral area on the qualifying date of 10 October, and must be registered there as an elector. The question of whether someone can be regarded as resident for registration purposes is determined not by the nature of the accommodation but by the permanence of his or her residence at a particular place. No guidance has been issued to electoral registration officers on registering homeless people.

Mr. Delroy McKnight

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish, and in what form, the results of his investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Delroy McKnight in Wandsworth prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 27 February 1992]: Any death in custody is the cause of very great concern, to the Prison Service and to the public. In addition to the full public inquest, a careful review is carried out by prison management in each case to see whether there are any practical lessons which can be learned. It would not be appropriate to publish such reports routinely.

The death of Delroy McKnight, however, revealed very serious inadequacies in the quality of care which, on this occasion, required a further and more detailed investigation. Following the inquest, which was held in March 1991, the director of prison medical services therefore established a working group to study the events leading to Mr. McKnight's death and make recommendations for change. The group, which was chaired by Dr. Michael Longfield, a principal medical officer within the medical directorate, submitted its report last November. In view of the seriousness of this case, I am now, exceptionally, arranging for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

The report makes 17 recommendations, the majority of which are concerned with specific practical changes in working procedures at Wandsworth and other establishments at which Mr. McKnight was in custody. The recommendations aim particularly at improving communication and continuity in the clinical management of prisoners, for example by ensuring full documentation of all decisions, clear understanding by all staff of their responsibilities and regular multi-disciplinary reviews of the needs of prisoners who appear to be at risk of self-harm or are receiving treatment for psychiatric problems. Almost all the recommendations addressed to establishments have already been implemented. The local suicide prevention management group at Wandsworth has brought about substantial improvements in suicide prevention policy and procedure since Mr. McKnight's tragic death.

In addition, the report makes several recommendations about general matters of health care management within the Prison Service, which are under active consideration within the medical directorate in the context of the follow-up to the scrutiny of the prison medical service.

Mortality Statistics (Public Streets)

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the figures for deaths on public streets in London due to causes other than violence or road traffic accidents for the period 1 October 1990 to 30 April 1991.

Mr. Dorrell: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what are the figures for deaths on public streets in England and Wales due to hypothermia, malnutrition or self-neglect in the period from 1 October 1990 to 30 April 1991;

(2) what are the figures for deaths on public streets in London due to hypothermia, malnutrition or self-neglect in the period from 1 October 1990 to 30 April 1991;

(3) what are the figures for deaths on public streets in England and Wales due to (a) hypothermia, (b) malnutrition or (c) self-neglect in the year ended 31 December 1991 or the most recent available period.

Mr. Dorrell: I have been asked to reply.

There were no deaths on the public streets in England and Wales due to hypothermia, malnutrition or self-neglect registered in the period 1 October 1990 to 30 September 1991.

There were nine deaths registered due to these causes of persons of no known address, of which five were in Greater London and four elsewhere in England and Wales.

All of the deaths occurred between 1 October 1990 and 30 April 1991 and of these, six died in hospital and three elsewhere.

Prison Suicides

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of suicides in prisons in England and Wales during the year 1991; and if he will list the prisons and the number of suicides that took place within them.

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to her reply, 22 January 1992, c. 191-92]:

The total number of deaths in 1991 which resulted from an act of deliberate self-harm was 42 and not 41. The adjustment to the figure is necessary following the recent inquest into the death of a man at Cardiff prison in October 1991, which was not initially thought to have been self-inflicted. Further evidence came to light at the inquest, however, and a verdict of "suicide while the balance of his mind was disturbed" was recorded.

Inquests have now been held on 29 of these deaths and a verdict of suicide was recorded for 23. The establishments at which the deaths occurred are listed in the table.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment If he will detail each local authority with the percentage of its community charge collected in 1990-91, and 1991-92 to date, in descending order of percentage collected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: I am arranging for the available information to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the proportion of local authority revenue expenditure in England financed by (a) Government grant, (b) non-domestic rates and (c) local domestic taxation in each year from 1978-79 to 1990-91 and estimates for 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Key: The available information is as follows:

Local Authority Revenue Expenditure[1]

	Government grants[2] as percentage of local authority expenditure	Non-domestic rates[3] as percentage of local authority expenditure	Domestic rates/ community charges[4] as percentage of local authority expenditure

[1] For the years 1981-82 to 1989-90, local authority expenditure is taken to be 'relevant expenditure' plus expenditure on certain non-relevant items such as net expenditure on mandatory student awards. It represents spending to be financed by rate support grant, relevant specific grants, rates and balances. This measure of expenditure is net of sales, fees and charges, interest receipts etc. For the years 1990-91 to 1992-93 local authority expenditure is 'revenue expenditure do compare with TSS' which is expenditure to be met from revenue support grant, specific grants in aggregate external finance, special grants, non-domestic rates, community charges and appropriation from reserves. In 1991-92 ths also included community charge grant and in 1992-93 this will include teachers pay award additional grant.

[2] For the years 1978-79 to 1989-90 Government grants comprise aggregate exchequer grant and rate rebate grants. For the years 1990-91 to 1992-93 Government Grants included are revenue support grant, special grrants, specific grants in aggregate external finance, community charge grant (1991-92), teachers pay award additional grant (1992-93), community charge benefit and transitional relief/community charge reduction scheme grants.

[3] For the years 1981-82 to 1989-90 this represents non-domestic rate yields net of rate relief. For the years 1990-91 to 1992-93 this represents the distributable amount from the non-domestic rates pool.

[4] Net of domestic rate rebates for the years 1981-82 to 1989-90, net of community charge benefit grant and transitional relief/ community charge scheme grant in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93.

[5] 1992-93 settlement.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the breakdown of local authority revenue for each year from 1979-80 to 1991-92 in terms of (i) Government grant, (ii) business rates and (iii) rates/poll tax expressed both in million pounds and constant prices and as a percentage.

Mr. Portillo: The available information is as follows:

[3] For the years 1981-82 to 1989-90, this represents non-domestic rate yields net of rate relief. For the years 1990-91 to 1991-92 this represents the distributable amount from the non-domestic rates pool

[4] Net of domestic rate rebates for the years 1981-82 to 1989-90. Net of community charge benefit grant and transitional relief/community charge reduction scheme grant for the years 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of poll tax revenue is outstanding to local authorities for 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Portillo: Local authorities budgeted to collect £10,200 million in community charges in respect of 1990-91 and £6,400 million in respect of 1991-92. I estimate that by 31 December 1991 they had collected £9,900 million of the former and £4,300 million of the latter. Much of the remaining 1991-92 amounts will subsequently have been collected in the form of routine monthly payments in January and February 1992.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what targets his Department has set for local authorities' collection of poll tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Local authorities should be attempting to collect 100 per cent. of the community charges due in their areas; well-managed authorities are coming very close to achieving this.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the safety net arrangements within the national non-domestic rate system; and if he has any plans to make changes to those arrangements.

Mr. Portillo: We have received a number of representations about the non-domestic rate transitional arrangements. We shall shortly be making regulations to allow transitional protection to continue in cases where a local authority waste disposal company takes over property occupied by an existing waste disposal authority under part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make changes to the arrangements for the national non-domestic rate for 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: A number of provisions modifying the non-domestic rating system are contained in schedule 10 to the Local Government Finance Bill. Those which would have effect in 1992-93 concern the payment of interest in respect of overpayments of rates, the rating of multiple moorings, the exemption of church property, the reference date for the determination of rateable values, and the information which charging authorities must take into account in calculating their contributions into the national non-domestic rating pool.

Council House Building

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authority permanent dwellings have been started in the 32 London boroughs in each year since 1979.

Mr. Yeo: The information requested for 1979 is shown in table 5 of the publication "Local Housing Statistics: England and Wales", issue No. 53 (May 1980). Figures for 1980 to 1989 appear in "Housebuilding in England by Local Authority Areas, 1980 to 1989", tables 1.1 to 1.10. Figures for 1990 are in "Local Housing Statistics: England and Wales", issue No. 98 (July 1991). The following information is available on local authority housebuilding in 1991:

	Local authority
(a) Authorities with local authority housing starts in 1991	Barking 10 dwellings Barnet 4 dwellings Kensington and Chelsea 4 dwellings Waltham Forest 88 dwellings
(b) Authorities with no local authority housing starts in 1991	Bromley, Camden, Croydon, Ealing, Greenwich, Hackney, Hammersmith and Fulham, Harrow, Havering, Hounslow, Islington, Redbridge, Sutton, Wandsworth, Westminster
(c) Authorities which have not yet sent returns for all, or part, of 1991. No authority reporting for part of 1991 has recorded any local authority housing starts	Bexley, Brent, Enfield, Haringey, Hillingdon, Kingston upon Thames, Lambeth, Lewisham, Merton, Newham, Richmond upon Thames, Southwark, Tower Hamlets

Tenants' Participation

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of the Housing Corporation's document "Tenant Participation Strategy".

Mr. Yeo: The corporation has not yet completed its review of tenant participation strategy. As soon as it publishes a strategy document, I shall be happy to arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Orimulsion

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has received from his European opposite numbers with regard to orimulsion.

Mr. Baldry: None.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the burning of orimulsion; and to which power stations they relate.

Mr. Baldry: I have received a number of representations concerning the burning or proposed burning of orimulsion generally and at individual power stations such as Pembroke and Ince. A considerable number have also been received by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in respect of applications for authorisation under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to burn orimulsion at Padiham and Pembroke power stations.

Nature Reserves

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what restrictions are placed on developments by local authorities of designated local nature reserves; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Local planning authorities can grant themselves planning permissions under the Town and Country Planning General Regulations 1976. Authorities are required to give their proposals the same publicity, to make them subject to the same consultations, and to consider them against the same criteria and policies, as they would an ordinary planning application for similar development. On 27 February the Department of the Environment issued for consultation a draft planning policy guidance note on nature conservation which provides up to date guidance on how the Government's policies on the conservation of our natural heritage are to be reflected in land use planning.

Wind Farms

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on wind farm developments; and what proposed developments he has called in.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on such developments in response to the Department's consultations and proposed planning policy guidance note on renewable energy. He has called in two planning applications for wind farms: at Kirkby moor in south Lakeland, and Ovenden moor, Halifax.

Business Rates

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the amounts outstanding in unpaid business rates for 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Portillo: I estimate that up to 31 December 1991 a total of £9,130 million was collectable from non-domestic rates in respect of properties on local rating lists for the 1990-91 financial year. By 31 December 1991 local authorities had collected £8,960 million.

For 1991-92, I estimate that £10,600 million of non-domestic rates are collectable within the year. By 31 December 1991 local authorities had collected £8,180million.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the revenue available to local authorities from business rates for each year from 1979-80 to 1992-93 showing the figures in £ million and constant prices.

Mr. Portillo: The available information is as follows:

Local authority non-domestic rates

	[1]Non-domestic rates £ million	1991-92 prices £ million
1979-80	3,354	7,798
1980-81	4,169	8,191
1981-82	5,013	8,982
1982-83	5,685	9,509
1983-84	6,042	9,659
1984-85	6,361	9,684
1985-86	6,740	9,725
1986-87	7,566	10,569
1987-88	8,088	10,715
1988-89	8,819	10,901
1989-90	9,595	11,138
1990-91	10,429	11,159
1991-92	12,408	12,408
1992-93	12,306	11,776

[1] For the years 1979-80 to 1989-90 this represents non-domestic rate yields net of rate relief. For the years 1990-91 to 1992-93 this represents the distributable amount from the non-domestic rates pool.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish his best estimates of the amount of business rates being transferred between gainers and losers under the uniform business rate safety net arrangements for 1992-93, showing the amounts deferred for both categories.

Mr. Portillo: I estimate that the amount of business rate increases in England being deferred for losers is about £475 million. An equal amount of reduction for gainers is also being deferred.

Local Government (Political Control)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in rank order, showing political control, the all ages social index for local authorities for 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Portillo: A table showing the information requested has been placed in the Library.

Market Testing

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list any area within his Department that have been identified since 18 November (a) by individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial activities they are involved in or other clients they represent;

(2) if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November (a) in determining areas within his Department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised him of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants, the total fees or other costs to date and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. Heseltine: My officials are currently drawing up proposals for new market testing areas within the Department in line with the timetable set out in the Financial Secretary's letter to the Home Secretary of 17 December. A market testing adviser from the private sector is to be appointed soon to assist in this task. The market testing areas are to be selected from the list of possible candidates set out on page 13 of the White Paper "Competing for Quality" (Cm 1730). My Department will carefully vet all non-government organisations involved in tendering for work currently undertaken by civil servants to ensure conflicts of interest do not arise.

Reptiles (Indonesia)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what scientific advice he has received on the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species appendix 2 status for reptile species from Indonesia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My scientific advisers, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC), are currently considering new information from the Indonesian authorities about these species. The European Commission proposes to arrange discussion of this information by representatives of EC member states during the current conference of the parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species. The JNCC will give advice at this meeting, which will decide whether or not the EC should lift its current ban on the import of certain species from Indonesia.

Water Supply, Hull

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has decided to take in respect of the supply of water unfit for human consumption in Hull in 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The drinking water inspectorate has reported to me on the progress of its investigations into the outbreak of cryptosporidiosis in the Hull area in December 1989 and January 1990. This investigation has inevitably been difficult and lengthy because of gaps in scientific knowledge about cryptosporidium, which a research programme funded by the Department is seeking to remedy.

This case has raised a number of new and complex issues, and necessarily continues to involve external advisers as well as the inspectorate. An outbreak control group, comprising representatives of the health authorities, the local authorities, the water company and the Public Health Laboratory Service, was established in the locality during the outbreak and its report was essential to the inspectorate's investigations. The group was not able to complete its report until March 1991. Advice then had to be sought from the Government's Chief Medical Officer and, in view of the possibility of a prosecution, from leading counsel.

The case is being taken forward as quickly as possible and I shall make a further statement as soon as there is further progress to report.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance will be available to the Local Government Commission in assessing the identities and interests of local communities.

Mr. Portillo: We commissioned two research projects as a contribution to thinking on how to assess community identity in the restructuring of local government. The research is intended as a starting point for the Local Government Commission in its work in recommending changes to local government structure and boundaries. I have placed in the Library copies of the reports "Identification with local areas" by Alan Hedges and "Application of Geographic Information Systems to community boundary definition" by the centre for urban and regional development studies at Newcastle university. Copies have also been sent to the local authority associations and the Audit Commission.

Water Pollution

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received the report by the drinking water inspectorate on the incident at the Iver treatment works of Three Valleys Water in July 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I have now received the drinking water inspectorate's report on the incident at the Iver treatment works in July 1992, and copies have been placed in the Library of the House. A summary of the findings and recommendations is being made widely available.

The inspectorate found that the normal disinfection processes failed on Saturday 20 July 1991 because, when a changeover occurred from one bulk liquid chlorine storage tank to another tank, a valve on the outlet from the second tank was not opened and remained shut for 4½ hours. The effect of this failure was mitigated however by mixing that occurs at the treatment works and in the distribution networks part of the normal operation of the system, and by the fact that chlorine is applied at various stages. Having weighed all the evidence, the inspectorate has concluded that there is no reason to believe that the water supplied by the company in the period following the incident was unfit for human consumption. Any breach of the quality standards in the Water Quality Regulations is likely to have been trivial.

The inspectorate is critical of the company for not taking appropriate remedial action at the works within a reasonable period. It has nevertheless concluded that, on the basis of the situation at that time and the information available, senior management took a prudent decision on the Saturday night to issue advice to consumers to boil water. However the water undertakers owned by Three Valleys Water which supply water from the Iver works, Colne Valley Water Company Plc and Rickmansworth Water Plc, contravened the Water Quality Regulations by failing to notify each local authority and district health authority affected by the incident. At the time of the incident there were no powers to take enforcement action in relation to a contravention of this nature, but I can confirm that this gap in the legislation has now been filled for the future.

The report identifies specific deficiencies in the instrumentation at the Iver works, in operational and management procedures, in emergency plans, and in contingency plans for communicating with consumers in such circumstances. Although microbiological analysis would not have provided results until the following day, the inspectorate is nevertheless critical of the company's failure to carry out comprehensive sampling and analysis particularly of water leaving the Iver works. The report also identifies weaknesses in the response to the incident by local authorities and district health authorities.

The report puts forward 13 recommendations. Most of these have already been met by action which Three Valleys Water has subsequently taken, and the company has accepted the remaining recommendations. Some of the recommendations about contingency planning also require the co-operation of the relevant local authorities, district health authorities and police forces, and of the media, and I hope that this will be forthcoming.

In a covering letter to the report, the chief inspector has drawn attention to a number of points which have implications for the approach adopted by water companies generally to preventing failures of disinfection and ensuring that the necessary contingency plans are in place. I have accepted the conclusions and recommendations of the report, and the chief inspector's advice that further guidance should be given to all water companies on these matters. He will be writing to companies promptly for this purpose, and special attention will be paid to emergency procedures in the annual inspections of water companies.

In the light of the conclusions of this report, my Department will discuss with the Department of Health and the Home Office whether further guidance needs to be given to local authorities and health authorities about their role in responding to incidents affecting water supply. To ensure that liaison with the media functions effectively on future occasions and to secure a prompt response, we are also drawing the attention of water companies to the BBC guide on facilities for broadcasting emergency announcements. We are recommending them to make appropriate standing arrangements both with the BBC and with other television and radio stations serving their areas.

The inspectorate's report is commendably thorough. The findings that, although we have a very high standard of drinking water in this country, and this particular incident did not cause damage to health, there is scope for improving procedures in order to provide more effective safeguards for the future. I confirm that the necessary action has either been taken or is in hand.

United Nations Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what matters are on the agenda for the final preparatory committee meeting in New York from 2 March to 2 April for the forthcoming United Nations conference on environment and development.

Mr. Baldry: The main items for consideration at the final United Nations conference on environment and development preparatory committee are 900 pages of proposed action under the heading of "Agenda 21—a statement of principles on the world's forests and the Earth Charter".

Inland Waterways

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the results of his consultation into the management of the navigation of inland waterways; and what changes he is considering in navigation rights as part of this review following the River Derwent judgment.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 27 February 1992]: Responses are still being received. The outcome of the review will be announced as soon as possible.

Peat Extraction

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment following the agreement between English Nature and Fisons plc (a) who now owns the mineral rights for the sites concerned and (b) to what habitat-type it is intended to restore cut over areas of lowland raised peatbog once the peat has been extracted.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 27 February 1992]: Of the 8,000 acres of land involved, English Nature will immediately assume ownership of mineral rights over some 2,800 acres; Fisons will retain the mineral rights for the remainder.

The objective has been to restore lowland peat vegetation on the cutover areas, but I am advised that a mosaic of other habitats, such as fen, is likely to be the end result.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Duchy Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many visits he plans to make to the Duchy in the period before April.

Mr. Chris Patten: I have no present plans to visit the Duchy in my capacity as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster during the coming month.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Recycled Paper

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee (1) what target is set for the use of recycled writing paper in the House.

(2) if he will make arrangements to supply all stores in the House with recycled writing paper;

(3) what is the cost of recycled House writing paper expressed as a percentage of the cost of non-recycled paper;

(4) what proportion of writing paper used by hon. Members is recycled;

(5) what was the level of recycled writing paper used in the House 12 months ago;

(6) why it is not possible to order House of Commons writing paper which has been recycled for delivery in less than three weeks.

Mr. Orme: There is no target set for the use of recycled writing paper in the House. At its meeting on 18 June 1991 the Services Committee approved a resolution of the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee that a range of recycled items of stationery should be stocked on a permanent basis in addition to existing ranges of equivalent stationery of archival quality, but that, for the present, it should be supplied only from the Serjeant at Arms stores. The Serjeant at Arms has taken steps to draw Members' attention to the availability of recycled writing paper and I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Telephones

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many telephones there are in the House of Commons; and what was the total telephone bill for the last available year.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 5 December 1991]: I understand there are 2,972 telephones in the House of Commons; the House telephone bill for the year ended 31 March 1991 was £1,212,831·49.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what monitoring of telephone calls made from public areas of the House of Commons takes place; and what percentage of telephone expenditure takes place from such locations.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 5 December 1991]: The monitoring of telephone calls in the House has in the past caused Members great concern, particularly on the ground of the threat to their privacy. I am aware a number of Members make frequent use of telephones in the corridors and currently there is no monitoring of telephones in these areas or in any others.

Over recent months the Director of Finance, appointed as a result of the Ibbs report, has been considering how to measure telephone usage and expenditure throughout the House. The Director of Finance is aware of the sensitivities of Members to the monitoring of telephone calls and it is now for him to make a proposal to the House of Commons Commission on the principle of monitoring if he wishes to do so.

If telephone monitoring were to be introduced in any part of the House in the future, Members and staff would be given adequate warning and explanation of the measures planned. There remains, however, at present the need for the House to balance the identification of telephone expenditure against the preservation of privacy for Members in their use of the telephones throughout the House.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the policy towards supplying Members and authorised users with a key or pass card to access telephones in the public parts of the House; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 5 December 1991]: Proposals to limit the use of telephones will be considered by the Administration Committee shortly after the Easter recess and it is hoped to introduce new measures when the telephone exchange is upgraded in mid-1992; it is unlikely that a key or pass card will form part of these proposals.

EMPLOYMENT

Doncaster Unemployment Office

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the unemployment office in Trafford way, Doncaster, was first open for business; and when it received its official opening.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Market Testing

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Empoyment if he will list any areas within his Department that have been identified since 18 November (a) by individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial activities they are involved in or other clients they represent.

Mr. Jackson: A study to determine the most promising areas for market testing within the Department is not yet complete. The Department follows the guidance on the ethics of conducting business with the private sector contained in the Treasury's public competition and purchasing unit's guidance—CUP No. 16.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November 1991 (a) in determing areas within the Department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants; the total fees or other costs charged to the department by them to date and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. Jackson: Two companies have been used by this Department in considering areas for market testing or contracting out, namely Ernst and Young, chartered accountants and Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte. The fees agreed with these organisations for their services are commercially confidential.

Health and Safety

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give figures for the number of health and safety inspectors and the number of industrial accidents in (a) Wales and (b) the United Kingdom for the years 1979 and 1991.

Mr. Forth: The number of Health and Safety Executive inspectors based in Wales and the total number employed in Great Britain in 1979 and 1991 is as follows:

Year (1 April)	Inspectors based in Wales	Inspectors employed in Great Britain
1991	62	1,342·0

[1] Excludes mines and quarries and industrial air pollution inspectors as centrally held records for 1979, for these staff, cannot be analysed by location.

The information available on the total number of occupational injuries occurring in Wales and in Great Britain in 1979 and the financial year 1990-91 is as follows:

Total injuries reported[1] to Health and Safety Executive's Factory and Agricultural Inspectorates and Local Authorities

	Wales	Great Britain
[2]1979	[3]n/a	269,763
[4] [5]1990-91	9,629	180,450

[1] Reported under various pieces of health and safety legislation in 1979 and the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 (RIDDOR) for 1990-91.

[2] Injuries to employees only compulsorily reportable.

[3] Regional analysis of injuries in 1979 is not available.

[4] Injuries to employees, self-employed people and members of the public injured as a result of someone else's work activity in year commencing 1 April 1990.

[5] Provisional.

Responsibility for occupational health and safety matters in Northern Ireland lies with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Unemployment, London

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has for reducing unemployment in inner London.

Mr. Jackson: The Employment Service and training and enterprise councils deliver a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes to help employment prospects for unemployed people. In inner London, as elsewhere, these programmes are often designed to take account of special local circumstances to help people find the best and quickest route back to employment.

Noise

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's actions to combat noise in industry and other places of work since 1987.

Mr. Forth: During this period the Government introduced the Noise at Work Regulations 1989 requiring measures to control noise and protect workers. The Health and Safety Executive supplemented the regulations by publishing extensive guidance and free leaflets for employers, employees and machinery makers and suppliers, explaining the new legislation.

Health and safety inspectors have been active in enforcing the legislation. They have mounted a series of campaigns and other initiatives to monitor compliance and to raise the awareness of the hazard created by excessive noise at work and improve understanding of the means of controlling it.

TRANSPORT

Ports Privatisation

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what timetable has been established for the privatisation of the port of Tilbury in accordance with the Ports Act 1991; what criteria he has laid down for management-employee buy-outs; how many bidders have submitted bids; when he expects to receive any recommendation as to the proposed successful bidder; when he proposes to announce his decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Final bids for the port of Tilbury were to be submitted by 28 February. Once they have assessed the bids, the Port of London authority board will make its recommendation to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State, who will announce his decision as soon as he is able to do so. The objectives of sale for the port of Tilbury include the following criterion in respect of management and employee share-ownership:

> "In considering competing bids, the PLA will have regard to . . . the desirability of encouraging the disposal of the whole or a substantial part of the equity share capital of the company to managers or other persons employed by the company; or to another company the whole or a substantial part of whose equity share capital is owned by managers or other persons so employed."

The number of bidders for the port is a matter of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what submissions he has received from the port of Dover for the privatisation of the port in accordance with the provisions of the Ports Act 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no proposals for privatisation from that port.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what timetable has been established for the privatisation of the port of Medway in accordance with the Ports Act 1991; what criteria he has laid down for management-employee buy-outs; how many bidders have submitted bids; when he expects to receive any recommendation as to the proposed successful bidder; when he proposes to announce his decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Final bids for the Medway ports authority's undertakings were submitted on 24 February. Once it has assessed the bids, the Medway ports authority board will make its recommendation to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State, who will announce his decision as soon as he is able to do so. The objectives of sale for the Medway ports authority include the following criterion in respect of management and employee share-ownership:

> "the Authority will have particular regard to the desirability of encouraging the disposal of the whole or a substantial part of the Company to managers and employees."

The number of bidders for the port is a matter of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what timetable has been established for the privatisation of the Port of Forth in accordance with the Ports Act 1991; what criteria he has laid down for management-employee buy-outs; how many bidders have submitted bids; when he expects to receive any recommendation as to the proposed successful bidder; when he proposes to announce his decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. and learned Friend has agreed in principle to the privatisation of the Forth ports authority's undertaking by means of a flotation. The date of the flotation has not yet been announced. In considering the authority's detailed proposals my right hon. and learned Friend has had particular regard to the desirability of encouraging the disposal of the whole or a substantial part of the equity share capital to managers and employees.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what submissions he has received from the port of Ipswich for the privatisation of the port in accordance with the provisions of the Ports Act 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no proposals for privatisation from that port.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what timetable has been established for the privatisation of the port of Clyde in accordance with the Ports Act 1991; what criteria he has laid down for management-employee buy-outs; how many bidders have submitted bids; when he expects to receive any recommendation as to the proposed successful bidders; when he proposes to announce his decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Final bids for the Clyde port authority's undertaking were submitted on 14 February. Once it has assessed the bids, the Clyde port authority board will make its recommendation to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State, who will announce his decision as soon as he is able to do so. The objectives of sale for the Clyde port authority include the following criterion in respect of management and employee share-ownership:

> "the Authority will have particular regard to the desirability of encouraging the disposal of the whole or a substantial part of the equity (and voting rights) in the successor company to managers or other employees of the successor company (or to a company in which such managers or other employees have a substantial interest)."

The number of bidders for the port is a matter of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what submissions he has received from the port of Tyne for the privatisation of the port in accordance with the provisions of the Ports Act 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no proposals for privatisation from that port.

Service Areas

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the provision of services on new stretches of national non-motorway roads.

Mr. Chope: Policy on the provision of services on all-purpose trunk roads, new and old, is set out in the Department's circular "Roads 4/88". A copy is in the Library. The need is for facilities, preferably comprehensive ones, at appropriate intervals to meet the needs of all users. Local authorities are encouraged to help to identify locations where facilities are not adequate. The Department will in general comment favourably on planning applications which conform to the advice in the circular. Non-motorway roads other than all-purpose trunk roads are the responsibility of local highway authorities.

Canary Wharf

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which authorities are empowered to introduce traffic-calming measures at Canary wharf.

Mr. Chope: The introduction of traffic calming on the private roads at Canary wharf is primarily at the discretion of the developers, in consultation as necessary with the local highway authority.

Thames River Bus

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much public money supports the Thames river bus service.

Mr. Freeman: The Thames river bus service received a £500,000 grant in 1989-90 to promote and improve the service in recognition of its road decongestion and docklands regeneration benefits. Discussions are in progress about the possibility of further support on the basis of benefits to road decongestion from river transport. The case is yet to be made.

Motorway Service Areas

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the largest sum tendered since 1975 for a motorway service area.

Mr. Chope: It has been the consistent practice to treat the sums tendered for motorway service areas as confidential between the tenderer and the Department.

Road Services

Mr. John Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, if he will make a statement on the expenditure and improvement of road services within and to Bournemouth since 1987, including those improvements currently under way or approved.

Mr. Chope: The following major improvement schemes have been completed by the local highway authority Dorset county council, in each case with the assistance of 50 per cent. transport supplementary grant from central Government.

Scheme	Cost £ million
Wessex Way, Bournemouth	9·13
Winton and Moordown Relief Road	6·86
Holes Bay Road, Poole	11·93

No major trunk road improvement schemes have been carried out in the Bournemouth area since 1987. However, there are four schemes in the national programme at various stages of preparation:

Scheme	Estimated cost £ million
A31 Ashley Heath Grade Separated Junction	8·1
A31 Ringwood—Ashley Heath Improvement	3·8
A31 to Mannings Heath Relief Road	28·4
Poole Harbour Bridge Replacement	21·0

In addition, the Department of Transport has carried out a number of small improvements to the A31 in the Bournemouth area. This includes one at Ashley Heath roundabout (£150,000) and approximately £0·5 million on other improvements.

Ports Workers

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the number of casual or temporary workers engaged in the ports industry.

Mr. McLoughlin: The British Ports Federation's survey of numbers employed in the United Kingdom port industry on 2 April 1991 found 16,543 manual workers, of whom 638 were in temporary employment.

British Rail

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when next he intends to meet the chairman of British Rail to discuss the external financing limit and train procurement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend has regular meetings with Sir Bob Reid, the British Rail chairman, to discuss a variety of railway issues, including external financing and train procurement.

Roads Programme

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to review the Government's roads programme.

Mr. Chope: The White Paper (Cm 693) "Roads for Prosperity" is the basis of the trunk road programme in England. We keep this under review and from time to time I report progress to Parliament, and any modifications to our plans.

Port of London Authority

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for the future role of the Port of London authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Apart from those which it will lose with the sale of the Port of Tilbury, I have no proposals for changes in the statutory functions of the Port of London authority as the harbour authority for the tidal reaches of the Thames. These include conservancy, regulation of navigation, pilotage and the development, with a view to disposal, of its surplus land holdings.

Air Services

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he received from British Midland for assistance on its decision to withdraw the air service from Liverpool to London.

Mr. McLoughlin: None.

Maritime Transport Service

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information on the Department's definition of substantial employee share ownership and management buy out preference has been given to Maritime Transport Service; in addition to that which has been given to any other bidder for any trust port under the Ports Act 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: The chairman of Maritime Transport Services met officials of the Department on 4 February at his request. As regards a price preference for a management and employee buy-out, officials said that my right hon. and learned Friend had made it clear that he was prepared to consider a limited price preference in the light of the particular circumstances of the situation and that they were not able to add further to that statement. As regards the level of employee share ownership, officials said that this was a matter for the relevant port authority boards to consider in assessing bids against the objectives of sale agreed for their port before making their recommendation to my right hon. and learned Friend as to the sale of the port and suggested that Maritime Transport Services should seek any necessary clarification from the port authority boards as to how they would view the level of employee share ownership in assessing bids. The Department has given Maritime Transport Services no information on these matters which is not already available to other bidders for trust ports.

Traffic, Hazel Grove

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the need for a grant from his Department to assist with traffic-calming measures in the town of Hazel Grove.

Mr. Chope: None since last year when the council was advised that a scheme may be eligible for consideration for transport supplementary grant if the council demonstrated road safety benefits.

Market Testing

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list any areas within his Department that have been identified since 18 November (a) by individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial activities they are involved in or other clients they represent.

Mr. McLoughlin: A study to determine the most promising areas for market testing within the Department is not yet complete. Guidance on the ethics of conducting business with the private sector is contained in the Treasury's public competition and purchasing unit's guidance—CUP No. 16—which has been circulated to Departments.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November 1991 (a) in determining areas within his Department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised him of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants; the total fees or other costs to date charged to his Department by them and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. McLoughlin: After considering a number of possibilities, Mr. Dick Walker, a senior executive with ICI, has been appointed on a short-term contract to assist in the development of market-testing targets for the Department and its agencies. The Department will reimburse Mr. Walker's ICI salary.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the estimated rate of return on investment for the previously proposed channel tunnel rail link route and the current estimated rate of return from investment for the route which he has now decided.

Mr. Freeman: Estimates of the relative benefits and costs of different route options are contained in British Rail's "Comparison of Routes", published in October 1991, copies of which were placed in the Library of the House. British Rail is currently refining the easterly route, and it is too early to provide information on rates of return.

Rail Electrification

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to consider social and economic factors in assessing new rail electrification projects to include such factors in the calculation of the internal rate of return; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The electrification of lines is expected to earn an 8 per cent. return compared with the alternative of diesel services. However, it is the policy to take into account external benefits where a project would not otherwise meet the relevant appraisal criteria.

Coaches

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had with coach operators concerning regulations for the discharge of waste from coach toilets.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The law already prohibits a toilet fitted in a wheeled motor vehicle from being capable of discharging directly on to a road.

We have had no consultations with coach operators on this subject.

Road Building

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has undertaken on the effects of the road building programme on sites of importance for nature conservation.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The effects of road schemes on sites of importance for nature conservation are assessed on a site specific basis as part of the environmental assessment carried out for each scheme. Consultation with English Nature takes place during this assessment.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will amend the present method of cost-benefit analysis of road building assessment, so as to include an assessment of the environmental impacts of road building.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The Department's current methods for appraising trunk road schemes already include a comprehensive assessment of environmental effects. Effects are quantified as far as possible, but are not given monetary values at present. The Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment has recently reviewed the question of monetary valuation in environmental assessment. Its report and the Government's response will be published shortly.

Cars

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has undertaken on the environmental consequences of the forecast increase in the number of cars on roads in Great Britain.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 28 February 1992]: My Department devotes a significant part of its research programme to many environmental issues relating to current and future road transport. For example, we are planning to develop a more accurate assessment of how vehicles perform in order to improve our forecasting of future emissions. We are also reviewing research on alternative vehicle engines and fuel. We are looking at ways of reducing urban congestion and pollution, including the scope for road pricing and the role of enhanced public transport in reducing emissions. Current forecasts of increased road traffic are relevant background to all this research. They are also taken into account in the environmental impact assessments carried out for each of our new road schemes.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Finance

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the total of local government (a) revenue and (b) capital expenditure by local government within Scotland for each year from 1978-79 to 1991-92 (estimated).

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information requested is as follows:

	Total revenue expenditure £ million	Total capital expenditure £ million
1978-79	1,738·0	543·1
1979-80	2,096·1	643·9
1980-81	2,616·5	657·4
1981-82	2,927·3	723·8
1982-83	3,145·7	780·4
1983-84	3,316·3	929·3
1984-85	3,490·8	859·8
1985-86	3,606·0	875·2
1986-87	3,824·2	917·7
1987-88	4,085·0	1,094·3
1988-89	4,426·0	1,161·7
1989-90	4,724·1	1,246·7
1990-91	5,178·9	1,234·5
1991-92	5,647·4	1,253·4

Notes:

1. The revenue figures are final outturn for the years up to and including 1989-90: provisional outturn for 1990-91: and budget estimate for 1991-92.

2. The capital figures are final outturn for the years up to and including 1990-91: and estimated outturn for 1991-92.

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the proportion of local authority revenue expenditure in Scotland financed by (a) Government grant, (b) non-domestic rates and (c) local domestic taxation in each year from 1978-79 to 1990-91 and estimates for 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The table shows the proportion of Scottish local authorities' income from each source. This differs from revenue expenditure only to the extent that local authorities made use of balances to fund expenditure.

	Central Government Grant Per cent.	Non-Domestic Rates Per cent.	Domestic Rates/ Community Charge Per cent.
1978-79	64·9	22·2	12·9
1979-80	63·1	24·2	12·8
1980-81	60·3	25·8	13·8
1981-82	53·9	29·7	16·4
1982-83	52·9	30·1	17·0
1983-84	54·1	29·4	16·5
1984-85	55·1	28·6	16·3
1985-86	53·6	28·6	17·8
1986-87	51·0	30·0	19·0
1987-88	50·3	30·1	19·6
1988-89	51·3	29·4	19·3
1989-90	52·4	25·9	21·7
1990-91	54·9	23·8	21·3
1991-92	60·9	23·8	15·3
1992-93	63·1	20·6	16·4

Notes:

1. The rate and revenue support grant figures used in calculating the percentages are final amounts or those applying to the most recent order.
2. The domestic rate figures used are net of domestic relief and are inclusive of rebates.
3. For 1991-92 Government support includes community charge grant.
4. The 1992-93 community charge income proportions are calculated from budget estimate amounts taken from the provisional outturn/budget estimate 1992 returns made to the Scottish Office by local authorities. For those authorities whose returns have not yet been received, amounts have been estimated based on assumed payment rates for 1991-92.
5. The proportions for 1991-92 and 1992-93 are estimates.
6. From 1984-85 onwards central Government support includes revenue support grant and specific grants. A breakdown of specific grants is not available for earlier years.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the total numbers of (a) summonses and (b) liability orders issued for poll tax debt in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: None. The procedure for recovery of debts, including community charge arrears, is different in Scotland from that in England and Wales.

There is no equivalent of summonses for community charge arrears in Scotland.

The nearest equivalent to a liability order is a summary warrant. It is however customary for local authorities to apply for a single warrant in respect of many debtors. Information on the total number of persons subject to summary warrant procedure is not held centrally.

The number of summary warrants issued in respect of the community charge for the two years for which figures are available are:

Year	Number
1990	876

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what amount of poll tax income is still owed to local authorities for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The amount of local authorities' budgeted community charge income uncollected at 31 December 1991—the most recent date for which information is available—is as follows:

Year	£ million
1989-90	68·7
1990-91	157·6
1991-92	351·0

Health Service Staff

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the increase of staff in health boards since April 1989.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not held centrally for the month of April 1989. Between 30 September 1989 and 30 September 1991, however, the whole-time equivalent of all NHS staff in Scotland fell from 120,677·7 to 117,600·8, a decrease of 2·5 per cent. The data for medical, dental and nursing staff at 30 September 1991 are provisional.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of people employed by the NHS in Scotland on a full-time and part-time basis.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The latest available information held centrally shows that at 30 September 1991 there were 85,600 full-time and 56,465 part-time employees in the NHS in Scotland. The data for medical, dental and nursing staff are provisional.

Employees (Expenditure)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the net capital expenditure per employee in (a) Renfrewshire, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 27 February 1992]: Net capital expenditure per employee in manufacturing industries for Renfrewshire, Strathclyde and Scotland is set out in the table. The latest available figures are for 1989.

Net Capital Expenditure Per Employee—1989

Area	Net Capital Expenditure £ per employee
Renfrewshire	3,745
Strathclyde	2,983
Scotland	3,313

Source: Annual Census of Production.

Manufacturing Productivity

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the level for the most recent date for which figures are available of manufacturing productivity in (a) Renfrewshire, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The official data on manufacturing productivity are published by the Employment Department in the Employment Gazette. However, separate regional figures are not included.

Expressing manufacturing productivity in terms of gross value added per employee, the figures for Renfrewshire, Strathclyde and Scotland are set out in the table. The latest available figures are for 1989.

Manufacturing productivity—1989

Area	Gross value added £ per employee
Renfrewshire	31,014
Strathclyde	23,128
Scotland	22,340

Paisley Pattern Goods

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will encourage Scottish Enterprise to fund a feasibility study into the development of the manufacture of Paisley pattern goods in Paisley; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 27 February 1992]: I wrote to the local enterprise company about the manufacture of Paisley pattern goods in Paisley following a meeting I had with the hon. Member and the hon. Member for Paisley, North (Mrs. Adams) on this subject on 4 September last year.

It is a matter for the local enterprise company how it chooses to pursue this issue. I have however noted the hon. Member's suggestion of a feasibility study and will pass it on to the local enterprise company. If he wishes also to pursue the proposal direct with Renfrewshire Enterprise then I would be happy for him to do so.

Local Enterprise Companies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the formula for determining the apportionment of resources to local enterprise companies; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish a table showing the resources allocated to each local enterprise company (a) in financial terms and (b) on a per capita basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The basis on which resources are allocated to local enterprise companies is a matter for Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, in their respective areas. I have asked the chairmen of these two bodies to write to the hon. Member with the information he has requested.

Employment Growth, Renfrewshire

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate employment growth in Renfrewshire over the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The information is not available in the precise form requested. The total level of employment in Renfrew district is estimated to have increased by 19·8 per cent. between 1987 and 1989, the latest year for which data are available.

Employment Performance

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the employment performance of (a) Renfrew district, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland between 1980 and 1990.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 27 February 1992]: Available data from the September 1981 and September 1989 censuses of employment show that (a) the number of employees in employment in Renfrew district was 10,800 in 1989 and 13,000 in 1981; (b) the number in Strathclyde was 861,200 in 1989 and 885,000 in 1981; and (c) the number in Scotland was 1,966,500 in 1989 and 1,965,500 in 1981.

Exports

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of Scottish exports came from Renfrewshire in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The information requested is not available.

Renfrew Enterprise

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the Renfrew Enterprise annual (a) capital and (b) revenue budgets is already legally committed in the financial year 1991-92 and each of the subsequent four years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer, 27 February 1992]: Renfrewshire Enterprise Company's forward financial commitments are a matter for the company.

Labour Statistics

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the percentage of total employment within Renfrewshire in each sector in (a) 1975, (b) 1980, (c) 1985 and (d) 1990.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer, 27 February 1992]: Available data from the Employment Department's census of employment relate to the years 1975, 1981, 1984 and 1989. For each of these years, the percentage of employees in employment in each sector in Renfrew district is shown in the table:

	Percentage 1981	 1984	 1989
1980 Standard Industrial Classification Sector:
Agriculture	0	[1]	[1]
Energy and Water Supply	1	2	[1]
Manufacturing	42	52	33

[1] Indicates figure unable to be provided due to the very small number of census units.

Percentages are rounded to the nearest whole number.

Departmental Staff

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of employees in his Department; and how many are (a) black and (b) disabled.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 28 February 1992]: At 1 April 1991 the total number of staff employed in the Scottish Office and associated departments was 6,186. Of that number, 29 have described themselves as belonging to an ethnic minority. At 1 June 1991, the Departments employed 80 staff who were registered disabled and an unrecorded number of people with a disability who had chosen not to register.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the number of (a) men and (b) women in his Department in each of grades (i) 1, (ii) 2, (iii) 3, (iv) 4, (v) 5, (vi) 6, (vii) 7, (viii) SEO, (ix) HEO, (x) administrative trainee, (xi) EO, (xii) CO and (xiii) CA.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The information at 1 April 1991 for my Department is set out in the tables:

The Scottish Office

RETEX

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the European Community RETEX programme, its application in Scotland and whether the Paisley area is eligible for assistance;

(2) if he will make a statement on the method of application of the additionality rule to the European Community RETEX programme;

(3) which agencies are eligible to apply for assistance through the European Community RETEX proposal; what assistance is available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 28 February 1992]: We are considering the draft notice to member states which the Commission sent us on 22 January. Decisions on eligible areas, agencies eligible to apply and levels of assistance, will not be taken until the final shape of the initiative is known. The United Kingdom Government will naturally seek to ensure the most effective coverage of United Kingdom textile areas while avoiding any unfair competition against United Kingdom producers. The new arrangements for ERDF spending announced by my right hon. Friend on 17 February at column 22 will apply to RETEX.

Textile Industry

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will request Scottish Enterprise to undertake a study into how the damage to local economies through the loss of textile jobs may be minimised or alleviated ; and what financial assistance is available from public agencies at all levels of government.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 28 February 1992]: Addressing these sorts of issues is a central part of the role which the Government intended for Scottish Enterprise and the local enterprise companies when deciding to set up the new framework.

Scottish Enterprise and the local enterprise companies monitor carefully the effects of industrial closures in Scotland and have a range of measures at their disposal to help minimise or alleviate the effects of job losses. In the case of the textiles industry, Scottish Enterprise has recently completed an internal review of the industry and is now considering how best to implement the strategy which that has identified. Scottish Borders Enterprise, along with the industry, has established the borders textiles initiative to provide practical support for design, marketing and promotion of the industry. The full range of the enterprise company's powers and functions are deployed to assist with economic development, training and job creation in the area.

In addition, the enterprise initiative provides a wide range of assistance to industry, including assistance under the Government's regional policy. The full range of Employment Service functions are also available to help those made redundant as a result of industrial closures.

There is in place, therefore, a range of measures to tackle precisely the concerns which the hon. Member has raised.

Psychiatric Patients

Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the use by health boards of the pocket money of long-stay psychiatric patients to buy their personal clothing: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 24 February 1992]: Hospitals are strongly encouraged by boards to use the savings of patients who are unable to look after their own affairs in an imaginative way for their benefit. They know that balances should not build up to high levels unless there are particular personal circumstances to justify this. Many of these patients are very elderly, frail and suffer from dementia. The opportunities to spend money on them creatively are limited. Buying new clothes and dressing well is one of the few pleasures nursing staff can help very dependent elderly people to enjoy.

Unemployment, Cunninghame

Mr. Lambie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives he is prepared to propose to deal with unemployment in Cunninghame.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 26 February 1992]: The development of initiatives to deal with unemployment in particular areas, where action is necessary to supplement the very broad range of measures alread in place, is a matter for local enterprise companies. I am confident that Enterprise Ayrshire will bring forward any new proposals which are necessary to address unemployment in Cunninghame.

Inspector of Constabulary

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the post of Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary in Scotland is full or part-time.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 February 1992]: Her Majesty's inspectorate for Scotland consists of one Her Majesty's inspector (full-time) and one Her Majesty's chief inspector (full-time). Both are former chief constables.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the current annual amount of (a) low level, (b) intermediate level and (c) high level nuclear waste generated in Scotland; if he will express this as a percentage of the total United Kingdom figure; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 28 February 1992]: Information relating to the rate of generation of low, intermediate and high level radioactive waste at United Kingdom nuclear establishments including those in Scotland is contained in the regular statements of the United Kingdom radioactive waste inventory published jointly by the Department of the Environment and UK Nirex Ltd. The statements are published every other year, the most recent being Department of the Environment report DOE/RW 89-110 which is in the Library.

Nursery School Places

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the capital and revenue costs of providing nursery school places for all children in the three to five age group.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 24 February 1992]: Local authorities have the power to provide for nursery education as they deem appropriate in response to local needs and circumstances and their own spending priorities.

The Opposition have made various claims about the importance of providing nursery places for all three and four-year-olds, but I am not aware of any estimates of the total cost of providing these places.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Shareholders

2. Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners own shares.

Mr. Scott: The latest information available suggests that in 1988 approximately 1·35 million pensioners owned shares and other marketable securities.

Lone Parents

6. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of lone parents receive regular maintenance payments.

Mr. Jack: A survey of the circumstances of lone parent families in the United Kingdom carried out in 1989 found that only 30 per cent. of lone mothers received regular amounts of maintenance for their children. Our proposals for a new system of child maintenance aim to remedy the situation.

Mr. Wolfson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to help lone parents who want to re-enter the labour market.

Mr. Jack: Currently, significant help is built into the benefits available to lone parents who want to work. In particular, family credit gives considerable encouragement. Lone parents get the same adult credit as a two-parent family, and one parent benefit is disregarded in calculating their income. Disability working allowance, which is to be introduced on 6 April 1992, will make the same provision for lone parents as family credit.

In housing benefit and community charge benefit, those lone parents not on income support, benefit from the higher, £25, earnings disregard and from a lone parent premium which is higher than the rate of lone parent premium in income support.

From 7 April 1992, this help will be further enhanced by two measures. First, family credit will be available to those working at least 16 hours a week rather than 24. This will enable many lone parents to work the qualifying number of hours and fit them around school hours, and so benefit from the more generous provisions of family credit.

Secondly, from the same date, the first £15 of maintenance they receive will be disregarded in calculating income in family credit, housing benefit, community charge benefit, and disability working allowance. This will increase the disposable income of all such recipients.

In addition, when the new Child Support Agency starts work in April 1993, more lone parents will receive higher amounts of child maintenance and be able to take full advantage of the changes in family credit.

On 11 December 1991, we announced a grant of £1 million to the National Council for One Parent Families to enable it to provide courses for lone parents who are thinking of going back to work. The courses will help lone parents to improve their job search skills, and will provide a range of information on local facilities and personal finances.

Housing Benefit

13. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to meet the housing associations to discuss the level of housing benefit for income support claimants.

Miss Widdecombe: We have no plans to do so and I am not aware of any requests to this Department for such a meeting.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the latest estimates for England of (a) the number of households receiving housing benefit, (b) the average amount of housing benefit paid and (c) the cost of housing benefit, distinguishing (i) those households which receive income support and those which do not, (ii) rent rebates and rent allowances and (iii) pensioner households, lone parent families, two parent families, childless couples and others.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 26 February 1992]: The information available is set out in the table.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for the improvement of contact between his Department and London local authorities to speed up the payment of housing benefit.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department and the Benefits Agency keep the arrangements for housing benefit liaison with local authorities under constant review. Discussions are currently taking place with the Benefits Agency and the local authority associations on the preparation of a national service level agreement. This will provide a model framework for individual local authorities and social security districts throughout Great Britain, allowing them to negotiate local agreements which more closely suit local needs. One of the first local agreements will operate between certain London authorities and the Glasgow benefits centre. In addition to these initiatives, regular liaison meetings, at working and management levels, are actively encouraged. Finally, the forms used by the Benefits Agency to supply information to local authorities are to be improved later this year. With these improvements in place, all authorities should see gains in the quality of service provided.

Unemployment Benefit

14. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many unemployed benefit claimants there were in St. Helens in December 1978 and in December 1991.

Mr. Scott: In December 1978 there were 14,288 unemployed people registering in the Wigan and St. Helens travel-to-work area. In December 1991 there were 22,740 people signing unemployed in that area.

Incomes

16. Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have incomes in excess of £20,280 a year solely by virtue of receiving overtime and bonus payments.

Mr. Jack: It is estimated from the April 1991 "New Earnings Survey" that nearly three quarters of a million employees have gross weekly earnings above £390—the equivalent of £20,280—by virtue of overtime, bonus and other premium payments.

Upper Earnings Limit

17. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the estimated revenue yield in 1992-93 of abolishing the employee's national insurance upper earnings limit from October 1992.

Mr. Newton: We estimate that the contribution yield in 1992-93 would be £1·1 billion.

National Insurance

18. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the average cost to a non-pensioner of the imposition of national insurance contributions at 9 per cent. on income from savings above £3,000.

Mr. Newton: We estimate that in the United Kingdom the average cost in 1991-92 to a non-pensioner would be £770.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the annual cost of providing full national insurance benefits to those with earnings below the lower earnings limit.

Mr. Jack: The cost would depend on various factors, including the scope of the benefits scheme proposed and the incidence of claims among low earners. I regret that the information on which such an estimate could be made is not presently available.

However, some 3 million employees earning less than the lower earnings limit might be affected from such an arrangement and as a result payment for such benefit could cost billions in the longer term.

22. Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the revenue yield (a) of a 4·5 per cent. rate of national insurance contributions applied to all income in excess of £20,280 a year and (b) an increase in the national insurance contributions upper earnings limit to £26,000 a year.

Mr. Jack: We estimate that a 4·5 per cent. charge on earnings over £20,280 a year would yield about £1·5 billion in respect of 1991-92.

Raising the upper earnings limit for employees to £26,000 a year, would yield about £0·6 billion.

Disability Benefits

19. Sir William Shelton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures are being taken to improve awareness of the new disability benefits due to be introduced in April.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to publicise improvements to the system of benefits for disabled people.

Mr. Scott: The advertising campaign for disability living allowance and disability working allowance commenced on 5 February. The campaign includes television commercials, supported by advertising in the national press, specialist, and ethnic press as well as a number of other publications. The advertisements invite people to telephone or send off a coupon to a freepost address to obtain the "Guide to New Benefits for Disabled People". I am very pleased to announce that we have already received 120,000 responses to the advertising.

The advertisements form part of a larger publicity campaign targeted at disabled people, carers, advisers, and health professionals. As part of this campaign, we have written to over one million existing beneficiaries of attendance allowance and mobility allowance to let them know about the benefit changes and how to claim extra help, if appropriate. We are also writing to organisations of and for disabled people, advisers, and health professionals—such as doctors, nurses and therapists—telling them about the benefits and how they can help their clients and patients to claim. We are also making use of the new out-of-hours service BBC Select to broadcast a series of information programmes about DLA and DWA.

The key materials—including the commercials and advertisements—have been researched with disabled people, and the campaign has been prepared in liaison with representatives of organisations of and for disabled people.

27. Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps have been taken to consult disabled people and their representatives in the design and promotion of the new disability living allowance and disability working allowance.

Mr. Scott: There has been considerable consultation and testing with disabled people and their representative organisations on many of the key elements of the new benefits, including proposals for the new assessment and adjudication arrangements, draft claim packs, regulations and leaflets. In addition the key materials for the publicity campaign—including the television commercials and press advertisements—have been researched with disabled people, and the campaign has been prepared in liaison with representatives of organisations of and for disabled people.

23. Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what response his Department has received to the current advertising campaign for disability working allowance and disability living allowance.

25. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what response his Department has received to the current advertising campaign for disability working allowance and disability living allowance.

Mr. Scott: In response to the advertising campaign for the new disability benefits which began on 5 February we have received more than 120,000 inquiries so far. I regard this as a very successful start to the campaign, and one which reflects the Government's commitment to ensuring that as many disabled people as possible learn of the new opportunities that the benefits provide.

Expenditure

20. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what percentage total expenditure on social security has increased since 1979 in real terms.

Miss Widdecombe: Total expenditure on Social Security increased by 52 per cent. in real terms between 1978-79 and 1991-92.

21. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the likely increase in expenditure that will result from the change from mobility allowance and attendance allowance to disability living allowance.

Mr. Scott: We expect by next year to be spending nearly £¼ billion extra on additional help for around 300,000 disabled people as a result of introducing disability living allowance. This expenditure comes on top of several other substantial improvements introduced during this Parliament and, of course, on top of an increase of over £7 billion in real terms since 1979 in the benefits we pay to disabled people.

Family Credit

24. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the value of the average family credit award expressed as a proportion of gross wages for those who receive family credit.

Mr. Jack: In August 1991, a 5 per cent. sample of family credit recipients showed that the average is 30 per cent. of the gross weekly earnings of the main earner.

Self-employed People

28. Mr. Dicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many self-employed people earn more than £20,280 a year.

Mr. Jack: As I confirmed to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Mr. Beaumont-Dark), we estimate that in 1991-92 about 400,000 self-employed people will earn above the upper profits limit of £20,280.

Occupational Pension Schemes

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further representations he has received concerning the existing legal basis for occupational pension schemes.

Mr. Newton: My Department has received a number of representations from Members of Parliament, interested organisations and members of the public on the basis of which occupational pension schemes operate.

Household Incomes

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of household income derives from social security payments in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Wales.

Mr. Jack: The information requested can be found in table 31 of the 1990 "Family Expenditure Survey". These percentages are affected by the interplay of a wide range of demographic and economic, as well as social, factors.

Claimants

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many, and what proportion, of supplementary benefit and income support claimants in Great Britain were in receipt of benefit because they were unemployed for each year since 1979.

Mr. Jack: The information available for the period is in the table:

Year	Total number of supplementary benefit/income support claimants thousands	Number of supplementary benefit/income support claimants who were unemployed thousands	Proportion of supplementary benefit/income support claimants who were unemployed
1979	2,855	566	1 in 5·04
1980	3,118	854	1 in 3·65
1981	3,723	1,318	1 in 2·82
1982	4,267	1,722	1 in 2·48
1983	4,349	1,826	1 in 2·38
1984	4,609	1,953	1 in 2·36
1986	4,938	2,121	1 in 2·33
1987	4,896	1,957	1 in 2·50
1988	4,352	1,511	1 in 2·88
1989	4,161	1,216	1 in 3·42
1990	4,180	1,063	1 in 3·93

Note: Figures for claimants have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Income Support

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether unemployed claimants who are receiving income support who participate in European social fund vocational training courses provided either by (a) voluntary organisations or local authorities, or (b) training and enterprise councils or local enterprise companies are required to be available for, and actively seeking, employment.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her on 26 February at column 537.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total value for the last 12-month period for which records are available, of assistance paid to mortgagors currently in receipt of income support, for (a) direct help with mortgage interest payments, (b) passported help from the social fund for help with the cost of furniture and other essential household items and (c) other passported help from the social fund, by category; and if he will subdivide the figures into childless, couples with children, and lone parent household categories.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The information required for (b) and (c) is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information requested for (a) is as follows:

Status	Number of claimants (000s)	Amount included in assessments for mortgage interest (£ million)
Childless	169	231
Couples with children	64	146
Lone parents	77	177
Total	310	554

Over-60s Card

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to introduce the European Community over-60s card.

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Barnsley, East (Mr. Patchett) on 3 February at columns 96-7. I will send him a copy of the letter I wrote to Members of the European Parliament on 20 January 1992.

Market Testing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Jack: Individual agencies within the Department have not retained a private sector consultancy firm to give advice on market testing. Price Waterhouse has been retained to advise the Department as a whole on potential areas for market testing. The appointment was made following competitive tendering.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list any areas within his Department that have been identified since 18 November 1991 (a) by individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial actitivies they are involved in or other clients they represent.

Mr. Jack: Since 18 November 1991 the Department has been working to draw up a three to five-year programme of market testing, informed by studies undertaken with the private sector, as required by the White Paper "Competing for Quality". All support areas are being considered.

Contract documents include a clause on confidentiality covering both commercial and other information. All contractors' employees are bound by the same conditions on confidentiality as civil servants under the Official Secrets Acts of 1911 and 1989 and section 19 of the Social Security Act 1989 and are required to sign a declaration to that effect.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November 1991 (a) in determining areas within his Department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised him of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants and the total fees or other costs to date charged to his Department by them and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. Jack: Price Waterhouse has been contracted by this Department to advise on potential areas for market testing. The fees charged on individual contracts are regarded as commercial in confidence and cannot be divulged.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list changes in the criteria for attendance allowance made between May 1990 and May 1991.

Mr. Scott: From 1 October 1990 people with a terminal illness who are unlikely to live long enough to satisfy the six-month qualifying period for the benefit have been able to qualify for the higher rate automatically, and do not have to satisfy the qualifying period.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when attendance allowance was first paid to Mrs. Mary Wood of Fairfax place, Dartmouth; when it was withdrawn; when a doctor appointed by his Department last carried out a medical examination of Mrs. Wood; when he expects to make a decision on Mrs. Wood's entitlement to the allowance; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessments were made of the entitlement of Mrs. Mary Wood of Fairfax place, Dartmouth to receive attendance allowance in (a) May 1990 and (b) May 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The administration of attendance allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend and copies will be placed in the Library and Public Information Office.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the circumstances under which payment of attendance allowance may be discontinued.

Mr. Scott: Payment may be discontinued because:

(a) the medical criteria for an award are no longer satisfied;
(b) more than 28 days have been spent as an inpatient in a health service hospital and/or publicly funded residential accommodation;
(c) the residence and presence conditions are no longer satisfied;
(d) there is a complete overlap with constant attendance allowance;
(e) of imprisonment or detention in legal custody.

Benefits

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many benefit claimants in Glasgow have requested a review of their supplementary benefit entitlement under the regulation 72 take-up campaign; how many of these (a) have had their requests for review refused, (b) are pending and (c) have received payments; what is the total amount of back-dated benefit paid out to Glasgow claimants as at 31 January; and what was the average amount of such payments;

(2) if he will list the number of claimants for each individual benefit at each of his Department's offices serving the Glasgow, Maryhill constituency as at 30 December.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the public information office.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many additional people who at present have reduced entitlement to benefits would qualify for full entitlement to benefit as a result of increasing the initial capital cut off point from £3,000 to £6,000, while retaining the present upper limits and tapers for (a) income support, (b) family credit, (c) housing benefit and (d) community charge benefits; and what would be the full year cost in each case;

(2) what is the number of people who receive reduced entitlement to benefit as a result of the rules on capital limits for (a) family credit, (b) income support, (c) housing benefit and (d) community charge benefit;

(3) how many additional people, who at present have reduced entitlement to benefits, would qualify for full entitlement to benefit as a result of increasing the initial capital cut off point from £3,000 to £4,000, while retaining the present upper limits and tapers for (a) income support, (b) family credit, (c) housing benefit and (d) community charge benefits; and what would be the full year cost in each case;

(4) how many additional people who at present have reduced entitlement to benefits would qualify for full entitlement to benefit as a result of increasing the initial capital cut off point from £3,000 to £5,000, while retaining the present upper limits and tapers for (a) income support, (b) family credit, (c) housing benefit and (d) community charge benefits; and what would be the full year cost in each case.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 25 February 1992]: Where a claimant's capital exceeds £3,000, a weekly income is assumed in each of the income-related benefits according to a tariff income formula. However, any actual interest earned by the capital is not counted as income when deciding entitlement to benefit. In many cases, this interest exceeds the tariff income taken into account.

The estimated numbers of recipients of income-related benefits, whose entitlement to benefit is affected because they have capital in excess of £3,000 are as follows:

(a) Family Credit: 3,000
(b) Income Support: 73,000
(c) Housing Benefit: 174,000
(d) Community Charge Benefit: 608,000

Increasing the existing lower capital limit of £3,000 would affect all claimants with capital above £3,000. The numbers of claimants who, on the latest information available, would not have tariff income taken into account if the lower capital limit were increased to the levels stated, and the estimated costs of raising the lower level for all cases with capital, are in the table:

	£4,000	£5,000	£6,000
Income Support	39,000	58,000	69,000
Family Credit	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
Housing Benefit	59,000	101,000	130,000

	£4,000	£5,000	£6,000
Community Charge Benefit	165,000	289,000	389,000
Estimated costs across the income-related benefits	£90 million	£150 million	£200 million

Notes:

1. Costs of increasing the lower capital limit are based on the results of modelling using data drawn from the 1987-88-89 family expenditure surveys at 1992-93 prices and benefits levels.
2. Estimates of capital holdings drawn from the family expenditure survey are imputed from reported income from investment and savings and are therefore uncertain.

[1]— Less than 2,500 claimants.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest figures for Coventry and Warwickshire for the number of claims to (a) income support, (b) family credit and (c) housing benefit; and what were the figures one year ago.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available, and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Social Fund

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications to the social fund for (a) community care grants, (b) budgeting loans and (c) crisis loans were made by applicants at each of his Department's offices covering the Glasgow, Maryhill constituency between 1 July 1991 and 31 December; how many were successful; and how many were awarded to pensioners.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and Public Information Offices.

Cold Weather Payments

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants in Glasgow have automatically received the £6 cold weather payment during the month of January 1992, via the income support computer system.

Mr. Scott: Such information as is available is in the Library.

Benefit Changes

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of (a) the saving from a 100,000 fall and (b) the cost of a 100,000 increase, in the number of people unemployed, arising from changes in benefits.

Mr. Jack: The latest estimate of the effect of variation of 100,000 is contained in figure 25 on page 18 of the "Departmental Report" (Cm 1914). The estimate for 1992-93 is £330 million.

Earnings-related Supplement

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cash value of earnings-related supplement to unemployment benefit in 1992 for (a) a person on half average male earnings, (b) a person on average male earnings and (c) a person on one-and-a-half average male earnings if the supplement had not been abolished in 1991 and assuming it had been uprated by the pre-1981 formula.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 February 1992]: In 1980 the formula for calculating ERS was 33 per cent. of reckonable weekly earnings in the last complete tax year between £17·50 (the then lower earnings limit for payment of national insurance contributions) and £30, plus 15 per cent. of earnings between £30 and £120 (the then upper earnings limit for payment of national insurance contributions). Because ERS was found not to meet the needs of the most vulnerable in the employment field it was abolished in January 1982 and the resulting savings targeted elsewhere within the social security system.

Values in 1992 would be:

Earnings base for calculating ERS	Cash value of supplement to UB £
Half average male earnings	18·10
Average male earnings	38·90
One-and-a-half average male earnings	55·85

Notes:

1. Earnings related supplement has been uprated from its 1980 level.
2. Average male earnings are taken from the April 1991 new earnings survey.

Using a 1980 base the net cost of re-introducing ERS is estimated at about £530 million which takes account of a £120 million reduction in payments of income support, housing benefit and community charge benefit.

DEFENCE

Departmental Flats and Maisonettes

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flats or maisonettes under his Department's control were constructed by the Jesperson 12M system; how many are (a) now demolished or (b) scheduled for demolition; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no central record within the Ministry of Defence of how many married quarters, either flats or maisonettes, were constructed using this system nor of how many may have been demolished.

HMS Daedalus

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department will co-operate with Gosport borough council, the Gosport Aviation Society and other interested bodies in order to ensure the maximum possible retention within Gosport of historical artefacts and preservation of sites of historical interest, following the closure of HMS Daedalus.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes. Contact with both Hampshire county council and Gosport borough council has already been established at local level. No approach from the Gosport Aviation Society has been received to date.

Departmental Orders

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of orders placed by his Department with Rolls-Royce in Scotland, British Aerospace, Prestwick, GEC/Ferranti, Edinburgh, Babcock, Rosyth, Babcock Renfrew and Yarrow on the Clyde in the last 10 years.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following is the information:

Company	Number of contracts since 1 April 1989	Total value of contracts placed since 1 April 1989 £ million
Rolls-Royce	20	81·6
British Aerospace Prestwick	62	3·3
GEC-Ferranti Edinburgh	149	53·7
Babcock Rosyth	345	141·3
Babcock Renfrew	44	0·6
Yarrow Clyde	94	19·6

Information on orders placed prior to 1 April 1989 could be obtained only with disproportionate cost and effort.

Service Contracts

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the total value of contracts awarded to local firms by RAF Lossiemouth, RAF Kinloss, RAF Leuchars, RN Bases Coulport, Faslane and Rosyth and Royal Marine Base Condor.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Maintenance and Repair Contracts

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the value of maintenance and repair contracts awarded by his Department during the last 10 years to Scottish industrial engineering companies and to Scottish shipyards and dockyards.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to my hon. Friend.

"Options for Change"

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the firms in the engineering and allied industries that have been consulted about his policy statement in "Options for Change".

Mr. Alan Clark: Decisions on the content of the defence programme arising from our proposals for Britain's defence for the 1990s are for Government. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I regularly meet firms from all sectors of the defence industry to discuss a wide range of issues. Subject to the necessary constraints of security and confidentiality, we would always wish companies to be briefed as fully as possible on future requirements in which they may have an interest.

Equipment Sales

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the second phase of the Al Yamamah contract for Tornadoes, Hawks and support equipment is likely to be signed.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the next phase of purchases of British equipment under the Al Yamamah agreement with Saudi Arabia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am not in a position to make a statement at this time.

Armed Forces Pension Scheme

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current estimate of the cost of the additional expenditure which would be incurred if beneficiaries of the armed forces pension scheme who were invalided from the service prior to 1973 received the improvement in benefits made to the scheme in 1973; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The additional cost of providing benefits under the armed forces pension scheme to personnel invalided from service before 31 March 1973, on the same basis as applies to personnel invalided on or after that date, is estimated to be in the region of £400 million per year.

Advanced Short-range Air-to-air Missile

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when an announcement on the advanced short-range air-to-air missile is to be made.

Mr. Alan Clark: We hope to be in a position to make an announcement shortly.

North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (Conscripts)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the member states of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation which have conscript military forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following North Atlantic Treaty Organisation member states have conscript military forces:

Belgium
Denmark
France
Germany
Greece
Italy
The Netherlands
Norway
Portugal
Spain
Turkey

TRANSPORT

Rail Developments, London

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the total estimated full cost (a) in cash and (b) at constant 1992 prices of (i) the Jubilee line extension, (ii) east-west crossrail and (iii) other currently agreed new rail developments in London.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

	Cash	1992 prices
Jubilee Line Extension	1,811	1,699
CrossRail	2,376	1,939
Croydon Tramlink	166	141
Chelsea-Hackney Line	[1]—	2,000
DLR Lewisham Extension	[1]—	150
Heathrow Express	[1]—	250-300

[1] Project expenditure profiles not available.

These projects are at different stages of planning and approval. Construction of the Jubilee line extension is expected to begin shortly after Royal Assent. Construction of crossrail is expected to begin in 1995-96. The route of the Chelsea-Hackney line has been safeguarded, but no decision has been taken about when or whether the project should proceed. The Croydon tramlink, the DLR Lewisham extension and the Heathrow express are all projects which the Government expect to be taken forward by the private sector.

Bridge, Portrack

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, column 99, what are his reasons for maintaining the high-level road bridge at Portrack.

Mr. Chope: A new crossing at a lower level is not economically justified and it would be unreasonable to divert traffic via the existing Cannon Park lifting bridge.

Rail Electrification

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of rail routes are electrified in Scotland, England, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom.

Mr. McLoughlin: The percentage of rail routes electrified is as follows:

	Total route miles	Electrified route miles	Percentage electrified
Scotland	1,705	389	22·8
England	7,969	2,663	33·4
Total United Kingdom	10,515	3,052	29·0

Sources: British Rail, Northern Ireland Railways Co. Ltd, Transport Statistics Great Britain.

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what rate of return on investment he requires from projects for electrification of main railway lines in Scotland;

(2) if he will take social and economic cost benefits into account in reaching his decision on the electrification of the railway line from Edinburgh to Aberdeen.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on Monday 2 March 1992.

Airspace

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the results of the survey of infringements of regulated airspace in the first half of 1990.

Mr. McLoughlin: Matters of flight safety are the responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority. I have asked the chairman of the authority to write to the hon. Member.

River Thames

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for the future administration of navigation and shipping on the River Thames.

Mr. McLoughlin: There are no plans to change the existing arrangements for the administration of navigation and shipping on the River Thames.

Tugs

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review his policy of excluding certain tugs from regulations requiring safe manning certificates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The new Safe Manning Document Regulations will give effect to an amendment to the international convention for the safety of life at sea 1974 and will require all United Kingdom sea-going ships of 500 tonnes or over to be provided with a document specifying the level of manning considered necessary to ensure the safe and efficient operation of the ship. Sea-going tugs of 500 tonnes or over will be included and the voluntary safe manning document scheme currently in place will be retained for all vessels under 500 tonnes. In addition, Department surveyors are able to assess the minimum manning requirements of a vessel during any inspection.

Railway Imports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many railway engines and new or used rolling stock have been imported into the United Kingdom in the last five years; and what were the countries of origin.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not collected by the Department.

Training Certificates

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether provisional certificates of training issued under EC directive 89/684 EC issued by his Department to meet the requirements of the directive will be recognised by the other EC member states.

Mr. Chope: They can only be used in the country of issue.

Dangerous Substances (EC D[illegible]ctive)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take urgent action in relation to EC directive 89/684 EEC to ensure that British LGV drivers of vehicles carrying dangerous substances will not be stopped from entering other European Community states by not having in their possession the certificates and documentation required by the directive when it comes into effect on 1 July.

Mr. Chope: A[illegible]ministrative arrangements are in hand for training courses to run from April 1992 enabling drivers of road tankers, tank containers and vehicle carrying explosives to obtain the certificates before 1 July.

British Rail

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when Her Majesty's Government intend to raise the external financing limit for British Rail.

Mr. Freeman: In June 1991 we raised British Rail's external financing limit for 1991-92 by £400 million, to a revised total of £1,522 million. The limit for 1992-93 was set in the autumn statement at £2,041 million, in real terms the highest ever figure and an increase of 28 per cent. over 1991-92.

Birmingham to Manchester Route

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total cost to the Exchequer of the competition for a new privately funded route from Birmingham to Manchester; how many proposals were received; and what studies have been carried out on the M6 widening scheme.

Mr. Chope: It is not possible to disaggregate departmental staff costs for this competition from those for other privately financed road schemes. The Department obtained financial advice from consultants at a cost of approximately £50,000.

Four groups responded to the invitation for privately financed proposals.

Since the M6 widening scheme entered the trunk road programme in 1989, a detailed study of options for widening has been undertaken by consultants commissioned by the Department. The study has included engineering, environmental, traffic and economic assessments.

Departmental Staff

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff; and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. McLoughlin: Pay and grading reviews have been carried out during the past 12 months in the following parts of the Department, including executive agencies:

The Air Accident Inspection Branch (Inspector grades);
The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency;
The Driving Standards Agency (Senior Driving Examiner grades).

Consultants Price Waterhouse were involved in the DVLA review. Private consultants were not used in either of the other reviews.

Car Ownership

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what figures his Department holds showing the number of people owning cars for the years 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Chope: Information on car ownership is given in "Transport Statistics Great Britain". Table 2.14 of the 1991 edition showed that, in 1989, 66 per cent. of households, or 14·3 million households, in Great Britain had the regular use of a car. Figures for 1990 will be available in mid-1992.

Railway Investment

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail about its investment priorities for 1992-93.

Mr. Freeman: Investment priorities are regularly discussed with British Rail. BR is currently finalising its investment programme for the coming year as part of its budget, within the external finance limit of £2,041 million for 1992-93—the highest ever figure in real terms.

Inland Waterways

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of successful applications for inland waterways freight facilities grants, section 36 grants, since they were set up in 1981.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government have awarded seven inland waterway freight facilities grants under section 36 of the Transport Act 1981. The awards have been as follows:-

Millgate Investments Ltd, Gainsborough, Lincolnshire	369,340
Varma Services Ltd, Deptford, London SE	859,200
Sheffield Haulage and Storage Ltd, Rotherham	61,375
West Country Fuels Ltd, Gloucester	26,950
Colwick Petroleum Ltd, Nottingham	63,494
Sand & Gravel (Leeds) Ltd	20,640
Wimpey Hobbs Ltd, Greenwich, London SE	402,832

Roads

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what figures his Department holds showing the amount of money spent on building, maintaining and policing roads in 1991.

Mr. Chope: The Department of Transport's report for 1992—Cm 1907—contains outturn figures for 1990-91 and provisional outturn figures for 1991-92 for:—

(a) Capital expenditure on new construction and improvement of national roads—those for which the Secretary of State is the highway authority,

(b) capital expenditure on structural maintenance of national roads,
(c) current expenditure on national roads,
(d) expenditure on priority routes in London,
(e) current expenditure on local roads—those for which local authorities are the highway authorities, and
(f) capital expenditure on local roads.

These figures relate to England. Roads in Scotland and Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Secretary of State for Wales.

Information from the Home Office on the costs of policing roads in 1991 is not yet available.

Secondary Traffic Signals

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport at how many road junctions secondary traffic signals have been removed, pursuant to his departmental advice note TA/18/81; what extension of this scheme is proposed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: It is for individual highway authorities to decide on the layouts of their traffic signals. The information requested is not available centrally. The Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1981 define the essential requirements and these are supplemented by departmental advice. There are no plans to revise departmental advice note TA/18/81 in respect of the provision of secondary signals.

Liverpool to London Flights

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the chairman of British Midland to discuss the proposed withdrawal of the service betwen Liverpool and London.

Mr. McLoughlin: The chairman of British Midland has not requested a meeting. The decision to suspend air services between Liverpool and London was a matter for the company to determine in the light of its commercial judgment.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce an agreement for the construction of the Birmingham northern relief road; and if he will make a statement on the timetable he envisages.

Mr. Chope: I am pleased to announce that we have been able to complete with Midlands Expressway Ltd. the concession agreement for the Birmingham northern relief road. This will be the first privately financed toll motorway in the United Kingdom and the first road authorised under the provisions of the New Road and Street Works Act 1991. This project has been strongly backed by Midlands Expressway Ltd.'s parent companies, Trafalgar House and Iritecna of Italy.

The new road, which should be opened in the late 1990s, will provide welcome relief to the M6 and to local traffic in the A5/A38 corridor. The agreement provides for a concession of 53 years and the concessionaire envisages that, on opening, tolls will be about £1·50 for cars and £3 for lorries at 1990 prices. The cost of engineering the Birmingham northern relief road will be some £270 million, including substantial measures for the mitigation of environmental impact.

Midlands Expressway Ltd.'s latest design reflects a significant number of changes to the scheme which was accepted as a basis for public consultation in the memorandum of agreement signed on 12 August 1991. This revised scheme will, I hope, address most of the points raised in the public consultation. Towards the end of this year I hope to bring forward orders to implement the scheme.

A35 (Wilmington Bypass)

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements he is making to ensure the building of a bypass for the village of Wilmington on the A35 at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 20 February 1992]: We shall be inviting bids from consulting engineers for the design work on this scheme soon.

Roads (Expenditure)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the total of revenue expenditure on (a) trunk roads and (b) all other roads in (i) Greater London and (ii) England for each year from 1980-81 to 1990-91.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 28 February 1992]: Total current expenditure by central Government and local authorities in £ million was as follows:

(i) Greater London

Figures for Greater London were not held prior to 1982-83. The figure for all London boroughs' expenditure on other roads for 1990-91 is not yet available.

M25

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the traffic generated on other roads as a result of the building of the M25 motorway.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 28 February 1992]: It is estimated that the amount of heavy goods vehicle traffic in central London has declined by 20 per cent.

Unleaded Fuel

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the latest figures for (a) how many and (b) what proportion of (i) new cars use unleaded fuel and (ii) car owners have converted their cars to unleaded fuel and what proportion this is of cars that can be converted, (iii) new cars have a catalytic converter, (iv) new cars made in the United Kingdom have catalytic converters and (v) car owners have had a catalytic converter fitted.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The Information for (i) and (ii) is not available in the form requested although the hon. Gentleman may also wish to know that in December 1991, 43 per cent. of petrol sold in the United Kingdom was unleaded.

According to a recent survey of barriers against further uptake of unleaded petrol, carried out by the Department of the Environment, some relevant information is as follows:

(i) 95 per cent. of drivers with cars under two years old and whose cars can run on unleaded fuel, use it.

(ii) 39 per cent. of regular drivers can and do use unleaded fuel. 7 per cent. of regular drivers can but do not use unleaded fuel.

The rest of the information is as follows:

(iii) According to the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, in the fourth quarter of 1991, 24 per cent. of new cars sold in the United Kingdom had a catalytic converter.

(iv) In the time available it has not been possible to produce comparable figures for new cars made in the United Kingdom.

(v) It is not known how many car owners have had a catalytic converter fitted.

ENVIRONMENT

Toxic Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on (a) discussions undertaken and (b) decisions agreed on toxic waste exports, at the recent European Environment Council meeting in Estoril.

Mr. Baldry: The topic of toxic waste exports was not on the agenda for the recent informal meeting of EC Environment Ministers in Estoril.

Rainfall

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the rainfall in each National Rivers Authority region during the last six month period for which figures are available; what is the normal average rainfall for each region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The monthly rainfall, and the monthly average over the period 1941-1970, for each region of the national Rivers Authority to October 1991 is published by the Water Services Association in "Waterfacts 1991". More recent information is available from the Meteorological Office.

National Heritage Memorial Fund

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of funding made from the National Heritage Memorial Fund for the purposes of safeguarding landscape features and wildlife habitats in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Grants made available by the trustees of the National Heritage Memorial Fund to assist in the acquisition, maintenance or preservation of land of scenic and/or scientific interest over the last five financial years were as follows:

	£ million
1986-87	1·429
1987-88	1·500
1988-89	1·157
1989-90	5·887
1990-91	1·071

Local Government Finance

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the county councils that are now free of long-term debt.

Mr. Portillo: Returns to the Department indicate that at 31 March 1991, Dorset, Lincolnshire, Suffolk and West Sussex were free of long-term debt.

Travellers

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received the representation from Nottinghamshire county council regarding the establishment of a permanent gipsy site at Fox Covert, Worksop; and what is the reason for the delay in announcing his decision.

Mr. Yeo: Outstanding supporting information was received from Nottinghamshire county council on 3 January. The issues raised by all parties require very care[illegible] consideration, but the Secretary of State expects to issue his decision shortly.

Home Acquisition

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average cost of acquisition by a local authority of a home in (a) London, (b) metropolitan districts and (c) non-metropolitan districts.

Sir George Young [holding answer 27 February 1992]: Local authorities acquire relatively few dwellings for continued housing use. Reliable information from which to derive unit costs of acquisition is not available centrally.

Archaeological Heritage

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to ratify European conventions on the Protection of the Archaeological Heritage.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 2 March 1992]: We shall ratify this convention at the earliest opportunity.

Planning Applications (Publicity)

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he intends to publish details of how local authorities are to apply the new publicity arrangements for planning applications; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he intends to issue guidelines as to the procedures to be carried out by local authorities for compulsory publicity for all planning applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 2 March 1992]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter) on 5 February 1992, Official Report, column 166.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Proliferation

Sir Patrick Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to attend a meeting of the North Atlantic Co-operation Council to discuss nuclear proliferation; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The NACC will meet on 10 March in order to admit members of the CIS. There are no other formal items on the agenda. I will represent my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

We are working closely with our allies in NATO on ways to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons, materials and expertise from the former Soviet Union, some of which may be raised at the meeting.

Expresso Lucitania

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise with the presidency troika under European political co-operation, the banning by the Government of Indonesia of the Portuguese ship Expresso Lucitania; and if he will deliver a protest to the Indonesian embassy in London over the banning.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have no plans to do so.

Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to answer the letter sent to him by the Merseyside fire and civil defence authority dated 10 February.

Mr. Key: The Department replied on 25 February to Merseyside fire and civil defence authority's letter.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Lease Defaults

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Attorney-General what steps are being taken to review and protect the position of those who sell commercial or private leases on property from liability if the purchaser of the lease defaults; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: In 1988 the Law Commission published its report," Landlord and Tenant Law: Privity of Contract and Estate", Law Com No. 174. It recommended that all the obligations created by leases should bind the parties who for the time being are interested in the land and that those parties should cease to have any liability when they part with those interests, except in cases in which it is objectively reasonable that their liability continue. It is envisaged that in many cases a landlord consenting to an assignment by a tenant of his interest will be able to impose a condition that the tenant guarantees the performance of the lease covenants by his successor, but only until any subsequent assignment. The Lord Chancellor is actively considering the report's recommendations and hopes to be able to make an announcement about them in the near future.

Recorders and Judges

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Attorney-General how many recorders and circuit judges are (a) men and (b) women.

The Attorney-General: As at 1 March there were 795 recorders in office, of whom 752 were men and 43 were women. There were also 469 circuit judges, of whom 447 were men and 22 were women.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Attorney-General how many county court judges are (a) men and (b) women.

The Attorney-General: County court judges comprise circuit judges and district judges. As at 1 March there were 469 circuit judges in office, of whom 447 were men and 22 were women. There were also 232 district judges, of whom 220 were men and 12 were women.

THE ARTS

Libraries, Cheshire

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Minister for the Arts what was the expenditure of public libraries in Cheshire on book provision for the last 10 years at constant prices.

Mr. Renton: Statistics about the public library service are collected and published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy. Real terms costs in Cheshire for the 10-year period up to 1990, the latest date for which figures are available, are:

Year	Expenditure on books per 1,000 population £
1980-81	1,205
1981-82	1,298
1982-83	1,318
1983-84	1,377
1984-85	1,204
1985-86	1,367
1986-87	1,291
1987-88	1,479
1989-90	1,362

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many librarians were employed by Cheshire county council on (a) a full-time basis and (b) a part-time basis in 1979 and 1991.

Mr. Renton: This information is not available. However, staff numbers in English library authorities as a whole have remained constant over the last 10 years.

Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art

Mr. Channon: To ask the Minister for the Arts what proposals he has for dealing with the problems encountered in the last report of the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art; and when he proposes to announce his intentions.

Mr. Renton: Following the examination of the system of controls on the export of works of art by the reviewing committee, I have consulted widely on the alternative approaches which would enable pre-eminent works of art to be retained in the United Kingdom. I have asked to receive representations before the end of March. I can assure my right hon. Friend that these representations, involving difficult and complex issues, will be fully taken into account before I take any decisions.

CIVIL SERVICE

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Renton: Ernst and Young have been engaged to advise on the market testing programme for my Department and its agencies. The appointment was by single tender.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff; and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Renton: During the last 12 months, two pay and grading reviews have been undertaken in my Department, one in the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency, the other in the Civil Service Occupational Health Service. Outside consultants were not engaged in either case.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were recorded in Wales in 1979 and 1983 and the latest year available.

Mr. John Patten: The number of notifiable offences recorded in Wales was 127,467 in 1979, 160,882 in 1983 and 229,248 in 1990 which is the latest available year.

Voluntary Admissions

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers of 26 February, Official Report, column 515 and 5 February, Official Report, column 163, for what reasons information about the number of officers engaged in obtaining voluntary admissions during 1990-91 is available from the Chief Constable of Northumbria, but not from other forces, where more than 20 per cent. of their clear-up rate is accounted for by this practice.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information on the number of detectives employed in obtaining voluntary admissions in Northumbria was available because of a special study reviewing this practice which was undertaken in that force. Such studies are at the discretion of the chief officer.

Wrongful Imprisonment

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the compensation for wrongful imprisonment so far paid to (a) the four people convicted of the Guildford and Woolwich bombings, (b) Mrs. Maguire and her six co-defendants and (c) the six men convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings; and when he expects to reach a final settlement in each case.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend has paid interim awards of compensation to each of those concerned, on the advice of the independent assessor, but it is not our practice to publish details of individual payments to applicants for compensation. We are in touch with those representing the applicants in these cases and will make final payments as soon as possible.

Mr. Ki Tang

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Islington, North dated 8 March 1989, 12 May 1989, 4 April 1990, 5 September 1990 and 17 October 1991, regarding his constituent Ki Tang and the question of rights of appeal for his family who applied to join Ki Tang under the provisions of the United Nations convention on refugees (family reunion).

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I very much regret the combination of circumstances which has caused this delay and shall reply to the hon. Member very shortly.

Overseas Voters

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of overseas voters registered for each parliamentary constituency in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Rumbold: Final figures for the electoral register for 1992-93 will be published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in the summer; available figures will be published immediately before the general election, should it take place before then. The numbers of overseas electors included in the draft electoral register for 1992-93, together with totals for each constituent part of the United Kingdom, are set out in the table. The figures do not include valid applications which were received too late for inclusion in the draft register, which was published on 28 November 1991.

Inquests

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many inquests were held into deaths which involved allegations of medical or social service negligence in the last five years;

(2) how many inquests were held into deaths which entailed potential collective or corporate responsibility in the last five years.

Mr. John Patten: These figures are not collected centrally.

Leeds Prison

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the director general of the Prison Service next intends to visit Her Majesty's prison, Leeds.

Mrs. Rumbold: The director general last visited the prison on 25 February and has not yet fixed a date for a further visit.

National Lottery

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends to consult the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds concerning proposals for a national lottery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Mr. Lawrence) on 13 February, Official Report, column 582.

Obscene Publications Squad

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the total cost from 1987 to 1990 of the Operation Spanner investigation by the obscene publications squad;

(2) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the number of occasions on which police forces other than the Metropolitan police consulted or liaised with the obscene publications squad in each year from 1987 to 1991;

(3) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the total running costs of the obscene publications squad in 1990 and 1991, and the projected cost in 1992;

(4) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the cost of the installation of the obscene publications squad's paedophile database, the number of officers that are employed to maintain it, the number of names of persons currently listed on the database and the nature of other databases maintained by the obscene publications squad.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The total and projected manpower costs of the obscene publications squad are as follows:

1990-91	[1]855,286
1991-92	[1]883,606
1992-93	[1][2]871,302

[1] These costs cover salaries for police and civilian staff and a personnel administration charge for recruitment, training and the pay roll function. Other costs are not recorded separately.

[2] Estimated.

The squad does not have a computerised paedophile or other database. Two civilian staff do however maintain a manual index containing about 12,000 records. There is a close liaison between the squad and other police forces when the need arises but no record is kept of the number of times police forces consult or liaise with the obscene publications squad.

Records are not maintained in such a way that it would be possible to identify easily the costs of Operation Spanner. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Metropolitan Police of the Metropolis officers appointed to the obscene publications squad, the method of application or secondments used in selecting the officers appointed, the length of time for which officers are appointed to the squad and the considerations used in determining the time limit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There are currently 18 officers, including the superintendent and detective inspector, working in the obscene publications branch. Vacancies in the branch are advertised in Metropolitan police notices.

The criteria for selection are that applicants should be mature and well balanced, and able to carry out sensitive investigation in a professional manner with a minimum of supervision.

Three years is the normal period for which Metropolitan police officers are attached to specialist units, but this is not an inflexible rule and it can be varied with an individual's suitability for the work.

Informants

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the Home Office's guidelines on the use of informants.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: General guidance about the use of informants by the police is included in the consolidated circular to the police on crime and kindred matters, at paragraph 1.92. Similar guidance about the use of resident informants is contained in Home Office circular 9/92. Copies of these circulars are in the Library.

Offences

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in rank order the number of offences committed per head of population in the most recent year available for each police authority in England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: The available information is given in the table:

Television Licence Fees

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will announce the television licence fees which will take effect from 1 April 1992.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [pursuant to my reply of 22 October 1991, column Nos. 536-637]: On 22 October 1991, at column 537, I announced that from 1 April the fee for a colour licence would be £80 and the fee for a monochrome licence £26·50. My right hon. Friend has today laid before the House the regulations necessary to bring these fees into force. The regulations also increase the fee for a duplicate licence to £3·25 and for a dealer demonstration licence to £3·50.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Ethnic Minority Teaching

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science for what reasons he has not replied to letters to him dated 19 November, 20 December 1991 and 22 January 1992 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to courses for teachers of ethnic minority children; and if he will now reply as a matter of urgency.

Mr. Fallon: The Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education, CATE, submitted advice to my right hon. and learned Friend last year, following a review it conducted on teaching English as a foreign language, teaching English as a second language, and teaching English to speakers of other languages as specialisms in courses of initial teacher training.

My right hon. and learned Friend has recently decided to accept CATE's advice and is writing to the right hon. Member to confirm his decision.

Seven-year-olds (Testing)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, if he will publish the test results of seven-year-olds for Lambeth and Tower Hamlets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I undertook on 19 December that I would publish the test results from Lambeth and Tower Hamlets as soon as I had them. Parents and community charge payers have every right to know how their schools are performing. My Department had to press these two LEAs to get their results out.

The results demonstrate that both Lambeth and Tower Hamlets need to give urgent attention to raising standards in their schools. In every single table both authorities are in the bottom quarter of LEAs. In the fundamental skill of reading, Lambeth succeeds in getting only 66 per cent. of its seven-year-olds to the level 2 targets for the age group and Tower Hamlets only 53 per cent. This must be a cause for immediate concern.

The table sets out those results which were missing from the report on the national and local results published on 19 December. Copies of the tables published on 19 December, revised to take in the results from Lambeth and Tower Hamlets, have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

English
Lambeth	71	19
Tower Hamlets	64	15
Mathematics
Lambeth	68	10
Tower Hamlets	63	7
Science
Tower Hamlets	85	23
Lambeth	80	26

	Percentage of pupils at level 2 and above	Percentage of pupils at level 3
Reading
Lambeth	66	21
Tower Hamlets	53	14
English, Mathematics and Science
Lambeth	73	18
Tower Hamlets	71	15

The results are based on returns from 83 per cent. of relevant primary schools in Lambeth and from 74 per cent. of relevant primary schools in Tower Hamlets.

This summer I will require all local education authorities to send me the results of the tests of seven-year-olds from all of their schools. I do not expect the delays that occurred in last year's exercise to happen again.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Atkins: Following competitive tendering, the Department has appointed KPMG Management Consulting to advise on its market testing programme.

Libraries, Cheshire

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the expenditure on school libraries in the county of Cheshire in the last ten years.

Mr. Fallon: This information is not collected centrally.

Schools (Commercial Products)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidelines he issues to local education authorities about the free distribution in schools of commercial products; and what actions he intends to take with regard to the distribution of the product of which details have been sent to him.

Mr. Fallon: This Department does not issue guidelines to local education authorities about the free distribution in schools of commercial products. The distribution of particular free products is a matter for headteachers and their governing bodies to agree.

Education, Cambridgeshire

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the amount of the increase in the central Government contribution to the cost of education in Cambridgeshire in 1991-92 over (a) 1990-91 and (b) 1978-79; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: Local authorities are free to determine their own spending priorities between services within the framework of the annual local authority finance settlement. The overall amount of RSG which Cambridgeshire receives and its share of payments from the national non-domestic rate pool is based on its standard spending assessment, SSA, the Government's assessment of the expenditure which the authority would need to incur to provide a standard level of service. The education component for Cambridgeshire's SSA for 1991-92 was £225 million; and for 1990-91 it was £193·4 million—cash figures. There was no equivalent of SSAs in 1978-79. Cambridgeshire's outturn recurrent expenditure on education in 1978-79 represented some £191 million at 1991-92 prices. That figure includes the cost of higher education which in 1989-90 became the responsibility of the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council, PCFC.

Education, Bournemouth

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those changes in education and to schools in Bournemouth since 1987 and those currently under way or approved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: In common with other parts of the country, schools in Bournemouth will have benefited from the reforms introduced by the Education Reform Act 1988.

Statutory proposals have been approved for the enlargement of five voluntary aided primary schools, and for a new county primary school, providing additional places. Approval has been given for one secondary school to change its age range from 11 to 16 to 11 to 18.

My right hon. and learned Friend has approved the applications for grant-maintained status from two local secondary schools, one of which has been operating since September 1990. He is currently considering an application from one other secondary school.

I understand that the local education authority have plans to transfer one county secondary school to new premises and to make improvements at one voluntary aided primary school.

Sport

Mr. Denis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what Government grants have been paid to the cities of Edinburgh, Sheffield and Birmingham in the last 10 years in order to provide sports facilities of international standards; and if he will pay grants to cities providing facilities in connection with the Manchester Olympic bid.

Mr. Atkins: All Government funds for sport in England and Scotland are channeled through the respective sports councils which allocate them according to their policies and priorities. Cities are eligible to apply for grant from existing Government programmes provided normal grant criteria are met.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Foot and Mouth Disease

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the number of outbreaks of foot and mouth disease, and the county in which the outbreaks took place, in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years, and to date in 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: There have been none.

Set-aside Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, columns 187-88, if he will list the amount of payments recovered or withheld under the set-aside scheme in England for each year since 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 13 February 1992]: This information is set out in the table. It takes account of developments since my earlier answer of 5 February and this has resulted in some very minor discrepancies between the two sets of figures.

Group Marketing Grant

Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the group marketing grant.

Mr. Curry: The scheme will fall into two phases. In the first, farmers, growers and other producers will be able to carry out a feasibility study, which will need to demonstrate that the proposal has long-term benefits to producers, and is a viable proposition.

With the aid of the feasibility study applicants will be able to apply for the second phase, of grant for developing existing groups or starting up new ones. Under this second phase aid is available for legal costs, salaries of key staff, training and expenses of outside directors. The maximum grant per group will be £107,000.

This scheme has been designed expressly to help producers respond to the shortcomings perceived by supermarkets and other big buyers. It will encourage producers to come together in large professionally managed groups, so that they have the confidence and the clout to deal with retailers on equal terms. Producers will be able to choose the format which suits their enterprise —the scheme will not be limited to cooperatives.

The scheme has been drawn up by MAFF after full consultation with the industry. It will be administered by MAFF with the advice of "Food from Britain."

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

Mr. Watts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the benefits to importers from the postponed accounting system for value added tax from 1 January 1993; and what is the additional cost to the large domestic businesses which will be required to account for value added tax on a monthly basis from the autumn of 1992.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to the hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed (Mr. Beith), Official Report 25 November 1991, column 375. A new forecast will be available with the Budget statement.

Some 90,000 businesses will make a cash flow saving in 1992-93 from the postponed accounting system equivalent to deferring payment for six weeks.

Some 1,600 of the largest businesses will also experience a reduction in cash flow in 1992-93 as a result of the introduction of accounting for VAT on a monthly basis. They will still have the cash flow benefit of VAT paid by customers before it is paid to the Exchequer, albeit for a shorter period.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the revenue yield, in the latest year for which information is available, from VAT on (a) hot takeway food and drink, (b) alterations to residential buildings, (c) alterations to non-residential buildings and civil engineering works, (d) newspaper advertising, (e) cereal bars, (f) non-residential construction and property development, (g) news services, (h) protective boots and helmets supplied by employers, (i) fuel and power supplied to businesses, and (j) water and sewerage services supplied to industry.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Detail about the revenue yield from VAT on specific items of expenditure is not collected on VAT returns. Estimated receipts for 1991-92 are as follows:

		£ million
(a)	Hot takeaway food and drink	400
(b) & (c)	Alterations to residential & non-residential buildings and civil engineering works	800
(d)	Newspaper advertising	100
(e)	Cereal bars	10
(f)	Non-residential construction and property development	500
(g)	News services	5
(h)	Protective boots and helmets supplied by employers	—[1]
(i)	Fuel and power supplied to businesses	100
(j)	Water and sewerage services supplied to industry	—[1]

[1] negligible

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenue was generated in 1991-92 by the increase in VAT to 17·5 per cent.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 13 February, Official Report, column 595.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the implementation of EC single market legislation associated with value added tax.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Commissioners of Customs and Excise have issued draft Finance Bill clauses relating to the VAT treatment of goods (and associated services), to relevant trade representative bodies for consultation. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

Taxpayers

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the average gain per taxpayer in 1992-93 from a one penny reduction in the basic rate of income tax for those with incomes (a) below £5,000, (b) between £5,000 and £10,000, (c) between £10,000 and £20,000, (d) between £20,000 and £30,000 and (e) over £30,000, giving in each case the average gain if the same money were instead spent on increasing the single person's tax allowance, in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude: At 1992-93 levels a one penny reduction in the basic rate of income tax would cost about £1·95 billion in a full year. Increasing the personal allowance for taxpayers of all ages by £300 would also cost about £1·95 billion in a full year in 1992-93 compared with statutory indexation.

Average reduction in income tax (£ per year)

Annual income (£)	One penny reduction in basic rate	Increase in personal allowance of £300

Child Care Tax Allowance

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the effect on Treasury revenues in 1992-93 of introducing an allowance against income tax of (a) £1,000 and (b) £2,000 for all working mothers, giving both full and first year costs;

(2) if he will estimate the effect on Treasury revenues in 1992-93 of introducing an allowance against income tax of (a) £1,000 and (b) £2,000 for all working mothers, with at least one child under age five years, giving both full and first year costs.

Mr. Maude: Estimates of the cost of introducing allowances against taxable incomes for working mothers and lone parents at 1992-93 levels are set out in the table:

	Cost (£ billion) allowance of
	(a) £1,000 per year	(b) £2,000 per year
All working mothers[1]	0·6	1·2
All working mothers with a child under five[1]	0·2	0·3

[1] Including lone parents who are working.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on Treasury revenues in 1992-93 and in a full year of allowing the cost of child care against the income tax of (a) working mothers and (b) either partner in a two-earner couple, giving figures separately for children under five and those aged five to 16 years.

Mr. Maude: Information on child care costs paid by working mothers and by two-earner couples with different levels of income is not available. It is therefore not possible to estimate the cost of such a measure.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on Treasury revenues in 1992-93 and in a full year of introducing a child care tax allowance of £50 a week for (a) working women and (b) either partner in a two-earner couple, assuming that relief is available at the basic rate only, giving figures separately for (i) all families with dependent children and (ii) families with at least one child under five years.

Mr. Maude: Estimates of the full year cost of introducing such an allowance in 1992-93 are set out in the table:

	Cost (£ billion) Allowance of £50 per week restricted to basic rate relief and given to
	(a) working mothers and lone parents	(a) the higher earner in a two-earner couple
All families with dependent children[1]	1·4	2·2
Family with at least one child under the age of 5	0·4	0·8

[1] Includes dependent children aged 16 to 18.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on Treasury revenues in 1992-93 and in a full year of introducing a child care tax allowance of £50 a week for (a) working mothers and (b) either partner in a two-earner couple, giving figures separately for (i) all families with dependent children and (ii) families with at least one child under five years.

Mr. Maude: Estimates for 1992-93 are in the table:

	Cost (£ billion) allowance of £50 per week given to working mothers and lone parents	Cost (£ billion) allowance of £50 per week given to the higher earner in a two-earner couple
All families with dependent children[1]	1·4	2·3
Family with at least one child under the age of five	0·4	0·8

[1] Includes dependent children aged 16 to 18.

Income Statistics

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total and average income and earned income in 1990-91 and 1991-92 of (a) the top one per cent., (b) the top five per cent., (c) the top 10 per cent., (d) the bottome 70 per cent., (e) the bottom 50 per cent., (f) the bottom 10 per cent. of taxpayers and (g) all taxpayers.

Mr. Maude: Estimates are given in the table:

1990-91
Top 1 per cent.	28	107,400	20	78,000

Invisible Exports

Mr. Squire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the value of invisible exports to the United Kingdom economy in each year since 1980.

Mr. Mellor: The latest estimates of the value of invisible exports were published in the balance of payments quarterly press notice of 11 December 1991. They are as follows:

1980	41
1981	57
1982	65
1983	66
1984	77
1985	80
1986	77
1987	80
1988	88
1989	108
1990	117

First estimates for 1991 will be published on 6 March.

Tax Changes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update, to take account of the 1991 Budget, the information on tax changes contained in his answer to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 3 April 1990, Official Report, columns 525-26, and including two additional ranges of income, those from £70,000 to £100,000 and those over £100,000.

Mr. Maude: Latest estimates of the reduction in tax liability resulting from the changes in tax rates, allowances and thresholds are in the following table. The 1978-79 income tax regime has been indexed to 1991-92 levels by reference to the statutory formula, and allowing for independent taxation. A reliable analysis of taxpayers with incomes over £80,000 is not available.

For the purposes of these calculations the indexed regime of 1978-79 is applied directly to the income base of 1991-92. In practice, retention of the regime, indexed as appropriate for the intervening years would have led to changes in the income base.

Reduction in income tax compared with 1978-79 indexed regime

Range of individual's income in 1991-92 (£)	Number of individuals 1991-92[1] (million)	Total reduction in tax (£ million)	Average gain per individual (£)
Under 5,000	3·5	450	120

Return on Capital

Mr. Lawson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the average real rate of return on capital invested in British industry over the following periods: (a) 1964-1973, (b) 1973-1979 and (c) 1979-1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The average net real rates of return on capital employed by United Kingdom industrial and commercial companies are estimated as follows:

	Per cent.
(a) 1964-73	9·9
(b) 1973-79	6·5
(c) 1979-89	8·9

The figure for each year may be found in the Central Statistical Office Bulletin 71/91, a copy of which is in the Library.

Contract Compliance

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have to introduce contract compliance for firms employed on Government contracts and for organisations receiving Government funding.

Mr. Maude: None. All parties to a contract are expected to abide by its terms, which are legally enforceable.

Privatisation

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the value of debt to Government written off in each privatisation.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The table shows, by privatisation, debt written off and the type of debt concerned. This includes both debt written off as part of the privatisation process and debt written off in a company which was subsequently privatised.

Debt written off prior to privatisation

Privatisation	Amount £	Type of debt
British Aerospace	60,000,000	Public Dividend Capital
National Frei[illegible] Corporation[1]	100,000,000	National Loans Fund
British Transport Docks Board[2]	81,293,616	National Loans Fund
British Telecommunications	2,789,865,772	National Loans Fund
British Airways	160,000,000	Public Dividend Capital
BAA	43,503,340	National Loans Fund
British Steel	500,000,000	Public Dividend Capital
British Steel	3,480,000,000	Borrowing under Iron and Steel Act 1982
Water Holding Companies	4,973,332,672	National Loans Fund
Water Holding Companies	55,013,916	Public Works Loan Board
Scottish Electricity Companies[3]	1,043,573,600	National Loans Fund

[1] Privatised as National Freight Consortium (now NFC).

[2] Privatised as Associated British Ports.

[3] Prior to privatisation, National Loans Fund debt due to the South of Scotland Electricity Board nuclear programme of £1,368,390,398 was transferred to Scottish Nuclear Ltd. and subsequently written off.

Taxable Benefits

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list each social security benefit which is currently taxable indicating the numbers affected and the revenue obtained for the latest available tax year.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The table lists the benefits liable to tax together with provisional estimates, where available, of the number of people liable to income tax in receipt of each benefit for the whole or part of 1991-92. Table 9.6 of the 1991 edition of the United Kingdom National Accounts (the CSO Blue Book) provides an estimate of income tax attributable in total to these benefits, applying the recipients' average rate of income tax on the whole of their income to the amount of benefit received.

Taxpayers receiving benefit in 1991-92

Taxable benefit	Thousands
Industrial death benefit	n.a.
Retirement pension	2,500
Widow's benefit	250
Old person's pension	n.a.
Invalid care allowance	n.a.
Income support	500
Unemployment benefit	500
Statutory sick pay	3,000
Statutory maternity pay	n.a.

Mortgage Tax Relief

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the cost of increasing mortgage tax relief for first-time buyers to (i) 40 per cent. and (ii) 50 per cent.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 2 March 1992]: On the basis that such a relief would apply only to those buying for the first time after the relief was introduced, the cost of increasing mortgage interest tax relief from 25 per cent. to 40 per cent. for every 100,000 first-time buyers would be about £45 million in a full year. Increasing the relief to 50 per cent. would cost about £75 million for every 100,000 first time buyers.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the impact in 1992-93 on the retail prices index of raising £1 billion from (a) tobacco products, (b) beer, (c) wine and spirits, (d) petrol, (e) VAT and (f) vehicle excise duty.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 2 March 1992]:

	Percentage change
(a) Tobacco products	0·4
(b) Beer	0·5
(c) Wine and spirits	0·7
(d) Petrol	0·2
(e) VAT	0·3
(f) Vehicle Excise Duty	0·2

These estimates are based on 1991 RPI weights. The weights for 1992 have yet to be finalised.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the most recent figures for the number of non-taxpayers who are claiming mortgage interest relief at source, in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 2 March 1992]: MIRAS is available on all qualifying mortgages regardless of the tax status of the mortgagor. A very approximate estimate, based on household survey information, is that there are about 1 million non-taxpayers with MIRAS.

PRIME MINISTER

Libya

Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Prime Minister if he will seek to arrange a meeting with Colonel Gadaffi to discuss a solution to the Libyan incident.

The Prime Minister: No.

Disability

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Prime Minister if he will appoint a specific Minister for the Disabled.

The Prime Minister: Since 1975, beginning with the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) there has been a Minister for Disabled People with specific responsibility for disability issues and co-ordinating Government policies for disabled people.

Open Government

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has for improving open government.

The Prime Minister: The Government will continue to review all areas of policy with a view to increasing transparency and enhancing accountability for the delivery of public services, and will announce future advances as and when they are made.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for 3 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Lockerbie Bombing

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what progress has been made by the United Nations in creating a mechanism to allow the trial by a neutral body of the Libyans alleged to be responsible for the Lockerbie bombing; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 March 1992]: UN Security Council resolution 731 makes no provision for any such mechanism. We now await a report from the UN Secretary-General about his recent efforts under that resolution to secure Libyan compliance with it.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Blood Plasma

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evidence has been made available to his Department concerning the dumping on the United Kingdom market of blood plasma products such as 8SM high purity factor 8.

Mr. Redwood: My Department is aware of this and other complaints about the working of the market in blood products. These complaints are being pursued with the Department of Health and the Office of Fair Trading.

National Lottery

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations he has received proposing that post offices, (a) in rural areas and (b) elsewhere, should handle applications for a national lottery.

Mr. Leigh: I have received no representations in respect of post offices in any part of the country handling applications for a national lottery.

Network Marketing

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has to regulate the activities of network marketing companies; and what estimate he has of the expansion of this type of selling in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Leigh: Network marketing is already regulated under part XI of the Fair Trading Act 1973. Statistics are not collected on selling methods.

Beer

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the effect the implementation of section 43 of the Weights and Measures Act 1985 will have on the use of traditional hand pumps in dispensing draught beer.

Mr. Leigh: No estimate is available.

It will be possible to use hand-pumps. Whether or not to do so in any particular case will be a matter for the trade, as it is now.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what effect he estimates that the implementation of section 43 of the Weights and Measures Act 1985 will have on the price of a pint of beer.

Mr. Leigh: The effect of implementing section 43 will be to increase the transparency of the price because it will then relate to a full pint of liquid, which it seldom does at present.

British Technology Group

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultations he has held with the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals on the privatisation of the British Technology Group.

Mr. Leigh: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Motherwell, South (Dr. Bray) on 25 February 1992, Official Report, columns 472-73.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff and the firm of consultants engaged where appropriate.

Mr. Leigh: No parts of the DTI, including its executive agencies, have carried out a review of pay and grading of staff in the last 12 months.

Sub-postmasters

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce regulations to require all appeals against termination of sub-postmasters' contracts to be heard by an independent person or tribunal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: The conduct of appeals procedures, in common with all other employment issues, is an operational matter and therefore the responsibility of the Post Office. It would not be consistent with Government policy to seek to make regulations on such matters. All appeals against termination of subpostmasters' contracts are heard by an appeals authority of Post Office managers not connected with the case in question. This arrangement has been agreed with the National Federation of Subpostmasters.

Electrical Appliances

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy that the proposal that all new electrical appliances can be sold only with a pre-fitted plug will be implemented in such a way as to ensure that all pre-fitted plugs meet the requirements of disabled people, including people with wasting of the muscles and other difficulties in manipulating appliances.

Mr. Leigh: The proposed regulations will allow suppliers of domestic electrical appliances to fit plugs that are suitable for use by the disabled.

Package Travel

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to consult interested parties on his proposals for implementing article 7 of the EC package travel directive.

Mr. Leigh: My Department has today issued a consultation letter on proposals to implement article 7 of the directive. This article requires the organiser and/or retailer parties to the contract to provide sufficient evidence of security for the refund of money paid over and for the repatriation of the consumer in the event of insolvency.

In our consultation document issued on 24 July 1991, we proposed the establishment of a licensing authority which would require all operators of packages, other than those already licensed through the air transport organisers licence system, to be licensed and bonded to a prescribed percentage of turnover. The outcome of this consultation has caused the Department to reconsider this proposal.

The Government's objective in implementing the directive has been to do so in a way which would provide full implementation and proper protection for consumers, but would impose the minimum burdens on industry. It is now clear that the numbers of licensable operators would be large, but their average size would be likely to be small. A licensing system would thus be expensive and would conflict with the Government's objective.

We now propose that it will be for organisers to have their own security for refunds in the event of insolvency. Failure to have adequate security will be a criminal offence, punishable by fines and personal liability, both criminal and civil, for any director or manager who has connived at the commission of the offence. Within the bounds of the implementing regulations, it will be for the individual operator to decide what form of security to adopt.

It is envisaged that three broad possibilities will be offered in the regulations:

> organisers may be bonded, in a sum equal to the maximum amount they hold by way of pre-payments during the period of the bond, to an approved organisation;
> organisers may arrange insurance against insolvency, again in the sum equal to the maximum amount they hold by way of pre-payments;
> organisers may place pre-payments in a designated account from which they should only be withdrawn when the service against which the pre-payment has been made has been performed.

In the case of packages abroad, organisers will be required to have security also against the cost of repatriation in the event of no longer being able to meet their obligations to customers.

Market Testing

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list any areas within his Department that have been identified since 18 November (a) by private individuals or organisations from the private sector or (b) otherwise as possibly suitable for market testing and contracting out; and what steps are being taken to prevent any non-governmental organisations successfully tendering to carry out work currently undertaken by civil servants facing a conflict of interest between the public interest requirement of this work and other commercial activities they are involved in or other clients they represent.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 2 March 1992]: Studies to determine the most promising areas for market testing within the Department are not yet complete. Guidance on the ethics of conducting business with the private sector is contained in the Treasury's public competition and purchasing units guidance—CUP No. 16—and the Department's own procurement and supply manual, which have been circulated to all purchasing units within the Department.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the individuals or organisations from the private sector who have been involved since 18 November 1991 (a) in determining areas within his Department for market testing or contracting out or (b) who have advised him of areas that should be market tested or contracted out to market consultants and the total fees or other costs to date charged to his Department by them and the full costs likely to be charged.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The Department is establishing a review panel, including officials and representatives of the private sector, to identify the most promising areas for market testing in the Department. The first meeting of the panel will be held in the near future.

WALES

Local Authority Land Sales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the total amount of land sold by each local authority in Wales at less than market value to (a) housing associations and (b) private developers for low-cost housing development in each year from 1988;

(2) what was (a) the total original market value and (b) the total actual sale price of land sold by each local authority in Wales at less than market value to (i) housing associations and (ii) private developers for low cost housing development in Wales in each year from 1988.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Air Pollution

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the sites in Wales currently utilised in order to monitor levels of (a) sulphur emission and (b) acid rain; and how much money has been allocated by his Department in order to undertake such work.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information is as follows:

(a) Sulphur dioxide—sites at Cardiff, Newport, Neyland, Port Talbot, Welshpool and Wrexham.

(b) Acid rain—sites at Beddgelert, Plynlimon, Llyn Brianne, and Tycanol Wood.

The monitoring network to which these sites belong are funded on a United Kingdom basis by the Department of the Environment.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment has been made by his Department of the use of fuel orimulsion to increase the output of power stations in Wales and the consequent effect of this action on acidification in upland areas and the level of sulphur emissions.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: One application to burn orimulsion fuel at a power station in Wales has been made by National Power, in respect of its plant at Pembroke. As required, National Power has made separate applications to the Department of Energy and to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution under the Electricity Act 1989 and the Environmental Protection Act 1990 respectively. The Department is being consulted about both applications. In advance of decisions by the relevant bodies, it would not be appropriate for me to comment on the proposals, or on the Department's assessment of them, particularly in view of Ministers statutory appellate role under the Environmental Protection Act.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by county areas how many tonnes of (a) sulphur dioxide, (b) nitrogen oxide and (c) particulate carbon were discharged into the atmosphere in Wales during the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not available on a county level basis. However, information on United Kingdom estimated emission levels, by emission source and type of fuel, can be found in the Department of the Environment's publication "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics" No. 13 1990.

For emissions of sulphur dioxide, nitrogen dioxide and particulate carbon, the latest available United Kingdom figures are for 1989—and are 3·67 million, 2·69 million and 0·15 million tonnes respectively.

Rural Housing

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of Tai Cymru's scheme to encourage the development of affordable housing for young people in the rural areas of Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The village initiative, which was launched in 1989, has resulted in the provision of 160 additional homes—seven more than expected.

Housing for Wales is also finalising arrangements for joint working fora involving key organisations in north, mid and west Wales. These measures will help in targeting resources allocated to rural housing which in 1992-93 will amount to over 27 per cent. of housing for Wales's programme.

Accommodation Above Shops

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what grants are currently made available by his Department for developing accommodation currently available above shops for renting purposes or for purchase as affordable housing.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: In 1991-92, £4·6 million is being made available to assist Welsh local authorities in providing schemes, specifically in the private rented sector, including flats above shops. A further £5 million is available for similar schemes in 1992-93.

Market Testing Programme

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. David Hunt: Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte have been retained to offer advice on potential market testing candidates within my Department, its executive agency and non-departmental public bodies. Their appointment followed a competitive tendering exercise.

Hospital Discharges and Deaths

26. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospital discharges and/or deaths have occurred in Wales, in the age groups up to four years and five to 14 years, in the international classification of diseases (ICD) categories, in each of the years 1986 to 1991, 580 acute glomerulonephritis, (a) 581 nephrotic syndrome, (b) 582 chronic glomerulonephritis, (c) 583 nephritis and nepropathy, (d) 584 acute renal failure, (e) 997·5 acute postoperative renal failure, (f) 585 chronic renal failure, (g) 779·80 chronie renal failure in newborn, (h) 586 renal failure (unspecified), *(i)*788·9 uraemia, (j) 587 renal sclerosis, (k) 590 infections of kidney, (l) 591 hydronephrosis, (m) 753·2 congenital hydronephrosis, (n) 753·1 congenital cyst of kidney, (o) 593·6 postural proteinuria, (p) 593·7 vesicoureteric reflux, (q) 595 cystitis, (r) 599·0 urinary tract infection, site not specified and (s) 599·7 haematuria.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information for the years 1986 to 1990 is given in the table. Information for 1991 is not yet available.

[5] Includes acute renal failure due to a procedure.

Note: The information is based on data provided by NHS hospitals for hospital activity analysis. It may understate the true position in that not all hospitals provide complete clinical details relating to patient discharges and deaths.

Libraries

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet (a) Clwyd county councillors and librarians and (b) the county council librarians of Wales, to discuss library provision; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The statutory duty to provide a comprehensive public library service rests with the library authorities. I would be prepared to consider a request to meet with those concerned with library provision, should one be made.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many public libraries there are in Wales; and what is his estimate of the numbers of people employed in them.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The published estimates for 1991-92 indicate that the 13 public library authorities in Wales have 1,171 service points and a staff establishment of 1,260.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the level of manufacturing investment in 1979 and the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. David Hunt: The value of net capital expenditure by manufacturing establishments—Divisions 2-4, SIC (revised) 1980—in Wales in 1979 was £472·1 million at current prices. The value in 1989, the latest year for which the figure is available, was £1,114·5 million.

Rural Conversion Grants

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to set time limits for the payment of grants under the clawback arrangements for rural conversion grants awarded by the Welsh Development Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The procedural details governing this grant scheme are a matter for the Welsh Development Agency.

Cancer

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people develop cancer annually and are treated by (a) radiotherapy and (b) chemotherapy.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The latest available information about the number of usual residents of Wales who have developed cancer is given in the table:

	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986
Malignant neoplasms	12,889	14,033	14,202	14,959	14,261

Information about the treatment of those patients is not held centrally.

Coal Imports

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the amount of coal imported into Welsh ports annually for the last five years.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is as follows:

Anthracite, coking coal and steam coal imported through ports in Wales

GP Expenses

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about family health services authority allocations in respect of general medical services expenses.

Mr. David Hunt: The cash limited general medical services provision for 1992-93 will be £36·117 million. This covers direct reimbursement to GPs as part of their expenses on practice staff and premises improvements, and the development of computerisation. I am today announcing the allocations to family health services authorities. These are:

	£ million
Clwyd	4·698
Dyfed	5·056
Gwent	5·928
Gwynedd	3,823
Mid Glamorgan	5·984
Powys	2·194
South Glamorgan	4·652
West Glamorgan	3·782
Total	36·117

These allocations will enable an average of 3 per cent. real terms improvement on committed investment for this year in respect of premises and staff; and improve and underpin the targets for GP computing levels.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give for each of the local authorities in Wales (a) the amounts of poll tax to be collected in 1991-92, (b) the poll tax actually collected in 1991-92, (c) the poll tax outstanding for 1991-92, (d) the surcharge on the 1992-93 poll tax for non collection in pounds, (e) the numbers of summonses for poll tax outstanding, (f) the numbers of people already served summonses and (g) the number of people who have served gaol sentences for non-payment of poll tax.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The information available by local authority is given in the following table. The total number of summonses issued by Welsh courts for the period 1 April 1990 to 30 September 1991 was 442,988; no breakdown is available by local authority area. Information relating to collection fund adjustments for 1992-93 is not yet available. Information relating to numbers of summonses outstanding and people committed for non-payment of community charge is not held centrally.

Illegitimate Births

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, if he will list the number of illegitimate births to teenage girls in each year since 1980 in each registry area giving the age in years of the teenage mothers.

Mr. Dorrell: I have been asked to reply.

Information for registry areas could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. Information for the mother's usual local authority of residence has been placed in the Library. Annual tables are available for 1980 and for 1982 to 1990, inclusive. Industrial action by registrars means that such a detailed analysis is impractical for 1981.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Theft

Mr. Andrew Hargreaves: To ask the Lord President of the Council, pursuant to his answer of 6 December 1991, Official Report, column 258, how many arrests have been made by the police in connection with reported thefts from the Palace of Westminster since 1989.

Mr. MacGregor: The number of arrests made by the police in connection with reported thefts from the Palace of Westminster was as follows:

in 1989—one;
in 1990—one;
in 1991—six;
in 1992—nil to date.

Welsh Grand Committee

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Lord President of the Council what progress he has made in arranging a meeting of the Welsh Grand Committee in Cardiff to debate the future government of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Discussions are continuing through the usual channels and it is my hope that a Cardiff meeting of the Welsh Grand Committee can yet be arranged.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

India

Mr. Nelson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the Rihand and Hindustan Zinc Corporation projects in India.

Mrs. Chalker: Rihand power station and the Hindustan zinc mine and smelter in India are two of Britain's largest aid projects involving £200 million of grant aid. I attended ceremonies in India last month to mark the successful completion of both. The projects have already achieved record levels of production and include the latest emission control technology of its time.

DEFENCE

RAF St. Athan

12. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of expenditure by his Department on the development and modernisation of the RAF facility at St. Athan over the next 10 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: About £40 million.

RN Workshops, Almondbank

13. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the future of the Royal Naval workshops, Almondbank.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am glad to be able to announce that the Royal Naval aircraft workshops at Almondbank are to become part of the new Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation defence support agency on 1 April 1992. I will be announcing later today full details of the new defence support agency, including the targets being set to enable the chief executive to achieve maximum efficiency and value for money.

Entertainment

14. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate for the amount to be spent by his Department on entertainment in 1991-92.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is estimated that around £3·6 million will be spent in the financial year to the end of March 1992. This figure includes expenditure incurred by the Ministry of Defence itself, by formations and establishments of the armed forces at home and abroad, and by individual officers occupying command and international appointments for which entertainment allowances are payable.

Commonwealth of Independent States

16. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet representatives of the Commonwealth of Independent States to discuss defence issues of mutual concern.

Mr. Tom King: I met Marshal Shaposhnikov for discussions when he accompanied President Yeltsin on his visit to London on 30 January. I hope to meet CIS representatives during the meeting between NATO Defence Ministers and their counterparts from the CIS and central and eastern Europe which is planned for 1 April.

Job Losses

17. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether following recent events at Brawdy and Trecwn he will review the way in which the Ministry of Defence communicates with employees when a decision involving closure or job losses is taken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: All such decisions are handled strictly in accordance with the Department's consultation agreement with the trade unions. Since the way employees are informed of such decisions forms a part of that agreement, it would be wrong to review these procedures now.

Defence Cuts

18. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with other NATO Defence Ministers regarding cuts in defence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I last met my NATO colleagues collectively at the Defence Planning Committee meeting in Brussels on 12 and 13 December 1991. A copy of the communiqué issued after that meeting has been placed in the Library of the House.

Trident

19. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stage of procurement has been reached in respect of the fourth Trident submarine.

27. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the programme for ordering and commissioning a fourth Trident submarine.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Contract negotiations with Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd. for the fourth Trident submarine are under way. We intend to place the order as soon as these negotiations have been satisfactorily concluded. Meanwhile, construction of steelwork and major engineering items is making good progress under long lead funding arrangements.

23. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the maximum number of nuclear warheads that will be carried when the Trident programme is completed; and how many the United Kingdom had 10 years ago.

Mr. Alan Clark: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to specify publicly the size of our nuclear weapon holdings. However, no United Kingdom Trident submarine will carry more than 128 warheads.

24. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on progress towards completion and commissioning of the first three Trident submarines.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Construction of the first three Vanguard class Trident missile submarines at Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd. is making good progress, with all on schedule to meet their planned in-service dates.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Trident programme.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Trident programe remains on time and within budget. The first submarine, Vanguard, is set to roll out of the Devonshire dock hall in Barrow tomorrow, and following a series of sea trials, will enter service with the Royal Navy in the mid-1990s.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the total cost of the Trident programme, including a breakdown of running costs and capital costs for each of the financial years 1992-93 to 1995-96.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The currently estimated cost of the Trident programme is £10·518 million. Estimated capital expenditure on the Trident programme for the financial years 1992-93 and 1993-94 is £1,019 million and £827 million respectively. It remains our practice not to provide detailed forecasts of project expenditure more than two years in advance. We do not expect the level of running costs of the Trident force to be significantly different from those of Polaris.

Equipment Expenditure

20. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on proposed defence spending on equipment for the years covered by the current public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Our plans for equipment expenditure are outlined in the departmental report by the Ministry of Defence on Government expenditure plans from 1992-93 to 1994-95.

Advanced Short-range Air-to-air Missile System

21. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will announce a decision for the advanced short-range air-to-air missile system.

Mr. Alan Clark: Today.

Nuclear Deterrence

22. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, when he next meets his European counterparts, he will discuss with them levels of nuclear deterrence.

Mr. Tom King: My next meeting with my European counterparts will be at the meeting in Oslo on 5 and 6 March of the Independent European Programme Group, which deals with equipment procurement issues.

26. Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the necessity for a continuing nuclear deterrent.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government believe, in common with our NATO allies, that nuclear weapons remain essential as the ultimate guarantee of our security.

Air-to-surface Missiles

25. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about discussions he has had with his German counterpart about basing of tactical air-to-surface missiles on German soil.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer given to the hon. Member by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 17 December 1991, Official Report, column 140.

Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about defence support agency status for the Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation will be established as a defence support agency of the Ministry of Defence on 1 April 1992. The NARO comprises a Royal Navy aircraft yard at Fleetlands, Gosport, and the Royal Navy aircraft workshops at Almondbank, Perth. Together, they employ some 12 RN personnel and 1,652 civilians, who will transfer to the agency. Also included within the agency is a subsidiary storage site at Wroughton near Swindon, manned by contractors' personnel with a small MOD presence. The full cost budget for the NARO for 1992-93 is assessed at £141 million.

The role of the NARO is to provide repair, modification, overhaul and storage services for the tri-service helicopter fleet, their engines and selected components and for marine gas turbine engines and their components. The high professional standards of the NARO will be maintained and agency status will provide the chief executive with new opportunities to improve the efficiency and value for money of his organisation. Captain David Symonds, Royal Navy has been appointed as the agency's chief executive. The corporate strategy of the NARO will be centred on the following two principal targets:

To deliver the core programme of work to the required standards of quality and timeliness and to the customers' satisfaction.

to increase the efficiency of the utilisation of its capacity, assets and facilities by maintaining the optimum level of throughput, and by reducing the unit production cost of core work by 7·5 per cent. over the next three years and by 21 per cent. over the following seven years.

The chief executive has been set the following strategic targets:

Quantity—to complete 100 per cent. of the task as detailed in the DGA(N) schedule of identified repair work.

Quality—to reduce by 2 per cent. the weighted number of allied quality assurance publication non-conformances in 1992-93.

Timeliness—to complete more than 90 per cent. of contracts on time in 1992-93 and to increase this figure to over 95 per cent. by the end of 1994-95.

Cost—Based on the values at the time of launch:

—reduce cost of the direct output units—standard hour—by 2·5 per cent. by the end of 1992-93.

—reduce cost of the direct output units—standard hour—by 7·5 per cent. by the end of 1994-95.

Efficiency—Improve the efficiency index—measured work content divided by measured time taken—from 59·5 per cent. in 1990-91 to 62 per cent. by the end of 1992-93 and to 65 per cent. by the end of 1994-95.

Productivity—Improve productivity from the 1990-91 figure of 706·7 to an average of 720 direct output units per employee by the end of 1992-93 and 750 direct output units per employee by the end of 1994-95.

Market Testing—To commence a five-year market testing programme in 1992-93 to the value of £2 million.

Private Robert Sean Thomas

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the hon. Member for Falmouth and Camborne may expect to receive a substantive response to his letter of 23 October 1991, in the matter of number 24885335, Private Robert Sean Thomas.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces provided a substantive response to my hon. Friend on 27 February.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I have recently appointed Mr. Christopher Littmoden, finance director of Marks and Spencer, to act as a part-time private sector adviser on the Department's market testing programme. No consultancy firms are employed for this purpose.

Surplus Land

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the disposal of his Department's surplus land.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Surplus Ministry of Defence land is disposed of as quickly as possible.

AWE, Llanishen

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has for the future ownership and management of the atomic weapons establishment, Llanishen, Cardiff; and if he will state the timing proposed for changes and the policy considerations underlying his decision.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Following the passage of the Atomic Weapons Establishment Act through Parliament last year the Government intend to transfer the atomic weapons establishment, which includes the Cardiff site, to full contractor operation on 1 April 1993. The establishment will remain in government ownership. Contractorisation will enable the establishment to gain additional project and production management expertise as well as giving access to the corporate support of a major industrial company or consortium.

Underground Nuclear Explosions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of the proceedings of the seminar on the detection and recognition of underground nuclear explosions, held at the Royal Astronomical Society on 14 February; and if he will make a statement on the utility to his Department of participation in such discussion meetings.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes. My Department welcomes and encourages participation in seminars in which there is an exchange of ideas aimed at resolving the technical problems associated with the detection and recognition of underground nuclear explosions.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Resettlement Units

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) under the revised strategy for the future of the resettlement units (a) to which voluntary agencies the resettlement units will be transferred, (b) what discussions have been held with voluntary organisations, local authorities and other interested parties concerning the proposal to transfer responsibility for the resettlement units, and (c) if it is intended to re-establish the regional review groups;

(2) following the transfer of the resettlement units to voluntary organisations, (a) if the planned closure of the units and the rehousing of residents to suitable accommodation will still take place, (b) if the voluntary organisations taking responsibility for the resettlement units will be able to use the proceeds from the sale of land and buildings arising from the closure programme to fund replacement beds and (c) if resources made available to voluntary organisations include an allowance for inflation for both capital and revenue costs.

Miss Widdecombe: The management of the Resettlement Agency is a matter for Mr. Tony Ward, the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Child Support

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the value of child support for each child in standard rate tax-paying families in 1991 prices from 1961 to 1992-93.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is in the table:

Income Support

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of people in Wales in receipt of income support; and how many face prepayment deductions to meet various debts and unpaid bills.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest information available is contained in tables 1.4 and 10.1c of volume 3 of the "Department of Social Security Income Support Statistics Annual Statistical Enquiry, May 1990", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Social Fund

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he received the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee on the social fund; and if he has any plans to change the operation of the fund in response.

Mr. Scott: We have today received this report. We welcome its constructive approach, based on an endorsement of many of the principles on which the fund's operation rests and an acknowledgement of the services which social fund officers are providing. In considering its conclusions and recommendations, we shall wish also to take into account the findings of the university of York social policy research unit's report which we commissioned at the start of the fund and which should be published later this year.

Meanwhile, we have today placed details of the 1992-93 social fund allocations in the Library. The discretionary budget will be £302 million in total. The budget is now over 30 per cent., or almost £75 million, higher than the April 1991 figure. Budgets have increased for both loans, by £51 million, and community care grants, by £23·3 million, since April 1991. As a result of this latest increase, over 70 per cent. of districts will receive increases of 10 per cent. or more on their loans or grants budget and no office will have a reduced allocation. These increases show the Government's commitment to maintaining an adequate level of provision for the social fund.

These increased allocations will be supplemented with a number of improvements to the operation of the fund which are currently being introduced by the Benefits Agency. The improvements include a revised and improved application form; improved training for social fund officers; improved guidance to assist SFOs in understanding the legal framework and framework for making decisions; improved forms to assist SFOs in making their decisions; and improvements to some of the letters which are sent to applicants to make them clearer and more informative. All these changes are designed to smooth the process of application to the fund and to provide a better service for the people who use it. In addition, we are on target for the introduction of a new computer system next year to administer the social fund. This new system will both considerably speed up the processing of claims, and improve the quality of the decision making.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the amount of money being paid out each month in benefit excluding attendance allowance to residents of residential care homes in the county of Hereford and Worcester.

Miss Widdecombe: Information is not available in the form requested.

Disability Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many members selected to sit on the disability appeal tribunals are also in receipt of (a) invalidity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance and (c) income support.

Mr. Scott: Responsibility for the administration of disability appeal tribunals lies with the president of the Independent Tribunal Service, his honour judge Holden. I have been advised by his office that the information requested is not yet available as recruitment of members is still taking place.

Pensioners (London Weighting)

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans for introducing a London weighting addition for people in receipt of state retirement pensions living in Greater London.

Miss Widdecombe: We have no plans to do so.

Pensions

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was (a) the amount of the old age pension for a single person and for a married couple, (b) the rate of inflation and (c) the level of average earnings for each year from 1970 to the latest year for which figures are available.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is in the table.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Local Government Boundaries Review, Moyle

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations have been made by the Government of the Republic of Ireland in connection with the review of local government boundaries of Moyle district council.

Mr. Brooke: The question was discussed briefly at the intergovernmental conference in Dublin on 20 November 1991. Conference took note of the independence of the Local Government Boundaries Commissioner for Northern Ireland in drawing up his recommendations.

Curriculum Monitoring

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the names of the schools involved in the Northern Ireland Curriculum Council monitoring programmes for English, mathematics and science in years one, five and eight.

Dr. Mawhinney: The schools are:

School Meals

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children are not currently eligible for free school meals but would have been before the Social Security Act 1986; and what would be the gross and net costs of restoring their right to free school meals, in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

University Accommodation

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated level of funding required by (a) Queen's university, Belfast and (b) the university of Ulster, to meet identified maintenance needs and refurbishment of existing accommodation together with additional provision required for increasing student enrolment.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is not currently available in the form required.

The Universities Funding Council, in consultation with its working party on capital policy, has recently appointed consultants to undertake a detailed study into the accommodation implications of the growth in student numbers over the next decade for all United Kingdom universities, including those in Northern Ireland. The council will advise the Department of Education for Northern Ireland on the needs of the universities in Northern Ireland in due course.

The Department has, however, recently agreed to provide grant of £5·34 million to the University of Ulster to enable it to construct an additional 3,000 sq m block of teaching and staff accommodation on its Jordanstown campus. It has also provided grant aid, and allowed Queen's university to use the proceeds of property sales, to fund an extensive programme of rationalisations and refurbishment amounting to over £10 million in the last five years.

SCOTLAND

Staff Accommodation

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is yet in a position to make an announcement on the future accommodation for Scottish Office staff in Edinburgh.

Mr. Lang: Staff are being informed today that subject to the satisfactory conclusion of detailed negotiations the Scottish Office is to occupy a major new office building of 290,000 sq ft to be provided by Forth Properties Limited at Victoria quay, Leith. The new building which will accommodate about 1,400 staff from New St. Andrew's House and some other central Edinburgh buildings will be ready in the summer of 1994. St. Andrew's House will remain the headquarters of the Scottish Office.

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his plans regarding the debt formerly owed to the National Loans Fund by the Scottish Development Agency.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I have decided that Scottish Enterprise should continue to take responsibility for the National Loans Fund debt formerly owed by the Scottish Development Agency. In turn, Scottish Enterprise will benefit from interest and capital repayments arising from on-lending financed by National Loans Fund loans. The original intention had been to extinguish the National Loans Fund debt and to return direct to the Exchequer income arising from related loans to sub-borrowers. Scottish Enterprise has been consulted about and is content with the revised arrangements, which have the approval of the Treasury.

Education (Evening Classes)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the amount spent by each local education authority in Scotland in funding non-certificated evening classes in (i) 1989-90, (ii) 1990-91 and (iii) 1991-92 and any projected level of expenditure for 1992-93.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not held centrally.

EMPLOYMENT

Radiation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans the Health and Safety Executive has to evaluate the work of the Medical Research Council radiation biology unit on the links between low dose radiation and cell abnormality.

Mr. Forth: The study undertaken by the MRC radio biology unit is one of a number of studies on the effects of low-dose radiation currently under way which will need to be assessed together. This is a complex field and it would not be appropriate to evaluate the results of a single study in isolation.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Jackson: No contracts have been undertaken by any of the agencies in the Department for this purpose. Two private sector consultancy firms have been retained by the headquarters section of the Department for this purpose—Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte and Ernst and Young. Both appointments were the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff; and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Jackson: Reviews of pay and grading within the Employment Department group are taking place within the framework of the Government's plans for reform of civil service pay and grading. These were announced by the Chancellor at the end of July 1991 and give Departments and agencies the opportunity to develop their own pay and grading systems, to suit their own needs.

The Employment Service conducted a small-scale study from July to October 1991, supported by Price Waterhouse Management Consultants.

The Health and Safety Executive has begun a review of pay and grading structures which will be undertaken with the support of external consultants over the next six months. The consultants have yet to be selected.

Low Pay

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the percentage of (a) female part-time workers, (b) male part-time workers, (c) female full-time workers, (d) male full-time workers, (e) all full-time workers, (f) all part-time workers and (g) all workers in (i) Scotland, (ii) Great Britain and (iii) each Scottish region, with hourly earnings of less than £3·40 an hour, excluding overtime; and if he will provide figures for the number of employees this percentage represents in each category in Scotland.

Mr. Forth: The percentages requested, which are available from the 1991 new earnings survey, are given in the following table.

It is broadly estimated, from the new earnings survey and other sources, that around 0·4 million employees in Scotland earned less than £3·40 per hour in April 1991, of whom two thirds were women and one half were part-timers.

Employees on adult rates whose pay was unaffected by absence: Percentage with hourly earnings (excluding overtime) below £3·40 April 1991

Small Businesses

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will review the need for legislation to assist small businesses to obtain prompt payment of bills; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I have no plans at present to introduce prompt payment legislation, but I am keeping the issue under close review. Though I understand the frustrations felt by small businesses because of delayed payments, I remain to be convinced that legislation would be effective. The majority of organisations representing small firms share the Government's view that the effect of a legislative approach would be, at best, minimal and could even be damaging to the small firms sector. I have made it known, however, that I would be interested to receive views on how an effective legislative framework might operate.

This Department will continue to address late payment through a strategy of persuasion and education and, in addition to a number of measures already in place, I am considering what further initiatives may be appropriate.

Remploy

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress has been made in establishing a new financial arrangement with Remploy.

Mr. Howard: Discussions have been taking place between my Department and Remploy to establish arrangements which would enable the company to operate a more flexible financial regime within an agreed planning framework which would include quantified annual performance targets. Tomorrow, I will join the chairman of Remploy, Sir Ivor Cohen, to sign documents setting out the financial arrangements under which Remploy will operate from 1 April 1992.

These new arrangements, which will be operated on my behalf by the chief executive of the Employment Service, will enable the company to improve its efficiency, competitiveness and value for money. The greater commercial freedom which will be enjoyed by Remploy should benefit the workforce of severely disabled employees for whom the company was established.

I will arrange for copies of the documents describing the new arrangements, and in due course the annual performance agreement that I will have with Remploy, to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies will also be made available by the Employment Service on request to individuals or organisations with a genuine interest in the arrangements.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the area boundaries laid down for the purposes of the budgets of training and enterprise councils in general, and East Anglia in particular.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The boundaries of all training and enterprise councils—TECs —were established in discussion with the groups of employers who joined together in local areas to respond to the government's invitation to establish TECs. Those discussions took account of such factors as travel to work patterns, local demography and the structure of industry and commerce.

The budgets for individual TECs are negotiated between the TEC and this Department's regional directors and are not related to the geographical area covered.

HEALTH

Cost Rent Schemes

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to ring-fence funding for the cost rent scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Cash-limited allocations made by regional health authorities to family health services authorities (FHSAs) cover spending on general practitioner premises, practice staff and practice computers. How allocations are spent between these three headings is a matter for FHSAs in the light of local needs and priorities. There are no plans to ring-fence funds for cost rent schemes within these allocations.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on cost rent schemes to improve general practitioners' surgeries in each of the last five years in (a) Waltham Forest, (b) London and (c) nationally.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is shown in the table for the last two years. Records of individual cost rent expenditure prior to 1989-90 are unavailable.

Cost-rent expenditure

	1989-90 £ million	1990-91 £ million
Waltham Forest (including Redbridge)	0·534	0·785
London	15·341	28·487
Nationally	56·766	79·593

Drug Costs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the cost to the NHS resulting from the prescription of branded drugs rather than their chemically identical generic version in each of the past four years for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is not possible to estimate such a cost.

Nebulisers

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the arrangements concerning charging for NHS nebulisers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No charge can be made for nebulisers supplied by district health authorities as part of NHS treatment.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he will ensure that adequate resources are made available for providing treatment for and giving advice on myalgic encephalomyelitis to general practitioners;

(2) if he will give details of the current funding of research into the treatment of myalgic encephalomyelitis; and what guidance is given by his Department to general practitioners in regard to treatment of this condition.

Mr. Dorrell: There is no question of patients not receiving the treatment they need when they visit their general practitioner, including referral to a specialist if that is necessary. It is not the practice of the Department to issue clinical guidance to doctors, but we are encourged by the increasing number of informed articles on myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME) appearing in professional journals and by the number of regional health authorities approving courses for GPs in ME; the various ME groups do valuable work in this area too. With regard to research into causes of and treatment for myalgic encephalomyelitis, I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my right hon. Friend the Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley) on 21 November 1991 at column 313.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will fund research into the physical causes of myalgic encephalomyelitis and possible treatments.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave my right hon. Friend the Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley) on 21 November 1991 at column 313.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will reconsider the definition of myalgic encephalomyelitis as given in the DSS disability living handbook.

Mr. Scott: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to the hon. Member.

Fazakerley Hospital

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has received from the Mental Health Commission a report on staffing levels at Fazakerley hospital, Liverpool.

Mr. Dorrell: No. I understand that the commission has visited this hospital and are discussing its findings with the health authority. This reflects normal practice in handling the commission's reports.

Nurse Regradings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements have been made to pay arrears to nurses regraded after appeals against a grade awarded in 1988 when the hospital concerned has become a trust in the intervening period; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Guidance issued to the national health service makes it clear that trusts assume all the rights, powers, duties and liabilities for the contracts of employment of people formerly employed by health authorities. Trusts are therefore responsible for any arrears of pay which may become due if a nurse is regraded following an appeal.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by individual health authority in England the provision made in the final accounts for 1990-91 for payments due to nurses who awaited settlement of the grading claims; if he will estimate the total sum due to be paid on 31 March 1991 for grading arrears to such nurses; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The provision made in the final accounts of health authorities for 1990-91 for payments due to nurses who awaited settlements of grading claims is not separately identifiable. No estimate of the total sum of arrears due to be paid as a result of grading appeals can be made.

Radiotherapy

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from the Radiotherapy Exposure Action Group; and what was his response.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No representations have been received.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require all radiotherapy departments to routinely provide all patients with written information about radiotherapy they are to receive, with the information indicating any likely side effects; and if he will ensure that written consent is requested if the treatment is in any way experimental.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All patients have a right to reject or consent to treatment. They are entitled to as much information as they need, on an individual basis, to enable them to make a proper decision. Written consent should be obtained where a proposed procedure, including an experimental one, carries a substantial risk or substantial side effect. Most radiotherapy departments routinely provide patients with information on side effects of their treatment.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health approximately how many people develop cancer annually and are treated with radiotherapy.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, there were approximately 193,000 registrations of newly diagnosed cases of malignant neoplasms in England. Information on whether radiotherapy forms part of a patient's treatment is not routinely collected.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the staff size of the inspectorate set within his Department to enforce the Ionising Radiation Regulations 1988; when it was established; and what changes there have been in the level of radiation doses since 1988.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department of Health inspectorate to enforce the Ionising Radiation (Protection of Persons undergoing Medical Examination or Treatment) Regulations 1988 was established in 1989 and currently warrants are held by four officials. The inspectorate is supported by the Department of Health (DH) administrative division concerned with ionising radiation.

Currently, the DH inspectorate is concentrating on investigating incidents that have been reported, but since 1988 we have asked health authorities to introduce dose reduction strategies.

DH has endorsed the joint report of the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) and the Royal College of Radiologists entitled "Patient Dose Reduction in Diagnostic Radiology" and is currently funding, at NRPB, a national survey of diagnostic radiology doses which will be published in 1993.

All these initiatives are directed towards reducing doses in the diagnostic radiology field.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which professional bodies advise him on radiotherapy exposure.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department holds regular meetings with the Royal College of Radiologists and is offered advice on an informal basis by the British Nuclear Medicine Society. Both these professional bodies advise the Department on radiotherapy exposure among other issues.

The Administration of Radioactive Substances Advisory Committee (ARSAC) advises Ministers on the administration of radioactive medicinal products and related scientific and radiological safety matters. The members appointed to this committee are proposed by the relevant professional bodies.

The chief medical officer at the Department is advised by his radiotherapy adviser, Professor Bleehan, on radiotherapy matters relating to the NHS.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from what sources he is provided with information about the extent and nature of damage from exposure to radiotherapy; and if he will establish a research programme to provide comprehensive information and to look at ways of preventing damage from both excess and inadequate exposure.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information about the extent and nature of damage from exposure to radiotherapy is available in the clinical literature, as a result of research carried out by doctors, radiobiologists and related medical scientists.

The Department circulated a document "Quality Assurance in Radiotherapy" to all radiography departments in May 1991, a copy of which is available in the Library. This document was produced by a working party established by the Standing Medical Advisory Committee. A research project to establish the applicability of this approach is being funded at two centres by the Department. The results of the research will be promulgated widely.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require his radiation inspectorate regularly to inspect radiotherapy equipment and its use in all NHS hospitals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Employers in the NHS and private health sector are required by the Ionising Radiation Regulations 1985 to ensure that radiotherapy equipment is designed, constructed, installed and maintained so as to be capable of providing the required treatment with the minimum of exposure. These regulations are enforced by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the number of patients damaged by (a) excess radiotherapy and (b) inadequate amounts of radiotherapy.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information on which such an estimate could be based is not available centrally.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require all district health authorities (a) regularly to monitor exposure to radiotherapy, (b) to record every incident of excess or inadequate exposure and (c) to prepare an annual report for him, to include details on the nature, quality and age of its radiotherapy equipment.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All district health authorities are required by the Ionising Radiation (Protection of Persons Undergoing Medical Examination or Treatment) Regulations 1988 (IR(POPUMET) Regs 1988) to ensure their staff are adequately trained and that those who physically direct medical exposures "ensure a dose of ionising radiation to the patient is as low as reasonably practicable in order to achieve the required diagnostic or therapeutic purpose".

Every radiotherapy treatment is calculated for a specific patient and involves the regular monitoring of exposures from radiotherapy machines, as well as the regular review and clinical audit of the results of such treatment. All radiotherapy departments are required by the IR(POPUMET) Regs 1988) to keep an inventory of radiotherapy equipment which would include details of the nature, quality and age of that equipment.

We would expect provider units to report any untoward incidents to the Department of Health inspectorate.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified radiotherapists are in post within his Department.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department does not employ any radiotherapists.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish a central fund to provide immediate no fault payments for those damaged by excess or inadequate radiotherapy.

Mr. Dorrell: No-fault compensation was proposed as part of the National Health Service (Compensation) Bill which was defeated on a free vote by a substantial majority at Second Reading. The Government's position remains that the basis for seeking compensation should be through proof of negligence actions through the courts.

Tinnitus

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his estimates of the numbers of tinnitus sufferers in the United Kingdom; how many trained specialists are employed in the NHS to help alleviate this condition; what funding is currently provided to charities and research institutions working on tinnitus problems; and what are his plans for future funding and assistance.

Mr. Dorrell: It is estimated that between 0·5 per cent. and 1 per cent. of the population are seriously affected by tinnitus. There are 375 consultants in otolaryngology and 13 consultant audiological physicians employed by the NHS in England. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research in the United Kingdom is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives its grant in aid from the Department of Education and Science. In 1991 the MRC spent £112,000 on research into tinnitus.

The Meniere's Society, many of whose members suffer from tinnitus, received a grant of £7,500 in 1991-92 and have applied for a further grant in 1992-93. Decisions on funding for 1992-93 onwards will be announced shortly. There are no plans for funding of any other voluntary organisations at present but any future applications will be carefully considered.

Thalidomide

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the research publications on the absence of the side effect of peripheral neuropathy in United Kingdom leprosy patients taking thalidomide;

(2) what, apart from producing teratogenic effects on the foetus, are the other major adverse effects of thalidomide; if he will ensure that every patient being given thalidomide on a named patient basis is warned that the drug can cause a severe and permanent loss of sensation; and if he will require manufacturers to give this information in a leaflet included in the packaging of the drug;

(3) if he will list the basis for the findings reported in the letter of 19 December from the Minister of Health to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South that none of the experts on leprosy has seen thalidomide neuropathy in their patients; and what evidence he has of the frequency of this adverse effect in patients with other diseases taking thalidomide.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A literature survey undertaken by the Department has failed to reveal any research publications on the absence of peripheral neuropathy in United Kingdom leprosy patients taking thalidomide.

Apart from the teratogenic effects of thalidomide on the foetus the other major adverse event is peripheral neuropathy. Thalidomide is used to treat a very few patients with rare diseases unresponsive to other treatments on a "named-patient" basis by an experienced group of physicians. They will be alert to the possibility of nerve damage and should be able to recognise it at an early stage.

The provision of warnings about the use of drugs prescribed on a "named-patient" basis lies with the doctor writing the prescription, not with the supplier. In the case of thalidomide, a practitioner should arrange for appropriate warnings about the possible side effects to be provided when it is dispensed to the patient.

My letter of 19 December 1991 to the right hon. Member was based on the clinical findings of the panel of leprosy opinion. This experienced group of physicians who treat a condition that affects peripheral nerves have not detected signs of peripheral neuropathy associated with the use of thalidomide. Their findings are in agreement with the absence of any report in the literature that thalidomide causes peripheral neuropathy in patients treated for leprosy. Peripheral neuropathy is a well known side effect in patients with other diseases being treated with thalidomide. There are no accurate figures for the frequency of this side effect.

Abortions

Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a breakdown of the total number of abortions under the terms of the Abortion Act 1967 in the Sheffield health authority area in 1991 (a) by the ground on which they were performed and (b) how many were repeat abortions.

Mr. Dorrell: Data for 1991 are not yet available.

Dentists' Fees

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will discuss with the British Dental Association the need to avoid cuts in fees paid by his Department; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the payment of the arrears of fees for dentists following the recommendations by the pay review body.

Mr. Dorrell: The proposed increase in target net income of 8·5 per cent. which was recommended by the Doctors and Dentists Review Body (DDRB) was accepted by the Government. To ensure that the level at which fees are pitched in the coming year will deliver this proposed increase in dentists' net income the health departments consulted the British Dental Association (BDA). Following discussions between the British Dental Association and the health departments, agreement was reached to hold a joint inquiry to review the level of payments to dentists in 1991-92, the results of which will be considered by the Health departments and the British Dental Association in May when they reconsider the appropriate fee scale for 1992-93; simultaneously, they will begin a more fundamental review of the structure of dentists' remuneration.

Southern Derbyshire Health Authority

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give figures for the number of patients in the Southern Derbyshire health authority area who have been waiting for more than two years for an operation; and if he will give equivalent figures for a year ago.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The latest provisional figures show that at December 1991 there were 29 patients waiting over two years for treatment in the Southern Derbyshire health authority area. The equivalent figure in December 1990 was 108. The authority expects to have no patient waiting over two years by 31 March.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give figures for the number of health care staff working for Southern Derbyshire health authority in 1982 and the latest year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The whole-time equivalent number of health care staff working for Southern Derbyshire health authority in 1982 and 1990 were 4,740 and 4,960 respectively. These are direct care staff, which includes nursing and midwifery (including agency), medical and dental (including permanent paid, honorary and locum staff, but excluding consultants and senior registrars whose contracts are held by the region) and professional and technical staff. The sources of the data are the Department of Health's annual censuses of national health service medical and non-medical manpower.

Health Service Finance

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial information, including sets of accounts, will be made available at the annual meetings of NHS trusts.

Mr. Dorrell: At each annual public meeting NHS trusts are required to make available their audited annual accounts and any report made on those accounts by the auditor.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the numbers of people waiting over two years for treatment who were removed from the lists between 1 October and 31 December because of (a) being treated and (b) for a reason other than being treated.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is not yet available centrally.

Illegitimate Births

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of illegitimate births to teenage girls in England in each year since 1980 in each registry area, giving the age in years of the teenage mothers.

Mr. Dorrell: Information for registry areas could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. Information for the mother's usual local authority of residence has been placed in the Library. Annual tables are available for 1980 and for 1982 to 1990 (inclusive). Industrial action by registrars means that such a detailed analysis is impractical for 1981.

ENERGY

Electricity Prices

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had with the chairman of Nuclear Electric concerning the level of electricity prices to be offered to large industrial electricity consumers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of Nuclear Electric from time to time to discuss a range of issues.

ENVIRONMENT

Farm Shops

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations or guidelines cover the proportion of the produce sold in a shop attached to a farm or smallholding which is required to have been grown on the farm or holding, in connection with planning requirements.

Mr. Yeo: There are no hard and fast rules but guidance is included in the new planning policy guidance note 7, "The Countryside and the Rural Economy". It is normally assumed that the use of a farm shop only for the sale of goods produced on that farm or smallholding is a use which is ancillary to the use as a farm/smallholding not requiring planning permission, whereas use as a farm shop selling a significant amount of "imported" produce amounts to a use on its own account and is therefore subject to planning control.

Sir Walter Raleigh Statue

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for the relocation of Sir Walter Raleigh's statue in Whitehall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: A study has been commissioned to consider the siting of the proposed new statue of Lord Alanbrooke on Raleigh green, Whitehall. Although the study is not yet complete, there are no current plans that include the relocation of Sir Walter Raleigh's statue elsewhere. However, it is clear that a repositioning within the green will be needed. The siting plans emerging from the study will shortly be ready for consultation with interested parties, including the Royal Fine Arts Commission, English Heritage and Westminster City Council and no final decision will be taken until that is complete.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the revenue support grant and standard spending assessment for Dorset for 1992-93 as compared with 1991-92.

Mr. Key: The standard spending assessment for Dorset county council at £369·8 million for 1992-93 is 8·2 per cent. above that for 1991-92 at £341·8 million. Revenue support grant at £125·1 million is 23·7 per cent. higher than the sum of RSG and community charge grant for 1991-92 of £101·2 million.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the impact of outstanding rating appeals both domestic and non-domestic on local authority finances in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 2 March 1992]: Rating appeals under the new non-domestic rating system have no impact on local authority finances. Within any given level of aggregate external finance, any variation in rates yield due to such appeals would be matched by a corresponding variation in the level of revenue support grant. Figures are not available nationally on the effects for those years of appeals in respect of the 1973 valuation lists. The effect of these appeals on local authorities' budgets and charges will depend on their own past budgeting decisions. As I announced on 27 February, we have decided to issue supplementary credit approvals totalling some £9·5 million to assist those authorities most affected in 1991-92 by the results of rating appeals notified to them after 1991-92 budgets had been set.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will meet a delegation of residents from Coventry to discuss the effect of the standard spending assessment for 1992-93 on the level of education provision and social services in the city.

Mr. Key [holding answer 2 March 1992]: No. Within Coventry's budget, the spending priorities given to education and social services are a matter for the city council.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many meetings or other discussions his officials have had with local government officers or councillors from Coventry about the city's standard spending assessment in 1991 and 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key [holding answer 4 March 1992]: Coventry City Council made representations on standard spending assessments for 1991-92 and I met a delegation from the West Midlands joint committee, including Coventry, to hear representations on the SSA for 1992-93. For 1992-93 Coventry's SSA increases by 5·8 per cent. and is, at £1,080 per adult, one of the highest of any metropolitan district.

Nuclear Reprocessing Plant

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will next meet the European Commissioner for environmental matters to discuss the impact of the Sellafield reprocessing plant on the Irish sea and the surrounding environment.

Mr. Baldry: Mr. right hon. Friend has no such plans.

New Towns (Land Sales)

Sir Charles Irving: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to extend to other new towns his recent decision to allow the Commission for the New Towns to make land available at Telford at a price intended to facilitate the construction of low-cost housing.

Sir George Young: The Commission for the New Towns is a disengagement authority, charged with maximising the receipts obtainable from the sale of its assets. Disposal of housing land at less than the best price reasonably obtainable can normally be justified only where this can be expected to lead to an overall enhancement in the value of its remaining assets.

Sir Charles Irving: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will extend to the Commission for the New Towns the power of local authorities to sell land for less than the market price.

Sir George Young: The role of the Commission for the New Towns is disengagement and to maximise the receipts for the Exchequer obtained from the sale of its assets. It is the responsibility of the local housing authorities to co-ordinate arrangements to ensure that the social housing needs of their areas are met.

United Nations Conference on Environment and Development

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newport West, 24 January, Official Report, column 347, when he received the non-governmental organisations' report of the Paris planning meeting for the forthcoming United Nations conference on environment and development; and which proposals made in the report have been included in the United Kingdom submissions for UNCED.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend has not yet received a formal report from the Paris meeting.

Long Leasehold Flats

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he plans to make to the proposals for the enfranchisement of long leasehold flats, which he announced last July; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Following extensive consultation the scheme for enfranchisement in England and Wales, which I announced last year, is to be modified and extended.

The main framework of the scheme to give long-leaseholders of flats the collective right to buy their freehold will not be changed. Nor will the compensation arrangements. But we shall simplify the criteria for qualification of long-leaseholders and buildings, and give a right to former freeholders to lease back parts of buildings let direct to renting tenants or used for business purposes.

In addition, we will give flat owners in blocks which are not eligible for enfranchisement a right to extend their leases, at market price. The details of this proposal will be subject to consultation.

We will also remove the rateable value, and rental equivalent value, limits on eligibility of houses for enfranchisement. Long leaseholders of houses of any value will be given the right to buy their freeholds at market value.

A revised information leaflet will shortly be available to the public on request from the Department of the Environment and the Welsh Office. I will be placing copies of text, together with a brief resume of our proposals, in the Library. We will introduce this legislation when parliamentary time permits.

Air Pollution

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the present and planned sites for monitoring of air quality, stating for each which pollutants are measured.

Mr. Baldry: The Department of the Environment is currently operating the following number of air pollution monitoring sites:

	Number
Ozone:	18
Carbon monoxide:	6
Nitrogen oxides:	12
Acid deposition:	32
Atmospheric hydrocarbons:	4
Trace gases:	3
Smoke and sulphur dioxide:	258
Lead:	17

The enhanced urban monitoring initiative will place monitoring sites in 24 more towns and cities across the United Kingdom by the end of the decade. Each will measure ozone, sulphur dioxide, nitrogen dioxide, carbon monoxide, small particulate matter—PM10—and toxic hydrocarbons.

The first 10 sites will be in Cardiff, Belfast, Edinburgh, Birmingham, Newcastle, London, Liverpool, Bristol, Leeds and Aberdeen, the Government are awaiting independent scientific advice before choosing the locations of the remaining sites.

Air Quality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on data for air quality in Greater London, Birmingham, Manchester, Leeds and Bristol at similar periods in each year from 1980 to 1991.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 28 February 1992]: Data for the cities and years requested are available only for smoke and sulphur dioxide.

The 98-percentile daily mean smoke and sulphur dioxide concentrations for representative urban sites in Greater London, Birmingham, Manchester, Leeds and Bristol are given in the table. The values can be compared with the EC directive limits for smoke and sulphur dioxide of 213 and 350 μgm^{-3}, respectively.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East, on 11 February 1991, Official Report, column 295, concerning council debts.

Mr. Key [holding answer 2 March 1992]: I have arranged for the available information to be laid in the Library of the House.

Manchester Olympic Bid

Mr. Denis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the report commissioned by the Government from financial consultants as to the feasibility of the Manchester Olympic bid.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 3 March 1992]: The studies were commissioned by the Manchester Olympic bid committee with the financial support of the Government. It is not proposed that they should be published.

Repossessions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many repossessions have been stopped as a result of the agreement reached between the Chancellor of the Exchequer and mortgage lenders, as announced on 19 December.

Mr. Maples: I have been asked to reply.

It is too early to provide an estimate of the number of repossessions which have been prevented as a result of the measures agreed with the Council of Mortgage Lenders. However, excellent progress is being made on the implementation of the package. The Bill to suspend stamp duty on properties valued at up to £250,000 has received royal assent and the Bill to make income support payments of mortgage interest direct to lenders has passed all its Commons stages. In addition, the major lenders have committed themselves to helping borrowers in difficulties through mortgage rescue schemes involving funding of up to £¾ billion. Such schemes are now coming into operation. The various measures will have a substantial impact on the level of repossessions this year.

PRIME MINISTER

Charities (Europe)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Prime Minister which Government Departments will be involved in consultations on the proposal for a European Community regulation on the statute for a European association.

The Prime Minister: The Home Office will be taking the lead with the Charity Commission, bringing in other Departments in respect of their particular interests in the proposed statute.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Bolivia

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs where in Bolivia the land now being used for soya bean production, under a World bank programme, is situated; what acreage is involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The land involved is the eastern lowlands region in the department of Santa Cruz. The area cultivated for soya bean production in 1989, when the project started, was 110,000 hectares. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 17 January, at column 679, and my answers to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 27 January, at column 421, and 28 January, at column 531.

WALES

Council House Sales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many dwellings have been sold under the improvement for sale scheme by each local authority in Wales in each year since 1988.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Since 1988 a total of 21 dwellings have been sold under the improvement for sale scheme. A breakdown is given in the table:

	1988	1989	1990	1991
Ogwr	9	3	6	—
Preseli Pembrokeshire	1	—	—	—

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many properties have been sold under home leasing schemes in each local authority area in Wales for each year from 1988; and what is the total amount granted in improvement grants and mortgage finance within each local authority area for participants in such schemes.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Since 1988 a total of 12 properties have been sold under home leasing schemes, a breakdown of which is provided in the table. Information is not centrally available on improvements grants and mortgage finance issued for these properties.

Discount Housing Schemes

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the total number of vacancies released to date under each transferable discount housing scheme operational in Wales; and how many vacancies are (a) two bed, (b) three bed, (c) four bed and (d) over;

(2) what is the total number of (a) formal grant applications, (b) grants approved, (c) grants paid, (d) applications withdrawn and (e) grants refused under each transferable discount scheme application in Wales to date;

(3) of the lettings released under each transferable discount scheme operational in Wales to date, how many were allocated to (a) those transferred from other local authority property (b) households accepted as homeless under part III of the Housing Act 1985 and (c) households from the authority's waiting list;

(4) if he will publish an anonymised list of all grant purchasers under transferable discount housing schemes showing in each instance (a) the amount of grant, (b) the property prices, (c) the location, (d) the household type and (e) household weekly income.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Agricultural Development Advisory Service

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans ADAS has to withdraw from Llandrindod Wells, Dolgellau new town, Brecon, Pontypool, Haverfordwest and Lampeter and to shed jobs at Caernarfon, Carmarthen and Trawscoed; and if he will make a statement on the future development of ADAS in Wales (a) prior to the setting up of the new Government agency and (b) from April onwards.

Mr. Curry: I have been asked to reply.

When ADAS becomes a Government agency on 1 April 1992 its organisation in Wales will be based on consultancy centres at Cardiff and Ruthin, and a research centre at Pwllpeiran. As my right hon. Friend made clear in his statement on 23 July 1991, Official Report, column 454, ADAS will continue to operate after April 1992 from the existing locations, though the precise number and location of offices required to meet its business needs, and the needs of its clients, are being reviewed. The future development of ADAS in Wales will depend on the business it is able to secure for its customers.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much VAT was paid per annum by a family consisting of a married man on half of average male earnings, his wife, and two children in 1978-79; and what is the most recent estimate.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that reliable estimates of amounts of indirect taxes paid by families are available only for those earning between three quarters and one and a half times average male earnings. Outside this range error margins are too large for estimates to be meaningful.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amounts of VAT paid in Wales during 1990-91; and what is the estimated figure for the current financial year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 3 March 1992]: Precise figures for VAT paid in Wales are not available, but it is estimated that the contribution to United Kingdom VAT in 1990-91 was around £1½ billion. The estimate for 1991-92 is about £1·3 billion to £1·4 billion.

Car Tax

Mr. Willian Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons and companies in Northern Ireland are registered for car tax; and, of these, how many make the vehicles on which tax is due.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Three companies in Northern Ireland are registered for car tax, one of which manufactures chargeable vehicles.

PAYE

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance he issues on the treatment in the PAYE system of payments made to employees by way of compensation for breach of contract when they are not allowed to work their notice period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The Inland Revenue publication "Employer's Further Guide to Pay As You Earn" gives guidance in section L on the tax treatment of lump sum payments, including payments in lieu of notice, and advises employers who are uncertain about the position on any particular payment to contact their tax office. I have arranged for a copy of the employer's guide to be placed in the Library of the House.

Debtor Countries

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current total of outstanding debt owed to the United Kingdom by each of the groups of countries defined by the World bank as (i) Trinidad-eligible debtors, (ii) other low income debtors and (iii) middle income debtors; and what is the combined debt owed to the United Kingdom by all three groups of countries.

Mr. Maples: The World bank does not define a group of debtor countries eligible for the Trinidad terms. The World bank classifies those countries where per capita income in 1990 was no more than $610 as low-income countries. Middle-income countries are those where per capita income in 1990 was more than $610 but less than $7,620. The amount owed to the United Kingdom Government by the low-income debtors is about £4 billion. This comprises £3·75 billion owed in claims and oustanding interest on those claims owed to the Export Credits Guarantee Department and £¼ billion owed to the Overseas Development Administration. The amount owed to the United Kingdom Government by the middle-income debtors is also about £4 billion, comprising a little over £3½ billion in claims and outstanding interest on those claims owed to the ECGD, and about £350 million owed to the ODA.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what staffing implications were envisaged in 1989 by the board of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise on the implementation of the review of anti-smuggling controls; and what is the current assessment of the staffing implications.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The review of anti-smuggling controls initiated a move away from static controls to controls applied according to risk. No central estimate of the staffing effects of the review was made in 1989. Instead local senior managers were asked to reassess their staffing levels taking account of the principles of the review, the main theme being a move away from the 24 hour rostered attendance to flexible attendance by better-equipped, better-informed anti-smuggling teams—FASTs. FAST attendance depends very much upon an informed assessment of the risk at each location and on account of each movement.

The current assessment of the staffing implications is that between 370 and 396 posts can be saved in the four year period from 1991 to 1995. However, these savings do not represent a net loss to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and must be viewed in the light of additional posts to be used on anti-smuggling work in connection with the channel tunnel and funds for the provision of extra equipment—£1 million in 1991-92 to 1992-93—extra training—£0·4 million in 1992-93—and extra intelligence gathering—£0·6 million from the seized assets fund in 1992-93. Her Majesty's Customs and Excise is also involved in numerous international initiatives and a further sum of about £125,000 will be provided in 1992-93 as part of the commitment to a European customs information system.

Civil Service Relocation

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what future relocations of Government Departments and agencies are planned (a) by which Departments, (b) by number of jobs involved and (c) to which locations.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The table lists, with likely timings, the plans for relocations or locations away from the south-east which have still to be implemented or completed which Departments and agencies have announced.

Taxation Changes

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average individual cumulative gain (a) in cash prices and (b) in 1991-92 prices to those earning (i) £5,000, (ii) £10,000, (iii) £15,000, (iv) £20,000, (v) £25,000, (vi) £30,000, (vii) £40,000, (viii) £50,000, (ix) £60,000, (x) £70,000 and (xi) £100,000, as a result of changes in (1) income tax and (2) income tax and national insurance, giving changes since 1979 and 1987, in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 2 March 1992]: Latest estimates of the reductions in income tax liability resulting from the changes in tax rates, allowances and thresholds are in the table. The 1978-79 and 1987-88 income tax regimes have been indexed to 1991-92 levels by reference to the statutory formula, and allowing for independent taxation.

I regret that a reliable analysis of taxpayers with incomes over £100,000 is not available.

For the purpose of the calculations in the first two columns of the table, the indexed regime of 1978-79 has been applied directly to the income base of 1991-92. In practice, retention of the 1978-79 regime, indexed as appropriate, for the intervening years would have led to changes in the income base.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Charities (Europe)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration was given to the proposal for a statute for European associations in the preparation of the discussion paper "The Individual and the Community: The Role of the Voluntary Sector".

Mr. John Patten: In preparing this paper, we noted that such a proposal has been made by the European Commission; it is mentioned in part 8.3 on page 40.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official report, column 93, whom his Department intends to consult on the proposal for a European Community regulation on the statute for a European association; and when he intends to undertake the consultation.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: We will seek views from the main bodies representing the interests of the voluntary and charitable sectors and will take account of comments from any interested parties. Consultations will begin once the text of the statute has been formally communicated to us.

Hong Kong

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the governor of Hong Kong has yet submitted his first report on the discharge of his functions under the British Nationality (Hong Kong) Act 1990.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Governor of Hong Kong submitted his report to me on 3 February 1992. A copy has been placed in the Library.

THE ARTS

Libraries

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many county councils have cut library opening times since 1979.

Mr. Renton: This information is not available. However, the number of libraries open in English counties for over 10 hours a week has increased in the last 10 years by 3·6 per cent. and those open for 10 to 44 hours a week have increased by 4·3 per cent. in some cases, opening hours have been changed to reflect changing needs and also to make better use of resources.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General what he expects to be the net expenditure on legal aid and advice in the current financial year and the next two financial years, in cash terms and at 1991-92 prices.

The Attorney-General: Legal aid expenditure for 1991-92, excluding administration, is expected to be around £900 million net. The current provisions for 1992-93 and 1993-94 are £857 million and £885 million respectively, although, in view of the statutory demand-led nature of the fund, additional funds may be requested as necessary. These figures are expressed in cash terms as the legal aid fund is not calculated in constant price figures.

Family Law

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the Government's programme for the reform of family law.

The Attorney-General: During the passage of the Children Bill my right hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General announced the establishment of an interdepartmental working party to oversee a rolling programme of work directed at improving family law and business. Its terms of reference were particularly directed towards the implementation and operation of the Children Bill. That legislation is now in operation, and my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor has decided that the working party's terms of reference should be amended to the following:

The Working Party shall oversee a programme of work directed at improving all aspects of family law and business. In particular, it shall:

- (a) oversee, co-ordinate and monitor progress of the review of the family justice system set out below;
- (b) report to and advise the Lord Chancellor, the Home Secretary, the Secretaries of State for Health and Social Security, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and other interested Ministers on that review; and
- (c) assess and monitor the resources implications.

Review of the family justice system

Responsible Departments shall consider and formulate advice on:

- (a) the reform of divorce law and practice, including any part which might be played by conciliation and mediation services and how they might be organised and funded:
- (b) the reform of the law governing civil remedies for domestic violence and rights to occupy the family home;
- (c) the functions and organisations of the support services in family proceedings;
- (d) the reform of adoption law;
- (e) the extension of the concurrent jurisdiction of the Magistrates' and county courts and the High Court under the Children Act 1989 to other family proceedings;
- (f) the rules governing access to and the reporting of family proceedings;
- (g) the rules governing financial and property division on family breakdown;
- (h) the law relating to the care and upbringing of children and in particular the future role of wardship, and any matters arising from the operation of the Children Act 1989;
- (i) such other reforms of family law as seem appropriate and in particular necessary to the creation of a unified jurisdiction; and;
- (j) such other changes in the rules of evidence and procedure as seem desirable to ensure uniform and appropriate means of dealing with family business in all levels of court.

TRANSPORT

East London River Crossing

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider moving the approach road to the east London river crossing from the A2 further to the east to avoid Oxleas wood.

Mr. Chope: The alignment of the road was thoroughly considered at very lengthy public inquiries in 1985-86 and before the then Secretaries of State took their decision in 1988. There are no grounds for re-considering that decision.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if a cut and cover road tunnel south from Shooters Hill to the A2 in Eltham would require land outside the existing orders.

Mr. Chope: No. But the new design would need to be published and could involve a further public inquiry, particularly if it required deletion of the slip roads at Shooters Hill interchange.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he has given to the traffic effects of dropping the southern slip roads where Shooters Hill crosses the proposed approach road to the east London river crossing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: This issue was thoroughly considered by the then Secretaries of State in 1988. They concluded that the benefits of a tunnel through part of Oxleas wood did not justify the additional cost and loss of traffic benefits from deletion of the slip roads. No new evidence has emerged which would justify any change to that decision.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the additional net cost of a cut and cover tunnel south from Shooters Hill to the A2 in Eltham if the southern slips were dropped.

Mr. Chope: The estimated additional cost of a cut and cover tunnel about 400 m long would be about £20 million at current prices.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many persons and companies in Northern Ireland who are registered for vehicle excise duty are (a) wholesalers and (b) retailers.

Mr. Chope: This information is not available. Responsibility for the payment of vehicle excise duty rests on the keeper of the vehicle. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's register of vehicle keepers does not contain business or occupational details.

A262

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what are his Department's plans for the improvement of the A262 link between the A21 and Ashford; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish the most recent traffic statistics on the A262 between the A21 and Ashford stating when these were measured; and what plans he has for further data collection.

Mr. Chope: Possible improvements along the A262-A28 route between the A21 and Ashford are a matter for Kent county council as the local highway authority responsible for both of these roads.

Last April the consultants preparing a traffic model for the south-east region counted traffic at points on the A262 and A28, and following is the information:

A262 Goudhurst, 23 April 1991—16 hour day (6 am—10 pm)
Eastbound 3,234 vehicles and westbound 3,209 vehicles of which, in each case, some 1·5 per cent. were HGVs.

A28 Tenterden, 26 April 1991—16 hour day (6 am—10 pm)
Eastbound 3,720 vehicles, of which 2·9 per cent. were HGVs.
Westbound 3,663 vehicles, of which 2·6 per cent. were HGVs.

My Department also conducts an on-going national census of traffic covering all major road links on a six year cycle. The next counts for sections of the A262 and A28 are scheduled for 1992 for 1993 respectively.

Market Testing Programme

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list each private sector consultancy firm, which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. McLoughlin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells) on Monday 2 March 1992, at columns 63-64.

A1

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what conclusion he has reached as a result of the interdepartmental study on the future of the A1.

Mr. Chope: In a statement issued on 2 March the Secretary of State announced the Government's conclusion that it would be desirable for the A1 to be fully dualled from Newcastle to Edinburgh. Future planning will take this into account.

Bournemouth Central Station

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the restoration of Bournemouth central station.

Mr. Freeman: I am asking British Rail to review options for the future of Bournemouth station, including options for restoration and the scope for commercial development in partnership with the private sector. As far as funding is concerned, British Rail will have an opportunity to review requirements for the period to 1995-96 in the annual public expenditure round this year.

Railway Investment

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received about the timing of the investment for British Rail's 465 Networkers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he received the investment submission from British Rail for the 465 Networkers; when the Government made their response to British Rail; and when he expects British Rail to place the order.

Mr. Freeman: I have received a number of representations about BR's class 465 Networkers.

The then Secretary of State received on 10 August 1989 a submission seeking approval in principle for investment in 676 class 465 vehicles. On 31 August 1989 approval in principle was given. Firm authority was given for 400 of these vehicles. The first of these vehicles will be introduced into service with the May timetable.

On 23 January 1991 my right hon. and learned Friend received a submission seeking approval for investment in 86 class 466 vehicles—the 466 is a two-car version of the 465—and in 188 further 465s. My right hon. and learned Friend gave approval for the former on 9 May and BR has ordered these vehicles. My right hon. and learned Friend gave approval for the 188 vehicles on 19 June, but BR is not yet in a position to say when the order for these vehicles will be placed.

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has held with the chairman of British Rail about the placing of the order for the 465 Networkers; and what was the outcome.

Mr. Freeman: I meet the chairman of British Rail regularly to discuss current issues. BR is not yet in a position to say when the order for a further 188 Networker vehicles will be placed. Already some 486 Networker orders have been placed and are under construction at a total cost of £364 million.

Motorways

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of motorway there are in England.

Mr. Chope: There were 1,692 miles of motorway in England at 1 April 1991.

Liverpool Airport

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has had about the future of Liverpool airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: In the past few days we have received correspondence drawing attention to the effect of British Midland's recent decision to end its service between Liverpool and Heathrow. That decision was one for the commercial judgment of the private sector airline concerned. The operation and marketing of Liverpool airport, to encourage airlines to provide services appropriate to meet demand, is a matter for its management.

Company Cars

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest information he has as to (a) how many people presently have cars registered in a company's name and (b) how many are women and how many are men; and what is the regional distribution of these figures.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The records kept at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency show that, at 31 December 1990, there were 2,579,000 licensed cars in the PLG tax class registered in a company name. The regional breakdown is as follows:

Number of licensed cars in PLG tax class registered in a company name

Region	Thousand
Northern	81
Yorkshire and Humberside	182
East Midlands	168
East Anglia	110
South East	1,012
South Western	174
West Midland	328
North West	280
Scotland	171

Total Great Britain	2,579

No information is available from this source about the sex of the driver.

Subsidies

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the total of capital investment in (a) London Underground, (b) London Buses, (c) Network SouthEast and (d) British Rail in each year from 1980-81 to 1994-95 (estimated), showing the financing sources for such subsidy in each year.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 28 February 1992]: Investment by London Underground is funded by a combination of Government grant and internal resources such as property receipts and contributions from third parties. Grant is not paid separately in respect of London Transport's subsidiaries. It is not possible to apportion particular sources of finance for British Rail and Network SouthEast between investment and other expenditure. Details of overall funding are given in the "Department of Transport Annual Report 1992".

Table 1 shows London Transport investment broken down by London Underground, London Buses and other together with the amounts of Government grant and other funding. Table 2 shows British Rail and Network SouthEast investment levels.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make arrangements to enable city technology colleges to participate in the schemes for articled and licensed teachers.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Licensed teachers are employed in accordance with regulations made under section 218 of the Education Reform Act 1988. By virtue of section 218(12), these regulations do not apply to CTCs. I propose to bring forward legislation when the parliamentary timetable allows to enable CTCs to employ unqualified teachers under a licence leading to the award of qualified teacher status on the same terms and conditions as in maintained and grant-maintained schools.

There is no statutory impediment to CTCs' participating in the articled teacher scheme, which is a pilot programme for the development of school-based teacher training. My officials will be consulting CTCs on how best they can play their part in this and other forms of school-based training.

Sport

Mr. Denis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his policy for the provision of facilities of excellence for British sports and on the financial arrangements for them.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 3 March 1992]: Our sports policy statement "Sport and Active Recreation" published in December 1991 identified, among the Government's primary objectives for sport, the achievement of higher standards of performance amongst participants and encouragement to those with potential to excel.

The continued development of the sports councils' national centres of sporting excellence will provide an essential element of this strategy. Responsibility for the centres in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland will lie with the home country sports councils, with the United Kingdom Sports Commission controlling the English centres and providing overall co-ordination. To complement these and existing world class local authority sports facilities, the Government's initial investment of £55 million in Manchester's bid to host the millennial Olympics will create major new facilities to encourage sporting excellence.

Human Genome

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom position on patenting of sequences of the human genome.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The United Kingdom Government recognise that work on human genome sequencing has great potential both for the advancement of the understanding of human biology at the most fundamental level and for the delivery of medical advances for the public good. They wish to promote a climate in which the scientific and industrial communities in the United Kingdom and internationally can play a full part in realising that potential, while recognising that there are genuine ethical concerns which must be respected.

It is accepted that research will be most rapidly and effectively progressed in a spirit of full international collaboration. The Government take the view that this would be greatly facilitated by an international agreement that no country should seek patents on genome sequences of unknown utility identified as a result of publicly-funded research. The United Kingdom will pursue an international agreement to that end.

In the absence of such agreement, however, a decision by the United Kingdom Medical Research Council not to seek patents when researchers funded by public bodies in other countries have or may do so could place the United Kingdom at a relative disadvantage. The Medical Research Council has, therefore, decided that it should file patent applications on certain sequences in order to protect the United Kingdom position, while allowing researchers early access to its sequence data. The council has made clear that if and when an international agreement not to patent is reached, it will waive its actual or potential rights in this area.

EMPLOYMENT

Unemployment Costs

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his latest estimate of the overall cost to the Exchequer of unemployment (a) in 1991 and (b) in 1992.

Mr. Jackson: Figures for calendar years are not available. Gross benefit payments to the unemployed in financial year 1990-91 were £5·04 billion. The cost of administering unemployment benefit was calculated at £182 million for the same period. Administration costs for other benefits paid to the unemployed cannot be separately identified and we do not calculate estimates of foregone tax revenues. The latest estimate of benefit payments to the unemployed for the financial year 1991-92 is £7·36 billion. Departmental plans for 1992-93 currently allow for expenditure in the region of £7·9 billion.

Employees (Statutory Protection)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the statutory provisions relating to (a) protection against unfair dismissal, (b) rights for those with family responsibilities and (c) a right to trade union representation.

Mr. Forth: The information is as follows:

(a) Part V of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 provides employees with protection from unfair dismissal, including dismissal on grounds of pregnancy or membership or non-membership of a trade union. They may have additional protection against dismissal under the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 and the Race Relations Act 1976.

(b) The employment protection legislation does not specifically cover family responsibilities as this is an area best left for agreement between companies and their employees to suit individual needs and circumstances. However, women who are pregnant and who satisfy the qualifying conditions are normally protected against unfair dismissal and have the right to return to work after confinement. They also have the right to reasonable paid time off for antenatal care regardless of length of service and hours of work. Employees may have additional rights under the Sex Discrimination Act depending on the circumstances.

(c) There is no statutory right to trade union representation.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the statutory provisions relating to the protection of (a) part-time, (b) temporary, (c) sub-contracted and (d) home workers.

Mr. Forth: All workers—that is, those who work under a contract of employment or service or who have a contract personally to execute any work or labour—are protected against discrimination on grounds of race, sex and being married, regardless of whether they are part-time, temporary, sub-contracted or home workers. They are also covered by the provisions of the Equal Pay Act and the Wages Act 1986.

Similarly, all employees—that is, those who work under a contract of employment or service—are protected against discrimination on grounds of trade union membership or non-membership and are entitled to certain payments under the insolvency provisions and to reasonable paid time off for antenatal care.

Employees who are trade union members are also protected against unjustifiable discipline by their trade union and other abuses of union power. Employees who work for at least 16 hours a week are also eligible for the employment protection rights listed in the table, in the same way as full-time employees, provided they satisfy any required qualifying conditions of service. If they work at least eight but fewer than 16 hours a week they can qualify after five years' service.

Written statement of main terms and conditions
Right to itemised pay statement
Right to guarantee payment
Medical suspension provisions
Time off for carrying out trade union duties and for trade union activities
Time off for public duties
Time off to look for work or make arrangements for training
Right to return to work after confinement
Right to notice
Right to written statement of reasons for dismissal
Right not to be unfairly dismissed
Right to redundancy payment

Departmental Measures, Bournemouth

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those measures taken by his Department since 1987 which have benefited employment, training, small businesses and tourism in Bournemouth.

Mr. Jackson: A wide range of measures which benefit employment, training, small businesses and tourism are provided by this Department in Bournemouth, as elsewhere.

The Department funds a wide range of training and enterprise programmes including youth training, employment training, training credits, high technology national training, career development loans, opening learning, the loan guarantee scheme and loan funds of the Prince's Youth Business Trust.

The establishment of the network of 82 training and enterprise councils in England and Wales, and 22 local enterprise companies in Scotland, to plan and deliver training locally, ensures that the needs of the labour market are considered in identifying and targeting training to meet skill needs. The TECs also encourage and support new and existing small businesses through locally tailored counselling and consultancy schemes and the enterprise allowance scheme.

The Government's commitment to the success of the tourist industry includes direct funding of tourist boards, support of the seaside resorts campaign and grants to other organisations such as English Heritage and the Countryside Commission. The relaxations in the liquor licensing laws, the introduction of brown and white signs for tourist attractions, facilities for the disabled, care of the environment and improvements in training are among other measures which are benefiting the industry.

Travel-to-work Areas

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will separate for statistical purposes the Barnstaple and Ilfracombe travel-to-work areas.

Mr. Jackson: A review of all travel-to-work areas will be undertaken when the relevant 1991 census of population data become available in the second half of 1993.

Health and Safety Commission

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which bodies are entitled to nominate candidates to the Health and Safety Commission.

Mr. Forth: No bodies are entitled to nominate candidates to the Commission. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State, is required by the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 to consult such organisations representing employers, employees, local authorities and such other bodies, including professional bodies, as he considers appropriate before making appointments to the commission.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade, Hungary

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the latest trade figures between the United Kingdom and Hungary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Information on United Kingdom visible trade is regularly published in "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom", which is available in the Library of the House.

In 1991 the United Kingdom had a crude trade surplus with Hungary of £28·5 million.

British Technology Group

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the Government's plans for the sale of the British Technology Group.

Mr. Lilley: Following consideration of the final bids, the Government have decided to enter a period of exclusive negotiation with a consortium led by managment and employees and CIN Venture Managers. The terms of their bid maximise the proceeds consistent with the best prospect of the continuation of BTG's existing technology transfer activities. Parliament will be informed of the outcome of the negotiations in the usual way.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for the Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Leigh: No such consultancy appointments have been made.

London Docklands

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department spent on the promotion of (a) London docklands and (b) London as a whole in each year from 1980-81 to 1991-92 (estimated).

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The DTI's Invest in Britain Bureau and English unit actively promote inward investment to the United Kingdom and to the English regions respectively. In dealing with individual enquiries from potential inward investors, the IBB and the DTI south-east regional office can draw attention to particular sites or premises in London docklands or other London locations, as appropriate. The DTI keeps in close touch with the London Docklands development corporation and the economic development units of individual London boroughs. The Invest in Britain Bureau publication "Britain, the Urban Opportunity", carries information about London docklands and other London urban areas. It is not possible to estimate what proportion of DTI's total expenditure on inward investment could be attributed to promotion of London.

Weapons Exports

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department's export control office has had with the German Zollkriminalinstitut in Cologne about the application of the new law, the Kriegswaffenkontrollgesetz, on sensitive export control and how the new arrangements will affect the operation of the single European market.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The German Kriegswaffenkontrollgesetz, which controls the export of specifically military goods, was last amended in November 1990.

On 23 January this year the Bundestag adopted a new law on export controls which significantly extends the powers of the customs authorities.

The Department's Export Control Organisation has not had formal discussions with the German Zollkriminalinstitut on the application of the new German legislation on sensitive export controls. It is too early to tell how these new controls will affect the operation of the single European market: the EC is currently trying to reduce the number of border controls across the Community.

Additionality

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will indicate whether the Government intend to apply the full additionality criteria for EC funds or whether the money will be top-sliced from existing initiatives.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 2 March 1992]: I refer to the answers given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment to the hon. Member for Hemsworth (Mr. Enright) on 2 March and 28 February respectively, Official Report, columns 18-19 and 642.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Curry: The Department approached several firms on an informal basis, in order to assess their approach to a step change in market testing.

Further to these discussions, the Department has decided to award a contract covering a preliminary exercise to assist with the selection of areas for more detailed examination.

In view of the small size of this contract, it was felt to be not cost effective to carry out a formal competitive tendering exercise.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff; and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Curry: Pay and grading issues are kept under review within the Department and within its executive agencies. KPMG has done some work in relation to ADAS which is due to become an agency on 1 April 1992.

Meat Inspection

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total cost to the industry of inspection charges in Great Britain for (a) beef, (b) pork, (c) lamb and (d) poultry meat.

Mr. Maclean: The Government do not collect information on the levels of charges since these are the responsibility of individual local authorities. However, we estimate the total cost to the industry for 1990-91 at about £31 million. Of this amount approximately 73 per cent. relates to red meat and 27 per cent. to white meat. It is not possible to estimate, from the information available to us, the percentage of the red meat costs which relate to beef, pork and lamb.

Model Farm, St. Petersburg

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to commence construction of the model farm near St. Petersburg.

Mr. Curry: A team of British experts will shortly be visiting St. Petersburg to carry out a detailed pre-investment feasibility study on the model farm. Their advice will inform the timetable for further work.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list current and past rates of payment, at 1991 prices, per hectare for each of the environmentally sensitive areas which have been in existence for more than three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: For the current rates of payment, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him earlier today. The former rates of payments in the stage I areas under the schemes which terminated on 31 December 1991 were as follows:

Broads
Tier 1	125
Tier 2	200
Pennine Dales
Tier 1	100
Somerset Levels and Moors
Tier 1	82
Tier 2	120
South Downs
Tier 1	35
Tier 2—Arable conversion	160
West Penwith
Tier 1	60

The payments in the former and the revised stage I schemes are not strictly comparable since the revisions to the scheme introduced variations in the conditions and some totally new measures.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the payment per hectare in each environmentally sensitive area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The current payments per hectare in each environmentally sensitive area are as follows.

Areas designated in 1987 (stage I) and revised in 1992

Broads
Tier 1	125
Tier 2	220
Tier 3	250
Tier 4—Arable reversion	200
Tier 4—Grassland margins	280

Tier 3—Arable reversion to chalk downland	240
Tier 3—Arable reversion to grassland	200
Tier 3—Conservation headlands	60
Conservation Plan (up to a ceiling of £3,000 over 2 years)	75
West Penwith
Tier 1	65
Conservation Plan (up to a ceiling of £4,000 over 2 years)	100

Areas designated in 1988 (stage II):

Breckland
Section 1	—	100
Section 2	—	125
Section 3	—Uncropped wildlife strips	300
	—Conservation headlands	100
North Peak
Tier 1	—	10
Tier 2	—	20
Shropshire Borders
Tier 1	—	30
Tier 2	—	80
Suffolk River Valleys
Tier 1	—	70
Tier 2	—	180
Tier 3	—Arable reversion	200
Test Valley
Tier 1	—	80

The payments in respect of stage I areas will apply to new agreements made in response to applications under the revised schemes introduced on 15 January 1992.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the new environmentally sensitive areas that he intends to designate and how many existing environmentally sensitive areas he intends to expand; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to the reply, 11 November 1991, c. 420]: I am today issuing for public consultation proposals on the boundaries, aims and operation of six new environmentally sensitive areas. They cover:

The Avon Valley (south of Salisbury)
Exmoor
Lake District
North Kent Marshes
South Wessex Downs (Wiltshire and Dorset)
South West Peak

The areas proposed will add some 417,000 hectares to the 387,000 hectares currently within ESAs in England. They vary in character from coastal marshland to mountain and moorland, and include some of Britain's most beautiful countryside and important wildlife habitats. I am making copies of the consultation documents available in the Library of the House.

ESAs help farmers to conserve and enhance special habitats, landscapes and features of historic interest. They have been widely acclaimed by both farmers and environmentalists. I am therefore delighted to be able to announce proposals for this major extension to the farmland covered by ESAs.

The six new schemes covered by the proposals will open for applications in the summer, after the results of the consultation have been analysed and the detailed arrangements finalised. A further six ESAs will be introduced next year.

Farm Shops

Mr. Hind: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards farm shops attached to farms and smallholdings.

Mr. Curry: In line with our policy of encouraging appropriate forms of farm diversification my Department gives farmers investing in farm shops free advice and grants towards the costs of detailed feasibility studies, capital expenditure and marketing costs.

Coastal Protection, Bournemouth

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much grant aid for coastal protection and beach replenishment has been provided to Bournemouth since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Since 1979, the borough of Bournemouth has received £5·6 million in grant aid for coastal defence works. This sum includes in excess of £1·2 million paid for beach replenishment.

Government funding for flood and coastal defence work in England has risen substantially since 1986-87 and further increases have been agreed as part of the 1991 Public Expenditure Survey. Grant to the National Rivers Authority (flood and sea defence) will rise from £21·6 million in 1990-91 to £48·2 million in 1994-95. For local authority schemes (flood and sea defences and coast protection) the grant available will increase over the same period from £18·2 million to £22·7 million.

Food Labelling

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now take steps further to control the use of nutrition claims in food labelling and advertising, as recommended by the Food Advisory Committee.

Mr. Maclean: Following the continuing absence of proposals from the European Commission, the Government are to consult on further controls on the use of nutrition claims in food labelling and advertising. These controls are based on advice from the Food Advisory Committee.

Nutrition claims can provide a useful source of information for consumers seeking a healthy, balanced, diet but there is a continuing need for them to be fully protected from misleading claims and for all claims to be made on the same basis.

The Government have therefore issued, for consultation, draft regulations to implement the Food Advisory Committee's recommendations as part of its general policy to ensure that consumers are properly informed about the foods they buy and eat.

The draft regulations lay down conditions for making claims such as "low fat", "no added sugar", and "high fibre".

The intention is that these regulations will add the necessary pressure on the Commission to come forward with proposals soon.

I have arranged for a copy of the consultation letter and draft regulations to be placed in the Library of the House.

BSE

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the experimental host range of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: It has been known for some time that, under experimental conditions, BSE can be transmitted to a range of species—mice, cattle, sheep, goats and pigs. In most cases, this has been accomplished only by direct inoculation of large doses of infectious material from cows affected with BSE, although mice have also succumbed after being fed with large quantities of infected cattle brain material.

As part of this programme of work designed to clarify the range of species susceptible to BSE, an experiment conducted by the Medical Research Council and MAFF has resulted in BSE being transmitted to a marmoset, following inoculation of cattle brain material derived from a BSE affected cow into its brain and body cavity.

Although it was already known that marmosets were susceptible, under similar artificial laboratory conditions, to other spongiform encephalopathies, the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, chaired by Dr. David Tyrrell, was immediately asked to advise on the implications of this experiment. The committee concluded that the results of the experiment were not surprising and had no implications for the safeguards already in place for human and animal health. I am arranging for a copy of this advice to be placed in the Library of the House.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Agriculture Council held on 2 and 3 March.

Mr. Gummer: I represented the United Kingdom at this meeting of the Council accompanied by my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry) Parliamentary Secretary in my Department.

Discussion concentrated on the proposals for reform of the CAP. The presidency presented a new compromise document which was, however, seriously questioned by most delegations, among them the United Kingdom. After an initial table round the President concluded that a satisfactory basis for continuing negotiations at this meeting did not exist. Discussions will continue at official level and the President suggested the Council might come back to this dossier at its next meeting on 30-31 March.

In an informal joint meeting with trade ministers consideration was given to draft schedules on agricultural support and protection, drawn up by the Commission for submission in Geneva as a Community contribution to the current GATT negotiations. The Commission said that it would probably submit these schedules later this week, taking account of points made in discussion.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he proposes any changes relating to occupational pensions.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement that my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State made to the House on 27 February 1992 at columns 1131-38.

Departmental Staff

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Miss Widdecombe: The Benefits Agencies (BA), Contributions Agency (CA) and Information Technology Services Agency (ITSA) have been carrying out reviews into the pay and grading of staff. CA and ITSA received limited assistance from, respectively, Price Waterhouse and PA Consulting.

Social Fund

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the total amount of money paid out from the social fund by his Department's local offices in the London borough of Wandsworth; and how many people received payments.

Mr. Scott: Such information as is available is in the Library.

Pensioners' Costs

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the figures on pensioners' expenditure in the regions given in his answer of 13 March 1991, Official Report, columns 536-37 to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan, (Mr. Salmond).

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The information for 1989, the latest year available on this basis, is in the table:

1. Pensioners' average weekly annual expenditure 1989

Notes:

1. The tables are based on data from the Family Expenditure Survey for 1989.
2. Estimates marked with [1] are derived from samples smaller than 100 units. They are, therefore, less reliable than the other data presented and should be treated with caution.
3. The figures are for pensioner households which are defined as those occupied by one pensioner tax unit only. This may be a single pensioner or a couple where the head of the tax unit is over pensionable age.
4. The regions shown are the standard breakdown. Any further disaggregation could not be supported by sample sizes.
5. Winter has been defined as the five months of the year when higher fuel bills might be paid (January to May).
6. Figures will be affected by the receipt of rebates relating to earlier periods.

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support claimants had mortgage interest included in assessment of income support; what was the annual equivalent mortgage interest included in assessment of income support for each year since 1979 for assessments during the first 16 weeks of the claim, and others beyond that period; and what is his estimate of the current number of claimants affected, and the current total amount of mortgage interest included.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The table gives estimates from 1979 to 1990, the latest year for which information is available:

NORTHERN IRELAND

Roads Budget

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he plans to take to ensure that funds are allocated to the roads budget which will enable major reconstruction to take place.

Mr. Needham: Following the recent announcement of the Government expenditure plans, more than £140 million has been allocated in each of the next three years to maintain and improve the road system, with priority being given to maintenance work.

Air Quality, Belfast

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the air quality results for central Belfast, for January, June, October and December each year from 1985 to the present for carbon dioxide, carbon monoxide, sulphur dioxide and low level ozone and any other relevant measurements for which he has results.

Mr. Needham: Carbon dioxide, carbon monoxide and low-level ozone have not been monitored in Belfast to date, although carbon monoxide and ozone are to be included amongst the pollutants measured at a new city centre monitoring station which will come into operation shortly.

Sulphur dioxide is monitored at nine sites throughout Belfast, including the city centre, by the Warren Spring laboratory and Belfast city council. Smoke levels are also measured. The results from April to March are published annually. The figures for the months requested are set out in the table, and include provisional, unpublished data for June, October and December 1991.

Training Schemes

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the latest information he has about the number of people who are participating in (a) the youth training programme, (b) the job training programme, (c) the enterprise allowance scheme and (d) job clubs.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

Youth training programme—14,702 trainees at 31 January 1992.

Job training programme—3,559 trainees at 31 January 1992.

Enterprise allowance scheme—752 participants at 21 February 1992.

ACE

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at the latest available date how many people were employed on action for community employment; how many of them were employed part-time or full-time; and how many were (a) male or (b) female.

Mr. Needham: At 21 February, 5,128 men and 4,522 Women were employed on ACE. Of these, 4,375 men and 1,744 women were in full-time employment and 753 men and 2,778 women were employed part time.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sheltered dwellings have been built in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and if he will break down the figure by constituency.

Mr. Needham: The information for publicly-funded dwellings, all of which were built by registered housing associations, is set out in the table. There are no statistics held centrally on the number of sheltered dwellings built by the private sector.

Teachers

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teachers have been unemployed in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Unemployed claimants who last worked in the teaching profession January 1987-1992

	Number
January 1987	1,693
January 1988	1,573
January 1989	1,521

Belfast Airport

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, column 644, on which dates the Conservative party hired the facilities at Belfast international airport; on which dates the Conservative party was issued with invoices for the hire rental; and if all rents have been paid by the Conservative party.

Mr. Needham: I am informed by the management of Northern Ireland Airports Ltd. that the Conservative party hired the facilities at Belfast international airport on 1 June 1991 and on 1 February 1992. The invoices for the hire rental were issued on 1 June 1991 and 1 February 1992 respectively and both invoices were paid promptly.

Squatters

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were occupying Housing Executive properties without a tenancy agreement in each of the last five years.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and I am advised by its chief executive that the number of Housing Executive properties occupied without a tenancy agreement at 31 March in the years 1988 to 1991 was as follows:

	Number
1988	932
1989	838
1990	736
1991	592

The number of such properties at 31 December 1991 was 589.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many squatters have been evicted by the Housing Executive in each of the last five years.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and I am advised by its chief executive that one squatter was evicted by the Housing Executive during each of the following years: 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90. No squatters were evicted during 1990-91, but two were evicted during 1991-92 (up to 31 December 1991).

Housing Council

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of the members of the Northern Ireland housing council; on how many occasions the council has met during the past three years; and how many of these meetings were attended by each member of the council.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Environmental Impact Assessments

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to encourage the use of independent bodies to undertake environmental impact assessments.

Mr. Needham: None.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many environmental impact assessments have been (a) undertaken and (b) brought to a conclusion in Northern Ireland; how many in each case were carried out by (i) the developer (ii) an independent body and (iii) his Department; and how many of the conclusions reached by (1) the independent body and (2) his Department have been at variance with the assessments carried out by the developer.

Mr. Needham: Twenty environmental impact assessments (EIAs) have been undertaken, of which 13 have been brought to a conclusion.

In all cases the developer provided an environmental statement which was considered by the relevant Department. No independent body was involved. No case where an EIA was carried out has been refused.

Environmental Issues

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide an update for the table on page xv of the Environment Committee's first report of Session 1990-91 entitled, "Environmental Issues in Northern Ireland", providing a list of known legislative commitments for the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: Copies of the legislative programme prepared by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland during February 1992 have been placed in the Library.

Environmental Protection Agency

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to establish an environmental protection agency in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: When details of the proposed agency in England and Wales are available careful consideration will be given as to whether or not any proposals for change in Northern Ireland should also be made.

Job Creation

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table to show for each of the last six years and the current year the number of jobs created and the number of firms setting up in Northern Ireland, indicating how many in each year were the result of investment from outside Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The figures for jobs promoted by the industrial development agencies for the last six financial years are as follows:

	Total jobs promoted	Jobs promoted through inward investment
Industrial Development Board
1985-86	2,910	224
1986-87	4,187	415
1987-88	5,300	867
1988-89	5,653	1,856
1989-90	5,131	1,977
1990-91	4,402	1,294
Local Enterprise Development Unit
1985-86	3,888	n.a.

1988-89	4,581	n.a.
1989-90	5,510	n.a.
1990-91	6,004	n.a.

The number of firms setting up in Northern Ireland as indicated by VAT registrations over the past six calendar years are as follows:

	Number
1985	3,700
1986	3,300
1987	3,400
1988	3,600
1989	3,900
1990	3,600
1991	n.a.

n.a. = Not available.

The place of origin of a firm and the initial number of jobs created cannot be determined from VAT returns.

Dental Practitioners

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are being made to provide regular continued training in resuscitation techniques for general dental practitioners as recommended in the Poswillo report; and what funding is being provided for such training.

Mr. Hanley: The Department of Health and Social Services will be entering into discussions shortly with the Northern Ireland Council for Postgraduate Medical Education on the nature, extent and cost of the training required for dentists and their teams as recommended in the Poswillo report. The resource implications of this training have not yet been quantified and no funds have been allocated.

Vehicle Imports

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years and the current year, how many new motor vehicles have been imported into Northern Ireland from the Irish Republic.

Mr. Needham: The information set out in the table relates to new vehicles registered for the first time on importation to Northern Ireland from the Republic of Ireland.

Planning Proposals

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement outlining what redress is available to an objector whose duly submitted and duly acknowledged objection was not known to, or considered by, the relevant planning officers when making their decision on a planning application.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 March 1992]: In such circumstances the objector could lodge a complaint with the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for Northern Ireland who may carry out an investigation. The objector could also make application to the courts for leave to apply for a judicial review of the Department's decision.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the standards promised by the citizens charter and their relevance to the treatment of planning proposals and objections by the planning service, development offices and road services.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 March 1992]: The citizens charter is about providing a high standard of public service. Accordingly, the Department of the Environment has adopted an objective of normally consulting district councils on planning applications within eight weeks.

In determining applications, the Department considers objections and has regard to the development plan and other material considerations.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement clarifying where responsibility lies for ensuring liaison or co-ordination between the different offices and services of the Department of the Environment when they are each involved in particular development proposals.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 March 1992]: Responsibility for such matters rests with the Permanent Secretary of the Department.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give at 1991-92 prices the gross cost of uprating the retirement pension by average earnings, whole economy, in each year since 1980-81.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The estimated costs are as follows:

Financial year	Gross cost (£ million)
November 1980-81	3
November 1981-82	11
November 1982-83	14
November 1983-84	16

HEALTH

Hospital Costs, Merseyside

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to the Mersey regional health authority for a patient spending a week in hospital.

Mr. Dorrell: Financial returns submitted to the Department by district health authorities in the Mersey region for 1990-91 indicate the average treatment cost for all specialties to be approximately £80 per bed day (i.e. in-patients and day care).

This figure is provisional. It covers all direct clinical and diagnostic costs but excludes expenditure on support and hotel services.

Dental Fillings

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will initiate an education campaign to warn patients of the potential health implications of leaching mercury from amalgam fillings in teeth;

(2) what advice he makes available for dentists and the general public as to the safe level of mercury which can be absorbed from leaching amalgam fillings;

(3) when a product licence was issued for mercury for use in the manufacture of dental amalgams;

(4) what is the quantity of mercury that has been planted in teeth in the United Kingdom for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Dorrell: Current advice from the committee of toxicity is that the use of dental amalgam is free from the risk of systematic toxicity and only a few cases of hypersensitivity occur. Dental mercury is not a medicinal product, and a product licence is not required. Information is not available on the quantity of mercury planted in teeth in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has indicating that mercury from dental amalgam fillings are capable of compromising the immune system, reducing total T-cells by a substantial percentage.

Mr. Dorrell: We have no such evidence.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will give guidance to health authorities on the advertising of senior posts in order to promote equal opportunities; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will recommend health trusts to advertise all vacant senior posts in order to promote equal opportunities.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The NHS is committed to equal opportunities in employment. Individual appointments are a matter for the relevant employing authorities, who are aware that we expect that all NHS posts, including those at senior level, should normally be advertised and openly competitive.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many senior posts in the NHS between April and December 1991 were filled by means other than by open advertisement; how many (a) men and (b) women were appointed to these posts; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

GP Training

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many course organisers for general practitioner trainees were employed in 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991 and for the most recent point in 1992; what was the cost of employing such course organisers; and to which part of the national health service budget these costs are charged.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The table gives the numbers of course organisers employed in 1990 and 1991. Figures for 1988, 1989 and 1992 are not available.

	Course organisers (England)
1 October 1990	326
1 October 1991	330

The twenty-second report of the Review Body on Doctors and Dentists Remuneration estimated that the cost of employing 368 course organisers in England and Wales was £1·56 million per annum. The cost of employing course organisers is at present part of the general medical services budget. In line with the recommendation of the review body, this sum will be transferred to a medical education budget in April this year.

Dentists

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from the General Dental Service Committee concerning the proposed payment system for dentists.

Mr. Dorrell: The proposed increase in target net income of 8·5 per cent. which was recommended by the Doctors and Dentists Review Body (DDRB) was accepted by the Government. To ensure that the level at which fees are pitched in the coming year will deliver this proposed increase in dentists' net income, the Health Departments consulted the General Dental Services Committee (GDSC). Following discussions between the GDSC and the Health Departments agreement was reached to hold a joint inquiry to review the level of payments to dentists in 1991-92, the results of which will be considered by the Health Departments and the GDSC in May when they reconsider the appropriate fee scale for 1992-93; simultaneously, they will begin a more fundamental review of the structure of dentists' remuneration.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in the Durham area have indicated that they will no longer treat people aged 18 to 64 years who are not eligible for free service.

Mr. Dorrell: Last September we asked family health services authorities to conduct on our behalf a sample survey of 20 per cent. of dentists on their dental lists. All the dentists in Durham who took part in the survey indicated they would continue NHS treatment for adults, including those who pay charges.

Whitley Nursing Agreements

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many national health service trusts have agreed to opt out of the Whitley agreements in relation to nursing staff; and what is the total of nursing staff involved overall.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

Departmental Staff

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for health if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Dorrell: A study into the pay and career structure in the Medicines Control Agency is currently being conducted by consultants Price Waterhouse.

Hip Operations

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients awaiting hip operations were on the waiting list of Leighton hospital, Crewe, in 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Waiting time information on individual hospitals is not collected centrally.

Market Testing Programme

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Dorrell: One consultancy firm has been retained by the Department to advise on the market testing programme; it is KPMG Management Consulting which was appointed as a result of competitive tendering.

Neither of the agencies within the Department have retained any consultancy firms to advise on the programme.

Diabetics

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities provide Novapen needles free to diabetics.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

Nurseries

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each local authority (a) the number of local authority-provided day nursery places and (b) the number of places in registered day nurseries and express these as a percentage of all children aged under five in the local authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested on the number of places in local authority and registered day nurseries is published in "Children Day Care Facilities, England". The latest publication is for March 1991 and is provisional, a copy of which is available in the Library. These numbers expressed as a rate per 1,000 children under five in the local authority are set out in the table.

Note: Where an authority has not made a return for 31 March 1991 the most recent years return has been quoted and the year of return shown in brackets.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will detail the number of child minders registered by local authorities and the number of places available with child minders, for each year since 1979 to date;

(2) if he will detail the number of places in local authority day nurseries for each year since 1979 to date;

(3) if he will detail the number of registered day nursery places for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is set out in the table:

[1] Information about child minders for years 1979 to 1981 is not reliable.

Data for 1991 are provisional.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, column 108, when he expects the electoral registration figures for each parliamentary constituency in England and Wales to become available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Statistics relating to the 1992 electoral registers are still being collected by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys from local electoral registration officers. An OPCS monitor containing all constituency electorate figures which have been received and verified will be published before the general election.

Compensation

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) in the last five years how many awards there have been for compensation from national health service hospitals and trusts because of negligence with radiotherapy exposure;

(2) which regional health authorities have set up pooling schemes to share the burden of large compensation awards between health districts in the region;

(3) if he will list regional health authorities in rank order according to (a) the number of negligence awards made against them and (b) the total amount of the negligence awards in the last year for which figures are available;

(4) in 1991, which district health authorities had awards against them totalling more than (a) £1 million and (b) £2 million for negligent death or damage to their patients;

(5) what was the total amount of compensation for negligence awards made against all district health authorities in each of the last five years, including awards made against national health service doctors insured by the medical defence organisations;

(6) how much extra money has been allocated to the regional health authorities to meet the cost of negligence awards after the introduction of crown indemnity on 1 January 1990.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 3 March 1992]: Information is not currently held centrally about the numbers, the type of damage and the level of settlements arising in connection with medical negligence which would enable the Department to single out specialties or to rank regional health authorities in order of payments. The Department in consultation with NHS Management, is reviewing arrangements for the central collection and publication of improved figures from the NHS with regard to the number of claims for medical negligence, contingent liability and settlements.

Between the introduction of NHS indemnity on 1 January 1990 and March 1991 it is estimated that English health authorities spent about £60 million on costs associated with legal claims for negligence against doctors and dentists in NHS hospitals. This includes payments of damages to plaintiffs, legal and other fees, and in-house expenses. Information is not available prior to January 1990 when these liabilities were borne by the medical defence organisations.

The Government provided substantial extra resources to the NHS which should help health authorities to meet the costs of medical negligence. In addition the NHS has access to funds set up by the medical defence organisations as part of the agreements when these liabilities were passed to the NHS. Between January 1990 and March 1991 payments of some £9 million were authorised from these medical defence organisation funds. Most regional health authorities operate pooling or other arrangements to assist district health authorities with the cost of large settlements and are keeping these under review in the light of experience.

Hospital Discharges and Deaths

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital discharges or deaths have occurred in England, in the age groups up to four years and five to 14 years, in the international classification of diseases (ICD) categories, in each of the years 1986 to 1991, (a) acute glomerulonephritis, (b) 581 nephrotic syndrome, (c) 582 chronic glomerulonephritis, (d) 583 nephritis and nepropathy, (e) 584 acute renal failure, (f) 997.5 acute postoperative renal failure, (g) 585 chronic renal failure, (h) 779.80 chronic renal failure in newborn, (i) 586 renal failure (unspecified), (j) 788.9 uraemia, (k) 587 renal sclerosis, (l) 590 infections of kidney, (m) 591 hydronephrosis, (n) 753.2 congenital hydronephrosis, (o) 753.1 congenital cyst of kidney, (p) 593·6 postural proteinuria,
(q) 593.7 vesicoureteric reflux, (r) 595 cystitis, (s) 599.0 urinary tract infection, site not specified and (t) 599.7 haematuria.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 3 March 1992]: The information available centrally is given in the table.

Dental Health Projects

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in tabular form details of all dental health projects receiving funding from his Department; and if he will specify the nature and duration of each project, the name of the principal researchers and the institution at which the work is being carried out.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The Department is currently funding the following dental health related research projects:

Project	Duration	Research director	Institution
1. Dental needs of an ageing population	1 December 1990 to 30 November 1993	Dr. A. W. G. Walls	Newcastle university
2. A clinical study to evaluate a simple radiographic quality assurance programme in general dental practice	1 June 1991 to 30 September 1992	Mrs. V. E. Rushton	Manchester university
3. The changing pattern of use and difficulties associated with the use of non-sterile gloves in general dental practice	17 April 1989 to 30 September 1992	Mr. F. J. T. Burke	Manchester university
4. A qualitative assessment of the laboratory stages of complete denture construction	1 September 1990 to 29 February 1992	Dr. Barsby Dr. Schwarz	London hospital medical college

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EC Developments

17. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had in the foreign affairs troika of the EC about EC developments and initiatives for the remainder of 1992.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Troika discussions cover political co-operation and other intergovernmental business, such as justice/home affairs. We have regular discussions with the Portuguese presidency and with the Dutch on these issues.

Human Rights

18. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures Her Majesty's Government take to promote respect for human rights abroad.

Mrs. Chalker: Her Majesty's Government make frequent representations on human rights both bilaterally and jointly with others. We play an active role in United Nations and European human rights forums, including the current session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights. Further information is given in the foreign policy document, "Human Rights in Foreign Policy", copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Cyprus

19. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what effort he will make to assist the United Nations initiative in Cyprus.

24. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Cyprus.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We continue to give full and active support to the United Nations Secretary-General's efforts to promote a comprehensive, just and lasting solution of the intercommunal dispute.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had, and with whom, as to the opening up of Famagusta as an open town under United Nations auspices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Varosha will be a key element in any settlement of the intercommunal dispute in Cyprus. All parties to the dispute are well aware of our strong view that there should be no change in the status of Varosha nor any settlement of the area in contravention of United Nations Security Council resolution 550 of 11 May 1984.

Russia and Ukraine

20. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met his counterparts in Russia and Ukraine to discuss relations with western countries.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the Russian Foreign Minister, Mr. Kozyrev, in New York on 31 January and in Moscow on 20 January. He last met Mr. Zlenko, the Ukrainian Foreign Minister, on 19 January in Kiev. A wide range of subjects, including relations with western countries, was covered at each of these meetings.

Eastern Europe (Embassies)

21. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many new embassies have been established in east European countries during the past 12 months; and in which countries.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Four—Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Ukraine.

EC Presidency

22. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what particular initiatives and objectives are planned for the forthcoming United Kingdom presidency of the European Community.

31. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are Her Majesty's Government's objectives for the United Kingdom presidency of the European Community.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Our first task is to run an efficient presidency.

Top policy priorities are completion of the single market; preparations for EC enlargement; support for democracy and reform in the former Soviet Union and eastern Europe; and preparing the ground for implementation of the Maastricht treaty.

Burma

23. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Burma.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We deplore the continuing intransigence of the Burmese military authorities. Their human rights record, and their failure to fulfil their avowed commitment to the democratic process, makes them an international pariah. We urge them to respond to the growing criticism of their policies.

Libya

25. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek improved relations with Libya.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There can be no prospect of any improvement in relations with Libya until Libya complies with Security Council resolution 731 which endorsed the demands made by the United States, United Kingdom and France on 27 November.

East Timor

26. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his European counterparts on the question of human rights in East Timor.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are in regular contact with our European Community partners on this question, and with other western countries at the current session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva. The EC issued a further statement on the East Timor question on 13 February.

Conflict Resolution

27. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have made any proposals for increasing the role of the United Nations in conflict resolution.

Mr. Garel-Jones: At the high level meeting of the United Nations Security Council on 31 January, we successfully proposed that the Secretary-General prepare a major report, by the first of July, in the United Nation's work in preventive diplomacy, peacemaking and peacekeeping. We shall contribute ideas to it.

Republic of Ireland

28. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise in international forums the Republic of Ireland's territorial claim over part of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hurd: No. Northern Ireland's status as part of the United Kingdom is fully recognised in national and international law.

International Co-operation

29. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will meet the United States Secretary of State, Mr. Baker, to discuss mechanisms for co-operation between the developed countries in international matters.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is often in touch with Secretary Baker and hopes to meet him again at the CSCE review conference in Helsinki on 24 March.

Middle East

30. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Israeli ambassador to discuss the Israel-Palestine peace proposals.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the ambassador briefly last week. We are in frequent contact with the Israeli Government at the highest level to discuss the peace process.

33. Sir Dennis Walters: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report on progress towards a middle east peace settlement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The peace process continued in a fourth round of bilateral negotiations in Washington last week. A regional settlement remains an important and realistic aim. It is encouraging that all parties remain determined to continue the process. I applaud Secretary Baker's continued commitment to a settlement. We will maintain our full support.

South Africa

32. Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the South African ambassador to discuss prospects for a multiracial constitution.

Mrs. Chalker: When my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met Foreign Minister Botha on 9 February, the South African ambassador was present. They discussed the constitutional negotiations that are taking place in South Africa.

EC Cohesion Fund

34. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the anticipated cost to the United Kingdom of the EC cohesion fund.

Mr. Garel-Jones: No decisions have yet been reached on the size of the EC cohesion fund, and the cost to the United Kingdom cannot be estimated at this stage. Details will be considered in the context of the forthcoming review of Community finances, based on Commission proposals published on 12 February.

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

35. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he can give further details of the Westminster Foundation for Democracy.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The foundation was incorporated on 26 February. Its board of governors was appointed on 4 March, and will be holding its first meeting on 9 March.

Lockerbie Bombing

36. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the British interests section in the Italian embassy is represented at the trial of the suspects for the Lockerbie bombing in Tripoli.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are not aware of any trial that has taken place or which is taking place in Tripoli of those accused of the bombing of flight Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie.

Lebanon

37. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Lebanon and the implementation of United Nations resolution 425.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The situation in south Lebanon appears to have stabilised in the last few days. We condemned the acts of violence which took place in south Lebanon and in northern Israel over the period 14 to 21 February. They served no purpose and led only to needless suffering. We supported the statement by the President of the United Nations Security Council on the 19 February which reaffirmed Security Council resolution 425. We want to see the removal of all foreign troops from Lebanon, the effective deployment of the Lebanese army throughout the country, and the cessation of attacks from Lebanon on Israeli targets.

Vietnamese Migrants

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest situation relating to Vietnamese migrants in Hong Kong.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The current position remains as set out in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs' reply of 18 February to the hon. Member for Streatham (Sir W. Shelton). Since the orderly repatriation programme was agreed last October, the camp population in Hong Kong has fallen from 64,314 on 5 October 1991 to 58,762 now. Only four Vietnamese migrants have arrived in Hong Kong so far this year. In total, more than 20,000 migrants have now returned to Vietnam from first asylum countries in the region; there has not been one substantiated case of persecution.

Visas

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the provisions of international agreements which restrict the kind of information regarding visa applications which may be entered by officials on behalf of one Government in passports issued by another Government.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We are not aware of any such international agreements.

Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the forthcoming CSCE Helsinki follow-up meeting and the summit meeting in July; and what are Her Majesty's Government's proposals for them.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's Government attach importance to, and will play a constructive part in, the CSCE follow-up meeting in Helsinki from March to July 1992. Her Majesty's Government will work to promote stability, human rights, democracy and economic transition in the participating states; we will also advocate increased emphasis on the implementation of CSCE commitments and the further development of CSCE institutions in order to help achieve these objectives.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have retained the services of Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte to advise on market testing. They were chosen through competitive tender.

The chief executive of Wilton Park, the FCO's only executive agency, decided not to retain a private sector consultancy in response to the Government's White Paper "Competing for Quality" because of the small size of the agency.

The Overseas Development Administration has separately retained Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte, but without competition. The Natural Resources Institute, an executive agency of ODA, retained KPMG Peat Marwick without competition.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff; and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Neither the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Overseas Development Administration nor their respective executive agencies have carried out a review of pay and grading over the last 12 months. Decisions on these matters will be taken in the light of Government policy on pay and grading.

Broadcasting

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will consider using BBC World Service Television for the purposes of the dissemination of Government information.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We are not considering such a move, which would not be possible without compromising the editorial independence of the BBC.

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the purpose of the new service to be provided by Worldwide Television News for Her Majesty's Government; and who will have editorial control.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has retained the services of Worldwide Television News to provide short topical news items for transmission by satellite direct to TV stations abroad for their use in news bulletins. The service will be under the FCO's editorial control. It will form part of the FCO's overseas information effort aimed at explaining and winning support for the United Kingdom's policies.

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial support he has given to BBC World Service Television.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have given no financial support to BBC World Service Television, which is now broadcasting on a commercial basis throughout Europe, Asia and the middle east.

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial support he intends to give Worldwide Television News; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We do not intend to give Worldwide Television News any financial support. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has signed a contract with the company for a specific service, the provision of a TV news service for satellite transmission overseas. Worldwide Television News tendered successfully for the project in competition with others.

Kosovo

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will agree to meet Dr. Ibrahim Rugova of the Democratic League of Kosovo.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have kept in regular touch with Dr. Rugova both in Kosovo and on his visits to London. We shall continue to do so.

Albania

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the procedures by which an Albanian citizen resident in Albania can secure a visa for entry to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom has no resident mission in Albania and does not run an entry clearance operation there. Visa applicants resident in Albania or their sponsors may apply by post or in person to any of our visa-issuing posts of which there are several in neighbouring countries.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements exist for the protection of the interests of British citizens travelling in Albania.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There is no British representation in Albania. The resident missions of other European Community members can give help to British visitors in a serious emergency.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which British overseas diplomatic mission takes responsibility for Albania.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None at present. A decision has yet to be announced on the form of our representation in Tirana. Until it is, the Foreign Commonwealth Office will continue to communicate directly with the Albanian Foreign Ministry.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees makes of the return of Tamil refugees from India; and what action Her Majesty's Government propose to take to ensure the safety of the refugees.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The UNHCR is not involved in the repatriation programme agreed between India and Sri Lanka, but the UNHCR is helping people displaced by fighting in northern Sri Lanka and is aware of the situation in the areas where refugees returning from India are being resettled. We are monitoring the situation, and have pledged £20 million for reconstruction and rehabilitation in the north and east when conditions permit.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the effects on child mortality of the ban on medicine and food items by the Government of Sri Lanka in northern Sri Lanka, including in the camp managed by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Contrary to the reports of a ban, our information is that the Sri Lankan Government are arranging the provision of basic food and medical supplies to the north, including to UNHCR relief centres, via the UNHCR and the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will make representations to the Government of Sri Lanka for the removal of the economic blockade on the north-east and the banning of items including fuel and medicine.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have frequently expressed to the Sri Lankan Government our concern that it should ensure the welfare of all its citizens, and we welcome the efforts it has made to supply basic food and medicines to areas held by the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. We could not expect the Sri Lankan Government to lift their ban on other items until the LTTE has renounced its terrorist campaign.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government will now make representations to the Government of Sri Lanka to accept an immediate ceasefire in the civil war and a return to negotiations with mediation by the United Nations Secretary-General.

Mr. Garel-Jones: No, we do not believe it would be right to press the Sri Lankan Government to declare an unconditional ceasefire with the LTTE, which broke off negotiations and initiated the present round of fighting in 1990. We have, however, urged the Sri Lankan Government to continue to pursue a political settlement, and would support any efforts they might make to seek the good offices of an external mediator.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions the Government have had with the Government of Sri Lanka on their reasons for refusing the offers of mediation from the Commonwealth and from other Governments to help to settle the conflict in the island.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We regularly discuss the prospects for a settlement of the conflict in Sri Lanka with the Sri Lankan authorities, both in London and in Colombo. The Sri Lankan Government have indicated that they doubt whether mediation would be successful while the LTTE continues to show no readiness to negotiate on its demands.

Western Sahara

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken to ensure the implementation of UN resolution 690/1991 on western Sahara.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Security Council resolution 690 (1991) approved the establishment of a United Nations mission for the referendum in the western Sahara (MINURSO). We have contributed towards the cost of MINURSO and provided 15 military observers. We continue to give the Secretary-General our full support in seeking an early settlement of the western Sahara dispute.

Commonwealth (Elections)

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice his Department has been asked to give to Commonwealth countries on the holding of elections in the past year.

Mrs. Chalker: We have agreed to provide the Lesotho Government with a chief election officer for their forthcoming elections, and have responded to requests from the Governments of Bangladesh, Zambia and Guyana for Commonwealth monitors and advisers.

DEFENCE

United States Army (Machrihanish)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for the last 12 months the types of aircraft that have operated from the United States army special forces airfield at Machrihanish.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following types of aircraft have used the airfield at RAF Machrihanish since February 1991:

Military Aircraft

- Nimrod
- Tornado GR1
- Tornado GR1a
- Hawk
- C-130

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying complaints the regional community relations officer for the Borders region has had to deal with since taking up his appointment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: In response to the recommendations made in the Defence Committee's report on low flying, HC 120, the Government have, on a trial basis, appointed regional community relations officers for the Lake district and the Borders. These appointments serve areas remote from RAF stations and provide the local community with a focal point for their enquiries on low-flying matters.

The regional community relations officer for the Borders was appointed at the beginning of January 1992. By the end of February he had received 64 inquiries or complaints on matters relating to military low-flying training.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by month for the last 12 months (a) the number of German air force sorties, and (b) the aircraft type, that have operated on low-flying sorties from (i) RAF Leuchars and (ii) RAF Lossiemouth.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The information requested is not readily available and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost and effort.

Aurora

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance his Department has given to the United States armed forces operation Aurora; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The existence of any such operation would be a matter for the United States authorities.

Fallingbostel (Bullying)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will instigate a full inquiry into bullying at Fallingbostel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. Inquiries are instigated only when specific allegations are made.

Type 22 Frigates

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers of 13 February, Official Report, column 632 and 20 February, Official Report, columns 291-92, what impact the provision of extra accommodation for young officers has had on the ships' military, logistic or other capabilities; where the accommodation space has been found; by how much the normal ship's company will be reduced as a result, and in what branches; and if he will set out the arrangements by which ships' companies will maintain the operational effectiveness of these ships in between officer training periods.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The provision of extra accommodation for young officers—YOs—has no impact on the military, logistic and other capabilities of the type 22 Frigates designated for initial sea training—IST. The additional accommodation has been provided in the largest junior rates mess deck. Depending on the number of YOs to be taken on board for their period of IST, each ship's commanding officer will land up to 20 ratings, from a variety of branches, taking into account the ship's current drafting state and programme. On completion of IST, all ratings landed will be re-embarked. In the periods when the type 22 frigates are not required to carry YOs, they will maintain their operational effectiveness through regular operational sea training and exercises.

Nuclear Proliferation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) all measures taken by his Department in the last 12 months to prevent nuclear proliferation, (b) the number of personnel in his Department working to prevent nuclear proliferation and (c) his Department's total expenditure on control of nuclear proliferation in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence, together with other Departments, has worked consistently during the last 12 months to prevent nuclear proliferation. Among measures taken, the Ministry has supported the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in its attemps to increase support for the non-proliferation treaty; participated in discussions in COCOM and other international non-proliferation groupings to prevent transfer of relevant technologies; provided a member of the commission and several inspectors for the United Nations special commission set up to oversee the elimination of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, together with support personnel and equipment for International Atomic Energy Agency inspections of Iraq's nuclear capability; agreed to provide hardware and consultancy advice to Russia to assist in former Soviet nuclear weapons reductions; and provided technical advice to the Department of Trade and Industry on export licensing.

The answers to the other parts of the question could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Overseas Allowance

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes there have been over the past 12 months in the local overseas allowance payable to (a) Royal Marine and (b) Army personnel currently serving in Norway; why these changes have been made with retrospective effect; under what authority these changes have been made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Rates of local overseas allowance for service personnel stationed permanently in Norway were increased on 1 September 1991 following a full review. A reduction in the rate of local overseas allowance payable to some service personnel on temporary deployment to Norway was implemented without the normal period of notice. This reduction has now been rescinded.

Queen Alexandra's Royal Navy Nursing Service

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why he proposes (a) to increase the maximum number of Queen Alexandra's Royal Naval Nursing Service personnel which may be maintained during financial year 1991-92, as shown in House of Commons Paper 225, and (b) to increase the maximum number of such personnel which may be maintained during the financial year 1992-93, as shown in House of Commons paper 227.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence votes A represent the maximum numbers of personnel authorised by Parliament to be maintained in the individual armed services. During 1991 it was discovered that nearly 200 QARNNS medical assistants had been included in the RN figures in error. Added to this, intake to the QARNNS increased unexpectedly and exceeded the forecast figure which had been based on the previous poor intake. A supplementary vote for 1991-92 was therefore presented, increasing the QARNNS figure and reducing the RN figure. The 1992-93 votes included a further increase for the QARNNS in anticipation of the improvement in recruitment being maintained.

SCOTLAND

Nebulisers

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the arrangements concerning charging for NHS nebulisers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Certain hand operated nebulisers may be prescribed by general practitioners, and where the patient is not exempt, a normal prescription charge is levied. Powered nebulisers are provided free for domiciliary patients through the hospital service if they are considered by a hospital consultant as being clinically necessary.

Prestwick Airport

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) representations, (b) requests for assistance and (c) general inquiries he has received regarding the future ownership of Prestwick airport; what have been his responses; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 January 1992]: My right hon. Friend has received a small number of representations from local interested parties regarding the future ownership of Prestwick airport. Details of any requests for assistance are commercially confidential. The future ownership of Prestwick airport is a matter for its owners, BAA plc.

Part-time Workers

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the proportion of male employees in Scotland who work part-time.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 27 January 1992]: In September 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, 7·4 per cent. of all male employees in employment in Scotland worked part-time. This information comes from the 1989 Employment Department census of employment.

Development Areas

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the work force in each of the regions of Scotland live within the boundaries of development areas.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 6 February 1992]: Information in the form requested is not available. However, information is available on the proportion of employees in employment in each of the regions of Scotland who are employed within the boundaries of development areas. This information, taken from the 1989 Employment Department census of employment, is given in the following table.

Proportion of employees in employment employed within the boundaries of development areas by region in September 1989

Note: There are no development areas in Borders, Central, Fife, Grampian, Highlands and Islands.

Scottish Refugee Council

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will respond positively to the application by the Scottish Refugee Council for increased funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 31 January 1992]: The Scottish Refugee Council's application has been carefully considered along with other competing applications. While we are unable to provide the full increase sought, the Scottish Office has today written to the Scottish Refugee Council offering to continue providing the salary costs of a part-time case worker up to a limit of £5,957 in 1992-93, an increase of 4·5 per cent. on the present year's grant.

Management Agreements

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of management agreements under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 which have been entered into in Scotland in (a) national nature reserves and (b) sites of special scientific interest for each year since 1981, indicating in each case whether the proposed damage was done to (i) agriculture or (ii) forestry; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 31 January 1992]: The information is as follows:

	National nature reserves		Sites of special scientific interest
	Number of management agreements	Threat of damage	Number of management agreements	Threat of damage
Year		Forestry		Agriculture	Forestry	Both
1982	1	1	2	1	0	0

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the 10 sites of special scientific interest and (b) the 10 national nature reserves in Scotland which have the most expensive management agreements giving the name of the site, region in which it is located and the amount which has been or is due to be paid out and if the landowners are required to enhance the site as part of the conditions of payment; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 31 January 1992]: Details of individual management agreements are confidential to the parties.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of management agreements that have been entered into under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in Scotland where payments have been given in the following ranges (a) up to £9,999, (b) £10,000 to £19,999, (c) £20,000 to £29,999, (d) £30,000 to £39,999, (e) £40,000 to £49,999, (f) £50,000 to £59,999 and (g) over £60,000.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 31 January 1992]: Agreements may involve either annual or capital payments. An analysis of the information by both categories is set out in the following table.

Range of costs	Type of cost
	Annual	Capital
No costs	73	79
Up to £9,999	176	130

Mental Handicap

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements for transfer of dowry funds with resettled mental handicap patients to local authorities have been made in each health board; under what terms these payments are made; and if he will list by health board the sums transferred each year on this basis.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 7 February 1992]: Arrangements for transferring funds between health boards and local authorities were first set out in 1985 in circular NHS(GEN)18. This enabled boards to provide support finance to social work departments to develop community-based services.

On 13 January this year a consultation paper was issued on cash and other transfers between health boards and local authorities. A circular will be issued after the consultation period ends on 28 February.

The information sought on the amount transferred by each health board in past years is not held centrally.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number, for each health board, of in-patient residents in health service facilities for patients with a mental handicap for each year since 1981; and what proportion of the reduction in numbers is due to discharge and what proportion due to death, for each health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 7 February 1992]: The information is contained in the following tables.

Table 1: Residents in mental handicap hospitals as at 31 December each year

In Scotland the 1990 residents were made up of 76 per cent. from 1981 and 24 per cent. from admission since 1981.

Patients with mental handicaps resident in establishments dealing primarily with other client groups are excluded from these figures. The numbers are likely to be small.

Diabeties (Syringes)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the total number of plastic syringes supplied on free prescription to sufferers from diabetes in the last available year for which statistics are available; and what was the total cost of these supplies;

(2) what is the estimated total cost of the needles required for insulin pen injectors if these were supplied free on prescription to all sufferers from diabetes who are currently supplied with plastic syringes.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The total estimated number of plastic syringes and needles supplied to diabetics in Scotland in 1990 is 4·5 million at a total cost of £414,000. The needle is an integral part of the plastic syringe.

The Department of Health is presently negotiating with manufacturers the specification and cost of pen injecting systems and associated needles. It is therefore not possible to estimate the cost of needles for pen injectors.

Nursery Education

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply of 3 February to the hon. Member for Durham, North-West (Ms. Armstrong), Official Report, column 77, if he will inquire into the reasons for the Western Isles having no children between the ages of three and four years in nursery schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 March 1992]: It is for education authorities themselves to decide the level and mix of provision they make for pre-school children in their area. Although the Western Isles has no children aged three and four attending nursery schools, in 1991, over 50 per cent. of children under four received day care of some form; the second best outcome in Scotland.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of whether the designation of sites of special scientific interest is the best option for the protection of extensive envirionmentally sensitive areas in Caithness and Sutherland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 March 1992]: The system for notifying sites of special scientific interest is vital for the continuing protection of environmentally sensitive areas in Scotland. In response to concerns that other forms of protection might be more appropriate for large areas of land a provision was included in the Natural Heritage (Scotland) Act 1991 for the designation of Natural Heritage areas. Such designations will allow the adoption of land use policies and practices which recognise the interdependence of the economic, social and environmental well-being of communities.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland about alternative mechanisms for the protection of large environmentally sensitive areas in Caithness and Sutherland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 March 1992]: None. The Natural Heritage (Scotland) Act 1991 provides that my right hon. Friend may designate Natural Heritage areas on recommendations from Scottish Natural Heritage, the successor body to the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland, which assumes office on 1 April 1992.

In addition the proposed land use and development strategy for Caithness and Sutherland to which I referred in my reply to the hon. Member on 29 January 1992 at column 624 should, once formulated and agreed, strengthen the protection given to important areas of nature conservation interest by reducing the potential for conflict in these areas.

CIVIL SERVICE

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what plans he has to take forward equal opportunities for women in the civil service.

Mr. Renton: I have, today, launched a new programme for action to achieve equality of opportunity for women in the civil service. This builds on the very considerable progress achieved under the programme of action launched in 1984. Departments and agencies will use the new programme to develop action plans which will ensure that the civil service continues to be a leading equal opportunities employer.

THE ARTS

Public Sector Grants

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister for the Arts how much is received in public sector grants by (a) Dartington arts unit and (b) Exeter and Devon arts centre, in each of the past three years; what information he has on the proportion which public sector grants formed of the annual turnover in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 19 February 1992]: The information available is as follows:

Dartington Arts Society

	1989 £	1990 £	1991 £
South West Arts	10,660	10,875	11,750

Note: Local authority figures not available.

Exeter and Devon Arts Centre

	1989 £	1990 £	1991 £
Grants associated with educational and recreational activities
Exeter City Council	39,650	28,771	30,459
Devon County Council	—	10,072	11,464
South West Arts	11,300	16,385	14,490
	50,950	55,288	56,413
Turnover (income from activities and trading)	110,814	194,726	209,452
Proportion which public sector income represents of turnover (Per cent.)	46	28	27
In addition the Exeter and Devon Arts Centre receives the following grants towards operational expenditure
Devon County Council	164,584	179,238	194,100
Exeter City Council	151,900	134,107	145,000
Total	316,484	313,345	339,100

All figures are expressed in real terms.

TRANSPORT

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentages of stock.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department's portfolio is constantly changing as a consequence of properties being acquired or demolished for road schemes, or being disposed of as surplus to requirements.

(a) Currently, the Department owns 2,577 properties, of which 460—17·9 per cent. of total stock—are empty, including those recently acquired, uninhabitable, being sold or awaiting demolition. The remaining 2,117 properties—82·1 per cent. of total stock—are equally divided between direct lettings by the Department and indirect letting on its behalf by housing associations and local authorities.

(b) Currently, 124 properties—4·8 per cent. of total stock—are for sale on the open market.

(c) A figure cannot be provided for the number of properties intended for sale on the open market as it is not known which will be surplus to the requirements of road schemes until an advanced stage when the line of the road is fixed.

(d) Housing associations have an opportunity to buy almost all of the department's surplus housing. A small number of properties are bought back by previous owners under the Crichel Down rules, otherwise property is offered next to the agent housing association. Associations are also free to bid on the open market for other surplus properties not under their management.

Buses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had with bus drivers concerning safety of drivers, passengers and pedestrians.

Mr. Freeman: The safety of bus drivers and passengers is considered regularly by the standing panel on assaults on bus staff—STAB—which includes representatives of the bus industry, the unions and Government Departments. STAB's remit includes all forms of crime on buses including vandalism and attacks on passengers.

At a local level the traffic commissioner has powers to attach conditions to an operator's licence if a local service has been operated in a manner dangerous to the public. The traffic commissioner may also suspend or revoke a PSV driver's licence if the driver has been convicted of dangerous driving.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new measures he will introduce to improve bus road safety; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Buses are the safest form of road passenger transport in this country. Regulations covering the safety of buses are kept under continuous review and can be amended as the need becomes apparent.

Ferry Services

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue guidance notes on the operational responsibilities of British ferry operators for ferry services marketed and advertised by them, but operated by a foreign company.

Mr. McLoughlin: The responsibility for safe operation of a ship is prescribed in section 31 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1988. No guidance notes are planned.

Maritime Conventions

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made on the ratification of maritime conventions Nos. (a) 163, (b) 164, (c) 165, (d) 166, (e) 173 and (f) 176.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government stated their views on ILO conventions Nos. 163, 164, 165 and 166 in Command 658 dated April 1989 and indicated that they do not propose to ratify conventions 163, 165 and 166. Now that the syllabi for the necessary training courses in medical skills promulgated by the International Maritime Organisation, the International Labour Organisation and the World Health Organisation have been reduced to performance criteria on which colleges and other bodies can base their instruction, the Department will shortly be going to a second round of consultation on how the United Kingdom should meet its obligations under article 9.2 of convention No. 164—health protection and medical care (seafarers)—and so proceed to ratification.

The latest convention to be adopted by the ILO and therefore available for ratification is No. 172.

River Thames (Cargo Handling)

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy on maintaining competition in containerised cargo handling facilities on the River Thames, east of Tower bridge.

Mr. McLoughlin: Any potential concerns about competition in the provision of such facilities would be a matter for consideration by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Princess Maria Esmeralda

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the reply to the request for an investigation into the sailing of the Princess Maria Esmeralda on Sunday 21 July 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: I will summarise that reply. This Belgian flag ship was sailing from a Belgian port under the sole jurisdiction of the Belgian authorities. The Department has now notified them of the reported incident. However, departmental marine surveyors have inspected the vessel and advise that the upper stern door can be left open without compromising the ship's safety. They also advise that the lower door is recessed into the stern and can appear from a distance to be open while actually closed and weathertight.

Port of Tilbury

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he has given to the credit rating of Maritime Transport Services Ltd. which is bidding for the port of Tilbury; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: It is for the Port of London authority to consider all relevant factors in assessing the bids for the port of Tilbury and in making its recommendation to my right hon. and learned Friend concerning the sale of the port.

Bus Industry

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many employees there were in the bus industry in 1985-86 and 1990-91.

Mr. McLoughlin: The numbers of staff employed in the bus industry in Great Britain in 1985-86 and 1990-91 were:

1985-86	174,200—annual average.
1990-91	155,500—end of year.

The figures include all platform, maintenance and administrative staff employed by the bus industry. They also include working proprietors and the full-time equivalent of part-time public service vehicle staff.

PRIME MINISTER

Housing Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Prime Minister if he will introduce changes to housing benefit and mortgage interest benefit to permit people paying part-rent part-mortgage to qualify for housing benefit and income support assistance.

The Prime Minister: The current regulations already make provision for such arrangements.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 5 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

ENVIRONMENT

Thorne and Hatfield Moors

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has received from English Nature concerning the conservation of the remaining vegetated areas of Thorne and Hatfield moors, including the effect of the continued extraction of peat from the other areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Dagenham (Mr. Gould) on 27 February 1992, Official Report, column 561. English Nature will be producing management plans for the vegetated areas of these sites. High water tables will be maintained by a programme of controlled blocking of drains. Detailed monitoring of the effects will take place against recent baseline studies. English Nature will also be producing after-use plans for the areas where peat extraction is to continue.

Sleeping Rough

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the most up-to-date figures recorded by his Department for the numbers of people sleeping rough in the Greater London area.

Mr. Yeo: The number of persons found sleeping rough at pre-identified sites in Greater London on census night—21 to 22 April 1991—was published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in the 1991 census preliminary report for England and Wales "Supplementary Monitor on People sleeping rough". A copy is in the Library.

Hedgehogs and Toads

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many hedgehog ladders and toad tunnels have been constructed or funded by his Department since 1979.

Mr. Baldry: No information is available on the number of hedgehog ladders constructed since 1979. Five toad tunnel systems, incorporating 11 tunnels, and financed wholly or partly by central or local government, have been constructed since 1979.

City Challenge

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will favourably consider the application for funding for the Blackie Great Georges project, Liverpool 1, under the city challenge scheme later in the current month.

Mr. Key: Under the city challenge management arrangements, it will be for Liverpool's city challenge executive committee in the first instance to decide whether to include particular projects within the five-year programme. Any project with a grant requirement of £500,000 or more will additionally require detailed appraisal by my Department, and will be considered on its merits on receipt.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount has been given by his Department for city challenge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key [holding answer 3 March 1992]: A sum of £82·5 million per year for up to five years from 1992-93 has been allocated from the Department's inner-city and housing programmes to fund the 11 first-round "pacemaker" city challenge action plans. Up to £150 million per year is being made available for city challenge for up to five years from 1993-94 for those successful in the second round.

PCBs

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of his development action plan for the phasing out of PCBs by 1999;

(2) what action he has taken to implement the decision of the third North sea conference of March 1990 to phase out and destroy all PCBs by 1999, in 1990-91 and 1991-92; and what is planned for each year to 1999;

(3) how many full and part-time posts are contributing to the phasing out of PCBs by 1999; and if he will give the job specification and location of each post;

(4) if he will give an estimate of the number of tonnes of PCBs in the United Kingdom still awaiting disposal and details of targets set for the disposal of PCBs in the United Kingdom;

(5) if he will give details of all existing incinerators, and those in respect of which planning applications (a) have been approved and (b) are outstanding, licensed to accept PCBs;

(6) what estimate he has made in respect of the presence of PCBs in United Kingdom waters.

Mr. Baldry: It is intended to produce a plan in accordance with the decision of the third North sea conference. A copy will be placed in the Library when available. Work is currently directed to refining the assessment of the types and quantities of PCBs known to exist and the available incineration capacity. New treatment techniques and alternative disposal options to incineration for particular PCB arisings are being appraised.

A revision of waste management paper No. 6 containing technical guidance on the treatment and disposals of PCB wastes is in preparation for publication in March 1993.

Planning for phase-out involves a co-operative effort between my Department and other Government Departments. I cannot therefore be precise about numbers and locations of individual posts.

The remaining PCBs in the United Kingdom are mainly associated with electrical equipment, much of which will be disposed of with its PCB content. Accurate figures are not available, but it is estimated that about 20,000 tonnes of contaminated plant requires disposal, of which about half are PCBs.

There are two merchant incinerators available for the disposal of special wastes including solid and liquid PCBs; the Rechem plant at Pontypool and a plant at Ellesmere Port operated by Cleanaway. Plant capacity for PCB destruction cannot be stated in absolute terms since it is dependent upon the chlorine content and the physical form of the waste. It is not known if any proposed plant at the planning application stage is to be used for PCBs.

Levels of PCBs in United Kingdom coastal waters are normally so low as to be beyond the limits of detection. However, since PCBs are known to accumulate in living tissue, government monitoring programmes concentrate on levels of PCBs in fish. Results of these programmes are regularly published by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in the acquatic environment monitoring reports. Control measures taken by the Government have been effective in reducing peak levels of PCBs to considerably below those that were found in the 1970s. The levels are below those that would cause harm to human consumers and there is no reason to believe that they threaten fish health.

Leeds Development Corporation

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what official statistics are kept on employment in the area covered by the Leeds development corporation.

Mr. Key: This is primarily a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment. I understand that employment statistics for development corporation areas are not compiled. Official statistics for employees in employment are made available for local authority wards and aggregations of them. The area covered by Leeds development corporation does not coincide with ward boundaries.

British Waterways Board

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about financing for the British Waterways Board.

Mr. Baldry: I am pleased to announce that we have increased the external finance limit for the British Waterways Board to £51·7 million for 1991-92. This is enabling the board to spend an additional sum of up to £3 million on canal maintenance. The increase is being financed through expenditure savings identified elsewhere within the Department, and will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

EC Eco-labelling Scheme

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made towards implementing the EC eco-labelling scheme.

Mr. Baldry: The United Kingdom is playing a leading role in preparing for the launch of the European scheme. We are developing criteria on a wider range of products than any other country and we are making a significant contribution to putting in place the necessary European administrative arrangements for the operation of the scheme.

Nationally, we are required by the eco-labelling regulation to designate a competent body for the scheme. We have decided that a dedicated non-departmental public body would be the most suitable organisation to take on this role in the United Kingdom. In reaching this decision, we took account of the National Advisory Group on Eco-Labelling's advice that the body should be official, independent and at arm's length from ministerial control. This should demonstrate the authority and impartiality of the body and promote the credibility of the scheme. We will introduce legislation to establish this body when parliamentary time permits. Until then, it will operate in an advisory capacity.

I am pleased to announce that Dr. Elizabeth Nelson has agreed to chair the United Kingdom eco-labelling body. Dr Nelson is presently chairman of Addison Group Consultancy plc and the Taylor Nelson Group Ltd., but has indicated that she intends to step down later in the year. She has extensive business experience, and particular expertise in the fields of marketing and market research, which she will be able to contribute to the development of the eco-labelling scheme in the United Kingdom and across the European Community. We will be announcing the names of the other members of the board of the eco-labelling body in due course.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Power Stations

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to complete the sale of Northern Ireland Electricity power stations.

Mr. Brooke: I have now reached contractual agreement for the sale of Ballylumford power station to British Gas, the sale of Kilroot and Belfast West power stations to a consortium of Applied Energy Services and Tractebel and the sale of Coolkeeragh power station to a management-employee team—MEBO.

The contracts provide for total sale proceeds of £353 million subject to the normal audit of completion accounts; £132·4 million for Ballylumford, £214 million for Belfast West and Kilroot and £6·5 million for Coolkeeragh. In the later case, a five-year profit-sharing deal offers the possibility of up to a further £2 million. The terms of the sales and the relevant documents have been notified to the European Commission.

The companies which are being sold will be created out of the single entity of Northern Ireland Electricity at 1 April 1992 and have no separate trading records. Because of this, provisions are being included to allow for further adjustments to the sale price, if necessary, for a 15-month period until after the first year's trading has been completed and audited. These provisions mostly relate to assurances given by Government as to station liabilities and information made available and are subject to rigorous de minimus levels and caps of £26 million for British Gas, £53·5 million for AES/Tractebel and £0·5 million for the management buy-out.

Completion of each of the sales is subject to a number of conditions mainly in relation to satisfying terms for financing. The sales to MEBO and AES/Tractebel are project financed and will not be completed until the money is in place. While I am hopeful that this can be achieved by 31 March, I cannot guarantee that this will be so. An important provision in the contracts allows a period before completion during which the new owners can familiarise themselves with the operation of the stations.

The sale of Ballylumford brings with it plans for the construction by British Gas of a gas pipeline to Northern Ireland and the conversion of that station to gas firing and I am pleased to announce that the European Commission has approved a grant of up to 90 million ecu towards these costs. Terms have been agreed, but British Gas has still to carry out a detailed undersea survey and complete negotiations with Bord Gáis Éireann in respect of the shared onshore pipeline in Scotland. The agreement allows for a reassessment of the gas pipeline proposals following completion of these. The pipeline has been sized so that it it can accommodate additional gas requirements for either future power generation or the development of a downstream market in Northern Ireland and I welcome the opportunities which these will present.

I am convinced that the sale of power stations on the terms which I have agreed represents the best outcome for not only the taxpayer but energy users in Northern Ireland. A privatised industry represents the best means of securing maximum efficiency and will be more responsive to the needs of consumers. The provision of gas will give us not only access to a clean and cost effective fuel for electricity generation but the promise of an additional alternative fuel for industrial, commercial and domestic consumers in Northern Ireland in the years ahead.

National Union of Students (Grant)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been given in grants to the National Union of Students in higher education colleges in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: No Government grants are paid to the National Union of Students. The students' unions of the Queen's University of Belfast, the university of Ulster and St. Mary's college of education are affiliated to the National Union of Students. Payment to the National Union of Students by the students' unions of the two universities were as follows:

	Queen's University £	University of Ulster £
1986-87	24,600	19,494
1987-88	27,554	21,178
1988-89	28,576	15,740
1989-90	36,450	27,872
1990-91	42,265	36,723

Information on the amounts paid by the students' union of St. Mary's college is not readily available. Stranmillis college students' union is not affiliated.

University Research

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to secure and develop research activity within Northern Ireland universities for the future.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government recognise the value of the research done at Northern Ireland's two universities, particularly its importance to the strengthening of the local economy and are already providing public funding in excess of £30 million a year to support such research.

The Department of Education for Northern Ireland is currently considering, in consultation with the universities, what arrangements for the funding of basic research should succeed the present system, under which the department receives advice from the Universities Funding Council, when the latter ceases to exist in 1993.

It is hoped that the new arrangements will continue to provide the universities with positive incentives not only to carry out research of international quality but to meet the needs of industry and society in Northern Ireland.

Victims of Violence

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce a new scheme to provide compensation to innocent victims of violence where the level of compensation falls outside existing provision.

Dr. Mawhinney: No. The existing criminal injuries compensation scheme in Northern Ireland provides fair and reasonable compensation to the innocent victims of violence.

Dentistry

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement outlining what plans there are to implement the recommendations of the Poswillo report on the use of general anaesthesia, sedation and resuscitation in dentistry in Northern Ireland; and what funds will be allocated to support their implementation.

Mr. Hanley: The level of general anaesthesia in Northern Ireland is four times that in England and as a result the cost of implementing the Poswillo report in the Province will be relatively high. It has not been possible to earmark resources specifically for this purpose in 1992-93.

The health and social services boards, however, will be asked to implement the recommendations of the report, as resources permit, giving priority to the hospital and community dental services. General dental practitioners will be invited to refer patients to the community dental service where appropriate, until resources become available for the requisite investment in the general dental service.

Education Maintenance Allowances

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many education maintenance allowances were awarded by each education and library board in Northern Ireland for each academic year since 1986-87; and what was the total value of such awards by board in each year.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

Number of awards

	Academic year
Education and library board	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91

Financial information is not available on an academic year basis.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of all changes to the value of education maintenance allowances and/or in the means test scales for education maintenance allowances since 1980 specifying the respective values and scales in each instance.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

Academic year	Maximum allowance (£)	Means-test limits (£) Lower	Upper Age 16
1980-81	380	1,670	2,980
1981-82	425	1,910	3,410

1991-92	551	3,080	5,720

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement detailing the progress of the review of the education maintenance allowance scheme by the Department of Education indicating the date of its initiation, consultation with education and library boards, unions or other interested bodies, the terms of the review and consultations and options identified and appraised.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department of Education for Northern Ireland initiated the review in 1988. It was completed in 1990. Government departments and education and library boards were consulted in the course of the review, which also took into account representations received from other organisations and public representatives.

The review was charged with examining the requirements for the scheme and the options available for upgrading. In consultation, the options identified and appraised, ranged from discontinuation of the scheme to consideration of various levels of increases in allowances, in income bands, or both, and the redefinition of eligibility.

Changes resulting from the review were implemented from 1 September 1990. The changes made the scheme more straightforward—with one scale of allowances and shorter and fewer income bands. At the same time, all means-test limits were raised by 12 per cent. with an additional increase of 10 per cent. in 1991.

Trading Standards Branch

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the performance of the trading standards branch in Northern Ireland outlining the plans he has for expanding the service, enhancing its profile or increasing its responsibility or powers.

Mr. Needham: The trading standards branch of the Department of Economic Development performs a valuable service in promoting and maintaining standards of fair trading in Northern Ireland to the benefit of both consumers and reputable traders. Twenty-three trading standards officers and six enforcement officers are employed in the branch and a further three trading standards officers are undergoing training.

Increased enforcement responsibilities will result from the implementation of European Community directives and national initiatives over the next three years. The need for additional resources will be kept under review.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the budget for the trading standards branch in the current year and each of the past three years specifying its distribution among offices and their respective staffing levels.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is set out in the table:

Inventors

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the support provided for inventors in Northern Ireland who wish to develop their invention with a view to production in Northern Ireland, and on whether he has any plans to review the effectiveness of such support.

Mr. Needham: The Local Enterprise Development Unit acts as the initial source of advice and assistance to inventors seeking to develop their inventions either on their own or with suitable commercial partners.

Inventors whose projects have technology as a key element will in future, be referred to the new industrial research and technology unit—IRTU—which was formally launched on 3 March 1992. The new organisation will concentrate the Government's research and development functions into a single unit and will provide single door access for individuals and companies to financial support and professional expertise for a wide range of innovatory projects. Advice is also available from the Industrial Science Centre on patents and support is given for initial patent searches.

ENERGY

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Wakeham: My Department does not own any residential properties.

Offshore Licensing

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals he has for a further round of offshore licensing for the United Kingdom continental shelf.

Mr. Moynihan: Following the very successful 12th and frontier rounds announced two years ago, I am today announcing the 14th round of offshore licensing. Acreage in the round will be announced in three stages.

Acreage announced today comprises all remaining unlicensed acreage in the main mature areas of the northern, central and southern North sea which can be released. Any finds in these areas will back up existing production plans.

A second announcement, at the end of July, will cover acreage which is more speculative, either because the economic uncertainties are greater or because the areas concerned may pose greater operating problems. This category principally contains acreage on the margins of the main mature areas and acreage outside the main areas but in and around other areas which are currently licensed.

The third announcement, at the end of November, will cover true frontier acreage, where it will take long periods to prove up any finds and establish the economics for an infrastructure.

Taken together the three categories of acreage provide the basis of a continuing strategy for replacing United Kingdom continental shelf reserves, with the aim of ensuring that the United Kingdom continental shelf remains a major oil province for at least another 25 years.

As in previous rounds, it will be necessary in the case of many blocks to indicate any special features which ought to be taken into account by the operator in respect of activity under the licence. These features will reflect the concerns of defence, fishing, environmental, navigational and other interests, and will be made available by my Department as they are agreed with other Government Departments. Applicants will for the first time be required to submit a statement detailing their policy towards the environment.

I will tomorrow publish in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes a formal announcement giving the detailed financial terms for the first category of acreage offered, the format of applications, the information required and the basis on which awards will be made. Applications for the first and second categories of acreage will be returnable by midday 16 December 1992. Applications for the third category of acreage will be returnable on 9 March 1993. I shall place in the Libraries of both Houses copies of this formal announcement.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Car Tax

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many unregistered persons making or importing chargeable vehicles into Northern Ireland from the Irish Republic have paid car tax in each of the last three financial years and the current year; and what, in each year, has been (a) the number of chargeable vehicles imported in each year and (b) what sums of tax were collected in each year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information on importations by unregistered persons is not readily available. It could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many chargeable vehicles imported into Northern Ireland, in each of the last three years and the current financial year, from (a) the Irish Republic and (b) elsewhere, car tax was paid; and what in each year and case were the sums paid in total.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The number of chargeable vehicles imported into Northern Ireland in the last three years is as follows:

	From Irish Republic	From elsewhere
1988-89	3,215	712
1989-90	2,437	970
1990-91	2,002	1,195
1991-92[1]	3,230	630

[1] To end February.

The information on revenue could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the average annual rate of growth of gross domestic product (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Scotland (i) excluding North sea oil and gas and (ii) including North sea oil and gas, over the periods 1964 to 1970, 1970 to 1980, 1974 to 1979, 1979 to 1991 or the most recent available figures, 1980 to 1990 and 1987 to 1991.

Mr. Maples: The latest information for the United Kingdom is as follows:

Annual average growth rates in Gross Domestic Product (GDP)

	Total GDP	GDP excluding oil and gas extraction
1964-70	2·7	2·7
1970-80	1·8	1·4
1974-79	2·0	1·3
1979-89	2·2	2·2
1979-91	1·7	1·7
1980-90	2·5	2·5
1987-91	1·2	1·6

Available estimates for Scotland are not fully comparable with those for the United Kingdom. Such data as are available are published in table 3·5 of the "Scottish Economic Bulletin", June 1991 edition, which is in the House of Commons Library.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what growth in the number of passengers and in the number of vehicles, vessels and aircraft the board of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise estimates from (a) other European Community countries and (b) countries outside the European Community in the period up to 1993-94.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The board of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise does not produce authoritative statistics for passenger and transport movements. For its own planning purposes the Department estimates that the number of passengers from both European Community countries and from countries outside the European Community will increase by about 1·5 per cent. in 1992-93 and 4·1 per cent. in 1993-94.

The number of transport units, including containers, is expected to increase by 1·6 per cent. in 1992-93 and 6·5 per cent. in 1993-94. The percentage increases are estimated to be broadly similar for EC and non-EC movements in each category.

Investment and Research

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the OECD figures for Government investment per worker in France, the United States of America and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maples: In 1989 OECD figures show that general government investment per civilian employee was £868 in France, £436 in the United States of America and £342 in the United Kingdom.

BT Share Offer

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the administrative costs of the British Telecom share offer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The costs to the Government in 1991-92 of the BT share offer are estimated to be as follows:

United Kingdom offers	£ million
Selling and other commissions	32·5
Marketing	17·2
Share Information Office	14·6
Prospectus production and distribution	6·6
Receiving and Agent Bank operations	23·8
Advisers' fees and expenses	6·4
Total (United Kingdom offers)	101·1
Overseas offers	3·9
Total (United Kingdom and Overseas offers)	105·0

These costs represent about 1·9 per cent. of the total proceeds due from the sale of shares to the Government, which are estimated at £5,403 million. The costs exclude stamp duty and VAT on services provided to the Government, which are not net costs to the Exchequer.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many residential properties owned by the Treasury are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Treasury does not own any property.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many residential properties owned by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise does not currently own any residential properties.

Income Tax

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of adults not in full-time education pay income tax at the rate of 40 per cent.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Latest estimates for 1991-92 are that 1·6 million individuals—some 3½ per cent. of adults not in full-time education—are liable to income tax at the higher rate.

I regret that no information on the educational status of these individuals is available.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate, on the same basis as the ready reckoner published in the autumn statement, what is the effect on a one-earner, two-child family of spending in 1992-93 the same sum on (a) a 1p cut in the basic rate of income tax, (b) raising income tax thresholds above their indexed levels and (c) raising child benefits, assuming (i) no change in income support and family credit rates and (ii) corresponding changes in income support and family credit rates.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 February 1992]: The cost in 1992-93 of (a) a 1p cut in the basic rate of income tax, is estimated to be £1,950 million, which would be worth roughly £2·50 a week to a married man on average male earnings, compared with statutory indexation.

(b) That amount would pay for an increase in income tax personal allowances and thresholds of 7¾ per cent. which would be worth almost £2 a week to a basic rate taxpayer, compared with statutory indexation.

(c) On the assumption that each child benefit rate was increased by the same cash amount, £1,950 million would pay for an increase of

(i) £4·50 per week per child if there were no corresponding changes to income-related benefit rates; or

(ii) £3·05 per week per child if adjustments were made to income-related benefits to ensure all families received the same increase.

Friendly Societies Bill

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will make available notes on clauses for the Friendly Societies Bill prior to Second Reading.

Mr. Maples: Yes. Copies of notes on clauses are today being placed in the Vote Office and in the Libraries of the House for the convenience of Members.

Income Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish a table showing for 1990-91 and his estimate for the current financial year the number of males and females under pensionable age (a) with total incomes of more than £5,000 and less than £10,000 a year, the number assessed for tax and the amount of tax paid and (b) the number who earned more than £5,000 and less than £10,000 and the amount of national insurance contributions paid;

(2) if he will publish a table showing for 1990-91 and his estimate for the current financial year (a) the estimated number of males and females under pensionable age with total incomes of less than £5,000 a year, the number assessed for tax, the number who paid tax and the amount of tax paid and (b) the number of males and females who earned less than £5,000 a year, the number who paid national insurance contributions and the amount of such contributions.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 19 February 1992]: Estimates of total income for income tax purposes for taxpayers are available from projections of the 1989-90 survey of personal incomes. These are the basis of the following estimates of the number of taxpayers in the specified ranges and the corresponding tax liabilities.

1990-91 levels of income

Total income £ per year	Number liable to income tax (million)	Tax liability £ million
Males aged under 65
1–5,000	0·7	200

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Albania

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the amount of bilateral aid given by his Department to (a) the Albanian Government and (b) aid agencies and charities working in Albania since May 1991.

Mrs. Chalker: The information is as follows:

(a) Nil
(b) British Red Cross	200,000
Feed The Children	180,000
Oxfam	35,000

A further £135,000 will be allocated shortly, bringing the total to £550,000. Feed the Children has also been given a quantity of Ministry of Defence medical supplies which were surplus to requirements in Germany.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Task Forces

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list all those task forces currently in operation, giving dates for when they started, and projected dates for their wind-up and allocated funding for each year of their operation.

Mr. Leigh: Inner-city task forces currently in operation are: Middlesbrough, Moss Side and Hulme (Manchester), Bristol, West London, North Peckham (opened in 1986); Foleshill and Hillfields (Coventry), Nottingham (1987); East Birmingham (1988); Granby/Toxteth (Liverpool), Bradford, Deptford (1989); Derby, Wirral (1990); Hull, Hackney, South Tyneside (1991).

The task force initiative is a rolling programme. Decisions on which task forces are to close this year, and where new ones are to open, will take place in parallel with decisions on city challenge.

Allocated funding for each task force currently open is given in the table.

Summary of Task Force Funding 1986-92

Task Force	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92

Note: The 1991-92 figures are up to January 1992.

Shipbuilding

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement about the work of the shipbuilding task force within his Department.

Mr. Leigh: The objective of the shipbuilding task force remains as described in my reply to the hon. Lady on 20 March 1991, Official Report, columns 161-62.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Leigh: My Department does not own any properties suitable for residential accommodation.

New Houses (Warranty)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding the National House Building Council 10-year warranty for new houses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: A Monopolies and Mergers Commission —MMC—report on structural warranties for new homes was published in March last year. This recommended changes to the rules of the National House Building Council—NHBC—warranty scheme, to allow builders belonging to the scheme to place some of their new homes with a comparable alternative scheme. On publication my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry invited representations from interested parties on a number of alternative remedies. In response he received more than 100 letters from builders, trade associations and professional bodies, consumer organisations and members of the public, some supporting and some opposing changes to the NHBC scheme.

The MMC report recognised that the NHBC had over a number of years made an impressive contribution to the improvement of housing standards and provision of safeguards for purchasers of new homes. However, it also found that competition had started to bring substantial benefits. Discussions with the NHBC and other interested parties have been continuing with a view to finding a solution which brings the benefits of increased competition without prejudicing consumer interests.

Regional Assistance (North-east England)

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much regional assistance was provided under each scheme for the north-east of England in 1979, 1987 and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: The table lists the amount of money spent on regional assistance in the north-east of England in the financial years 1979-80, 1987-88 and 1990-91, the latest year for which figures are available. Expenditure by calendar year is not readily available for some of the schemes.

	1979-80	1987-88	1990-91
Regional Selective Assistance	10·8	24·6	27·7
Regional Development Grants[1]	122·4	57·4	34·6
Regional Enterprise Grants[2]	—	—	2·4
English Estates[3]	12·5	21·5	18·3

[1] Includes expenditure under both the original scheme which closed to new applications in November 1984 and the revised scheme which replaced it in 1984 and in turn was closed to new applications in March 1988.

[2] Started in April 1988.

[3] Expenditure on factory building in the assisted areas of the north-east of England.

Beer and Cider (Foam)

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to introduce section 43 of the Weights and Measures Act 1985 relating to beer or cider and foam; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: Following my Department's consultation with interested parties, I have today made a commencement order which provides that section 43 of the Weights and Measures Act 1985 will come into force on 1 April 1994.

The lengthy implementation period will give publicans plenty of time to prepare and ensure that compliance costs are kept to a minimum. This law does not outlaw froth, but I strongly believe that consumers should get what they pay for, if a pint is ordered a pint of liquid beer is what they should get.

I have just decided that brim-measure glasses should not be prohibited. Licensees will therefore still be able to use these glasses as long as they serve a full liquid pint of beer or cider.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Eggar: This Department owns no residential property.

Pupil Placements

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many pupils in each local education authority are educated in maintained special schools outside their own local education authority area.

Mr. Fallon: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 28 February, Official Report, columns 619 to 21.

Council for National Academic Awards

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he intends to close down the Council for National Academic Awards; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps he has taken to ensure that all those students registered with the Council for National Academic Awards will be transferred to other degree awarding bodies by the date of closure of the Council for National Academic Awards without any change in conditions or fees payable by the student;

(3) how he will ensure that a national network of peer review is maintained after the abolition of the Council for National Academic Awards.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. and learned Friend announced on 16 December 1991, Official Report, column 31, that the dissolution of the Council for National Academic Awards was likely to be at the end of March 1993. That remains the position. He also referred to the importance of arrangements being made for students to be able to continue on the course of study for which they enrolled, in the institution at which they enrolled and with the expectation of receiving a degree or other award at the end of that course of similar standing to the CNAA degree or award for which they initially registered. We remain confident that new validation agreements will be in place by the beginning of the 1992-93 academic year. On 15 January the Department wrote to all higher education institutions making it clear that students who had already paid a validation fee to the CNAA should not be charged a further fee by a new validating institution.

The new quality assurance organisation being established collectively by the higher education institutions will be responsible for scrutinising institutions' quality control systems and validation agreements, and will take over some other activities of the CNAA. The way in which validation is carried out will be a matter for individual institutions, taking account of views expressed by the new organisation. As my right hon. and learned Friend's announcement on 16 December indicated, the Open university is intending to offer a validation service broadly on existing CNAA lines.

Education Statistics, Northumberland

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the per capita spending for primary and secondary school pupils in Northumberland, and the average per capita spending for all pupils, in 1979, 1987, and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: The latest year for which actual spending information is available is 1989-90. Average school-based expenditure figures per nursery, primary and secondary pupil in Northumberland and for England as a whole are shown in the table.

The real-terms increases in per pupil spending between 1979-80 and 1989-90 were 41 per cent. in Northumberland and 44 per cent. for England. Most Government support for local authorities is by way of unhypothecated revenue support grant. It is then for each local authority to determine how to allocate its spending between schools and other services.

Net institutional expenditure[1] per pupil

Year	Northumberland Cash £	Northumberland 1989-90 prices[2] £	England average Cash £	England average 1989-90 prices[2] £
1979-80	515	1,030	515	1,030
1989-90	1,450	1,450	1,485	1,485

[1] Net institutional expenditure covers the direct costs in schools of salaries and wages, premises and certain supplies and services. It does not include the cost of school meals, home to school transport, LEA central administration, and financing costs of capital expenditure.

[2] Figures for 1979-80 and 1987-88 have been repriced to 1989-90 prices using the GDP (Market Prices) Deflator index.

Note: The figures are derived from LEAs' returns of their spending to the Department of the Environment and of their pupil numbers to the Department of Education and Science. Figures include nursery schools, information for which is not identified separately from that for primary schools.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will list the number of primary and secondary teachers in Northumberland in 1979, 1987 and for the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list the pupil-to-teacher ratio in primary and secondary schools in Northumberland, and the average ratio for all pupils in 1979, 1987 and for the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: Information on the pupil-teacher ratios and the number of full-time equivalent teachers in maintained primary and secondary schools in Northumberland local education authority for the years 1979, 1987 and 1991 are given in the table.

Northumberland local education authority

Year	[1]Full-time equivalent teachers Primary	[1]Full-time equivalent teachers Secondary	[2]"Within school" pupil-teacher ratios Primary	[2]"Within school" pupil-teacher ratios Secondary	[3]Overall pupil-teacher ratios
1979	926	1,770	23·4	17·5	18·3
1987	832	1,765	23·1	16·3	17·8
1991	830	1,684	23·5	16·7	17·4

[2] The "within schools" PTRs are calculated using full-time equivalent numbers of qualified teachers in schools and full-time equivalent pupil numbers.

[3] The overall PTRs are calculated using full-time equivalent pupil numbers and the full-time equivalent of all teachers employed by the LEA in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools. This includes qualified teachers (including those not in schools and teachers providing short-term cover) as well as unqualified teachers such as student teachers, instructors and licensed teachers.

Grant-Maintained Schools

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the schools in Kent whose applications for grant-maintained status (a) he has approved, (b) he has rejected and (c) he is still considering.

Mr. Eggar: A total of 41 schools in Kent have published proposals for grant-maintained status to date. These are set out in the categories requested:

Sex Education

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the information imparted in sex education in schools for teenage girls.

Mr. Atkins: The implementation of those aspects of sex education which are included in national curriculum science are being monitored by Her Majesty's inspectorate and by local education authorities. The National Curriculum Council is also carrying out a detailed evaluation of how the core subjects are being delivered in the classroom. Beyond the statutory requirements of national curriculum science, schools' governing bodies are responsible for deciding whether any further sex education should be included in their schools' curriculum and, if they decide that additional sex education should be provided, for determining policy on its content and organisation.

School Transport

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangments are made for the provision of school transport to those children entitled to free transport in (a) grant-maintained schools and (b) city technology colleges.

Mr. Eggar: Local education authorities have a statutory duty to provide free transport for school pupils for whom they consider it necessary, including pupils who attend grant-maintained schools and city technology colleges. Information on local education authorities school transport arrangements is not collected centrally.

School Meals

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangments are made for the provision of school meals to those children entitled to free meals in (a) grant-maintained schools and (b) city technology colleges.

Mr. Eggar: Grant-maintained schools must provide a free school meal to any pupil who would be entitled to one in a local education authority-maintained school. Their annual maintenance grant makes provision for this.

City technology colleges are independent institutions and it is for them to make arrangements to provide meals free of charge to those children entitled to free school meals. City technology colleges grant from the Department make provision for this.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General how many complaints he has received about the charging for legal aid forms by magistrates courts; and if he will ensure that the legal aid application forms continue to be provided free of charge.

Mr. John Patten: I have been asked to reply. I have received only very occasional complaints. However, the question of charging is currently being considered by an interdepartmental working group reviewing the operation of the legal aid scheme in the magistrates courts.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest available estimate of the information requested is:

(a) 345 (12·5 per cent.) properties are empty, of which 210 (7·7 per cent.) are retained for redevelopment, security reasons, essential reallocation or demolition, and are therefore not available for disposal;

(b) 120 (4·3 per cent.) properties are on the open market, of which 85 are the subject of an agreed sale and are awaiting completion;

(c) 15 (0·5 per cent.) properties are to be placed on the market for sale; and

(d) there are no special arrangements for sales to housing associations, but any properties on the market are available for purchase by housing associations if they consider them suitable.

Karamjit Singh Chahal

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will release from prison Karamjit Singh Chahal so that he may re-join his family in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Member to my written answer to him of 12 December 1991, Official Report, column 510. The decision to detain Mr. Chahal is regularly reviewed, but at the present time I see no grounds for his release.

Amnesty International (Charities Bill)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from Amnesty International about the provisions of the Charities Bill.

Mr. John Patten: My officials have had one meeting with representatives of Amnesty International. We have also received six letters from right hon. and hon. Members forwarding letters from their constituents. These representations all concern the system of exemption orders for public charitable collections created by clause 72 of the Bill.

Nationality Applications

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time taken by the immigration and nationality department to determine an application for British nationality.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The average time taken for applications for British citizenship granted in February 1992 was 25 months.

Rave Parties

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many warehouse or rave parties are known by the police to have taken place in Gloucestershire in 1990 and 1991; and how many arrests were made in connection with these parties.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There were no warehouse or rave parties in Gloucestershire in 1990. In 1991 there were 16 such parties, resulting in 173 arrests.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment is made of the impact on legal aid expenditure of proposals to close magistrates courts.

Mr. John Patten: Magistrates courts committees should take into account all relevant factors when deciding whether or not to close a courthouse including the possible impact upon legal aid expenditure. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 10 February, columns 344-45, to the hon. Member for Faversham (Mr. Moate).

Emergency Warning System

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive a report on a national emergency warning system.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend expects to receive a report from officials shortly.

Violence Against Women

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken during the current session to strengthen the powers of the courts to punish offenders who have committed violent crimes against women.

Mr. John Patten: There are high maximum penalties for the most serious violent crimes against women, as against any victim: life imprisonment is mandatory for murder and is the maximum penalty for manslaughter, rape and the most serious woundings. The courts' powers will be enhanced when the Criminal Justice Act 1991 comes into force in October. The Act enables courts to impose longer custodial sentences than justified by the seriousness of the offence upon violent or sexual offenders in order to protect the public from serious harm from them. The Act also gives courts power to order longer and more intensive supervision for sex offenders following their release from custody.

Drugs

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Home Department what was the total number of registered drug addicts in each of the last 12 years.

Mr. John Patten: The number of new addicts notified by doctors to the Home Office in each of the last 12 years is given in table 2 of the Home Office statistical bulletins "Statistics of the misuse of drugs: addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom" for 1989 and 1990, copies of which are in the Library. The number of addicts renotified, which is available only for 1987 onwards, is given in table 1 of the 1990 publication.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders were prosecuted for offences relating to drugs in each of the last 12 years.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is contained in table 3.1 of the Home Office statistical bulletins "Statistics of the misuse of drugs: seizures and offenders dealt with, United Kingdom" for 1989 and 1990, copies of which are in the Library.

Bail Information

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up a bail information project in Gloucester.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that Gloucestershire probation service is conducting a feasibility study at Cheltenham and Gloucester magistrates courts and, depending on its outcome, may submit a bid for resources in due course.

Inquests

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will undertake a review into the inquest system.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. Friend has no plans for such a review.

Wolds Remand Centre

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department estimates should be spent on a prisoner's diet per day at the Wolds remand centre.

Mrs. Rumbold: No such estimate was made in the course of inviting tenders for the management of Wolds prison. The Department's interest will be in ensuring that the contractors comply with the dietary standards set out in the operational specifications for the prison, a copy of which was placed in the Library on 2 May 1991.

Overturned Convictions

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people each year since 1985 have had convictions overturned because forensic evidence presented at trial has subsequently been reconsidered or challenged successfully.

Mr. John Patten: I regret that the information requested is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people each year since 1985 have had convictions for murder overturned.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 23 January 1992, column 317.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 821, when he expects to announce proposals for ensuring secure accommodation for juvenile offenders remanded on bail.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has established a national steering group, with representatives from central Government, the local authority associations, the police, the probation service, the Crown prosecution service and voluntary organisations to plan the provision of secure accommodation to replace prison custody for remanded juveniles. We are anxious that the work should be concluded as quickly as possible.

Departmental Staff

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Forensic Science Service agency, assisted by PA Consulting Group, is carrying out a pay and grading review of scientific grades within the agency.

Operation Spaner

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the cost of the pre-trial hearings at Lambeth and Camberwell magistrates courts in 1990 in relation to Operation Spaner, (b) the cost of the Old Bailey trial proceedings in relation to Operation Spaner in December 1990 and (c) the cost of the Court of Appeal hearing and subsequent ruling in February 1992 in relation to Operation Spaner.

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

The costs of the pre-committal and committal hearing at Lambeth and Camberwell magistrates courts were approximately £64,500 including the court costs, prosecution costs and the cost to the legal aid fund.

The cost of the trial at the central criminal court including the court costs, the prosecution costs and the legal aid costs was approximately £357,000.

The costs of the appeal are not yet fully available as the legal aid costs and the prosecution costs have yet to be determined.

EMPLOYMENT

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Jackson: The numbers and percentages of residential properties for the Department are (a) 4, 100 per cent. (b) 4, 100 per cent. (c) nil (d) nil.

Unemployment

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the rise in unemployment in (a) London and (b) nationally over the 18 months.

Mr. Jackson: On the seasonally adjusted basis, unemployment rose by 189,200—92 per cent.—in London and 972,000—60 per cent.—in the United Kingdom between July 1990 and January 1992.

Medicopharma UK (Redundancy Payments)

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when former employees of Medicopharma UK can expect to receive their company redundancy payments; if he will require their former employer to compensate them for the delay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Employees who are dismissed for redundancy and who satisfy the qualifying conditions are entitled to a lump sum payment from their employer. Questions arising as to the right of employees to a payment, or as to the amount of a payment, are matters for an industrial tribunal to determine on the application of the employees concerned.

Sheltered Workshops

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on provision for sheltered workshops and the sheltered placement scheme in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Howard: We are committed to providing sheltered employment for peole with severe disabilities. In the current financial year we are providing funds for an average of approximately 5,000 people in sheltered workshops and around 7,000 people under the sheltered placement scheme. In this financial year, in order to help meet the costs incurred by sponsors, we have already increased the annual grant ceiling per place for voluntary bodies by £280 to £3,800 and that for local authorities by £240 to £3,000. I am now further increasing these grant ceilings for this financial year by £100 to £3,900 and £3,100 respectively. The total increase this year over last are 10·8 per cent. and 12·3 per cent respectively.

In 1992-93 I am providing £3·15 million more than this year's provision for current expenditure for sheltered workshops and the sheltered placement scheme. These additional funds will again be used to help meet the costs of voluntary bodies and local authorities by increasing the grant ceilings by a further £240 and £170 respectively to bring them to £4,140 for voluntary bodies and £3,270 for local authorities. This represents incrases of 6·2 per cent and 5·5 per cent respectively.

In addition, I shall be making available just over £10 million in 1992-93 for capital expenditure which represents an increase of just over £4·1 million on this year. This money will be available to help meet the cost of essential refurbishment and development where that is clearly consistent with our long-term objectives for sheltered employment.

In order to ensure that we make the best use of available rsources, I have had to decide that the planned number of places nationally provided by these forms of sheltered provision taken together will remain the same in 1992-93 as 1991-92. However, previous patterns of turnover on the sheltered placement scheme indicate that some 1,000 existing places are likely to become vacant to allow new entrants to join the programme.

I will be considering future sheltered employment provision in the light of the review of the current funding arrangements for sheltered employment which is now in hand. I will also take into account the findings of research we have commissioned on aspects of the sheltered employment programme. The consultative document "Employment and Training for People with Disabilities" recommended that there should be a shift in the balance from workshop provision to sheltered placements. That view was widely supported in the course of consultations and it remains our intention. Sheltered placements promote integration and offer opportunities in a wider range of occupations and locations. Specific decisions on rebalancing will take account of the outcome of the funding review and the research. The numbers in workshops and placements may be subject to change in the light of these decisions.

Regional Assistance

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much regional assistance was provided under each scheme for the north-east of England in 1979, 1987 and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The amount of regional assistance provided to the north-east of England is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

However, this Department has a wide range of employment, training and enterprise schemes which are available in the north-east, as elsewhere. These measures include Restart courses and the job interview guarantee scheme delivered by the Employment Service to help the long-term unemployed in their search for jobs and employment training and enterprise allowance scheme delivered through the training and enterprise councils, to help unemployed people learn new skills or to start up in business.

SCOTLAND

Recreation Projects

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a list of recreation projects built in the city of Glasgow in the last five years which have had support from governmental or European Community funds; and if he will indicate the total project costs and Government or European contribution levels.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Not all the information requested is held centrally. The available figures and a list of the projects supported by governmental or EC funds are set out in the table below. The total capital building costs for urban aid projects was £4·417 million. The Government's grant contribution was 75 per cent. of this figure.

Departmental Staff

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff, and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Lang: In accordance with Government policy, my Department keeps pay and grading structures under review. Internal review teams check on grading as part of annual reviews across my Department, but over the last 12 months no reviews of pay have been carried out in my Department, including in executive agencies, by either internal or external review teams.

Market Testing Programme

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Lang: Following competitive tendering, Coopers and Lybrand, Deloitte has been retained to advise the Scottish Office and its executive agencies on the market testing programme.

Building Security

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial assistance is available to groups of owner-occupiers who, acting together, are seeking to improve security of their homes.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is no specific assistance for this purpose. However, local authorities may at their discretion give improvement grant for some security measures, generally as part of a comprehensive rehabilitation of houses.

Roads Report

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish the roads report; and if he will make a statement about progress on trunk road schemes during 1991-92 and those it is proposed to start in the next three years.

Mr. Lang: I am today publishing the report, "Roads, Traffic and Safety 1992", copies of which have been placed in the Library together with an associated summary.

In the last fortnight, there have been three major Scottish publications dealing with road accidents, roads in the countryside, and the operational management of the road network. A consultation document will also be published tomorrow on the options for improving travel links around the Forth estuary. The report I am publishing today puts all these initiatives in the context of our overall strategic plans for the 1990s which have been developed following the completion of a major review of Scotland's key roads. The report details our medium-term strategy for the further improvement and better management of the network. It considers what further developments might be expected in the longer term. It sets out our road safety achievements and future objectives, and considers the special needs of local roads in urban areas.

I am also listing those major schemes planned to start in the three years ahead following the increase in resources I announced at the end of last year under public expenditure plans for road construction. The range and importance of the schemes selected demonstrates our commitment to the strategic goals which are set out in the report for the improvement of the trunk road network.

Schemes with an estimated cost of over £3 million started since 1 April 1991 or for which contracts are expected to be placed before 31 March 1992:

M8 St James Interchange
M74 Maryville-West Fullarton Road
A74(M) Nether Abington-Elvanfoot
A96 Bucksburn Diversion
A9 Greenloaning-Blackford
A929 Tarbrax-Forfar

These schemes have a total value in excess of £100 million.

Schemes with an estimated cost of over £3 million expected to start between 1 April 1992 and 31 March 1995:

1992-93
A94 Brechin Bypass (dualling)
A74(M) Lockerbie Bypass (Muirhouse-Water of Milk)
A74(M) Water of Milk-Ecclefechan
A74(M) Eaglesfield-Kirkpatrick Fleming
(or alternative A74([illegible] scheme)
A830 Morar Bypass (Locha[illegible] Doilead-Kinsadel)
A87 Skye Bridge Approach Roads
M8 Newbridge to Edinburgh City Bypass
1993-94 and 1994-95
A77 Ayr Road Route
A74(M) Paddy's Rickle-Greenhillstairs
A96 Kintore Bypass
A96 Keith Bypass
A77 Glasgow to Ayr dualling (Fenwick—B764)
A1 Tranent-Haddington
A8/M8 North Lanarkshire access improvements

These schemes have a total value in excess of £330 million. Our plans are, of course, subject to the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures and the necessary preparatory work.

The work in progress and planned will fulfil our commitment to dual the A9 between Stirling and Perth. Our commitment to dual the Perth to Aberdeen route will also be fulfilled. The Perth-Aberdeen route will be renumbered the A90, thus creating the arterial M90/A90 route from Edinburgh to Aberdeen.

The schemes being announced for the A74 upgrading mean that over 60 per cent. of the new motorway to replace the A74 in Scotland is already either open, under construction or firmly programmed to start.

The Glasgow-Ayr motorway/near motorway route will be taken forward with the construction of the new trunk road section outwith Glasgow, to meet Strathclyde regional council's new M77 road, together with the first of the two new dualling schemes on the remainder of the route.

The plans include provision of the two remaining sections of the A8 upgrading. The M8 Newbridge-Edinburgh scheme is subject to the results of the public local inquiry recently completed; the M8 north Lanarkshire scheme timetable is ambitious, but, with the continued co-operation of all concerned, I am sure it can be achieved.

Following our announcement on the A1, financial provision has been made to commence the dualling of the route.

In addition to the major schemes starts, funding for other schemes, road safety schemes and route action plans is being substantially increased. We will continue the very good progress which has already been made on the A96 Aberdeen-Inverness; A7 Edinburgh-M6; and A1 Edinburgh-Newcastle action plans. The A90 Perth-Dundee road will be upgraded to near motorway standard. New route action plans will be developed for the A76 between Dumfries and Kilmarnock and the A830 west of Lochailort. Further improvements to the A9 north of Perth will be carried out, including the provision of improved overtaking opportunities, also as part of a route action plan.

Secondary Schools Report

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received the report of the committee established under the chairmanship of Professor John Howie to review curriculum and examinations in the fifth and sixth years of Scottish secondary schools.

Mr. Lang: I am glad to announce the publication today of the report of the committee which we appointed to review the curriculum and examinations in the fifth and sixth years of secondary education. As education Minister I initiated this study in 1990 and I am most grateful to Professor Howie and to his colleagues for a thorough and comprehensive review of this important area of school education and for their thoughtful and challenging recommendations.

There is no doubt that we must aim to have in Scotland a system of secondary education which draws the best from our traditions, and which compares well with the best that is available in Europe and beyond. We must ensure that there are appropriate qualifications in place to match the needs of the increasing number of pupils who are staying on after the fourth year—already 70 per cent.—to find a rewarding and relevant education.

At the same time, changes of the dimension now recommended by the Howie committee need careful deliberation and wide consultation within the education system before they are introduced.

I have decided therefore to publish this major report now and to invite all interested parties to comment on it in the period running to the end of this year. To assist this process we are arranging for the report summary to be printed separately and to be made available free of charge from the Scottish Office Education Department.

Professor Howie and his committee have produced a report of quality and authority. It deserves to be considered with care and without undue haste. I hope no one will rush to judgment, but rather that we will all study his proposals thoroughly and reflect on the way forward.

Careers Service

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has now completed his consideration of the publication of careers service inspection reports in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The careers service has a key role to play in helping young people make the transition from school to employment and training. The Government wish to see a greater role for employers in the management of the service and have encouraged the formation of partnerships towards this end. It is also important and in accordance with the Government's citizens charter that the service should be accountable for its performance to parents, employers and the public. It is right therefore that the reports of the careers service inspectorate in Scotland should be published and, accordingly, publication will apply to reports of inspections begun on and after 1 April this year.

Illegitimate Births

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of illegitimate births to teenage girls in each year since 1980 in each registry area giving the age in years of the teenage mothers.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 February 1992]: Since the tabulated information will be lengthy, I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Tayside Health Board

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the business plan of the central pharmaceutical unit of Tayside health board;

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the contract with Tayside health board for the provision of the manufacture of "specialties", as outlined in SOHHD/DGM (1991) 29.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 4 March 1992]: I do not intend placing a copy in the Library of the contract with Tayside health board for the manufacture of "special" medicines or the business plan of the central pharmaceutical unit of Tayside health board. These documents are "commercially confidential".

EC Drinking Water Directive

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) of 21 January, Official Report, columns 164-74, what is his estimate of the total population of the supply zones listed, where water quality does not fully comply with the requirements of the EC drinking water directive.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My answer of 21 January 1992 to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey listed those zones currently subject to improvement undertakings given by water authorities because one or more of the standards set in the water quality regulations has been infringed at some time. The total population of the zones listed is about 2·5 million. Well over half that population receives water which has breached only one of the 57 standards and in many cases breaches were minor or occasional. Water authorities' annual reports for July to December 1990 showed that in that period many of the zones listed had no failures of the standards concerned.

The population of zones listed as not meeting the standard for iron is almost 0·5 million. In most of these cases the water put into supply fully meets the standard but old iron water mains may cause occasional failures at consumers' taps. Zones for which the undertaking relates only to the standard for trihalomethanes, a United Kingdom standard not set in the EC directive, account for a population of about another 0·5 million.

WALES

Recession

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the effects of the recession upon the Welsh economy.

Mr. David Hunt: Wales cannot be isolated from the recession affecting the United Kingdom economy and that of many other industrialised countries. Although the business community is going through a difficult period and unemployment is rising, the effect on Wales has been less severe than elsewhere. Since unemployment began to rise in March 1990, the difference between the Welsh and United Kingdom seasonally adjusted work force rates has reduced from 0·9 percentage points to 0·3 percentage points.

Unemployment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he is taking to tackle (a) short-term and (b) long-term unemployment in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government now offer a more comprehensive range of programmes than ever to help all unemployed people back to work. In July last year we announced a substantial package of measures to complement the existing programmes provided by the Employment Service and the training and enterprise councils. It includes expert advice and help in looking for a job, and for the long-term unemployed extra training provision and the new work experience programme, employment action.

In addition my Department, the Welsh Development Agency and other Government agencies also operate a wide range of other measures aimed at stimulating economic development in Wales. The Welsh Office and all the other relevant bodies will continue to look for, and respond swiftly to, development opportunities that arise which have the potential to reduce unemployment.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to increase the number of apprenticeships in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government are already providing considerable support for employer-based apprenticeships through the youth training programme. However, it is primarily a matter for employers to determine how best to manage their training requirements in line with business needs.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for the future structure of the fishing industry in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: My continuing aims are to provide conditions for a viable fishing industry in Wales, including the sea fisheries sector, aquaculture and freshwater fisheries, and to promote the conservation and sound management of fish stocks. These policies will continue to be implemented through a range of statutory and administrative measures, including schemes of financial assistance.

Cash Limits

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he proposes to make to his Department's cash limits for 1991-92.

Mr. David Hunt: The cash limit for Welsh Office/local authorities capital—LACAP—will be reduced by £16,323,000 from £397,362,000 to £381,039,000 and the cash limit for Welsh Office/Housing for Wales will be increased by £17,323,000 from £111,224,000 to £128,547,000.

These changes largely reflect a transfer of resources—£17,323,000—from local authorities to Housing for Wales which will enable housing associations to provide additional housing units.

The reduction in WO/LACAP in respect of this transfer has been partly offset by an increase of £1 million as a result of a transfer of provision from the Lord Chancellor's Department. A corresponding reduction is being made in the cash limit for class X, vote 1. This transfer will facilitate the provision of courtroom facilities at Swansea.

Local Government

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library copies of the responses he has received to his consultation papers on the structure and internal management of local government in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: I am today placing in the Library of the House copies of the responses to each consultation paper from the Welsh local authority associations, individual authorities and from representative bodies. Responses from members of the public are available for consultation in the Welsh Office library, Cathays Park, Cardiff.

Youth Training

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the range of unit price training week costs in Wales for youth training indicating what are the higher and lower cost levels.

Mr. David Hunt: This information is confidential.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the operating surplus of each TEC in Wales for the current financial year; and of each surplus, how much has been committed to date.

Mr. David Hunt: Information on the operating surpluses made in the current financial year will be published in due course by each TEC in its end of year accounts. Discussions with TECs on their plans for 1992-93 are in progress, and include consideration of how TECs will use their operating surpluses.

Departmental Staff

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading staff and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Select Committees

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what is the total annual cost of the staff of Select Committees.

Mr. Beith: The current annual remuneration of permanent staff of the Committee Office of the Clerk's Department amounts to £2,327,980. Some staff in other offices of the Department provide services to Select Committes in addition to their other duties, but it is not possible separately to quantify this element of their work in staff cost terms.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many residential properties owned by the Duchy are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Duchy of Lancaster owns a number of residential properties which are used solely for agricultural purposes—such as farmhouses or farm workers' cottages—or for housing staff, or which are held on long ground leases. These properties are excluded from the figures given:

Of the balance of 240 residential properties,

(a) nine are empty, or 3·75 per cent. of the total owned, all of which are in the course of being re-let—some after modernisation works have been completed;
(b) one property, or 0·8 per cent. of the total, is vacant awaiting sale;
(c) one, or 0·8 per cent. of the total, is intended for sale on the open market; and
(d) none is for sale to housing associations.

HEALTH

Occupational Health Staff

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current number of occupational health staff in each health authority in England; and if he will publish a breakdown showing (a) the number of nurses with OHNC qualifications, (b) nurses undertaking OHNC qualifications, (c) nurses without OHNC qualifications, (d) full-time occupational health consultants, (e) full-time occupational health physicians and (f) GP sessions within occupational health departments.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The numbers—whole-time equivalents—of hospital occupational health staff, including consultants, employed by regional, district and special health authorities in England at 30 September 1990, the latest date for which information is available, are given in the table:

Authority	Administration and Clerical	Hospital Medical		Nursing	Total
		Consultants	Others
Northern	8·2	1·0	1·7	31·3	42·2
Yorkshire	11·9	1·0	3·0	46·7	62·6

Data are not available on "occupational health physicians".

Data relating to OHNC qualifications, GPs and community health service staff in occupational health are not available centrally.

Radiation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to evaluate the work of the Medical Research Council radiation biology unit on establishing links between low dose radiation and cell abnormality; and what additional guidance he proposes to give to hospitals engaging in radiotherapy treatment and to the National Radiological Protection Board.

Mr. Dorrell: The study by Kadim et al published in Nature on 20 February 1992, a copy of which is available in the Library, is one of numerous studies being conducted in this area. I am advised that whilst the reported findings of this relatively limited study pose interesting questions, relating to the response of cells to alpha particle irradiation, they should not be judged in isolation. The authors themselves have stated that this is only a "first and unexpected" step in a chain of research. The National Radiological Protection Board is aware of this study and is conducting related research. The results of the study have been drawn to the attention of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment which is being kept fully informed of all research in this area. No additional guidance to radiotherapy units is currently needed.

Hip Replacements

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines he has issued about the use of plastic in hip joint replacement operations; and how many operations are still carried out using metal in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department has not issued any guidelines on the use of plastic in hip joint replacement operations.

All hip joint operations carried out in the United Kingdom use one or more metal components as part of the joint replacement device. Metal components may be used in combination with other metals, plastics and ceramics, depending upon the design of the particular hip system selected by the clinician.

The number of hip replacement operations in England for 1990-91 was 44,477. Information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Dentists

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will meet the Staffordshire local dental committee to discuss their concerns about dentists henceforth offering private treatment only to patients.

Mr. Dorrell: I have asked officials to discuss dental provision with the Staffordshire local dental committee.

HIV

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of (a) men and (b) women who have been diagnosed as having the HIV virus in the Greater London area as of 18 February.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Data on residence are not available on the HIV-1 infection reports received at the Public Health Laboratory Service AIDS centre of the communicable disease surveillance centre (CDSC). The region where the test took place may not be a good indicator of the region of residence of the individual tested.

Within the four Thames regions 10,282 reports of HIV-1 infected people have been received at CDSC—9,277 men, 949 women and 56 where the sex was not stated on the rep[illegible]hese data are cumulative from when testing began in late 1984 to the end of December 1991, and is for adults only.

Ambulances

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average age of the ambulance vehicles of the London ambulance service; and how many vehicles are (a) between three and five years old and (b) five years or more.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Jim Harris, the chairman of the London Ambulance Service, for details.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has issued on the expected working life of ambulance vehicles; and what information his Department has on the actual average working life of ambulance vehicles.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on vehicle life is not collected centrally.

Current guidance relates to capital provision for routine replacement programmes, based on glass-reinforced plastic-bodied ambulances. Under normal standards of high maintenance, such provision should be based on an assumed vehicle life of seven years or 140,000 miles. The guidance is not necessarily appropriate to all coach-built vehicles or to other types of ambulance vehicle, and health authorities are free to modify the guidelines to take account of local conditions and other relevant factors, such as maintenance costs and frequency of use.

Hospitals (Crime)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of reported crime against patients and staff have taken place in national health service hospitals in the past 12 months.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally. General managers are responsible for arrangements for security of patients and staff at NHS hospitals.

Mental Illness

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many crisis intervention centres for the mentally ill are available at present; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

Inquests

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many inquests were held into deaths at the workplace in the last five years.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is not held in the form requested. The number of inquests held as a result of deaths from accidents at the workplace and registered in each of the latest five years is shown in the table.

Year	Number of inquests
1986	338
1987	299
1988	280
1989	339
1990	355

Youth Treatment Service

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a policy and management specification for the youth treatment service; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Details of the new structure of the youth treatment service were given in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. McCrindle) on 21 November 1991 at columns 311-12. This will come into effect on 1 April 1992.

A copy of the policy and management specification for the youth treatment service is today being placed in the Library.

1991 Census

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how work is progressing on analysing the 1991 census; and when results from the computer-processed data will be published.

Mr. Dorrell: Work on the clerical processing has progressed well and many tasks have been completed before their target dates. However, there has been some delay in the computer processing, caused by the need to amend the original system to cope with a particular form of ambiguity in the way some census forms had been completed. A routine data quality audit showed that some 400,000 people, who were apparently not students, had completed the question on term time address as though they were students. The correction of this misclassification is in hand, but it is causing some delay to the publication of census results.

The monitors for each county and Scottish region containing key results for each local authority area are now expected to be published between April and September 1992. Part 1 of the full reports for each county and Scottish region—containing results from all the census questions for which 100 per cent. of answers are processed —are expected to be published between June and December 1992, and part 1 of the national reports for England and Wales and for Scotland by February 1993. These dates are dependent on smooth running of the processing systems. There will also be delay to part 2 of the county, regional and national reports and the topic volumes.

A provisional revised timetable for the county and regional monitors and part 1 of the county, regional reports, and for the associated statistical products is given in issue 19 of the "Census Newsletter", a copy of which is in the Library. A revised timetable for the remaining statistics will be issued as soon as possible.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Dorrell: A survey in 1990 indicated that about 14,000 NHS residential units—15 per cent. of the stock —were unoccupied. Of these 11,500 units were "bedsits" and about 1,000 were shared flats. The reasons for unoccupancy range from the need for accommodation to be available for new staff, to accommodation being empty whilst being refurbished or awaiting demolition or sale.

Health authorities and NHS trusts are responsible for the management of NHS residential accommodation and the sale of property which becomes surplus. The disposal of surplus property is within guidelines issued by the Department. Details of sales are not held centrally.

Children Act 1989

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to assist voluntary organisations in connection with implementation of the Children Act 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We made available £250,000 in 1991-92 specifically for training in the Children Act for the voluntary sector.

Copies of the nine volumes of the Children Act guidance and regulations and the other Children Act publications were issued free of charge to the voluntary sector.

Children Act training materials commissioned by the Department were also supplied to voluntary organisations.

Our centrally funded child abuse training initiative grant, almost £1 million this financial year, has helped a range of organisations to assess the impact of the Children Act and to bring some of their own material up to date in the light of it.

Voluntary organisations also have an important part to play in local authorities' review of day care services in their area. The Department is currently funding in its under-fives initiative for development officers, based in different parts of the country, who have a remit to improve relationships between the relevant local authority and the voluntary sector. These posts will help the success of the review process.

Under section 17 of the Children Act 1989, local authorities have a new duty to provide a range of services for children in need to promote their upbringing within their families. They will need to collaborate with the voluntary sector in the provision of such services. To help with this, the Department it to provide funding to voluntary organisations for three years, starting in 1992-93, under the family support initiative—total funding, £500,000 per annum.

The Government also provide support to a wide range of voluntary organisations in the child care field under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968.

Liverpool Family Service Unit

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from the Liverpool family service unit concerning its possible closure; and what reply has been sent.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) on 20 February, at column 272.

Northern Regional Health Authority

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the level of spending by the Northern regional health authority in 1979, 1987 and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested, which is derived from the annual accounts of the health authorities comprising the Northern region for the financial years 1979-80, 1987-88 and 1990-91—the latest available—is shown in the table.

The figures—when expressed at 1991-92 prices—represent real terms increases of 26·8 per cent. for revenue expenditure and 35·3 per cent. for capital expenditure between 1979-80 and 1990-91.

Northern region—Total expenditure on hospital and community health services (HCHS)

	Revenue		Capital
	£000 (cash)	£000 (at 1991-92 prices)	£000 (cash)	£000 (at 1991-92 prices)
1979-80	337,996	785,842	27,590	64,146
1987-88	726,424	962,367	52,432	69,462
1990-91	931,400	996,598	81,122	86,800

Source:

Annual accounts of the Northern regional health authority (RHA) and the district (formerly area) health authorities comprising the Northern region.

Notes:

1. Expenditure on the HCHS covers services directly managed and/or accounted for by the health authorities (at the relevant time) including hospital, community health, patient transport (i.e. ambulance), blood transfusion and other services.

2. The figures for 1990-91 are as yet subject to audit. All figures have been expressed at 1991-92 prices by the use of gross domestic product deflators.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors and nurses were employed by the Northern regional health authority in 1979, 1987 and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information is given in the table.

Year at 30 September	Medical and Dental[1]	Nursing and Midwifery[2]
1979	2,530	[3]23,940
1990	2,990	[4]27,310

Note: The slight fall in the figures of nursing and midwifery staff in post between 1987 and 1990 relates to three separate factors: the transfer of senior nurses in management jobs from the senior nurse pay structure to the senior management pay structure; the inclusion of Project 2000 nursing students in staff-in-post returns; and the cessation of enrolled nurse training.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of people on and the duration of waiting lists in the Northern regional health authority in 1979, 1987 and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is given in the table. Provisional figures show that since 1987 the number of patients waiting over two years has fallen by more than 83 per cent. and the number waiting over one year by 36 per cent. The region expects to have no patient waiting over two years by 31 March.

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the national health service budget has been dedicated to infertility treatment in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are waiting for infertility treatment by region, for each of the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information about waiting lists for the treatment of specific conditions is not held centrally.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will give by region details of the regional facilities providing infertility treatment;

(2) how many people in the west midlands region received infertility treatment in (a) the national health service and (b) privately in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally.

Private Health Insurance

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state (a) for each year since 1978 and (b) for each region (i) the number and (ii) the percentage of the population covered by private health insurance.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 28 February at columns 659-60. The information is not collected regionally.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many awards of attendance allowance were backdated in each of the years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92 under regulation 9 of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations, where a claim for income support has been treated as a claim for attendance allowance.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not available.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people living in the London borough of Wandsworth have received the cold weather heating payments during the last four months.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the Library.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Jack: Of the 45 properties on the Department's estate, only the 20 resettlement units could be described as residential property. Of these, one—5 per cent.—is empty and is for sale on the open market. By April 1992 a further four—20 per cent.—will be released for sale; one to a housing association and three on the open market.

Claimant Statistics

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the number of persons in receipt of supplementary benefit or income support in each year since 1979, both in total and by type of claimant, including (a) the unemployed, (b) lone parents, (c) the sick and disabled, (d) pensioners, and (e) other groups, stating in each case the percentage increase each year.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is shown in the table.

Sources: Supplementary Benefit/Income Support Annual Statistical Enquiries 1979-1990.

Notes:

1. All figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. There was no annual statistical inquiry in 1985; the one due in December of that year was deferred until February 1986.

Pensioners

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners there are over the age of 75 years divided into males and females; and what is (a) their average income from all sources and (b) the income distribution of such pensioners, in Great Britain.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 24 February 1992]: In mid-1990 the estimated number, in thousands, of people aged 75 or over in Great Britain was men, 1,331, and women, 2,568.

The average net weekly income in 1988 from all sources for non-married men and women aged 75 years or over and married couples where either one or both of the partners are 75 or over was:

Non-married men	86·10
Non-married women	70·50
Married couples	132·80

The weekly net incomes of these people are distributed in the following way:

Figures are in thousands of individuals or couples.

Weekly net incomes	Non-married men	Non-married women	Married couples
up to £60	140	800	0
£60 up to £80	180	780	140
£80 up to £100	70	130	330
£100 up to £120	40	130	150
£120 and over	50	110	300
Total	480	1,950	920

Notes:

1. Population data is from the 1990 OPCS mid-year estimates.
2. Income data is from the 1988 family expenditure survey (FES).
3. It is not possible accurately to apportion some income sources between husband and wife—for example, income support/supplementary benefit—from the FES. It is therefore not possible to provide sensible estimates of the separate total incomes of all men and women by sex.

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of couples with children and lone parent households, respectively, who for the period April 1992 to March 1993 will come on to family credit and who, but for the change in definition of full-time work from 24 to 16 hours for income support recipients, would have been eligible for income support; if he will give an estimate of how much his Department will save as a result; and if he will estimate the number of childless households no longer eligible for such help because they will no longer be eligible for income support.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 February 1992]: About 45,000 families with children currently claiming income support and working between 16 and 24 hours a week up to 7 April 1992 will be eligible to claim family credit, if they so choose, because of the change in the hours rule from 24 to 16 hours a week. Of these, 30,000 families—including 25,000 lone parents—are expected to be better off on family credit, and some 15,000 families with children are likely to have their family credit topped up with income support to maintain the level of their income. In addition, about 15,000 people without children, who are working 16 to 24 hours a week at the point of change will be able to remain on income support as at present.

It is not possible to estimate how many new potential claimants would have been entitled to income support during 1992-93 if the remunerative work rule had remained at 24 hours a week, because the effect of behavioural changes cannot be predicted. However, it is expected that the substantial majority of families with children will be better off on family credit because of the more generous rules for treating earnings and, from 7 April, the introduction of a disregard of the first £15 a week of any maintenance received in family credit, housing benefit and community charge benefit.

We also expect that up to 35,000 families with children—30,000 of them lone parents—who are already working between 16 and 24 hours a week but earning too much to get income support will qualify for family credit. In the longer term, we expect that the lower hours threshold will encourage many others to take up work of at least 16 hours or increase their hours so as to qualify for family credit.

As a result of these changes more benefit rather than less will be paid. Together with the increasing numbers claiming family credit, the changes will lead to an increase in family credit expenditure, from an expected outturn of £617 million in 1991-92 to an estimated £850 million in 1992-93.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give, by social security region and by standard economic planning region, for the latest year available, including executive agency staff the number of civil servants, whole-time equivalent broken down by grade levels one to four, five, six, seven, SEO, HEO, EO, AO and AA, indicating the salary bands and indicating the percentage at each grade who are women, giving the percentage at each grade who are part time and the percentage of part-timers who are women.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The information available for the Department of Social Security, including its agencies, as at 31 January 1992 is shown in the table.

To give the breakdown by social security region and standard economic planning region could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. A copy of the "Civil Service Pay and Conditions of Service Code" which gives salary bands is available in the Library.

Grade[1]	Total full time equivalents	Per cent. who are women	Per cent. who are part-time	Per cent. part-timers who are women

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Turkeys

13. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the health of turkeys.

Mr. Maclean: The national turkey flock is in robust health, like my hon. Friend.

Food Prices

14. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how food prices have moved over the past year.

Mr. Curry: The annual rate of food price inflation fell from 5·9 per cent. in January 1991 to 4·5 per cent. in January 1992.

Food Products

15. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of those food products grown in temperate climates which are consumed in the United Kingdom are produced in the United Kingdom; and what was the proportion in 1979.

Mr. Curry: It is estimated that self-sufficiency in food products which can be produced in the United Kingdom was 74 per cent. in 1991, compared with 68 per cent. in 1979.

Farm Incomes

16. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect a 2 per cent. increase in interest rates would have on farm incomes.

Mr. Gummer: No such assessment has been made, but it would inevitably have a negative effect on farm incomes. This would be extremely bad news for farmers as it would for everyone else. That is why the Government will bring down interest rates as quickly as it can.

19. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement on the level of farm incomes in real terms in the last two years for which figures are available.

Mr. Gummer: The index for total income from farming, which gives the returns to farmers, partners, directors and their spouses, and family members working on the farm, was 102·1 in real terms for 1990 and is forecast to be 90·8 in 1991. Both figures relate to a base of 100 in 1985.

24. Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the level of farm incomes in the south-west; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The results of the farm business survey for the sample of 176 farms in the region have recently been published by the agricultural economics unit of Exeter university in "Farm Incomes in South-West England 1990-91". These show that on average the level of net farm income for all types of farm in the south-west fell by about one third between 1989-90 and 1990-91. Since that time, increases in cattle prices, the higher rates of hill livestock compensatory allowances and sheep subsidies in 1991 and increases in cereal yields and prices are expected to bring improvements for most farm types.

Set-aside Scheme

17. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last discussed the future of the set-aside scheme outlined in the MacSharry proposals with other EC Agriculture Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I last discussed the Commission proposals for reform of the common agricultural policy, including set-aside, with my EC colleagues on 2 and 3 March.

Common Agricultural Policy

18. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the progress being made in discussions for reform of the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave yesterday to my hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood (Mr. Stewart).

25. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received regarding the reform of the common agricultural policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have received representations on this subject from a wide range of organisations covering not only all sectors of the food and agriculture industries but environmental, consumer and other interests. I and my officials regularly meet representatives of these organisations.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the latest efforts being made to reform the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams).

Fishery Decommissioning

20. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet representatives of the fishing industry to discuss decommissioning.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell).

Confectionery

21. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to make an official visit to York to discuss confectionery issues.

Mr. Curry: I am always open to invitations to visit this industry which makes a strong contribution to United Kingdom exports.

Dioxin, Bolsover

22. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is now able to identify the cause of the dioxin in the Bolsover area; and what steps he intends to take.

Mr. Maclean: The available evidence does not allow for conclusions to be drawn on the cause of the dioxin contamination.

As my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment has already made clear, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has investigated the emissions from the chemical incinerator at the coalite works near Bolsover. The concentrations measured in the emissions form only a part of the dioxins which have been found in the milk on the affected farms.

Citizens Charter

26. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his Ministry's contribution to the citizens charter.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells).

Farm Animals (Welfare)

27. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are being taken to obtain equal standards of farm animal welfare throughout the EC.

Mr. Maclean: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Minister to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns).

Fishing Industry

28. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from fishermen in the north-west of England in the last month about the prospects for the fishing industry.

Mr. Curry: Fishermen, including fishermen in the north-west of England, make representations on a wide range of subjects every month.

Horses

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further measures he is taking to consider the reclassification of the horse as an agricultural animal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The horse is an agricultural animal when it is engaged in agricultural activities. The Department takes the lead role on EC legislation covering animal health questions concerning horses, zootechnics and competitions. It is for other Departments to take the lead on matters that relate to their responsibilities.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many residential properties owned by the Ministry are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Curry: The information requested is set out:

(a) 11 representing 7·6 per cent.
(b) 3 representing 2·0 per cent.
(c) 4 representing 2·7 per cent.
(d) Nil.

EC Surplus Foodstuffs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list EC surplus foodstuffs held in storage in the United Kingdom and the tonnage of such surplus as at 31 January.

Mr. Curry: Tables showing current levels of surplus produce in store within the EC and the United Kingdom are deposited in the Library of the House at monthly intervals. The latest tables were deposited on 13 February.

Farmers (Public Relations)

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he intends to take to assist farmers to improve relations with the public and to reduce problems arising from trespass and vandalism.

Mr. Gummer: My Department have today agreed with Groundwork to provide pump priming funding for a project to be known as Farmlink. This project aims to help children to understand and respect the countryside and farming and to create beneficial links between farmers and local urban communities. The scheme will result in the creation of approximately 180 links between individual farms and schools over three years in seven Groundwork trust areas. These are expected to be St. Helens, East Durham, Rossendale, Wakefield, Erewash, West Cumbria and Kerrier. The total cost of the project will be £170,000 spread over the three-year period.

Food Safety

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has in the food safety area.

Mr. Maclean: On behalf of the Agriculture and Health Ministers I have today issued for consultation to interested organisations a draft food safety and consumer protection programme setting out the Government's plans in this area in 1992. It applies the principles of information, consultation and accountability set out in the citizens charter published last year. I am sure the publication of this programme will be welcomed and I look forward to the response to it. I am placing a copy of the document in the Library of the House.

Badgers

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on mortality rates amongst badgers caused by (a) licensed killing and (b) motor vehicles in each of the past three years.

Mr. Maclean: In the past three years only two badgers have been killed under licence under the Badgers Act 1973, both in order to protect poultry. Out of a population of 250,000 adult badgers, we estimate that at least 20,000 are killed each year on our roads.

Milk

Mr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure adequate supplies of home-produced milk for processing.

Mr. Curry: The changes to milk marketing in the United Kingdom must give higher priority to the production of value added dairy products.

DEFENCE

Reserve Forces

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans any changes in the role of the reserve forces in the future.

Mr. Tom King: I have recently received proposals arising from a major study on the future mix of regular and reserve forces in the longer term and I am publishing today a consultative open government document "The Future of Britain's Reserve Forces" which seeks views on the key proposals arising from this study. I am placing copies of this document in the Vote Office and in the Library of the House.

Aircraft Noise

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his policy of purchasing any dwelling in the vicinity of a military airfield found to be subjected to noise levels greater than 125 dB (A) from military aircraft also applies to civil airfields where military jet aircraft regularly carry out practice approach and overshoot movements.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No. Military jet aircraft carry out practice manoeuvres at civil airfields on very few occasions. Evidence of noise surveys carried out at 42 military airfields covering a range of manoeuvres by a variety of aircraft types indicates no likelihood of maximum noise levels of 125 dB (A) being reached in the proximity of dwellings contiguous to civil airfields.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the results of the measurements made of noise levels of F15, F16 and F111 aircraft during Exercise Luce Belle in June 1990.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The results of the measurements of the noise levels of F15 and F16 aircraft participating in Exercise Luce Belle were published in the National Physical Laboratory report RSA (Ext.) 16, dated February 1991. The F111 aircraft did not participate in the exercise.

Fast Jet Activity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of the fast jet activity which has been taking place between West Freugh airfield and the Carsphairn-New Galloway area since 18 November; how many and what types of aircraft are taking part; what is the minimum permitted height during these operations; and what increase there has been in the level of such activity.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Since 18 November 1991 the following groups of fast jet aircraft have operated from West Freugh and flown in the Carsphairn-New Galloway area:

Date	Aircraft	Purpose of activity
18–22 November 1991	6 RAF Harriers 6 RAF Tornados	Routine training
3–7 February 1992	5 RN Sea Harriers	Routine training
10–21 February 1992	2 RAF Tornados 3 RAF Harriers 1 RAF Jaguar	Trials

All aircraft were authorised to fly to a minimum permitted height of 250 ft. The three sets of activity were not related.

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the statistics obtained during the survey of low flying by RAF strike command in early 1989.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: A representative sample of the statistics obtained from the survey of low flying begun by RAF strike command in 1989 will be provided to the Select Committee on Defence later this year.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will prohibit the use of fixed low-flying routes in the United Kingdom by front-line strike/attack/reconnaissance units.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to providing continuation training at 100 ft for RAF Tornado crews while deployed to the Gulf region.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Detailed arrangements for future deployments of RAF aircraft to the Gulf for training exercises will be the subject of discussions with the host nations concerned.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the Royal Air Force's Harrier GR7s commenced night low-level training; and what decisions have been taken on the location of such training.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Harrier GR7 squadrons have not yet commenced night low-level training. This training will be distributed throughout the United Kingdom night low flying system and we expect to carry out some training overseas.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are being taken to monitor the selection of fixed low-level routes over the United Kingdom by front-line strike/attack/reconnaissance units.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Air crew use standard routes as little as possible. Where this is unavoidable, routes are varied as much as possible and standard routes are in any case replaced at regular intervals.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities are made available in Turkey for RAF Jaguar crews deployed to Incirlik to maintain their qualifications to fly at 100 ft above ground level.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: None.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the maximum permitted speeds between initial point and simulated target, or during mock interceptions, while flying in the United Kingdom at 100 ft above ground level, for (a) Tornado aircraft, (b) Jaguar aircraft, (c) Harrier aircraft, (d) Hawk aircraft, (e) F4 aircraft and (f) Buccaneer aircraft; on what date these speed limits were introduced; which information channels or documents are used to communicate these speed limits to Royal Air Force pilots; and what advice has been given to the low flying complaints office concerning the communication of information on the new limits to the public.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: For the aircraft listed, the maximum permitted speeds between initial point and simulated target, or during mock interceptions, while flying in the United Kingdom at not less than 100 ft above ground level are as follows:

	Kts
(a) Tornado	500
(b) Jaguar	520
(c) Harrier GR5/7	420
(d) Hawk	480

There is no routine requirement for the F4 and Buccaneer aircraft to fly below 250 feet in the United Kingdom low-flying system.

Speed restrictions for most of those aircraft concerned were introduced in January 1991 and are stated in the United Kingdom Military Low Flying Handbook. The advice given to the low flying complaints office on the communication of information related to low flying in the United Kingdom is a matter for my Department.

Exercise Red Flag

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to which location the eight RAF Tornados which took part in Exercise Red Flag 92-2 flew following completion of that exercise; and what training tasks were allocated to the aircraft following participation in Red Flag.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: On completion of Exercise Red Flag 92-2 eight RAF Tornados were recovered to Goose Bay, Canada. Following a period of maintenance the aircraft will undertake tactical training from 2 to 7 April prior to deployment to Alaska for Exercise Distant Frontier 92.

Air Misses

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the air miss between a military aircraft and a civilian Cessna aircraft near Lockerbie on 8 November 1991.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No such air miss has been reported.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the air miss incident between two RAF Tornados and a Spanish airliner off Gibraltar on 29 January.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Two RAF Tornado F3 aircraft participating in a naval air defence exercise in a notified exercise area, some 45 nautical miles south of Malaga, were directed by the Royal Navy vessel controlling them to identify an unknown aircraft transiting the exercise area. The RAF aircraft carried out a standard approach to identify the aircraft and, having established that it was a civil airliner, returned to their exercise task. The approach and visual identification were conducted in accordance with normal procedures in international airspace and within the notified exercise area. No air miss report has been received from the Spanish authorities.

Hydrazine Incident, Yeovilton

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the hydrazine incident involving a Dutch air force F16 aircraft at Royal Naval Air Station Yeovilton on 2 October 1991.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The incident on 2 October 1991 occurred after a Dutch F16 aircraft operating in the vicinity of Yeovilton suffered a generator failure and was diverted to the airfield for a precautionary landing. The aircraft's emergency power unit had been engaged and in line with standard procedure a safety check was conducted to ensure that there had been no hydrazine fuel leak. On this occasion the unit had functioned correctly and there was no leak.

RAF Machrihanish

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the number of unidentified supersonic radar contacts detected in the vicinity of RAF Machrihanish since January.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There have been no unidentified supersonic radar contacts detected in the vicinity of RAF Machrihanish since January.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the recent hypersonic flights from RAF Machrihanish; whether consent for such flights by United States aircraft is required from his Department; and what assessment he has made of the effects that might be experienced by people on the ground as a result of flights at Mach 3.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have been no such flights from RAF Machrihanish.

Loch Trool

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the nature, purpose and title of the military exercise centred on Loch Trool, Galloway, in the week commencing 16 February; how many troops and aircraft took part; how many low-level sorties were carried out; and what information about the exercise was given to local Members of Parliament and the press.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Exercise Hardcore took place from 10 to 21 February and was a small-scale squadron training exercise involving attacks against targets on the ground together with intercepts by air defence aircraft. The exercise involved up to 120 men and 16 aircraft. Some 140 low-level sorties were flown during the exercise; some of these involved operational low flying which was notified to Members of Parliament in the normal way.

Luce Bay Weapons Range

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when evening opening hours of the Luce Bay weapons range were last extended; and for what purpose.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Research Agency and I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

RAF Training (Alaska)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all RAF training deployments to Alaska since 1988, stating, for each deployment, (a) the number and type of aircraft, (b) the location of the deployment, (c) the title of the exercise, (d) the types of training carried out during the deployment, (e) the number of sorties flown and (f) the additional cost of providing the training in Alaska rather than Europe or Labrador.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Four Tornado GR1 deployed to Eielson air force base for Exercise Distant Frontier in June 1990. The aircraft carried out tactical flying training and weapon practice. Forty-one sorties were flown. The information requested on additional costs is not readily indentifiable.

Tornado Crew Training

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the requirement for RAF air defence Tornado crews to be trained at Goose Bay, Canada; and what is the additional cost of providing the training at that location.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: A number of air defence crews will deploy from time to time to Goose Bay to carry out tactical training in association with RAF and other allied aircraft undertaking low-flying training at the base. The additional cost of providing air defence training for crews at Goose Bay cannot readily be identified.

Exercise Luce Belle

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from which airfield the US Air Force F-15 aircraft operated when participating in the Exercise Luce Belle noise measurement trial in June 1990.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The F-15 aircraft which took part in Exercise Luce Belle were based with the United States Air Force 36 tactical fighter wing, Bitburg, West Germany. Available records do not indicate the use of a United Kingdom airfield for refuelling.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff; and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: A review of the pay and grading of civilian staff at the atomic weapons establishment has been undertaken by the management contractor—Hunting-Brae Ltd.—as part of the current AWE management contract. In general, pay and grading structures throughout the Department, including the Department's agencies, are kept under review in accordance with Government policy.

Defence Procurement Budget

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the defence procurement budget was spent during 1990-91 in Wales, England, Scotland and Northern Ireland, respectively.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I would expect the information the hon. Gentleman requests to be published in the 1992 "Statement on the Defence Estimates".

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As at 31 December 1991, the latest date for which figures are available, 9,817 properties, representing 13·4 per cent. of the service married quarter stock, and 139 properties, representing 18·4 per cent. of the MOD civilian housing stock, were vacant. Many of these properties were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work [illegible] modernisation, some were already allotted to service families who were due to move in shortly and more than 600 were being considered for disposal.

A futher 2,774 properties, not included in the above and not all vacant, were in the process of sale. Of these, 296—11 per cent.—were for sale on the open market, 295—11 per cent.—were intended for sale on the open market, 1,002—36 per cent.—were for sale to housing associations or local authorities, 423—15 per cent.—were being sold through the services' discount scheme and 758—27 per cent.—were being offered for sale to tenants.

United Nations (Military Staff Committee)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the actions which have resulted from the meetings of the United Nations Military Staff Committee since 1981, what changes to his policies have resulted from these meetings; and what proposals he has to change the work of the United Nations Military Staff Committee.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Nations military staff committee played a useful role in the Gulf crisis as a forum for informal exchanges on naval deployments to the region. We do not rule out the possibility of using it in other ways to reinforce the valuable and close co-operation that has evolved between the five permanent members of the Security Council. But we do not believe there is a case for the formal activation of the committee under article 47 of the United Nations charter.

Diversification

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many seminars held in Britain on the diversification of defence industries his officials have attended in each quarter of the last two years.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: One in the third quarter of 1990 on defence industry conversion in the former USSR.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice or information his officials have provided to the defence industry about diversification in the last two years.

Mr. Carlisle: None, because decisions affecting the future of a company, including its product lines, are best left to the commercial judgment of its management.

Ex-RAF Pilots

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has to increase the number of ex-RAF pilots joining the Royal Auxiliary Air Force and the RAF Volunteer Reserve.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no proposals to increase the number of ex-RAF pilots joining the Royal Auxiliary Air Force or the Royal Air Force Volunteer Reserve.

Operation Granby

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is now in a position to state the additional maintenance costs that were incurred for British military equipment used during Operation Granby.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The additional defence costs of Operation Granby, include an estimated sum of around £550 million for additional maintenance.

Metallurgy

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records were kept by his Department of the two telephone conversations that took place between Walter Somers Ltd. and his Department's metallurgical expert on 16 and 22 June 1988.

Mr. Carlisle: The metallurgical expert made notes of his telephone conversations.

Housing Task Force

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration was given to setting up a housing task force prior to August 1991.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence referred in the White Paper "Britain's Army for the 90s" to his intention to set up a task group to bring service housing up to date with developments in the community. The housing task force was established shortly thereafter.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the terms of reference of the housing task force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The terms of reference of the task force were to review the arrangements for service housing, building on work already undertaken by the Department and to identify any other practical initiatives which should be taken, with a view to ultimately developing a comprehensive scheme for service housing. To this end, the task force was to:

(a) assess the extra steps which should be taken to help those leaving the services over the next three to four years.

(b) address ways of building quickly on initiatives that had already been devised to encourage home ownership by the services.

(c) examine other options to put service men and women on the housing ladder as a normal part of their career pattern.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he informed (a) the Association of District Councils, (b) the Association of Metropolitan Authorities and (c) the Association of County Councils of the contents of his briefing on the work of the housing task force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend, the Earl of Arran hopes shortly to meet representatives of local authority associations in England, Wales and Scotland together with my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning to discuss the Government announcements on housing the armed forces.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he now expects to be able to conclude his considerations of the housing task force recommendation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to my hon. Friend the Member for Fulham (Mr. Carrington) on 24 February, Official Report, column 395.

Budgets

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current budgets of all the higher level budget holders with the exception of GOC Northern Ireland, DG General Intelligence (Eurasia), DG Management and Support of Intelligence, DG of Strategic and Technical Intelligence and DG Intelligence (Rest of World).

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the planned budgets for all higher level budget holders in (a) 1992-93, (b) 1993-94 and (c) 1994-95, with the exception of GOC Northern Ireland, DG General Intelligence (Eurasia), DG Management and Support of Intelligence, DG of Strategic and Technical Intelligence and DG Intelligence (Rest of World).

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This information is derived from the long-term costing. It is not our practice to provide such details.

Married Quarters

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters are currently vacant but not awaiting major works in each region, as at 3 December.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As at 31 December 1991, a total of 8,333 service married quarters were vacant but not awaiting major works.

The regional breakdown is as follows:

Region	Total vacant excluding those awaiting major works
Northern	42
Yorkshire	680
East Midlands	482
East Anglia	511
South East	3,288
South West	1,480
West Midlands	300

Region	Total vacant excluding those awaiting major works
North West	134
Wales	216
Scotland	811
Northern Ireland	389
Total	8,333

Many of these properties were undergoing major works or modernisation, some were already allotted to service families who were due to move in shortly, and others were being considered for disposal. In addition, 1,560 properties were in the process of being sold.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his letter of 5 February, if he will provide the regional breakdown of the numbers of vacant married quarters in each year since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The regional breakdown of the number of vacant married quarters in each year since 1979 is as follows. The reporting dates over the years vary due to changes in the accounting procedures.

	15 January 1979	15 January 1980	15 April 1981	15 April 1982	15 April 1983	15 April 1984	15 January 1985	31 March 1986	31 March 1987	31 March 1988	31 March 1989	31 March 1990	31 March 1991

SSN 20

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what details of information from the long-term costings regarding the SSN20 order he has supplied to the management of VSEL.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: None.

Private Housing

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 22 November 1991, Official Report, column 356, if he will change his policy relating to the holding of information on the private housing arrangements or plans of those Army personnel who have applied for redundancy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As the Army redundancy programme has developed, information has been assembled on the current housing position, and future intentions, of some 5,200 Army personnel who indicated that they would be willing to be considered for selection. Eighty per cent. completed and returned a questionnaire. Of these 49 per cent. already owned their homes and another 33 per cent. indicated that it was their intention to purchase one.

Emergency Tours

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 November 1991, Official Report, column 86, how many units have deployed on an emergency tour after an interval of less than two years, in each year between 1980 and 1990.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following number of infantry battalions have undertaken emergency tours, either in whole or in part, at an interval of less than 24 months:

	Number
1980	Nil
1981	Nil
1982	One
1983	Two
1984	Two
1985	One
1986	Seven
1987	Four
1988	One
1989	Two
1990	Two

Redundancies

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of redundancies amongst his Department's civilian personnel that will result from "Options for Change".

Mr. Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has made clear, the number of MOD civilians is expected to fall in line with the 20 per cent. reduction in the size of the armed forces. It is too early to say exactly how many redundancies will be required.

Procurement Costs

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 28 November, Official Report, column 648-49, how much of the procurement costs of (a) GWS26 vertical launch Sea Wolf missile system, (b) Spearfish torpedo, (c) TRIGAT medium-range missile, (d) Rapier field standard C and (e) EH101 ASW helicopter will be incurred in each year up to 1994-95.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is not our practice to make such details public.

Modernisation Programmes

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 December, Official Report, column 385 what is the cost of the extensive modernisation programme planned for Tidworth garrison; and what other extensive modernisation programmes are currently planned for property belonging to his Department.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: About £250 million is also planned for Aldershot. There are no other programmes currently planned of equivalent scale. Details of other current schemes can be found in the long-term project table section of the supply estimates.

Royal William Yard

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has to dispose of Royal William yard at Devonport dockyards; what is the current state of repair of the buildings at Royal William yard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: On current plans, Royal William yard will be surplus to Ministry of Defence requirements by the end of next year. We are currently examining options for disposal and hope to make a decision very soon. In the meantime, the buildings are being maintained.

Special Saving Scheme

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of the special saving scheme he is planning to help service personnel buy their own homes.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The cost of the special savings scheme will depend upon how many service men take advantage of the scheme, and the period for which they save. When fully operational, it might cost up to £50 million a year. This will represent a new commitment for which additional provision will be made.

WE177 Replacement

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the number of procurement options for the possible replacement of the WE177 free-fall bomb that are currently being considered.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Macdonald) on 19 December 1991, Official Report, column 284.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will change his policy relating to ethnic monitoring of promotion within the services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Our policy relating to ethnic monitoring within the armed forces, including the monitoring of promotion, is currently under review and we shall be announcing the outcome of this review shortly.

Resettlement Provision

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to complete his review of resettlement provision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the note mentioned in the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Fulham (Mr. Carrington) on 24 February 1992 Official Report, column 395.

Nuclear-powered Submarines

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the feasibility studies into SSN20 class nuclear-powered submarines were completed.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The studies into the then proposed SSN20 class were completed in 1989.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the first of class of a new generation of nuclear-powered submarines is currently expected to enter service by the end of the century; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The studies, which I announced in the debate on the Royal Navy on 27 June 1991, Official Report, column 1181, into a second batch of Trafalgar class nuclear-powered submarines to replace the Swiftsure class are now under way. Subject to the outcome of these studies, the submarines could begin entering service around the turn of the century.

Rapid Reaction Corps

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance from NATO he has taken into account in determining the proposed levels of spares holdings for the British units which will be deployed with the rapid reaction corps.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO guidance on stock levels is currently under review by member nations and NATO's military authorities and will be taken into account when it is approved.

Logistic planning for the United Kingdom element of a rapid reaction corps is still in its early stages.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether British units stationed in Germany as part of the proposed rapid reaction corps will be capable of more rapid deployment than those British units currently assigned to NATO as part of NORTHAG.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Precise readiness requirements for units assigned to the ACE rapid reaction corps have not yet been decided, but in general we would expect them to be less demanding than those that applied when we faced the possibility of surprise attack by Soviet forces stationed in eastern Europe.

Steel Tubes, Iraq

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 December, Official Report, column 383, what action was taken by his Department as a result of establishing that the steel tubes which Walter Somers Ltd. proposed to export to Iraq were almost certainly pressure vessels of some kind.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The discussions with Walter Somers Ltd. were undertaken following a request from the Department of Trade and Industry for advice on the defence implications of the steel tubes which the company proposed to export to Iraq. Following these discussions the Department of Trade and Industry were informed that no military application could be established.

Ceremonial Uniforms

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 3 December, Official Report, column 87, what records are kept of contributions towards the cost of purchasing ceremonial uniforms.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Parachute Regiments

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 19 December, Official Report, column 285, whether he is now in a position to write to the hon. Member for Clackmannan regarding recruiting levels in the parachute regiments.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I wrote to the hon. Member on 3 March 1992.

Northern Ireland Tours

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 November, Official Report, column 86, what impact on the ability of units to react rapidly will result from units based in Germany undertaking a greater share of short, unaccompanied operational tours in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are confident that the Army will be able to maintain appropriate levels of readiness for NATO and national tasks.

NATO Review

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the review of readiness and availability requirements for NATO forces has been completed; and what effect Operation Granby has had on that review.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Good progress is being made on NATO's continuing review of readiness and availability requirements and has already resulted in some relaxation in the readiness of NATO forces. Details are classified. Work is underway to complete the review and all relevant factors, including the lessons to be learnt from the Gulf conflict, are being taken into account.

Information

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 1992, Official Report, column 329, what are the factors which determine whether it is appropriate to make available information on plans for and progress of individual projects.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Plans for significant new projects are normally announced when decisions to place contracts or invite tenders are made. Progress on major projects is reported regularly in the major projects statement and the defence equipment programme review.

Homelessness

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1991, Official Report, column 386, what consideration has been given to his policy relating to the production of separate certification of impending discharge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to my answer of 20 December 1991, Official Report, column 386.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 6 March 1992

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mrs. K. Aidid

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the letter of 24 October 1991 from the hon. Member for Woolwich about the case of Mrs. K. Aidid of Chatham house, Rideout street, SE18, reference number K. 427442.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 27 February 1992.

Prisoners (Ill Health)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances prisoners who have been prematurely released because of ill health are recalled to serve the remainder of their sentences; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: A prisoner's medical condition is only one of the factors taken into account when assessing his suitability for release on parole. If a prisoner is released on parole, he may be recalled to prison if he breaches any of the conditions attached to his release on licence: he would not be recalled simply because of an improvement in his medical condition.

Where a prisoner is released on the ground of serious illness by the exercise of the royal prerogative of mercy, the sentence is remitted. There is therefore no possibility of being recalled to prison.

Inquests

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inquests were held into death in prisons, in police custody, psychiatric and special hospitals in the last five years.

Mr. John Patten: Information on inquests on deaths in police custody is published annually. The most recent figures, for 1990, are contained in Home Office statistical bulletin 12/91 and in the annual report of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. Figures for earlier years are given in the annual report of Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary.

The only other information available in my Department is the number of inquests on deaths which occurred in prison establishments, during the last five years. These were:

	Inquests
1987	80
1988	80
1989	80
1990	87
1991	71

Drugs

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates have been made of the total volume of acquisitive crime committed to finance addiction for the last year for which such information is available; and what estimates have been made of the growth of this form of offending over the last 12 years.

Mr. John Patten: Estimates for heroin misusers are published in paragraph 2·4 of the 1991 report "Drug Misusers and the Criminal Justice System Part 1: Community Resources and the Probation Service" by the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs, a copy of which is in the Library. Estimates for crimes by those addicted to other substances are not available.

Drug-related Crime

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 42, whether he will place in the Library estimates of drug-related crimes involving people other than heroin misusers.

Mr. John Patten: There are at present no reliable data on which such estimates might be based.

Bomb Warnings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when, and by whom, the earliest warning of a bomb planted at London main line railway stations on 28 February was received; and if he will list the times at which the warning was received by (a) British Rail at London Bridge, (b) the Metropolitan police, (c) the British Transport police, (d) the London ambulance service, (e) the London fire and civil defence authority and (f) the press and broadcasting media.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: At 08.20 hours on 28 February the Metropolitan police were notified by Ulster Television that it had received a telephone warning. The Metropolitan police then tasked the various agencies concerned. I understand that Ulster Television received the telephone warning at 08.15 hours.

Criminal Justice Liaison Committees

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusions he has reached on the formation of the area criminal justice liaison committees recommended by Lord Justice Woolf in his report on the prison disturbances in 1990.

Mr. John Patten: Following consultation with criminal justice services and discussion in the Criminal Justice Consultative Council, the Government have decided that 24 area committees should be set up in England and Wales. The purpose of these committees will be to promote better understanding, co-operation and co-ordination in the administration of the criminal justice system and early tasks are likely to include the overseeing of arrangements for the implementation of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 and monitoring the implementation of the recommendations of the pre-trial issues working group.

Members of the committee will include representatives from the probation, prison, police and Crown prosecution services, justices' clerks, magistrates, barristers, solicitors and directors of social services. The committee will be chaired by circuit administrators or, in some cases, court administrators of the Lord Chancellor's Department.

Nominations for members of committees will be sought forthwith from representative criminal justice system organisations and invitations will be issued shortly thereafter. The Government hope that the committees will have their first meetings by about May.

ENVIRONMENT

Planning Applications (Publicity)

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the minimum time he is to allow for local authorities to have the text of the new regulations advising of the arrangements for compulsory publicity for all planning applications before they come into force; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: We intend to issue the text of the amending order, and guidance on it, as soon as possible.

Housing (Redundant Service Men)

Sir Alan Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to ensure that local authorities accept responsibility for housing redundant service men without requiring evidence of eviction.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has announced a range of measures to help those who will be leaving the forces under "Options for Change". The homelessness code of guidance issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment gives specific guidance to local authorities on dealing with homelessness applications from ex-service personnel. It makes clear that authorities should not insist on a court order for possession before considering an application.

Waste Disposal

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what timetable he intends for the divestment by the statutory joint waste disposal authorities of their waste disposal operations; whether he plans to abolish these authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The statutory joint waste disposal authorities will shortly be sent notices of our intention to direct them to establish separate waste disposal companies or, where they are intending to privatise their waste disposal operations, a proposed timetable for this. All waste disposal authorities will then actively be involved in separating their operations from regulation and contract management. The timetable for each statutory authority will depend on individual circumstances, on which authorities will have an opportunity to make representations, but I expect that divestment will essentially be complete by April 1993. This separation is a major advance, introduced in the Environmental Protection Act 1990, in support of higher waste disposal standards.

The changes brought by the Environmental Protection Act and the proposed creation of an environment agency, will remove most of these authorities' current responsibilities. I have therefore decided that there is no role, in the medium and long term, for separate statutory joint waste disposal authorities.

This decision has been reached after consulting each of the six authorities and carefully considering the cases which they have made for their retention.

I have however been impressed by the concern expressed by each of the authorities that existing beneficial contracts should not be put at risk through abolition. Some authorities have also expressed doubts on whether our current powers for effecting changes to the authorities are satisfactory. Against this background, I shall be seeking an early opportunity for primary legislation to ensure that this reorganisation is achieved in a smooth and effective manner.

The closer association of waste disposal decisions with those who must meet the costs will, I am sure, lead to more efficient and more responsive waste disposal services for the community.

Royal William Yard, Plymouth

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans there are for the future of the Royal William yard and other sites in Plymouth.

Mr. Heseltine: After detailed discussion with my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence, I am today offering the local authorities the possibility of a new urban development corporation (UDC) in Plymouth. The new UDC would be responsible for regenerating parts of the defence estate which are surplus to the Ministry of Defence's operational requirements, together with nearby vacant or run-down areas.

Provided the local authorities respond positively to our proposals and accept the offer of partnership it involves, the UDC's task would be to promote development in its designated area and to help revitalise the local economy. The Secretary of State for Defence and I propose to make available from our budgets £45 million to the new UDC. In addition, the Ministry of Defence will be handing over to the UDC significant amounts of development land surplus to its requirements.

The new UDC will take a strategic view of the redevelopment of the area. I will be looking to the UDC to prepare a vision for the future of the area which takes account of the potential for employment, infrastructure, environment and leisure opportunities. The new UDC would need to work closely with its partners in the local council and the private sector to ensure that its objective of regeneration can be met.

One of the jewels in its crown will be the Royal William yard, which comprises one of the most important surviving groups of historic maritime buildings in the United Kingdom. With the rationalisation of the Ministry of Defence's operations in Plymouth dockyards, I am confident that the future of the Royal William yard and other sites would be best served by the comprehensive approach to regeneration which the UDC would be able to offer.

Methane Gas

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what inquiries his Department has made into the leakage of methane gas from abandoned coal mines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: A review of the extent of natural contamination in Great Britain, including methane emissions from coal mines, is being undertaken for my Department by the British Geological Survey and this is due to be completed in the summer of 1993. Research on the planning response to methane emissions from disused coal mines is in preparation and a contract is due to be placed in the summer of 1992.

Empty Council Houses

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authority dwellings have been reported as vacant in the London borough of Tower Hamlets in each year since 1984; what percentage of the local authority housing stock these figures represent; and what is the comparable percentage in other London boroughs.

Sir George Young [holding answer 5 March 1992]: The available information on empty local authority dwellings is as follows:

	Tower Hamlets Borough Council		Other London authorities
at 1 April	Number	Percentage of stock	Percentage of stock
1984	1,464	7·7	3·7
1985	1,534	8·2	3·8
1986	3,200	6·6	3·3
1987	2,825	5·8	3·2
1988	2,526	5·3	2·8
1989	1,840	4·0	2·7
1990	1,758	4·0	2·8
1991	1,895	4·5	2·4

Notes:

(a) Local authorities report the numbers of their own dwellings that are vacant in their annual housing investment programme returns (HIP1).

(b) In 1986, dwellings previously owned by the Greater London council were transferred to the boroughs. For 1984 and 1985, all GLC dwellings, including those which were subsequently transferred to Tower Hamlets borough council, are included in the dwelling stock of 'other London authorities'.

EMPLOYMENT

Industrial Accidents

35. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the number of industrial accidents in the Greater London area for each of the last five years.

Mr. Forth: The available information is provided in the following table:

Occupational injuries[1] occurring in the Greater London area reported[2] to HSE's factory and agricultural inspectorates and local authorities.

Year[3]	Fatal	[4]Major	[5]Over 3 day	Total
1986-87	52	3,587	14,649	18,288
1987-88	66	3,212	14,991	18,269
1988-89	66	2,943	15,195	18,204
1989-90	51	2,580	14,605	17,236

[1] Injuries at work to employees, self-employed people and members of the public injured as a result of someone else's work activity.

[2] Under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, 1985 (RIDDOR).

[3] Years commencing 1 April.

[4] As defined under RIDDOR.

[5] An injury causing incapacity for work for more than three days and reportable for employed persons only.

[6] Includes reports made to the HSE's quarries inspectorate.

[7] Provisional.

A. H. Marks and Co. Ltd.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will place in the Library a copy of the notes compiled by the Health and Safety Executive on the death of Louis Drake at A. H. Marks and Co. Ltd., Low Moor.

Mr. Forth: No. Notes made by inspectors are not equivalent to police note books and are not kept with a view to subsequent disclosure or use in evidence.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Staff

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table showing the number of (a) men and (b) women in his Department in each of grades (i) 1, (ii) 2, (iii) 3, (iv) 4, (v) 5, (vi) 6, (vii) 7, (viii) SEO, (ix) HEO, (x) administrative trainee, (xi) EO, (xii) CO and (xiii) CA.

[1] All non-industrial staff as at 1 January 1991.

[2] Non-industrial home civil servants in post as at 1 February 1992 (staff on loan/career breaks are not included).

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Dr. Mawhinney: No pay and grading reviews have been undertaken in the Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland Departments or executive agencies over the last 12 months. Reviews have been carried out in two non-departmental public bodies, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the Staff Commission for Education and Library Boards, both by Hay Management Consultants.

Criminal Damage Compensation

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many claims have been made for compensation for criminal damage to agricultural property; and how much compensation has been paid in respect of such claims in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested is as follows:

Financial Year	Number of claims received	Amount of compensation paid £
1987-88	58	120,759
1988-89	56	201,577
1989-90	58	214,628
1990-91	79	137,378
[1]1991	82	155,449

[1] To 29 February 1992.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps will be taken to ensure that Northern Ireland and objective 1 regions are allocated the full finance as stipulated by the European Commission in respect of the suckler cow premium.

Mr. Hanley: The rate of suckler cow premium is being increased by £7·95 to £59·64 per cow in the less favoured areas and £55·38 elsewhere. This rate will apply throughout the United Kingdom. Funding was not available to meet the costs of paying the extra £2·40 to all United Kingdom producers.

Income Support

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many income support claimants there are at each social security office in Northern Ireland; and how many of these are in receipt of sickness benefit, invalidity benefit, unemployment benefit, or retirement pension.

Mr. Hanley: Social security operational matters are the responsibility of Mr. Alec Wylie, chief executive of the Social Security Agency. He will write to the hon. Gentleman with such information as is available and copies of his reply will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people there are in receipt of each income support premium in each social security office in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: I understand from Mr. Alec Wylie, chief executive of the Social Security Agency that the information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of dependants in respect of whom income support is paid to claimants by each social security office in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: Social security operational matters are the responsibility of Mr. Alex Wylie, chief executive of the Social Security Agency. However, I understand that no record is held of the numbers of dependants in respect of whom income support is paid to claimants.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are receiving unemployment benefit from each social security office in Northern Ireland showing how many are or are not in receipt of income support.

Mr. Hanley: Social security operational matters are the responsibility of Mr. Alec Wylie, chief executive of the Social Security Agency who informs me that no record is held of the number of people receiving unemployment benefit who are also in receipt of income support.

Political Talks

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what agreements have been reached about future representation of the respective political parties at talks on Northern Ireland's political future.

Mr. Brooke: The understanding is that talks would proceed on the basis outlined in my statement to the House of 26 March 1991 at columns 765-66 and involve the four main constitutional political parties in Northern Ireland.

Dyslexia

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures or guidelines apply in respect of dyslexic children under school transfer procedures.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 5 March 1992]: None. The arrangements are the same for all children except those for whom a statement of special educational needs is maintained. Such children may not take part in the transfer procedure. If any parents think that their child's grade in the tests does not reflect his or her academic ability they can make a case to the relevant grammar school together with any appropriate information and evidence.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Russia (EC Beef)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what administrative and other costs are deducted by the Russians for every kilogram of EC beef sold under the assistance programme at the price of 60 roubles per kilogram on the Russian market.

Mrs. Chalker: The local costs of distribution and administration are met by the Russians. In St. Petersburg —but not in Moscow—they are financed by allocating to them 20 per cent. of the roubles received from the sale of EC beef. The remainder is placed in a counterpart fund, set up by the European Community and the Russian authorities, which is used to help the needy.

Vietnam

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what value of bilateral education aid is proposed for Vietnam; and how it will be spent.

Mrs. Chalker: We are discussing an economic reform orientated training project with the Vietnamese Government. The cost is not yet settled, but is likely to be of the order of £1 million over three to four years. We are also continuing our support for non-governmental organisation projects, for which we have committed £1·86 million since May 1990. Many of these NGO projects have a practical training component.

Women in Development

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British aid policy in relation to women in development.

Mrs. Chalker: To mark International Womens Day on Sunday 8 March we have published a booklet, "Women in Development", copies of which are in the Library. This explains our "women in development" policy and progress in implementing it.

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funding he proposes to make available to United Kingdom non-governmental organisations in 1992-93 through the Overseas Development Administration's joint funding scheme.

Mrs. Chalker: I propose to increase the allocation to the joint funding scheme by £5 million to £28 million in 1992-93. This represents an increase of about 22 per cent. on the 1991-92 budget and demonstrates the Government's continuing commitment to, and confidence in, the contribution made by voluntary organisations to developing countries.

THE ARTS

Heritage Objects

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister for the Arts what is his response to the recommendation of the export reviewing committee about the introduction of a list of heritage objects for which export licences would not be granted.

Mr. Renton: The Committee's report makes a range of recommendations for improving the system of controlling the export of heritage objects. I have asked for comments on the report to reach me by 31 March. A list was recommended by the committee, but only on the assumption that new sources of funding would not be available. If the national lottery makes available, as I hope it will, new funds that will help keep in this country works of art that are important to our heritage, then a list should not be necessary for this purpose.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Market Testing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

The Attorney-General: The legal secretariat to the Law Officers, the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Serious Fraud Office have retained no private sector consultancy firms. The Crown Prosecution Service has retained P E International to advise on the service's market testing programme. This appointment was not the result of a competitive tender.

Magistrates

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Attorney-General how many magistrates are (a) men and (b) women.

The Attorney-General: As at 1 January 1992 there were 16,105 men and 13,336 women sitting as lay magistrates in England and Wales.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff; and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

The Attorney-General: My departments have not carried out any such reviews over the last 12 months.

Judiciary (Retirement Age)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Attorney-General whether he has any plans to bring forward proposals to reduce the retirement age for the judiciary.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor has today written to bodies representative of the judiciaries in England and Wales and Northern Ireland seeking their views on reducing the retirement age of the judiciary to 70. The text of his letter is as follows:

> "I am writing to seek views on the appropriate maximum retirement age for the judiciary. I believe that the time has come to reduce the retirement age for the judiciary, and also to introduce a standard retirement age for all judges and judicial officers. What I would propose therefore is that all judges and judicial officers from the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary and Heads of Divisions downwards should, in future, be required to retire at the latest on their 70th birthdays.
> I intend that the new retirement age of 70 for full-time service should apply to those who are appointed to full-time judicial office after it comes into force. Anyone in full-time judicial office on the relevant day, and who remains in the same office, will be able to retain his or her existing maximum retirement age.
> I would welcome your views on the position of someone holding judicial office on the relevant day who is subsequently appointed to a different, usually more senior, judicial office. The two main possibilities here would seem to be to treat the change of office as a new appointment, with the consequence that the new retirement age of 70 will apply, or to allow the person concerned to retain the entitlement to retire at the present maximum retirement age of the junior office.
> A change in the retirement age will require primary legislation. Subject to the results of this consultation, I would intend to make any changes at the same time as the new judicial pension scheme is introduced.
> I propose that these changes should apply to Northern Ireland as well as to England and Wales. The Secretary of State for Scotland will be consulting on similar proposals for Scotland.
> I would welcome your views on these proposals. It would be helpful if they could be sent to Mr. S. F. Smith, Lord Chancellor's Department, Room 204, Trevelyan House, 30 Great Peter Street, London SW1P 2BY to arrive no later than 31 March 1992."

Cases (Abandonment)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Attorney-General what consultation, and with whom, has to take place before a judge can decide to abandon a case; and whether members of the jury are included in such discussions.

The Attorney-General: A trial judge in criminal proceedings may in appropriate circumstances make any one of a range of orders the effect of which is that the whole or part of a prosecution cannot be proceeded with. The most frequently encountered of such orders is a directed acquittal following a submission of "no case to answer" or, under section 17 of the Criminal Justice Act 1967, where the prosecution has offered no evidence. Trial judges also have some inherent powers to stay proceedings and in certain circumstances may order that some or all of the counts in an indictment lie on the file.

The relevant parties to the proceedings are entitled to be heard before any such order is made. The making of any such order is the responsibility of the trial judge alone.

Estates (Winding-up Procedures)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Attorney-General if he will put forward proposals to impose time limits within which solicitors will be required to complete the procedures for the winding-up of estates, varying the time limits according to the values of the estates concerned.

The Attorney-General: The amount of work involved in the administration of estates varies too much from case to case to allow fixed time limits to be imposed for winding up: the degree of complexity of an estate is not necessarily related to its size. The quick and efficient administration of estates is best achieved by encouraging high standards on the part of solicitors. This is a matter for their professional body, the Law Society, as they are a self regulating profession. The Law Society offers guidance to practitioners on best practice; and has recommended ways in which practitioners might streamline the administration of estates, in their recently published "Probate Practitioners Handbook". Failure to act with due dispatch when dealing with a client's affairs is a ground on which a complaint can be made to the Solicitors Complaints Bureau.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Firms (Coalfield Areas)

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about new business support measures to assist small firms in coalfield areas.

Mr. Lilley: As foreseen in my statement on 17 February and following the European Commission's approval of the RECHAR programmes on 26 February, I am introducing in the English RECHAR areas a new £14 million scheme for business support measures, which will contribute to those programmes. This is subject to the Commission's approval under the state aids section of the EEC treaty.

Department of Trade and Industry regional offices will respond flexibly to the needs of each coalfield area, selecting the most suitable assistance from a range of authorised measures.

This scheme which will be additional to the Government's existing assistance for small firms, will help diversify the economy of ex-coalmining areas by providing assistance for business start-ups and for small to medium-sized companies seeking growth and innovation development.

The authorised measures are:

Support for economic promotion agencies and local community initiatives, e.g. local task forces and business clubs and for specialist consultancy support not otherwise provided.

Support for the provision of common services and feasibility studies relating to the provision of managed workspace and move-on business accommodation.

Encouragement for innovation in industry and its commercial application in small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs).

Assistance for risk appraisal by non-profit making organisations.

Support for the provision of information to SMEs to improve their access to relevant markets.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will be inviting the local enterprise companies in Scottish RECHAR areas to promote business development schemes of their own tailored to local circumstances. Such schemes will be eligible for support from the European regional development fund and matching funding will be provided by the Government, under transitional arrangements for 1992-93.

In addition to the agreed new arrangements for regional innovation grants which will apply to all Great Britain, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales will be extending regional investment grants into the designated RECHAR areas in Wales.

Kimberly-Clark Factory, Humberside

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress on Kimberly-Clark's proposed project to build a factory at Barton-on-Humber.

Mr. Lilley: On 20 February, Glanford borough council resolved to grant planning permission to Kimberly-Clark to build a factory at Barton-on-Humber unless the Secretary of State for the Environment decided to call it in for his own determination.

I am very pleased to say my right hon. Friend has now written to say he will not be doing so. The way is now open for the council to proceed.

Over 770 jobs will be created directly by this project, which was won for the United Kingdom amid fierce competition from other European countries. It is another example of the success of this Government's policies in attracting investment from abroad.

Regional Enterprise Grants

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the future of the regional enterprise grants scheme.

Mr. Lilley: On 1 April 1992, subject to European Commission approval, the following changes will be made to regional enterprise grants. There are two types of assistance under this scheme—innovation and investment grants.

Regional innovation grants (RIN):

- will be extended to Intermediate and EC objective 2 areas not already covered;
- firms will be able to apply for more than one innovation grant;
- grants will now be available to firms employing under 50 people instead of below 25.
- additional advice will be provided to encourage business planning and the exploitation and marketing of successful projects.

Regional investment grants (RIG) will be subject to a simple additionality test which will require applicants to show that the grant is necessary if the project is to go ahead.

Additional signposting and advice will be provided for both grants to encourage business planning and exploitation and marketing of successful projects.

Regional innovation grants have proved to be cost-effective and an important trigger for new developments. These changes open the doors to many more firms to take up innovation opportunities.

Courts and Legal Services Act 1990

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the Government's proposals for implementing the tying-in provisions of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990.

Mr. Leigh: I have today issued a consultative document setting out the Government's revised proposals for the subordinate legislation required to bring into force the provisions in the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 on the tying-in of services to residential property loans. Following suggestions made during the earlier consultation, we propose to supplement legislation under the Courts and Legal Services Act by also making regulations under the Consumer Credit Act 1974.

Our proposals have two parts. First, lenders and brokers will have to make clear to their customers if there is a link between a loan and the sale of some other service. This information would have to be provided to every customer inquiring about the availability of a loan secured on a home, regardless of the purpose of the loan.

Secondly, lenders will have to give borrowers a comprehensive statement of the impact of the terms and conditions of the loan of the decision whether or not to take any other service with it. This information would have to be provided with the lender's offer of a loan to buy a home.

I want to ensure that borrowers are not coerced or misled into buying services from mortgage lenders that they either do not want or would prefer to buy elsewhere.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

National Music Curriculum

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will meet a delegation from the Incorporated Society of Musicians to discuss the national music curriculum; and if he will make a statement on his response to their representations.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how long after the close of the consultation period on his proposals for music in the national curriculum final orders will be laid before Parliament;

(2) whether he intends to amend his proposals for music in the national curriculum to take account of the submission he has received from the Incorporated Society of Musicians;

(3) how many submissions, and from which organisations, he has received on his proposals for music in the national curriculum.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has received around 800 representation on his proposals for music in the national curriculum, as set out in the draft order published on 27 January. These have come from a wide range of organisations including local education authorities, educational, subject and professional associations.

My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to meet a delegation from the Incorporated Society of Musicians (ISM). He will make the final order for music in the national curriculum after taking due account of the points made in the responses to the consultation exercise, including those from ISM.

GCSE

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many letters he has received criticising the proposed changes to GCSE; how many of these were from parents and governors; what response he has made to the criticisms expressed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: As I said in my reply of 24 February to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) at column 377, varying views have been expressed in the letters we have received from different interested groups and individuals on the subject. My right hon. and learned

Friend and I have said that in order to maintain public confidence in GCSE, and given the difficulties of ensuring that course work is conducted under sufficiently uniform conditions and marked against nationwide standards, its course work element needs to be kept within agreed limits.

Stratford School

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will place in the Library correspondence received from the former governors of Stratford school, prior to its change to grant-maintained status, and copies of the formal application for that status made by the persons responsible for the application, together with other official communications made to him, or from him to them, since their assumption of office.

Mr. Eggar: No.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the sums he calculates as being due to him from any London borough, or other education authority, in respect of registered pupils at Stratford school, the sums already paid, or due, from each authority, together with the basis of calculation for each and the method of verification of attendance that they may use.

Mr. Eggar: The annual maintenance grant (AMG) of Stratford school has been calculated on the basis of regulation 8 of the Education (Grant-Maintained Schools) (Finance) Regulations 1991, (SI 1991 No. 353). The whole of the final AMG for the school of £1,533,311 is a charge on Newham local education authority. To the extent that any pupils at the school belong to the area of another LEA, it is for Newham to recover their costs directly from any such LEA.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the occasions since 1 January when any inspector visited Stratford school together with the purpose and the duration of each visit.

Mr. Eggar: HMI makes regular termly visits to the school and keep in close contact with the progress being made. The last such visit was in December, the next will be later this month.

School Attendance Officers

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what person or body has the responsibility of school attendance officer for any grant-maintained school; and what reports they are required to make to him or to the local education authorities from which moneys or fees are due by virtue of a pupil's attendance at such schools.

Mr. Eggar: Responsibility for enforcing the school attendance legislation rests with local education authorities to which all schools, other than independent schools for boarders only, have a duty to report regular absentees. It is for each grant-maintained school to keep its register and to decide what action it should take to encourage regular attendance by its pupils.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the legal provisions concerning the power of governors of grant-maintained schools to nominate a person to whom money may be paid by him or from other persons or bodies; and what obligation is placed on any body of governors for auditing of annual accounts; and for what period.

Mr. Eggar: Money from the Department is paid direct to each grant-maintained school by placing it in its bank account, not by giving it to individuals. The schools are required to maintain rigorous controls over the drawing down of grant and other funds from their bank accounts. Schools are also required to appoint independent professional auditors and ensure their accounts are audited every year. Audit appointments are made for one year, renewable at the governing body's discretion.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what powers he has given to governors of grant-maintained schools to delegate their authority for appointment of any staff.

Mr. Eggar: The governing body of a grant-maintained school has power to delegate its functions under the articles of Government with respect to the appointment of staff. Whether or not the governing body has delegated any of its responsibilities with regard to the appointment of staff, the body or person whose responsibility it is must consider any advice given by the head teacher before determining to appoint any member of staff, except the head teacher's successor. There are of course a large number of statutory requirements which apply generally to the appointment of staff.

Funding Applications, Bradford

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, South on 25 February, Official Report, column 803, if he will list the deficiencies in the applications from Bradford for central Government funding.

Mr. Eggar: The deficiencies I had in mind included Bradford's initial failure to bid for a supplementary credit approval in 1991-92 to support additional capital expenditure on its schools; an initially unrealistic bid against the raising standards in inner city schools activity in the Department's 1992-93 grants for education support and training programme; and a bid for section 11 grant for 1992-93 which required a substantial amount of re-working to meet the new criteria for section 11. I have on a number of occasions made my concerns known to representatives of the authority. However, yesterday I announced that the submission by Greenhead school in Bradford under the technology schools initiative was one of the 21 best bids received by the Department.

Dental Health Research

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in tabular form details of all dental health research projects receiving funding from his Department; and if he will specify the nature and duration of each project, the name of the principal researcher and the institution at which the work is being carried out.

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The main agency through which the Government support medical research in this country is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC receives grant-in-aid from this Department, but is an independent body and decides how its money should be spent in the light of its judgment of priorities, opportunities and quality of research applications. MRC is supporting the following dental research projects:

Research institution	Principal researcher	Title of grant	Duration of grant
University of Bristol	Professor C. D. Stephens	Development of an expert system for the planning of simple orthodontic treatment	1 July 1988 to 30 June 1992

The MRC also supports dental research on a longer term basis at its dental research unit directed by Professor N. W. Johnson at the London Hospital medical college, and through a group of dental researchers on its external scientific staff at the University of Bristol. Their research has been focused as follows:

MRC dental research unit

IGG antibodies to bacteroides gingivalis, b. intermedius, fusobacterium nucleatum and wolinella recta in patients with severe destructive periodontitis.

Detection of IGG antibodies in human sera to outer membrane components of bacteriodes species with reference to protease activity.

Perification and characterisation of bacteroides proteins identified as possible markers of periodontal disease susceptibility or activity.

Interaction of polymorphonuclear leucocytes and specific IGG opsonins to b. gingivalis in patients with severe destructive periodontitis.

Identification of markers of disease activity in gingival crevicular fluid.

Responsiveness of human gingival epithelial cells to inflammatory stimuli.

Statistical methods for data from periodontal research.

A longitudinal cohort study of the natural progression of periodontal breakdown in adults.

MRC dental group (Principal Researcher Dr. D. F. G. Poole)

Fluoride in the oral environment for controlling the initiation and progress of carious lesions.

Physiochemical and biochemical equilibria in the saliva-plaque-tooth system.

Research, including dental health research, is also conducted in universities using grants from the Universities Funding Council which is funded by the DES. Details of specific projects are not held centrally.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer of 27 March 1990, Official Report, columns 165-66, to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field), concerning the numbers dependent on income support.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is in the table.

Number of claimants in receipt of Income Support.

Year	Great Britain	England	Wales	Scotland
1989	4,161,000	3,429,000	246,000	486,000
1990	4,180,000	3,451,000	248,000	481,000

Number of partners and dependent children of claimants in receipt of Income Support

Year	[illegible]at Britain	England	Wales	Scotland
1989	2,862,000	2,381,000	167,000	313,000
1990	2,843,000	2,370,000	177,000	296,000

Notes:

All figures are rounded to the nearest thousand and may not therefore sum.

The figures for 1989 may differ from those previously given. The earlier figures were based upon provisional estimates from the quarterly statistical enquiry for May 1989.

Staffing

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer of 16 March 1990, Official Report, columns 406-7, concerning the number of staff per 100,000 claimants.

Miss Widdecombe: The total number of staff administering the social security programme per 100,000 receiving benefits for the years 1979-80 to 1990-91 is in the table.

	Number
1979-80	384
1980-81	372
1981-82	353
1982-83	339
1983-84	325
1984-85	311
1985-86	316
1986-87	314
1987-88	326
1988-89	326
1989-90	307
1990-91	295

Seafarers (National Insurance)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the estimated cost in a full tax year of restricting the employer's national insurance contribution to the level of the employee's contribution in the case of United Kingdom seafarers.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is not available.

Pensions

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of (a) doubling and (b) quadrupling the premium payable to pensioners over the age of 80 years.

Miss Widdecombe: The gross extra cost of doubling and quadrupling the retirement pension age addition would be £28 million and £84 million respectively. These costs do not take into account the savings in income-related benefits.

Resettlement Units

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement regarding the further replacement of resettlement units.

Miss Widdecombe: The development of replacement provision for the resettlement units at Stormy Down in South Wales and Southampton are considerably advanced. During the next 12 months the proposals for each of these units are expected to be complete. I have therefore agreed that our direct operation of these units should cease by 31 March 1993. As with all replacement schemes we will need to be satisfied, at that date, that sufficient suitable alternative accommodation is being provided.

Together the proposals for these two units will produce over 200 bed spaces which is far in excess of those in the respective units.

This announcement together with my earlier one, on 5 February at column 210, on the transfer of the units at Camden and Newbury also by March 1993 will considerably advance our intention to withdraw from the direct operations of resettlement units.

National Insurance

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much would be raised by abolishing the ceiling on national insurance contributions.

Mr. Jack: We estimate that if the upper earnings limit for employees' contributions was abolished, the revenue yield for 1992-93 would be about £2·7 billion. If the self-employed upper profits limit was also abolished the additional yield would be about £0·5 billion.

WALES

Usk Bypass

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding proposals for an Usk bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None. This is a county road matter and one for Gwent county council as the local highway authority.

U[illegible]k (Heavy Lorries)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding a ban on heavy lorries through Usk and over the River Usk in Usk.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has recently received a letter from Usk town council. This is a county road matter and one for Gwent county council as the responsible highway authority.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current level of unemployment in the Clwyd South-West constituency among school leavers in the 16 to 19 years age range.

Mr. David Hunt: In January 1992 there were 314 unemployed claimants in the Clwyd, South-West constituency aged under 20 years. A separate count of school leavers is not available.

Latchkey Children

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent in Wales on pilot schemes to cater for the care of latchkey children in 1991-92; and how much is budgeted to be spent in 1992-93.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: In April 1991, under the Department's scheme of support for child and family services, a grant was awarded to the Kids Clubs' Network for a new out of school care development project in Wales. The project development officer was appointed on 22 July 1991 and grant paid in 1991-92 amounts to £24,022. On 19 February 1992, I announced a grant award of £40,812 for this project in 1992-93.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the hospitals in Wales now considering applying for trust status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: There is increasing recognition from within the national health service in Wales that NHS trust status is the natural organisational model for the delivery of patient services. The Pembrokeshire NHS trust will become operational on 1 April. The statement by the hon. Gentleman at the Welsh Labour conference that Pembroke NHS trust would be brought back within the NHS under a Labour Government betrays either extreme ignorance of the fact that such trusts are, as their name implies, part of the NHS or an attempt to mislead the people of Wales.

In addition, 14 health units have been invited to prepare applications for NHS trust status from April 1993. The details were given by my right hon. Friend on 19 December 1991. The eventual decision whether to submit a formal application is a matter for the individual hospital or health unit in the light of local circumstances.

Special Protection Areas

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many proposals for special protection area designation have been formally submitted to his Department by the statutory conservation agencies or transferred from the Department of the Environment and not yet progressed to designation; and if he will list the dates on which those submissions were made.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The department has four proposals for special protection area designation which have not yet progressed to designation. They were all transferred from the Department of the Environment on 13 January 1992.

Local Government

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he had received by 2 March in favour of amalgamating the borough of Wrexham and the district of Alyn and Deeside, as a result of his recent consultation on the future of local government in Wales; how many of these representations were from individuals; and how many were from representative bodies.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Nine of which four were from local branches of the Conservative party, Plaid Cymru and the Green party and five from community or town councils. No representations were received in favour of this proposal from the Labour party.

Roads

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will respond to the first report of the Welsh Affairs Committee, Session 1991-92, "Roads in Wales", House of Commons paper 89.

Mr. David Hunt: I am pleased to announce that the response has been published today as Command Paper 1851.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which hs been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Maples: Touche Ross has been appointed to provide the private sector input to the study being undertaken to determine the scope for further market testing in Treasury in accordance with the White Paper, "Competing for Quality", (Cm. 1730). The appointment was made following the evaluation of proposals from six firms.

Rural Post Offices

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had proposing changes in the law to enable rural post offices to provide banking services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maples: I have not received any representations along the lines described. Post offices already provide banking services on an agency basis for Girobank. There are no plans at present to further extend the Post Office's powers in this area and the Government are reluctant to see any extension of the public sector, not least because of concern for fair competition.

Investment and Research

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in detail the action taken by Her Majesty's Government to encourage investment and research.

Mr. Mellor: The key role played by the Government in encouraging investment and research is a commitment to a stable, low-inflation environment, to free and open markets and a lack of burdensome social and industrial regulation. There is, however, a role for Government support where there is evidence of market failure.

Full details of the Government's schemes for encouraging investment and research can be found in the recently published departmental reports for 1992-93 and in the annual review of Government-funded research and development, copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

PSBR

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the public sector borrowing requirement each year since 1974 at 1992 values; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The figures requested are set out in the table. Between 1974-75 and 1978-79, the PSBR averaged 6¾ per cent. of GDP. Since 1979-80, by contrast, it has averaged 1¾ per cent. of GDP.

Income Tax

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the yield from income tax against the basic rate for each year from 1985-86 to 1990-91.

Mr. Maude: The information is in the table:

£ billion

Year	Total tax liability	Tax liability At the basic rate	At the higher rate	Of which excess over the basic rate
1985-86	38·8	33·5	5·2	2·1
1986-87	42·8	36·2	6·6	2·8
1987-88	45·3	37·4	7·9	3·7

1990-91	59·4	46·8	12·6	4·7

[1] Latest estimate based on a projection of the 1989-90 Survey of Personal Incomes.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what would be the reduction in disposable income in an average size constituency in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) the United Kingdom, assuming average levels of income from savings and employment as a result of (i) introducing a 9 per cent. surcharge tax on (ii) all savings and (iii) savings over £30,000 and (iv) increasing the top rate of income tax to 50 per cent;

(2) what would be the increase in disposable income in an average size constituency in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d)) the United Kingdom, assuming average levels of income from savings and employment as a result of (i) increasing all tax allowances by the rate of inflation and (ii) reducing the rate of income tax by 1p.

Mr. Maude: Available estimates at 1991-92 levels of income, which exclude any behavioural effects which might result, are given in the table. I regret that separate data for England, Scotland and Wales are not available.

	Total change in disposable income in United Kingdom (£ billion)	Average change per constituency[1] (£ million)
9 per cent. surcharge on all investment income	−2·6	−3·9
9 per cent. surcharge on income from savings of over £30,000	−1·3	−2·0
Increase in higher rate of tax to 50 per cent.	−3·3	−5·0
Increase in all income tax allowances and thresholds by 4·5 per cent.	+1·5	+2·3
Reduction of 1p in basic rate	+1·9	+3·0

"Next Steps"

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the progress of "next steps" in the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Norman Lamont: On 1 April the Inland Revenue will be setting up within the Department 34 executive offices covering the whole of its operational work in assessing and collecting taxes, and also important internal support services. This follows the establishment of the Valuation Office as an agency last year. As a result, the Inland Revenue will then be operating on "next steps" lines, with 96 per cent. of its staff working either in the Valuation Office Agency or in the 34 executive offices. This will mean less direct involvement from the centre, and more responsibility and accountability for heads of executive offices and their local managers. The purpose of these changes is to give taxpayers a better service, and to organise work more efficiently.

As a part of its major programme of change the Revenue set up two teams to review its organisation and structure and its management and grading. The principal aims were to achieve significant further improvements in service to the public, in operational effectiveness and in cost efficiency, and to ensure the fullest commitment of those who work in the Department. They have now completed their work. Copies of a summary of their reports will be placed in the Library.

The review teams envisage a slimmer and rather differently organised Department. Their proposals are designed to carry forward the policy set out in my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's statement of 16 May 1991 on the Fraser report, in the Citizen's Charter and in the White Paper "Competing for Quality."

A number of the changes, if implemented, would take several years to complete. As a result, in 10 years time the Department might be 10 to 15 per cent. smaller than it is now. Further detailed planning and consultation will, however, be required before the future shape of the Department, and the way it does its work, can finally be settled. In addition to consultation with staff, the Inland Revenue is undertaking a major survey of taxpayers' views to ensure that the new arrangements properly reflect their priorities.

Meanwhile, however, there are a number of specific changes which we shall be carrying forward now.

First, the Inland Revenue is already engaged in introducing or testing a number of changes which are designed to improve the service it provides. We shall want to expand on this by examining proposals for moving, over a period of years, towards a new office structure. Taxpayer assistance offices would provide better local facilities, where the public could get inquiries dealt with, and problems resolved, on the spot. Other offices would deal with specialist and compliance work. And service offices would bring together, in a more efficient way, the bulk of the day-to-day work. Our aim is to move towards a single point of contact for every taxpayer. These changes will build on the existing experiments designed to remove the need for separate tax and collection offices in the same area.

Secondly, the Department will be taking forward for wider consultation—and, where appropriate, negotiation—proposals for a new performance and reporting system for staff of the Inland Revenue, and, linked to it, a new system for pay and grading, with a larger proportion of pay depending on an assessment of performance. These proposals would be consistent with moving to a single staff group, within the civil service, for most Revenue staff.

Thirdly, there will be a number of important changes to the relationship between the Department's head office and the new executive offices, in accordance with "next steps" principles. These include enhancing further the delegated authority and responsibility of managers; identifying opportunities to improve efficiency through market testing and internal charging; shortening lines of accountability and management; and making changes in management and reporting arrangements, including bringing operational functions more closely together.

Fourthly, to assist the Board of the Inland Revenue in managing the new departmental structure, a new management board will be formed, comprising the existing board members, other senior managers, and a number of members from the private sector in a part-time capacity. These last will impart valuable management expertise, experience and advice.

These changes represent together an important new beginning for the Inland Revenue. It will become a slimmer and more effective organisation, more interesting and satisfying to work for, providing ever better service to the public.

Overnight Subsistence Allowances

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what basis standard overnight subsistence allowances are calculated for civil servants travelling abroad.

Mr. Maples: Overseas subsistence allowances reflect the costs of accommodation, breakfast, lunch and dinner (including service charges and taxes) plus a small element to cover extra incidental expenses. Rates are based on the cost of reasonable quality and acceptable hotels in the particular locality and reflect discounts which are negotiated for visiting officials.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the standard overnight subsistence allowance expressed in pounds sterling which is payable to a civil servant of (a) grade 5, (b) grade 3 and (c) grade 1 travelling on official business to (1) Berlin, (2) Bonn, (3) Brussels, (4) Lisbon, (5) Luxembourg, (6) Madrid, (7) Paris, (8) Rome and (9) Washington.

Mr. Maples: Overseas subsistence allowances are calculated in local currency and the sterling equivalent depends upon the exchange rate available at the time of an official's visit. The table gives the current rates for the grades in question, together with approximate sterling equivalents.

		Local currency	£
Berlin	DM	249	(86)

Child Care Tax Allowance

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated cost to the Exchequer in a full tax year of introducing a child care tax allowance on the first (a) £1,000, (b) £2,000 and (c) £5,000 of taxable income for (i) working single parents and (ii) couples where both spouses are working.

Mr. Maude: Estimates of the cost of introducing allowances against taxable incomes of (i) working single parents and (ii) the higher earner in a two earner family for 1992-93 are as follows:

Cost (£ million)

	Allowance of
	£1,000 per year	£2,000 per year	£5,000 per year
Working single parents	60	120	220
Higher earner in a two earner family with children	900	1,800	4,300

Cost of Living (European Community)

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has about the comparative cost of living in the capital cities of the EC member states.

Mr. Maples: Following are the comparative costs of living in the capital cities of EC member states as of October 1991 (London = 100).

	Comparative cost of living
Copenhagen	111·0
Rome	104·1
Paris	101·7

Profit-related Pay Schemes

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average income and the distribution of income of those in profit-related pay schemes, in the United Kingdom, since the schemes began.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The estimated average annual earnings of participants, including those working part-time, in registered profit-related pay schemes, in each year since schemes began are as follows. Information on the distribution of earnings is not available.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Overnight Subsistence Allowance

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the standard overnight subsistence allowance expressed in pounds sterling which is payable to an hon. Member travelling on official business to (1) Berlin, (2) Bonn, (3) Brussels, (4) Lisbon, (5) Luxembourg, (6) Madrid, (7) Paris, (8) Rome and (9) Washington.

Mr. MacGregor: The standard overnight subsistence allowance payable to an hon. Member travelling on official business is the class A rate payable to senior staff in the home civil service. The rates are fixed by Her Majesty's Treasury and are regularly reviewed; they are normally expressed in the currency of the country to which they refer. For the current rates, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

HEALTH

Waiting Lists

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to reduce waiting lists at hospitals in the East Anglia region; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Provisional figures show for January 1992 that since last March, East Anglian health authority, backed by £1·36 million from the waiting list fund, has reduced the number of patients waiting over two years by 75 per cent. and the number waiting over one year by 43 per cent. in January alone the number of patients waiting over two years fell by 51 per cent. The authority expects to have no patient waiting over two years by 31 March.

Dentists

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what survey has been undertaken by his Department in the London borough of Wandsworth of dentists who practise in the borough but who no longer provide dental treatment under the national health service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Last September we asked family health services authorities to conduct on our behalf a sample survey of 20 per cent. of dentists on their dental lists. All the dentists on the Merton Sutton and Wandsworth dental list who took part in the survey indicated they would continue NHS treatment.

Vitamins and Minerals

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to limit the supply of any vitamins and minerals by making them available only on prescription.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food gave my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond (Mr. Hague) on 27 February at column 611.

A number of vitamin and mineral preparations are currently licensed medicines, some of which are already available only on prescription. There are a small number of essential vitamins and minerals sold as food supplements, which may have adverse effects when consumed in excess. We believe that, for these substances, safety concerns may indicate a need for limitations on the maximum freely available dose.

A United Kingdom outline proposal for a possible EC directive notes that the relationship between supplements sold as foods and those sold as medicines, including medicines on general sale, may need to be addressed. It is not yet clear whether this will form part of any EC measure.

Drug Addicts

44. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the present number of registered drug addicts in the Greater London area.

Mr. Dorrell: The Home Office maintains an index of people notified by doctors as addicted to one or more of a range of drugs controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. The number of new and renotified drug addicts in the Greater London area notified to the addicts index was 5,500 in 1990, the latest year for which figures are available.

Patients, Huddersfield

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide for the Huddersfield health authority for each year since 1979 (a) the numbers of in-patients treated and (c) the number of out-patients treated.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is given in the table. In addition, the number of day cases treated in Huddersfield district health authority over the period 1979 to 1991 increased by 26 per cent. from 1,951 to 2,459.

Crutches and Walking Frames

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total cost of equipment such as crutches and walking frames which are not returned to hospitals by patients; and if he will make it a requirement for those using this equipment to pay a refundable deposit before being allowed to remove it from hospital grounds.

Mr. Dorrell: The cost to the NHS of unreturned equipment is not collected centrally. As with other services, it is the provider units themselves who are responsible for managing effectively the supply and control of such equipment.

General Practitioners

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average general practitioner list size in South Derbyshire district and Trent region in 1982 and the latest year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At 1 October 1982, the average general practitioner list size in Derbyshire family health services authority's area was 2,289 and the figure for Trent region was 2,251. At 1 April 1991, (the latest year for which figures are available) the average list size for Derbyshire family health services authority was 2,004 and the Trent region was 1,985. Figures are not available for the South Derbyshire district alone.

Hospital Statistics Bulletin

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he published last year's national health service hospital activity statistics bulletin;

(2) when he received the draft of the new national health service hospital activity statistics bulletin; and when he intends to publish the bulletin.

Mr. Waldegrave: The bulletin containing statistics of NHS hospitals activity and facilities in 1989-90 was published on 12 December 1990.

I received the draft bulletin giving comparable figures for 1990-91 on 19 February, and intend to publish it shortly, as drafted.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients were removed from waiting lists (a) by admission for treatment and (b) for reasons other than treatment in each district in each of the four Thames regional health authorities in each six month period since September 1988;

(2) when the honourable Member for Peckham may expect a substantive reply to her question on waiting lists of 10 February.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 10 February 1992]: We do not routinely collate information on all district health authorities centrally. For the relevant information at regional level, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook) on 29 January at columns 599-602. In the three years to March 1991, nearly 2·1 million patients were admitted from waiting lists in the Thames regions. In the same period the names of a further 290,122 were removed for other reasons, for example, because they had already been treated, had moved, or no longer needed treatment. This is good practice in line with the Royal College of Surgeons guidelines.

NHS Staff

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for (a) each regional health authority and (b) each district health authority the number of (i) nurses and midwives, (ii) medical staff, (iii) general and senior managers, (iv) administrative and clerical staff, (v) ancillary staff and (vi) ambulance staff for 1986 and for 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 13 February 1992]: Regional health authority data are shown in the table. District data could not be produced without incurring disproportionate cost.

The new grades of general and senior manager were introduced following the recommendations of the 1983 Griffiths report to strengthen accountability for the delivery of health authority objectives. An expansion in numbers occurred from 1989 following the extension of senior manager arrangements beyond the most senior posts in regions and districts and their introduction to units and family practitioner committees. Staff employed in these grades generally hold posts which were previously occupied by staff in other groups such as administrative and clerical or senior nursing grades.

Cataract Operations

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in the last year for which figures are available, what was the number of patients awaiting cataract operations in England and Wales; and what percentage of them had been on the list for (a) six months, (b) a year, (c) two years and (d) more than two years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 24 February 1992]: Waiting time information for specific conditions is not collected centrally. The latest information available centrally for the ophthalmology specialty as a whole in England is given in the table. This shows that fewer than 2 per cent. of patients had been waiting more than two years for ophthalmology treatment and 87 per cent. waited less than one year. Information relating to Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Housing

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by district council the number of council houses sold since October 1980; if he will also show this as a percentage of total stock at the start of that period; and if he will show the number of new build houses in that period.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information by district council on the number of council houses sold since October 1980, expressed as a percentage of the total local authority stock, is set out in the following table.

Information on new building within each district is regularly published in the statistical bulletin—"Housing Trends in Scotland", available in the Library. The latest information is in table 5 of the bulletin HSG/1991/7.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 478, on the treatment of candidiasis and myalgic encephalomyelitis, what is the annual cost of treatment by each health board after such patients are referred by general practitioners.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As stated in my previous answer of 25 February, at column 487, costs for the treatment of these conditions cannot be identified separately.

Scottish Office Superannuation Division

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce his decisions on the recent report by management consultants on the Scottish Office superannuation division.

Mr. Lang: The consultants made a number of recommendations about the future status, organisation and management of the Scottish Office superannuation division. One of these was that the division should be designated as an executive agency within the Scottish Office under the Government's "next steps" programme. I have now decided that that recommendation should be accepted, with a view to launching the new agency by the autumn of this year. I shall announce a firm date in due course. Other recommendations from the review are at various stages of consideration and implementation.

NHS

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of Scottish gross domestic product was spent on the national health service in each of the last 25 years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on a consistent basis is readily available only for the financial years 1974-75 to 1989-90 and is set out in the following table:

	NHS expenditure as percentage of GDP
1974-75	6·4
1975-76	6·8
1976-77	6·6
1977-78	6·6
1978-79	6·8
1979-80	7·1
1980-81	7·9
1981-82	8·2
1982-83	8·1
1983-84	8·0
1984-85	8·1
1985-86	7·9
1986-87	7·7
1987-88	7·7
1988-89	7·8
1989-90	7·8

Planned gross expenditure on the national health service in Scotland for 1992-93 is £3,725 million. This represents a real terms increase in expenditure on the NHS in Scotland of 44 per cent. since 1979-80.

DEFENCE

Royal Fleet Reserve

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements he has made for replacement of missing or inadequate items of home retention scale of kit, as presented by Royal Fleet reservists, consequent on the abolition of the annual reporting bounty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: When the annual reporting grant was withdrawn with effect from 1 November 1991, kit replacement was suspended. In the event of call up any replacement kit will be issued to reservists at their mobilisation centres.

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he introduced the system of annual reporting for (a) Royal Fleet reservists and (b) army reservists; what bounty has been payable in each case, and for how long; and what is the purpose of (i) annual reporting and (ii) the bounty payable.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Annual reporting was introduced for Royal Fleet reservists in 1986 and for Army reservists in 1981. Since 1986, those reservists serving in their first year of the Royal Fleet Reserve (Special Category) received a payment of £100 before tax for attending the Reservist reporting unit. Those serving in the second and third year of the Royal Fleet Reserve (Ordinary Category) received a payment of £80 before tax. Since 1981 all Army reservists who took part in the annual reporting exercise (ARCEX) received a payment of £100 before tax although ARCEX is currently suspended. The purpose of annual reporting is to ensure that health, kit and personal details of each reservist could be properly checked and updated so that reservists can be mobilised quickly and effectively when required. The purpose of the payment of the annual reporting grant was to (i) compensate those reservists who (a) had to take time off work without pay to report and (b) needed to purchase replacement kit; and (ii) provide an incentive for reservists to report to ensure that the purpose of annual reporting described above was achieved.

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of Royal Fleet reservists attended their annual reporting centre in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what proportion of annual reporting bounties payable have been withheld to cover the cost of replacement kit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The proportion of Royal Fleet reservists who reported to the reservist reporting unit in each of the last five years was as follows:

Year	Percent
1987	85·2
1988	85·5
1989	83·2
1990	85·3
1991	80·5

Approximately 1 per cent. of the annual reporting grant was withheld to cover kit replacement costs, over the last five years.

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and for what reason he decided to cease payment of the annual reporting credit to Royal Fleet reservists; what was the total of Royal Fleet reserve annual reporting grant in the last year for which figures are available; and what effect he expects it to have on attendance of Royal Fleet reservists at annual reporting centres.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The annual reporting grant was withdrawn with effect from 1 November 1991. The total of the annual reporting grant paid out to the Royal Fleet Reserve in financial year 1990-91 was £474,804·58 after tax and after abatements for replacement items of kit. Since the annual reporting grant was withdrawn attendance of Royal Fleet reservists reporting to the reservist reporting unit has fallen.

Defence Establishments, Germany

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all United Kingdom-owned defence establishments in Germany.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Generally, facilities for visiting forces in Germany have been provided by the host nation. Exceptionally, buildings were purchased by the Ministry of Defence from the private sector to meet the accommodation requirements at the following establishments:

Vehicle Workshops, Redcar Barracks Bielefeld.
Material and Medical Depot, Bielefeld.

United Nations Peace-keeping Operations

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British service personnel have been killed or wounded in action while participating in United Nations peace-keeping operations in each year since 1961; what memorials exist to commemorate those British service personnel who have served with the United Nations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will write to the hon. Member.

Redundancies

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 28 February, Official Report, column 675, if he will list the public announcements of redundancies referred to in the answer, giving the date, the name of the company involved and the number of redundancies announced.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The announcements referred to are those made by the companies concerned.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Kenya

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will hold talks with the high commissioner for Kenya on the detention of Dr. Josephat Karanja and others.

Mrs. Chalker: Dr. Josephat Karanja is one of a number of Kenyan citizens arrested for alleged participation in a press conference held on 10 January at which President Moi was accused of planning an imminent military coup.

Dr. Karanja has been charged with publishing false rumours under section 66 of the Kenyan penal code and has been released on bail. There are no grounds for raising the case with the Kenyan authorities.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many meetings of the Council of Ministers there have been since the beginning of 1990; and if he will list the Ministers who attended each of these meetings.

Mr. Garel-Jones: There have been 177 meetings of the Council of Ministers since 1 January 1990. The United Kingdom is represented in the Council by the Secretary or Minister of State responsible for the subject matter under discussion.

Brussels (Secondees)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people were seconded to the United Kingdom's permanent representation to the European Community in Brussels in 1990 and 1991; and if he will break these figures down by Department of origin.

Mr. Garel-Jones: In 1990 and 1991 there were 22 seconded staff in addition to the 18 diplomatic service staff at the office of the United Kingdom permanent representative to the European Community, as follows:

From the end of 1991 there have been additional temporary secondments in preparation for the United Kingdom presidency in July to December 1992.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council held on 2 March.

Mr. Hurd: My right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Minister for Trade and the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I represented the United Kingdom at the Foreign Affairs Council on 2 March.

The Commission Vice-President, Mr. Andriessen, reported to the Council on his recent visit to several states of the former Soviet Union. The Council agreed that the Commission should continue its exploratory talks on enhanced trade and co-operation agreements with Russia, Ukraine, Belarus and Kazakhstan. It also agreed that the role of the EC task force monitoring the distribution of EC food aid should be expanded and the the EC should participate in the proposed international science and technology centre for retraining and redeploying nuclear scientists from the former Soviet Union.

Ministers agreed on the need for an early conclusion to the GATT Uruguay round and invited all participants to speed up negotiations.

President Delors presented the Commission's future financing proposals for 1993 to 1997. Member states gave their initial reactions. I questioned the Commission's proposals to increase the ceiling on our own resources and on agricultural spending, drawing attention to the extra funds that would in any case be available between now and 1997 within the existing limits on the Community's own resources.

The Council reviewed the negotiations on a European economic area in the light of the Commission's request to the European Court of Justice for a second opinion on the revised draft agreement. The Council expressed the hope that the court's opinion would be made available as soon as possible.

Ministers discussed EC relations with Morocco and invited the Commission to make proposals on economic and technical co-operation and the Political Committee to examine ways of strengthening political dialogue.

Ministers issued a statement condemning the recent violence in Sarajevo following the referendum on the future status of Bosnia-Herzegovina. They agreed that the Commission should begin exploratory talks with Slovenia on a trade and co-operation agreement.

The fifth meeting of the EC/Tunisia Co-operation Council was held in the margins of the Foreign Affairs Council.

TRANSPORT

Roads

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the High Court challenges to road schemes that have been heard in each of the past five years, with the date when the motion was served in each case, and the date on which the action lapsed or was determined;

(2) what is the average, greatest and lowest number of sitting days in the High Court taken by challenges to the Secretary of State for Transport on road schemes in the past five years.

Mr. Chope: We do not hold such information. I will write to my hon. Friend.

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he gives to local authorities about the maintenance of retaining walls of roads under their control.

Mr. Chope: Retaining walls are included within the scope of the Department's procedures for the inspection and maintenance of structures on motorways and other trunk roads. Local authorities are encouraged to adopt these procedures in maintaining retaining walls on their own roads.

Health and Safety

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the proposals for United Kingdom legislation: relevant to EC directive 89/684 EEC and the content of the necessary training courses needed to meet the requirements of the directive to be finalised by the Health and Safety Executive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I expect to receive recommendations for regulations from the Health and Safety Commission shortly. Requirements for course content were notified to interested parties on 20 February. Further copies are available from the Health and Safety Executive.

Railway Investment

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what British Rail investment plans for new trains and rolling stock Her Majesty's Government (a) have authorised and which are awaiting completion and (b) are currently considering; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail projects for new train and rolling stock builds, authorised by the Government and yet to be fully completed, are as follows:

Class	Number authorised
Diesel multiple unit vehicles:
158 (tranches 2 and 3)	200
159/165	69
165	180
165/6	59
Electric multiple unit vehicles:
465[1]	588
466	86
Diesel locomotives:
60	100
Electric locomotives:
92	37
High speed train sets:
Channel Tunnel Services	21
Loco-haul coaches:
Mark IV for ECML	31
CT Night Services[2]	139

[1] 188 have not yet been ordered by British Rail.

[2] This is total order—BR's share is likely to be some 85 coaches.

The only investment scheme currently under consideration by the Department is for 550 car-carrying wagons for Channel tunnel freight services.

Rail Modernisation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much state aid there will be on track and train modernisation on the west coast main line to Glasgow.

Mr. Freeman: We would expect British Rail's proposals for the moderation of the west coast main line to Glasgow to earn an 8 per cent. return. They should not, therefore, require subsidy.

Car Engine Capacity

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average cubic capacity of engines of cars registered in the last year for which figures are available, for (a) United Kingdom-produced cars and (b) imported cars.

Mr. Chope: The information, as requested, is not available.

However, the distribution of cars first registered in Great Britain in 1991 by engine size is as follows:

Cars first registered in 1991

Cubic capacity	Great Britain produced thousands	Imported thousands
up to 1000	32	71
1001 – 1200	106	61

Total	726	874
Average c.c.	1492	1606

Seat Belts

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of children he estimates travel in cars without wearing seat belts as required by law.

Mr. Chope: Children under 14 travelling in rear seats are required to use a seat belt or a child restraint appropriate to their age and weight only where one is fitted and available to be used. The latest survey of wearing rates, conducted by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory in October 1991, found that 12 per cent. of children were unrestrained in post-1987 cars—those fitted with seat belts at manufacture.

All front seat passengers are required to be restrained. The wearing rates for children and adults are very similar. Only 5 per cent. of children travel unrestrained.

Nuclear Transport Ships

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what notification his Department has received from Pacific Nuclear Transport Ltd. over the intended transfer of the Pacific Crane nuclear transport ship to sail under the Japanese flag.

Mr. McLoughlin: Any shipping company transferring a ship from United Kingdom registry is obliged to notify the registrar of the ship's home port. No such notification has been received.

British Rail

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the chairman or representatives of the board of British Rail on the future of British Rail; what issues were discussed; what future meetings are scheduled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on the future of BR. We shall publish our proposals as soon as we are ready.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the future of British Rail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. friend regularly meets the chairman of British Rail to discuss a range of issues. We shall publish proposals for the future of BR as soon as we are ready.

Advisors

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the main advisers employed by his Department, the purpose for which they have been recruited and the period for which they have been employed.

Mr. McLoughlin: In common with my predecessors, I have a political adviser who is employed by the Department on terms approved by the Treasury. My present political adviser, Mr. P. Miller, was appointed on 2 January 1991.

The following list shows the other main advisers currently or recently employed by my Department. A wider range of advice is also acquired as and when needed through a number of consultancy contracts. The devolved nature of the Department means there is no central record of consultancies, and that information could only be assembled within the timescale at disproportionate cost.

Adviser	Purpose of employment	Period
Mr. D. Walker	Department's adviser on market testing	February to March 1992
Mr. P. Davies	Department's purchasing adviser	1987 to 1992
Samuel Montagu	Advice on privatisation of British Rail	November 1988 to date
Price Waterhouse	Appointed to advise Secretary of State on the privatisation of the National Bus Company	1985 to date
Mr. A. Thorning	Seconded from the Civil Aviation Authority to advise Ministers and the Department on civil aviation safety matters and a range of related technical issues	1 April 1992 to 31 December 1993
Civil Aviation Authority	Advice on various technical issues concerning aircraft noise and emissions	Ongoing
Warren Springs Laboratory (DTI)	Advice on technical issues concerning aircraft emissions	Ongoing
Defence Research Agency (MOD)	Advice on technical issues concerning aircraft noise and emissions	Ongoing
Price Waterhouse	Advice on privatisation of Trust Ports	July 1991 to date

ScotRail

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the future of ScotRail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have received a number of representations about ScotRail's services.

Bus Safety

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve safety in England and Wales for school pupils transported by bus; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Draft regulations are being finalised which will require all buses in Great Britain, when carrying children to or from school, to display a distinctive sign. This will indicate to other road users that children are present and may be crossing the road in the vicinity of these vehicles. These proposals will also permit the use of hazard warning lights, in conjunction with the signs, when children are boarding or alighting.

We intend to put these regulations before Parliament shortly.

London Transport

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out in tabular form (a) London Transport's fixed asset investment for each year since 1962, at current prices and (b) the total grant, the total capital grant, and the total revenue support grant paid to London Transport in each year since 1962, at current prices.

Mr. Freeman: The following table shows London Transport's investment and grant from 1974 until 1991-92. Information is not available in the form requested prior to 1974.

London Underground Crimes

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the total number of (a) crimes, (b) assaults on staff, (c) assaults on passengers, (d) indecent assaults, (e) rapes and (f) violent robberies which have occurred on London Underground, (i) in each month since April 1989 and (ii) in each year since 1971.

Mr. Freeman: I understand from London Underground that the information is as follows:

[1] Reported as violence against the person.

n/a = Not avaiable.

The statistics for assaults on passengers between 1975 and 1988 also include assaults on staff. The same situation applies to indecent assaults and rapes. The statistics for robberies cover instances where only threats were used as well as cases of violence.

Footway Parking

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to amend the Road Traffic Act 1974 to enable local authorities to designate areas in which footway parking can be prohibited.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The provision in the Road Traffic Act 1974 was repealed by the Road Traffic Act 1991. We are committed to seeking effective alternative powers to enable local authorities to deal with the problem of parking on footways when a suitable legislative opportunity arises. Meanwhile, general parking restrictions and in some cases local Act provisions, can offer a remedy. The use of high kerbs and other road engineering measures such as bollards can also prove a highly effective deterrent to footway parking, provided proper provision is made for the needs of pedestrians with disabilities.

A6 (M) Bypass, Stockport

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to meet a deputation from the Stockport metropolitan borough council in connection with the proposed Stockport north-south A6 (M) bypass.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 March 1992]: We are considering a request from Stockport MBC for a meeting and will be contacting the council shortly.

Badgers

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provisions are being made by his Department for the construction of badger crossings.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 March 1992]: I have been asked to reply.

The provision of badger crossings on trunk roads in England is the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Our aim, where possible, is to design trunk roads to avoid interfering with badgers. Where setts or runs may be affected advice is obtained from English Nature and local badger groups about steps to be taken to move badgers or maintain their runs. Badger-proof fencing alongside the road and badger culverts under the carriageway are provided where appropriate.

The Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are responsible for the provision of badger crossings on roads for which they are the highway authority. For local roads, responsibility lies with the relevant local highway authority.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out by local authority, at 1991-92 prices (a) the transport supplementary grant and (b) the total capital allocation for each year from 1987-88 to 1991-92.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 March 1992]: The information requested is not available at a fixed price base but is as attached with the price level appropriate to each year.

ENERGY

Colombian Coal

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had with British Coal on whether to refer the importing of Colombian coal to the European Commission.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None. I am aware that British Coal has submitted a complaint to the European Commission about dumping of coal by Colombia, United States of America and China.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements he has made for the introduction of veterinary supervision at slaughterhouses; what agreements have been reached on the subject at the Council of Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: On 29 July 1991, the Council of Ministers adopted a directive (91/497/EEC) introducing common public health rules, including rules on veterinary supervision, for all slaughterhouses with effect from 1 January 1993.

The Department will shortly be consulting publicly on the draft regulations which will implement this directive in Great Britain.

Storage

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was spent on public storage and food aid and for each commodity in (a) the EC and (b) the United Kingdom, for each year since 1987, including 1991.

Mr. Gummer: The information is given in the following tables.

It should be noted that the tables for expenditure on public storage in the EC and the United Kingdom are not compatible because EC budget costs cover depreciation losses, whereas member states pay out the full buying-in price and carry the depreciated value until sale.

Expenditure on food aid cannot be broken down by commodity, and the EC total figure for 1987 cannot be provided within the time available. Figures for 1991 are not available.

United Kingdom figures do not include United Kingdom contributions to EC food aid which are reflected in EC figures.

EC Regulation No. 866/90

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the implementation of EC regulation No. 866/90 in the United Kingdom, including the type of projects which have received assistance and the amount spent.

Mr. Gummer: EC regulation 866/90 has been fully implemented in the United Kingdom and the first round of awards was approved by the Commission on 13 December 1991. This allocated grants totalling £15·2 million to 53 marketing and processing projects in the redmeat, pigmeat, milk, horticulture, potatoes, cereals, protein crops, poultry and egg sectors. The first claims for grant have only recently been received and are now being checked before payment.

Commodity Prices

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the prices, in £ per tonne, in the United Kingdom for the main agricultural commodities for the latest available date.

Mr. Gummer: United Kingdom market prices for the main agricultural commodities are set out in the table.

Selected average market/wholesale prices United Kingdom Prices are for week ending 29 February 1992 unless otherwise stated

	£/tonne
Wheat (Grower to merchant price, all purchases, England and Wales)	[1]128
Barley (Grower to merchant price, all purchases, England and Wales)	[1]120
Sugar (Refined bulk granulated)	605
Butter (GB salted)	2,066
Liquid Milk	[2]174
Cheddar Cheese (English mild white creamery)	2,430
Fat Cattle (GB all clean cattle, liveweight)	[3]1,063
Fat Sheep (Estimated dressed carcase weight)	2,154
Fat Pigs (All pigs, deadweight)	1,217
Poultry Meat (Broilers, liveweight)	556
Eggs (Size 3, packer to producer price)	493
Potatoes (Maincrop)	98

[1] W/e 20 February: prices are inclusive of co-responsibility levy.

[2] Provisional average price for the month of January.

[3] W/e 22 February.

Note: A wide range of price quotations exists for individual commodities depending on quality, presentation, stage of marketing etc. Those shown are intended to be illustrative of prices paid by wholesalers or received by producers. Some prices are highly seasonal.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the latest figures available for (a) the levies applicable in the United Kingdom and (b) the notional world prices for the main traded agricultural commodities in £ per tonne.

Mr. Gummer: The concept of "notional world prices", as represented by the lowest offer prices underlying the Commission's calculations of variable import levies, is misleading. Such prices reflect, among other things, the particular level of supplies on the residual international market encouraged by agricultural support policies pursued throughout the world. They cannot be viewed independently of existing support policies. If support policies did not exist, I would expect "world prices" to be higher. Subject to these important qualifications, "lowest offer prices" are shown in the table, together with the information requested on import levies.

Levy applicable in the United Kingdom and "lowest offer price"[1] on 5 March 1992 for the main traded agricultural commodities

	Levy[2] applicable in United Kingdom £ per tonne	"Lowest offer price" £ per tonne
Common wheat	115	79
Barley	114	63
Maize	103	73
Rice	303	153
Sugar	[3]362	149
Olive oil	578	993
Butter	[4]1,966	659
Skimmed milk powder	924	626
Cheese (Cheddar)	1,753	1,003
Beef and veal	[5]1,988	1,087
Pigmeat	530	760
Sheepmeat	[6]n/a	n/a
Poultrymeat	281	910
Eggs	275	685

[1] "Lowest offer prices" have been calculated by subtracting the levy applicable on 5 March 1992 from the threshold/guide price. The beef price is also adjusted for duty. In the case of pigmeat, poultrymeat and eggs, the "world" price has been taken as the sluicegate price for the headings defined in [2] below. The resulting estimate has been converted from ecu/t at the appropriate market rate of exchange £0·812568 = 1 ecu.

[2] The rates of levy vary for different tariff headings. The rates quoted are: beef and veal—carcase; pigmeat—carcase; poultrymeat—70 per cent. chickens; rice—husked long grain; olive oil—virgin lampante; eggs—in shell.

[3] In practice the United Kingdom's imports from third countries are normally covered by the Lomé convention and enter the Community levy-free.

[4] A special lower rate of levy is applicable to imports of butter from New Zealand.

[5] Most imports of beef from third countries are subject to special arrangements allowing entry at reduced levy rates.

[6] Imports of lamb under voluntary restraint arrangements with principal suppliers and related agreements enter free of charge. Any imports outside these arrangements are subject to levies which cannot exceed the 20 per cent. tariff bound in the GATT.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Syria

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Syrian authorities concerning the violation of human rights of Jews in Syria.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have made our views clear to the Syrian Government about their human rights record, including the problems of the Jewish community.

Baltic Republics (Gold)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the gold or money equivalent to be transferred to the Baltic republics has now been transferred; and which other countries in the eastern European areas have gold reserves deposited in London.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We hope to reach final agreement with each Baltic Government on the transfer of gold, or its equivalent in money, by the end of March. We hope to receive shortly formal responses from the Baltic Governments to our proposals for the transfer, which we put to them in January.

Where countries choose to hold their gold and other international reserves is a matter of banking confidentiality and for them alone to disclose if they wish to. I am not in a position to do so.

International Science and Technology Centre

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statment on the role of the international science and technology centre in Russia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We support the proposal to establish an international science and technology centre in the CIS to reduce the risk of proliferation of expertise in building weapons of mass destruction. The EC is considering a financial contribution to the initiative from its technical assistance budget.

Chief Scientific Adviser (Moscow Visit)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the visit of Professor Bill Stewart, the chief scientific adviser, to Moscow.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The chief scientific adviser proposes to make an early visit to Moscow for discussions with leading members of the scientific community. These will be directed to identifying ways in which the west can help to sustain the science base in the CIS.

Post Cold War Conference

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have provided any financial support or other assistance to the conference of former Heads of State and Government in Europe and America on "The World after the Cold War: National Roles and Responsibilities" held in Berlin on 4 March .

Mr. Garel-Jones: The conference of European and American former Heads of State and Government on the "Post Cold War World: Roles and Responsibilities of Nations" was held in Berlin on 5 March. Her Majesty's Government did not provide any financial support. Lord Callaghan was one of the participants and a member of the British embassy in Berlin attended.

Nuclear Disarmament Negotiations

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what negotiations on nuclear disarmament, pursuant to United Kingdom commitments under the 1968 nuclear non-proliferation treaty article VI provisions, currently involve the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The focus of nuclear arms control negotiations remains on the arsenals of the United States and Russia. We welcome the prospect of further reductions in their nuclear arsenals. Consistent with our nuclear non-proliferation treaty obligations, we are willing to consider involvement in strategic arms control negotiations when the time is right. But our deterrent force is a minimum only, and not comparable to those of the United States and Russia. President Yeltsin has accepted this position. We have, however, already announced substantial reductions in our sub-strategic nuclear capability, including ending our role in the deployment of the Lance missile and nuclear artillery in Europe, the withdrawal of tactical nuclear weapons from Royal Navy ships in normal circumstances, and a reduction of about 50 per cent. in the number of our free-fall nuclear bombs.

British-Argentine Group

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of the British-Argentine high-level group held in Buenos Aires.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The British and Argentine delegations exchanged information and explored ideas on the scope for co-operation on activities deriving from their respective legislative measures relating to the continental shelf in the south-west Atlantic. There will be a second meeting of the high-level group in London in late June 1992.

Hong Kong

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the annual report on Hong Kong will be laid before Parliament.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The report is being published and laid before Parliament today. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT

Toxic Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of the report, "Waste Not Want Not—the Production and Dumping of Toxic Waste in Britain and Ireland", by R. Allen.

Mr. Heseltine: A copy has already been ordered.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 24 February, Official Report, column 411, to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson), if he will set out the details of his departmental publicity on the duty of care for the disposal and carriage of waste under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Baldry: The duty of care on holders of waste to ensure that it is properly dealt with under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, and the related provisions for the registration of carriers of controlled waste under the Control of Pollution (Amendment) Act 1989, come into force throughout Great Britain on 1 April.

It is vital that all businesses are informed of the implications of these new laws which require them to take a fair share of the responsibility for the waste they produce or handle. A large number of people need to know about the duty; there are over 2 million business addresses in Great Britain. My Department's information campaign accordingly includes the distribution of some 6·5 million copies of a free explanatory leaflet through local authorities, trade associations and journals. So that knowledge of the new duty is widespread, we are placing advertisements in the national and provincial daily newspapers.

Water Companies

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State Environment if he will indicate, for each of the 10 water plcs, the cost at current market prices of purchasing a controlling interest of the companies' shares; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: At the price given in the second column of the table, the cost of purchasing a 51 per cent. stake in each of the privatised water companies would be as given in the third column.

Company	Price per share	£ million
Anglian	368	553·10
North West	375	680·47
Northumbrian	400	133·62
Severn Trent	348	627·57
Southern	341	284·69
South West	382	231·84
Thames	382	748·50
Welsh	388	285·15
Wessex	414	216·63
Yorkshire	401	401·86

Note: The share prices are those given in the Financial Times for the close of business on 3 March 1992.

Eco-labelling

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue a logo to be used in connection with eco-labelling; and if he will publish a copy.

Mr. Baldry: The logo for the European Community eco-labelling scheme was agreed as part of the eco-labelling regulation in December. An environmental labelling factsheet, which includes the logo, has been deposited in the Library.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many products he expects to have been awarded eco-labels by the end of 1992;

(2) if he will publish a timetable for the introduction of eco-labelling.

Mr. Baldry: The European Community regulation which will introduce the official eco-labelling scheme was agreed at December's Environmental Council. We expect that it will be formerly adopted at the Environment Council later this month.

The Commission is aiming to launch the scheme in the autumn with 10 to 12 product categories. The number of awards of the label will depend on industry's response to the scheme.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to what extent the use of minimum packaging will be a requisite of any product awarded an eco-label.

Mr. Baldry: Under the European Community scheme the packaging of a product will be taken into account, together with the other impacts of the product over its lifecycle, in establishing criteria for the award of an eco-label.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what criteria are being set for awarding an eco-label to detergents, paints, carrier bags, bleaches and toilet rolls;

(2) what plans he has for the award of eco-labels to services such as dry cleaning, car breakers, photographic processors or taxis.

Mr. Baldry: Agreement has now been reached at European level on the first product categories that are to be developed for inclusion in the eco-labelling scheme. The United Kingdom is taking the lead in developing criteria for washing machines, dishwashers, hairsprays, soil improvers and light bulbs. Other member states have agreed to take the lead in developing criteria for photocopying paper, kitchen rolls, toilet paper, writing paper, paints, laundry detergents and other cleaning agents, insulation materials, batteries and solar heating systems. Other product groups, which could include services, will be agreed in due course.

No proposals for criteria have yet been formally submitted.

Uniform Business Rate, Leeds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals against the uniform business rate have been lodged each year since its introduction in the Leeds metropolitan district.

Mr. Key: In Leeds, 10,289 appeals were lodged in 1990-91 and 3,497 between 1 April 1991 and the end of February 1992.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals against the uniform business rate remain outstanding in the Leeds metropolitan district.

Mr. Key: In Leeds, 11,307 appeals were outstanding at the end of February.

Local Authority Rate, Leeds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals were made by local businesses against the local authority rate in 1989-90 in the Leeds metropolitan district.

Mr. Key: In Leeds, 1,452 appeals were made by businesses in 1989-90.

RECHAR, Rotherham

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the amount which will be due to be provided from RECHAR for purposes within the metropolitan borough of Rotherham.

Mr. Yeo: Approval of projects within the South Yorkshire RECHAR area is the responsibility of the programme co-ordinating committee, which has not yet formally met. Consequently, no estimate can be given of the value of projects within the metropolitan borough of Rotherham which will be funded by RECHAR.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the district authorities in Northamptonshire setting out (a) the 1992-93 community charge and last year's community charge, (b) the percentage increase, subdividing that increase into that part accountable to the district and that part accountable to the county, (c) the percentage increase between 1990-91 and 1991-92 having made allowances for the £140 rebate and (d) identifying which party is currently in control.

Mr. Key: Not all authorities in Northamptonshire have supplied the relevant information. Charging authorities have until 18 March to make their "Demands and Precepts Return" to the Department and they have until 1 April to set a charge. The available information is as follows:

Authority	1991-92 community charge (£)	1992-93 community charge (£)	Change in 1992-93 charge over 1991-92 (per cent.)	Change in 1991-92 charge over 1990-91 (per cent.)
East Northants	250	220	14	17
Kettering	257	230	12	14
Wellingborough	145	129	12	−7

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the community charge figures for Westminster and Wandsworth in 1992-93.

Mr. Key: The authorities mentioned have yet to make a return to the Department giving this information. Charging authorities have until 18 March to make their "Demands and Precepts Return" to the Department and they have until 1 April in which to set a charge.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total sum provided from central funds through the standard spending grant for the Westminster, Wandsworth and Rotherham local authorities, respectively, expressed on a per capita basis; and what were the community charge figures for these local authorities in 1991.

Mr. Key: The information requested is as follows.

	1991-92 Revenue support grant £ per adult	1991-92 Community charge £ per adult
Westminster	997·27	36·00
Wandsworth	711·40	0·00
Rotherham	211·30	232·46

Note: Community charge figures are after the £140 reduction made by the Community Charges (General Reduction) Act 1991, for which authorities are compensated by Exchequer grant in 1991-92. Authorities also receive £349·18 per adult from the non domestic rate pool in respect of 1991-92.

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the community charge collection costs per head of relevant population for each of the west midland authorities, for each of the years available.

Mr. Key: The information is as follows:

Community charge collection costs per head of relevant population (£)

Authority	1990-91	1991-92
Birmingham	10·62	12·08
Coventry	11·54	11·24
Dudley	11·70	8·24
Sandwell	14·47	16·43
Solihull	11·70	13·00
Walsall	16·73	18·11
Wolverhampton	13·49	16·55

Local Government Commission

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 4 February, Official Report, column 135, if he is now able to publish the draft procedural guidance for the local government commission.

Mr. Key: The draft procedural guidance will be published for comment as soon as possible.

Wild Birds

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has received from the Joint Nature Conservation Committee concerning the international trade in wild caught birds.

Mr. Baldry: The JNCC's report "International Trade in Wildlife: A Review of Sustainable Use", published last October, is relevant to the bird trade. Since then, I have had discussions with both the UNCC and other interested organisations about the aspects of the trade, especially in the context of proposals for discussion at the current conference of the parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, CITES.

Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the representations by the Merseyside fire and civil defence authority in respect of the financial difficulties facing it in carrying out its statutory duties; if he intends to meet members of the authority as requested; if he is reviewing its standard spending assessment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Our reply of 25 February to Merseyside fire and civil defence authority's letter made clear that we did not consider it appropriate to meet the authority to discuss its budget. We have taken our decisions on the revenue support grant settlement for 1992-93, under which the authority's standard spending assessment increases by 7·4 per cent., but we are prepared to consider any new evidence on SSAs for the future.

National Stadium

Mr. Denis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what calculations have been made by the Government of the revenue consequences of building a national stadium in Manchester; and what consideration has been given as to which authority would have ongoing responsibility for meeting them.

Mr. Portillo: Studies indicate that a stadium in east Manchester would cover its operating costs and make a profit. The detailed calculations use material which is commercial-in-confidence and it would be prejudicial to future negotiations to make this public.

Mr. Denis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the costs of the intended national stadium in Manchester, announced by the Minister for Sport on 3 March, it is intended should be provided from central Government funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The Government are already committed to the purchase and preparation of the stadium site. The costs of this will be met from central Government funds and part of the £55 million allocated to the Manchester Olympic bid will be used for this purpose.

Government Properties

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has considered ways in which empty Government residential properties might be brought into use to house homeless people; and if he will make a statement.

Sie George Young: The Public Accounts Committee reporting on homelessness in June last year drew attention to the potential for using empty Government residential properties to help house the homeless. Other Government Departments, which are individually responsible for managing their own properties, have co-operated with my own in drawing up best practice guidance on the management of their empty properties.

The guidance emphasises the need for Departments to have clear strategies for their stock; the role of local authorities and housing associations in alleviating homelessness, and the advantages of making maximum use of short-term lets of properties which are temporarily vacant. It explains the potential for contracting out management of such properties to housing associations and others.

It also sets out simplified disposal procedures, endorsed by my right hon. and learned Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury which may be used by Departments selling their properties to housing associations and others. These procedures should speed up property sales. Quicker sales should bring more of such properties into use faster, and thus contribute to relieving housing stress in pressure areas. My Department's regional controllers will play a liaison role as necessary in bringing together Departments, authorities and housing associations to help speed the process.

Great strides have been made in recent years in reducing the numbers of empty properties held by Government Departments. However, further progress can be made particularly where local authorities have great difficulty in housing the homeless. I hope that all those who receive the guidance will act on the advice and to make better use of their properties in accordance with the spirit of the PAC report.

The guidance is being issued today by my Department and that of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I am arranging for it to be placed in the House Libraries. Copies are being sent to all Government Departments and local authorities, and distributed to registered housing associations through the Housing Corporation.

Rural Housing Programme

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the allocation of resources to local authorities under his Department's rural housing special programme for 1992-93.

Mr. Yeo: Local authorities that have been successful in bidding for resources under my Department's rural housing special programme for 1992-93 are being informed today. These allocations follow the success of this programme in its first year in 1991-92 in seeking to address, at low unit costs, shortages of social housing which exist for local people in some rural areas.

The £30 million of additional supplementary credit approvals are being targeted on those local authorities in rural areas with the greatest need for low-cost rented housing and where best value for money will be obtained. The programme is designed in part to take advantage of the Department's planning policies for the provision of social housing in rural areas, articulated in DOE circular 7/91. This explains that local authorities may now give planning permission for low-cost housing to meet local needs on some sites where commercial housing would not be allowed. Research carried out by the Department recently indicated that this policy was achieving positive results.

All the schemes will be undertaken by housing associations, and this programme is in addition to the Housing Corporation's own programmes for shared ownership and rented housing in rural areas. The corporation's rural programme has targets for approvals rising to 2,250 in 1993-94.

The allocations which I am announcing today should support the creation of 1,016 new units in 1992-93, from 138 schemes in 112 local authorities.

A schedule of allocations has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Coal and the Environment

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is in a position to announce his decisions on the recommendations contained in the report of the informal working group on coal and the environment published last year.

Mr. Yeo: The informal working group was comprised of officials from the Departments of the Environment and of Energy and British Coal. It was set up to review progress on improving the environmental context of coal extraction, to identify where further improvements might be made and to recommend action. The group's report identified a number of options for change and was issued for public consultation in June 1991. In the light of the responses to that consultation, we propose to bring forward amendments to the General Development Order 1988 and to the Town and Country Planning (National Coal Board) Regulations 1974. The effect of these amendments would be:

> To provide for British Coal's permitted development rights for underground working to continue within a sensible planning unit based on the existing infrastructure of, and capital already invested in, the particular colliery. They will not be able to work outside that unit without obtaining specific planning permission in the normal way.
> To incorporate British Coal's special permitted development rights for opencast coal exploration within the general permitted development rights for minerals exploration. Those rights will be amended to provide for a six monthly indefinitely renewable permission subject to giving periodic notice to the mineral planning authority.
> That British Coal's specialised entitlements to compensation following adverse planning decisions will be fully aligned with the general planning compensation regime applying to all mineral operators.

I believe this will provide a clear and fair planning framework for the coal industry now and in the future.

"This Common Inheritance"

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress on the implementation of the commitments set out in the first anniversary report on the environment White Paper "This Common Inheritance"; and whether there will be a second progress report this year.

Mr. Heseltine: I am very pleased to announce further progress on the 400 commitments to action made in last September's anniversary report on "This Common Inheritance". To demonstrate our continuing commitment to environmental issues, the Government will issue a further detailed report on progress in October 1992. This will draw on the findings of the new statistical report on the environment to be produced by my Department in September this year.

Britain is a world leader in the integration of environmental issues across Government Departments. This successful integration has been assisted by the strong role now played by the "green" Ministers in every Department. These Ministers seek to ensure environmental considerations are taken into account in the work of their Departments, as recently announced in the environmental coverage in Department's 1992 reports; training to back up guidance Departments use when considering the environmental impact of their policies and programmes; advice provided by a range of new environmental advisory bodies, such as the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment.

This concerted approach has allowed the Government to make progress on its environmental commitments in all areas.

In the international arena the members of the Antarctic treaty successfully completed and, in October 1991, signed the protocol on environmental protection of the Antarctic which provides for a 50-year ban on mineral activity in the Antarctic. The British Government have also continued to prepare for the UN Conference on Environment and Development—"The Earth Summit"—which the Prime Minister will attend in Rio in June 1992. The United Kingdom has played a leading role in the negotiations for international conventions on climate change and the conservation of the world's biological diversity, both of which it is hoped will be ready for signature in Rio.

In the European Community significant progress has included agreement in December 1991 on a Community eco-labelling scheme for products which achieve a high degree of environmental performance; agreement in December 1991 on a habitats directive to protect endangered wildlife and natural habitats; agreement on a regulation to control the export of certain hazardous chemicals, mainly pesticides; adoption in December 1991 of a directive on the protection of water against nitrate pollution. The Government have also announced that the use of CFCs will be phased out by the end of 1995, two years ahead of the EC target.

On policies affecting the countryside, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, has continued to press for the inclusion of environmental considerations in negotiations on the reform of the common agricultural policy. Other policies on the countryside include: the launch of "Action for the Countryside", a statement of the Government's policies to enhance the conservation, development and enjoyment of the English countryside, introducing a number of new initiatives to fund and encourage such action; increased protection for sites of special scientific interest; publication of a revised planning policy guidance note on the countryside and the rual economy, setting out a balanced approach to rural development and conservation; publication of "Our Farming Future" setting out the Government's policies for reconciling agricultural and environmental objectives; measures to improve the environment of the farmed uplands, particularly moorland.

In addition, the Employment department has continued to develop policies to encourage environmentally sustainable tourism, with the publication by the English tourist board of the "Green Light: a guide to sustainable tourism" in December 1991.

As far as the marine environment is concerned my right hon. Friend, the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has secured agreement in the EC restricting the length of drift nets to be used by all EC vessels wherever they fish in the world.

Measures which affect the local environment include: the introduction in Britain of the first phase of a system of integrated pollution control, which brings together the regulation of pollution of air, land and water. This has attracted considerable interest in the EC, and may form the basis for Community-wide action; implementation of the majority of the provisions of the Planning and Compensation Act including a development plan-led system which pays close attention to environmental factors, supported by strengthened planning guidance; introduction, in January 1992, of the first phase of a new urban air quality monitoring network, which will provide more information for the public on a wide range of air pollutants; the launch in November 1991 of a major national publicity campaign "Helping the Earth Begins at Home" to raise householders' awareness of the link between home energy use and global warming, and to encourage greater energy efficiency.

At the Department of Transport, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has also been making progress on our commitments to make transport more sensitive to the environment by: the introduction of MoT emissions checking to reduce vehicle pollution; publication of "Keeping Buses Moving", a guide to bus priority in urban areas, allocation of £10 million for local bus schemes, and approval of further work in developing the Midland metro light rail scheme.

At the Department of Health work has continued to develop the strategy for "greening the NHS", encouraging the use of environmentally sensitive products, and making more effective use of resources.

Many other Departments are developing their own environmental initiatives. At the Department of Education and Science, the expert committee appointed to consider environmental higher and further education is making good progress; the Ministry of Defence has launched a thorough environmental review of its work; and the Scottish, Welsh and Northern Ireland Offices all have environmental programmes to meet their particular needs.

Charterhouse Estates Ltd.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department has given in grants to Charterhouse Estates Ltd. for its involvement in the Liverpool 1 area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key [holding answer 3 March 1992]: A city grant of £196,000 was awarded to Charterhouse Estates Ltd. on 6 March 1992 for the conversion of 14-16 Fleet street, Liverpool to a studio-business complex. This was the first and only grant offered so far by the Department to the company for its involvement in the Liverpool 1 area.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 5 March 1992]: The Department of the Environment manages 52 residential properties, as distinct from those held and managed by other Departments as part of their departmental estate. Of this total, 7—13·5 per cent.—are (a) empty, none are (b) for sale on the open market, 12—23 per cent.—are (c) intended for sale on the open market and none are (d) for sale to housing associations.

Travelling Showpeople

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from national showmen in respect of winter quarters.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 5 March 1992]: We have recently received a number of representations on behalf of the National Showmen Fight for Rights about the advice given in circular 22/91—"Travelling Showpeople".

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will put forward proposals requiring local authorities to include within their local plans their policies on the provision of facilities for travelling showpeople.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 6 March 1992]: My Department has recently issued guidance to local planning authorities in circular 22/91, "Travelling Showpeople" which, among other things, emphasises that local planning authorities should consider the needs of travelling showpeople when preparing local plans and unitary development plans.

International Wildlife

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he is taking to establish an inspection and enforcement service fully to enforce international wildlife controls as recommended in the report on international trade in wildlife;

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of implementing all the recommendations in the recent Joint Nature Conservation Committee report on international trade in wildlife as they apply to the trade in wild birds; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will introduce import taxes or charges for licence applications for traders of wild birds.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 6 March 1992]: Implementation of many of the JNCC's recommendations, including those relating to inspection and enforcement and import taxes and charges, needs to be considered by the European Community as a whole. The European Commission's proposals for changes in the relevant Community legislation were published last month and we shall be consulting widely on them. Until agreement has been reached within the Community on the precise changes to be introduced, it will not be possible to estimate the total costs of implementation.

Wild Birds

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional funding he will make available to implement the new measures to protect wild birds in trade that were announced by him on 27 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The Department has made provision for staff to analyse and take follow-up action on the checklists completed in relation to imports of live animals. We shall make additional funding available for other measures as and when necessary.

Special Protection Areas

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to issue revised guidance to local planning authorities on the treatment of designated and candidate special protection areas in the light of the Leybucht Dyke case heard in the European Court of Justice.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 6 March 1992]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister for Housing and Planning to my hon. Friend the member for Twickenham (Mr. Jessel) on 27 February 1992, Official Report column 562. We published draft guidance on that day, and will issue it in final form later this year in a new planning policy guidance note on nature conservation.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when officials from his Department last met staff of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee to discuss future special protection area designations; and what was agreed.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 6 March 1992]: My officials last met staff of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee and English Nature on 13 February to discuss special protection area designations. Progress on sites already submitted to the Department was discussed and the Government expect to announce a number of further designations shortly. Discussions are continuing on the future work programme. It was agreed to maintain the momentum through 1992-93 and beyond.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list where nuclear waste from power stations, all other nuclear installations, and imported waste, are stored in Britain.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 6 March 1992]: Low-level radioactive waste is disposed of at British Nuclear Fuels' shallow disposal facility at Drigg. Intermediate-level radioactive waste is currently stored on site awaiting deep disposal. High-level or heat-generating radioacative waste is stored at Sellafield and Dounreay. No radioactive waste is imported into the country.

Local Government Services

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he provides county councils on the supply of disaggregated information about the cost of provision of the local government services to district councils.

Mr. Key [holding answer 6 March 1992]: Each year the Department of the Environment publishes a document "Standard Spending Assessment Handbook" which sets out underlying information about the service elements of standard spending assessments for each English local authority. A copy is sent to each authority and copies of the 1990-91 and 1991-92 editions are available in the House Library. In addition, every local authority is obliged to publish its accounts annually.

Ultraviolet Radiation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes in ultraviolet radiation levels have been revealed by the continuous monitoring by the National Radiological Protection Board in the last three months; if he will publish the relevant data; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: I have been asked to reply.

A preliminary analysis of results obtained at Chilton, Oxfordshire, as part of the National Radiological Protection Board's programme of development for solar radiation measurement, for the months December 1991 to February 1992, does not indicate any signficant differences in mean levels from those expected. Temporal variations in levels appear to be within the range of variations expected from variability in local weather conditions.

Business Property Values

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the change in average business property values since April 1988.

Mr. Maples: I have been asked to reply.

There are no statistics available in relation to average business property values which would enable information to be supplied in the form requested.

Nuclear Reprocessing Plant

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will next meet the European Commissioner for Environmental Matters to discuss the impact of the Dounreay reprocessing plant on the Irish sea and the surrounding environment.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Rent Arrears Scheme, Hackney

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his decision to end Hackney council's arrears-to-rents scheme.

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter) on 7 February at column 324. We do not have the information to provide an estimate of the amount of housing benefit that may have already been paid.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Duchy Visit

34. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next intends to visit the Duchy.

37. Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next plans to visit the Duchy.

38. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next plans to visit the Duchy.

39. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has any plans to visit the Duchy in April.

40. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next intends to visit the Duchy.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hemsworth (Mr. Enright) earlier today.

Legal Advisers

35. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many legal advisers there are in the Duchy office.

Mr. Chris Patten: There are two legal executives employed by the Duchy in the Duchy office. The Duchy solicitor is a partner in a firm of solicitors and he regularly visits the Duchy office but is not a member of the staff.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

External Trade Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the significance of the figures in the final column of table F2 of the monthly review of external trade statistics.

Mr. Sainsbury: The series referred to is a measure of changes in the prices of exports of manufactured goods from the United Kingdom's 11 main competitors.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the outcome of his annual review of Export Credits Guarantee Department premium rates.

Mr. Sainsbury: Experience of the use of the portfolio management system indicates that it provides a sound basis for helping to determine the appropriate level of premiums. We continue to press ahead with our international initiative to encourage the use of systems which more closely match premiums to risk. Meanwhile, I have now completed the first annual review of Export Credits Guarantee Department's rates taking account of experience of the practical operation of the system, the latest forecasts of economic prospects in all the main markets, and the competitive position of British exporters. It is clear from this review that in the event current premium rates need adjusting to reflect changes both in trading patterns and in the creditworthiness of various markets so as to achieve our planned likelihood of avoiding underwriting losses. I am happy to say that we have therefore been able to make substantial reductions for many markets, though there will be some increases in others, notably those whose prospects have significantly weakened. The new rates will come into effect from 6 April. The Export Credits Guarantee Department will be in touch with exporters, and their representative associations, to inform them of the changes.

ENERGY

Renewable Energy Sources

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement on the role of renewables within the Government's overall energy strategy.

Mr. Moynihan: The Government's renewable energy policy is to stimulate the development and deployment of all technologies with prospects of commercial viability and environmental acceptability. This is being implemented by supporting a collaborative research, development and demonstration programme with industry, providing an appropriate institutional framework, and utilising the non-fossil fuel obligation which has resulted in contracts being placed for more than 600 MW of electricity from renewable sources. Moreover an independent advisory group, which I chair, is currently reviewing renewable energy strategy. I expect the group to report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy in the spring.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to undertake an environmental assessment of the current 100 MW target for renewables.

Mr. Moynihan: For renewables projects which require planning permission, the likely environmental impact will need to be taken into account when the application is determined. In some cases, there will be a requirement for environmental assessment. Environmental assessment will also need to be undertaken for those projects promoted by means of a private Bill.

Nuclear Levy

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what would be the cost of transferring the burden of the nuclear levy from industry to the Exchequer.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Fossil fuel levy receipts in 1990-91 were £1,175 million, of which an estimated £300 million derived from sales to industry. The terms of the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation contracts ensure that the levy revenues needed to finance nuclear-sourced electricity will decline substantially, in real terms, by 1997-98.

Orimulsion

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received concerning the burning of orimulsion; and to which power stations they relate.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations mostly relating to National Power plc's application to fit electrostatic precipitators in order to use orimulsion as a fuel at its Pembroke power station, and also in relation to the burning of orimulsion at Grain, Richborough and Ince power stations. My right hon. Friend has decided not to proceed further with National Power plc's application until he has received the considered views of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Plutonium

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what weights of plutonium arising from foreign nuclear fuel reprocessed at Sellafield were returned to the respective countries of origin in (a) 1990 and (b) 1991; and if he will specify which countries were involved and under which safeguards arrangements.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None.

Nuclear Proliferation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list (a) all measures taken by his Department in the last 12 months to prevent nuclear proliferation, (b) the number of personnel in his Department working to prevent nuclear proliferation and (c) his Department's total expenditure on control of nuclear proliferation in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department has been involved in several important initiatives in the last 12 months, aimed at strengthening nuclear non-proliferation controls.

As the lead Department on safeguards issues and provider of the United Kingdom representation on the International Atomic Energy Agency board of governors, we have been developing policy on measures to strengthen IAEA safeguards, in consultation with other Departments and our international partners. My Department has supported the IAEA and its role in the United Nations special commission's activities in Iraq, in facilitating the availability of technical advice and assistance from United Kingdom nuclear experts.

My officials continued to advise DTI on export licence applications for nuclear related materials and equipment. They provide technical advice to other Departments and take part in United Kingdom delegations to international export control organisations such as the European Community political co-operation group on nuclear non-proliferation, the nuclear suppliers group, and the Zangger committee.

Nine administrative and technical staff from the Department's atomic energy division, are directly involved to some degree on nuclear non-proliferation issues. Figures are not readily available on expenditure specifically related to this work.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the permissions granted for the construction of new gas-fired power stations by company and planned generating capacity.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 24 February at columns 397-400.

The hon. Member will, however, wish to know that my right hon. Friend has now given consent to the application by Citigen Ltd to construct a 90 MW station fuelled by gas and fuel oil at Charterhouse street, London EC1.

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Wakeham: No consultancy firm has been appointed so far.

Coal

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the energy intensity figure, in tonnes coal equivalent per $1,000 gross domestic product, for each of the European Community and Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries in (a) 1973 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available in each case.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Figures for energy intensity in member countries, on the basis of tonnes of coal equivalent per $1,000 of GDP—at 1985 prices and exchange rates—are as follows:

	1973	1989
Australia	0·86	0·79
Austria	0·73	0·56
Belgium	1·22	0·89
Canada	1·12	0·93
Denmark	0·73	0·50
Finland	0·94	0·77
France	0·74	0·63
Germany	0·89	0·67
Greece	0·85	1·04
Iceland	0·87	0·70
Ireland	1·01	0·78
Italy	0·73	0·54
Japan	0·64	0·44
Luxembourg	2·73	1·39
Netherlands	1·05	0·80
New Zealand	0·72	0·96
Norway	0·73	0·62
Portugal	0·77	1·10
Spain	0·67	0·74
Sweden	0·83	0·74
Switzerland	0·39	0·39
Turkey	1·32	1·31
United Kingdom	0·97	0·68
United States	0·98	0·73

Sources: Energy Balances of OECD Countries 1987-1988 (OECD, 1990) and Energy Balances of OECD Countries 1980-1989 (OECD, 1991).

Figures for energy intensity in member countries are published by the OECD, on the basis of tonnes of oil equivalent per $1,000 of GDP. The figures have been converted to the basis of tonnes of coal equivalent per $1,000 of GDP, using the standard conversion factor of 1.7.

Petroleum Production

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are Her Majesty's Government's latest forecasts of levels of United Kingdom petroleum production.

Mr. Wakeham: The latest forecasts for the United Kingdom petroleum production in the years 1992 to 1996 are as follows:

	Million Tonnes
1992	85-105
1993	85-115
1994	95-130
1995	95-130
1996	90-130

As in previous years, the forecasts are presented in the form of a range of outcomes for each year. These take into account the many uncertainties involved. The figures include stabilised crude oil, natural gas liquids—NGLs and condensates. NGL and condensate production is expected to contribute between 4 million and 10 million tonnes annually to these figures.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what response he has given to representations from high-energy-using industry, including the engineering steel industry, about proposed increases in electricity prices.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend asked major energy users, including the engineering and steel industries, to provide detailed information on electricity prices so that the Government may better understand their position. This work has made good progress.

Nuclear Safeguards

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on issues discussed, proposals rejected and decisions taken at the most recent special meeting of the board of governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency that focused upon international nuclear safeguards.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A report on the issues discussed at the February board of governors has been made by the International Atomic Energy Agency in the form of a press release, No. PR 92/12, dated 26 February. A copy of the press release has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the United Kingdom ambassador to the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna has made any additional pledge of resources, scientific expertise or technology for safeguards at the IAEA board of governors special meeting on improving international nuclear safeguards that opened in Vienna on 24 February.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No.

Coal Mining

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he intends to meet the National Union of Mineworkers to discuss the future of coal mining in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend and I have no plans at present to meet the National Union of Mineworkers to discuss the future of coal mining in Britain.

Nuclear Transport Ships

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the liability coverage (a) currently in place or (b) planned, for (i) Pacific Nuclear Transport Ltd. ships and (ii) Nuclear Transport Ltd. ships registered in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: As the licensed operator of the Sellafield site, British Nuclear Fuels plc is responsible for complying with the provisions of the Nuclear Installations Act 1965, as amended, with regard to insurance for the transport of nuclear materials to or from the site. The insurance arrangements for meeting these requirements in respect of ships registered in the United Kingdom and owned by Pacific Nuclear Transport Limited—PNTL—are a commercial matter for BNFL and PNTL. Nuclear Transport Limited owns no such ships.

EMPLOYMENT

Craft Apprentices

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will tabulate the number of craft apprentices as defined by legal indentures currently attending either day release or sandwich courses at colleges of higher or further education, showing the number by convenient classes or categories of craft, trade, or future occupation;

(2) if he will tabulate the number of craft apprenticeships entered into in each year since 1980 in convenient classes or categories of craft, trade, or future occupation.

Mr. Jackson: The information is not available in the precise form requested. Estimates for Great Britain from the labour force survey of the number of people undertaking craft apprenticeships at the time of the survey are given in the table.

Spring each Year	Thousands
1983	229
1984	196
1985	201
1986	170
1987	173
1988	177
1989	206
1990	201

Note: Information for 1981 from the Labour Force Survey is not comparable with that for other years. There was no Labour Force Survey in 1980 or 1982.

Of the 201,000 craft apprentices in the spring of 1990, around 90,000 were attending day release or sandwich courses.

Customs Clearance Agents

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what compensation or redundancy arrangements will be available for customs clearance agents and their employees after 1 January 1993.

Mr. Forth: Statutory entitlements to redundancy payments, based on age and length of service, are provided for in part VI of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978, and, in Northern Ireland, the Contracts of Employment and Redundancy Payments Act (Northern Ireland) 1965.

Employers (Disability Adaptations)

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on levies on employers in other EC countries who do not adapt premises or equipment for employees with disabilities.

Mr. Jackson: We have no information to suggest that any EC country places a levy on employers in this way.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to place a levy on employers who do not adapt premises or equipment for employees with disabilities in order to subsidise other employers to carry out such works; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: We have no intention of adopting such a policy.

Under the aids to premises and equipment—APE—scheme, the Employment Service currently makes grants available to employers towards the cost of adapting premises or equipment for an existing disabled employee or a new recruit who is disabled to enable them to work more effectively and productively.

In the summary paper published in 1990 "Evaluation of special schemes for people with disabilities" the large majority of employers interviewed who had benefited from the APE scheme said they would have been prepared to pay more towards the costs of an adaptation. Nevertheless, there was no call either from those employers or from individual beneficiaries for a levy of employers who did not adapt premises or equipment. There is no evidence that such a levy would improve the employment opportunities for people with disabilities.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions he has had with his EC counterparts on harmonising duties of employers to provide facilities for employees with disabilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: We have had no such discussions. EC countries provide for the employment and training needs of people with disabilities in a variety of ways, according to the circumstances which exist in the country concerned. We are in the process of improving the effectiveness of our employment and training services for people with disabilities, following extensive consultations. We take the experience of other countries, including EC countries, into account as appropriate. We also take opportunities to inform representatives from other member states about developments in the United Kingdom.

YTS Fatalities

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the date of, cause of and compensation paid in each fatality on a youth training scheme since 1979, or latest convenient date.

Mr. Jackson: The information on dates and causes of fatalities is in the table.

The Employment Department does not pay damages in compensation to families of trainees fatally injured on YT, or the former YTS. However, training providers are contractually obliged to obtain insurance to cover any claims to compensation or damages. Payments made by either insurance companies or YT training providers are a private matter between them and the trainees' families. The Employment Department is not informed of these settlements.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many unemployment benefit claimants there were in Coventry, in December 1978 and December 1991.

Mr. Jackson: In December 1991, there were 18,520 people claiming unemployment-related benefits in the Coventry local authority district. Information on the numbers claiming unemployment related benefits for local areas such as local authority districts has been available only since June 1983.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the proportion of the populations of Wandsworth, Westminster and Rotherham which are currently unemployed.

Mr. Jackson: The latest total population estimates available from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys are for mid-year 1990. The latest available numbers of unemployed claimants relate to January 1992. These data have been used for all three areas in the following reply.

In the local authority district of Wandsworth the total population estimates is 256,200 and the number of unemployed claimants is 15,863. On this basis, approximately one person in 16 is claimant unemployed.

In the local authority district of Westminster the total population estimate is 179,200 and the number of unemployed claimants is 9,470. On this basis, approximately one person in 19 is claimant unemployed.

In the local authority district of Rotherham the total population estimate is 254,500 and the number of unemployed claimants is 14,115. On this basis, approximately one person in 18 is claimant unemployed.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Central and Eastern Europe

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what way his Department has supported the activities of the legal profession in England and Wales in giving legal technical assistance for central and eastern Europe with particular reference to Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Russia, Ukraine, Belorussia and Armenia; and if he will make a statement as to the extent to which the Foreign and Commonwealth Office assistance unit has been involved in supporting these activities.

Mrs. Chalker: We consider the evolving legal professions in eastern and central European countries and those of the former Soviet Union to be an integral part in the process of democratisation. The know-how fund has, to help in this process, worked closely with the various bilateral legal associations, the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Law Society and the Bar Council. The Scottish legal profession is also involved in projects, particularly in the Baltic republics.

The following activities have been supported:

Poland

Security Law and Banking Supervision Law—The provision of British legal advisers to the Government of Poland to complete work on drafting a Security Law and to discuss a draft law on Banking Supervision.

Lawyer Placement Scheme—To enable ten lawyers from Lodz to come to the United Kingdom to learn about the structure and operation of the legal profession.

Reform of Land Valuation and Property Registration—Advice from British experts on how to secure title to land, and advice on valuation procedures for foreign and Polish investments consistent with Polish political constraints.

Management of a Law Practice—A seminar held in Poland, on the management of a lawyer's office.

Czechoslovakia

Assistance to the Czech Bar Association—To advise on the establishment of a specialist legal publishing house.

Commercial Law Seminar—Two day seminar in Prague to familiarise Czechoslovak lawyers with United Kingdom commercial law, organised by the British-Czechoslovak Law Association.

Placement Scheme for Officials from the Czech and Slovak Ministries of Justice—A one-month long placement scheme on commercial law organised by Queen Mary and Westfield College.

Bulgaria:

Bar Council/Law Society Visit—Joint mission by the Bar Council and Law Society to identify possible areas of assistance.

Environmental Law—Commentary on the Draft Bulgarian Environmental Protection Law.

Legal Workshop—A legal workshop by the British-Bulgarian Legal Association in Bankya.

Hungary

Placement Scheme for Hungarian Lawyers—Placement scheme to give young Hungarian lawyers direct experience of United Kingdom commercial law practices.

Anglo-Hungarian Legal Seminar—Seminar on the practical negotiations of a joint venture including dealing with financing documents and intellectual property matters.

Anglo/Hungarian Legal Seminar—Seminar on Criminal Justice and the administration of the probation service.

UN Conference on Environment and Development

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals are being developed by his Department's Overseas Development Administration for submission to the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in June.

Mrs. Chalker: My Department contributes to the Government's preparations for UNCED, which are led by the Department of the Environment. Proposals to be discussed by world leaders at the UNCED are the subject of intergovernmental negotiations in the UNCED preparatory committee, which is meeting in New York from 2 March to 3 April. ODA officials are included in the United Kingdom delegation, and the ODA has contributed to submissions made by the United Kingdom to earlier meetings of the preparatory committee, including on population and the environment, and technology transfer. The Secretary of State for the Environment spoke to the preparatory committee on 2 March setting out the United Kingdom's views. A copy of his speech is in the Library.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Dorset LEA (Funding)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the percentage change in real terms in funding to the Dorset local education authority since 1979.

Mr. Fallon: Local authorities are free to determine their own spending priorities between education and other services within the framework of the annual local authority finance settlement. Dorset local education authority's outturn expenditure in 1979-80, including the cost of higher education which in 1989-90 became the responsibility of the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council was some £74 million. Its expenditure in 1989-90, the latest year for which actual spending information is available, was some £169 million. The real terms percentage change between these figures is 14 per cent.

Walsall Council (Budget)

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the position of Walsall metropolitan borough council in his Department's list of levels of overheads for education authorities in England; what percentage of the council's education budget is spent on administration costs and the average administrative costs per pupil; and if he will give the comparable figures for each of the education authorities in the west midlands.

Mr. Fallon: The information is set out in the table.

Expenditure on central administration relating to primary and secondary schools, 1991-92[1]

LEA	As percentage of PSB[2] Per cent	Ranking by percentage[3] Number	As expenditure per pupil £
Walsall	3·40	46	60
Birmingham	3·85	64	60
Coventry	4·37	73	80
Dudley	3·64	54	60

[1] The figures are derived from local education authorities' budget statements prepared under Section 42 of the Education Reform Act.

[2] The potential schools budget (PSB) consists of all spending on schools other than capital expenditure, expenditure supported by Government specific grants, and expenditure on school meals, home to school transport and transitional exceptions from delegation such as grounds maintenance.

[3] The ranking is according to the percentage of PSB spent on central administration by each of the 97 LEAs (excluding most inner London LEAs) which currently have local management of schools schemes in operation. The lowest percentage is ranked as 1.

Legislation (Representations)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations his Department has had from the North West Regional Association of Education Authorities in regard to the Further and Higher Education Bill [Lords] and the Education (Schools) Bill; what replies he is sending; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Representations about a number of aspects of the Further and Higher Education Bill and the Education (Schools) Bill were received in letters from the association in late February. Replies to those letters were sent on 6 March.

Population Statistics

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the proportion of the population attending local authority schools and the proportion of the population aged over 75 years in the areas of the Wandsworth, Westminster and Rotherham local authorities.

Mr. Fallon: The proportions for 1991 are set out in the table:

	Percentage of the population
	Attending schools maintained by local education authority	Aged 75 years or over
Wandsworth	10·8	7·0
Westminster	9·2	8·0
Rotherham	16·9	5·9

Student Maintenance

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what support will be given from public funds towards students' maintenance in the academic year 1992-93.

Mr. Alan Howarth: We propose the following increases in student support. They are subject, in each case, to parliamentary approval of the necessary regulations.

The maximum rates of loan in the United Kingdom will be as follows:

Loan rates 1992-93	Full year rate (£)	Final year rate (£)
Students living away from home:
in London	830	605
elsewhere	715	525
Students living at home	570	415

The main rates of maintenance grant for mandatory award holders from England, Wales and Northern Ireland, and their equivalents in Scotland, will be the same as in the current academic year. The rates for England, Wales and Northern Ireland are as follows; Scottish rates are slightly different.

Main grant rates 1992-93	(£)
Students living away from home:
in London	2,845
elsewhere	2,265
Students living at home	1,795

These grant and loan rates will enable average student support in the United Kingdom from main grant and loan to grow by 4·5 per cent. next year. The resources available to students from England, Wales and Northern Ireland will be as follows:

Resources from main grant and loan, 1992-93	Full year (£)	Final year (£)
Students living away from home:
in London	3,675	3,450
elsewhere	2,980	2,790
Students living at home	2,365	2,210

We shall adjust the parental and spouse contribution scales for mandatory awards for students from England, Wales and Northern Ireland, so that the contribution assessed for a parent or spouse whose residual income rises in line with average earnings will continue to fall in real terms.

We shall increase the supplementary allowances payable within the mandatory award by 4·5 per cent., thereby maintaining their value in real terms.

We shall make similar adjustments to the scales and allowances used for equivalent awards elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

I am placing in the Library details of all the rates of grant and loan and of the parental and spouse contribution rules.

Museums

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make funds available to secure the future of the Hancock museum, Newcastle and the Sunderland museum.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Funding these museums is not a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend.

The Hancock museum is owned by the Natural History Society of Northumberland. Its running costs are provided by Newcastle university. Like all universities, Newcastle is an autonomous institution responsible for managing its own financial affairs. It is for the university to decide the level of funding for this facility in the light of other priorities.

The Sunderland museum is the responsibility of the Tyne and Wear museums service.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are his plans for capital expenditure for grant-maintained schools for the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1991, c. 310-14]: In my earlier reply I said that I would announce in due course further capital allocations to grant-maintained schools for named projects to start in 1992-93. We have agreed allocations with a total value of £8·8 million. Some projects are phased over two years.

Of the 60 schools that submitted bids for consideration in the second round, 38 have received an allocation for a named project. Having now seen all the bids together I have also decided to make allocations to four schools who submitted technology-related bids last year which were unsuccessful in the first round. Together with the announcement I made on Thursday about technology schools initiative allocations we now have 101 schools which have benefited from the TSI.

The grant-maintained schools will make good use of the funds allocated to them which will enable them to improve the facilities and working environments for their pupils.

The following is a list of the named project allocations.

HEALTH

East Dorset Health Authority

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the expenditure of the East Dorset health authority in 1979 and for the current year; what percentage change in real terms this represents; and if he will make a statement on health services in the Bournemouth area.

Mr. Dorrell: The East Dorset health authority was established on 1 April 1982. The annual accounts of the authority show total revenue expenditure of £54·5 million, cash, for 1982-83 and £114·7 million, cash, for 1990-91, the latest year available. These figures represent an increase in real terms of 34·6 per cent. measured at 1991-92 prices.

For 1979-80 the annual accounts of the former Dorset area health authority record total revenue expenditure of £54·1 million, cash, compared with £165·9 million, cash, by the successor East and West Dorset health authorities in the financial year 1990-91—an increase in real terms of 41·2 per cent. measured at 1991-92 prices.

East Dorset health authority is to be congratulated on its achievements since the commencement of the Government's NHS reforms and I expect the services provided to residents to continue to improve.

A major landmark within the Bournemouth area is the opening, in February, of phase II of the new Royal Bournemouth hospital. Phase I, opened in 1989, provided general medical and general surgical beds and enabled the centralisation of vascular surgery and urology services to take place at a later date.

Phase II will include a 24-hour accident and emergency service which will be operational by August 1992 and will be additional to the similar service already provided at Poole. This will mean that East Dorset will have two 24-hour accident and emergency services. Increased orthopaedic services together with the existing orthopaedic in-patient facilities transferred from Christchurch hospital and a trauma service for fractured necks will all improve the local services for elderly people.

The 24-hour accident and emergency service and the introduction of a low-risk obstetric unit which the authority plan to develop into the first midwife-led maternity unit in the United Kingdom have both been included as a direct response to consumer representations.

The extra capacity at the Royal Bournemouth hospital is allowing the authority to offer many added benefits to local residents including reduced waiting times for out-patients. Since April 1991, the total number of people in East Dorset waiting for more than one year for in-patient treatment has reduced by over 50 per cent. and by 31 March 1992 is expected to represent only 6 per cent. of all people waiting.

The number of people awaiting treatment for more than two years has reduced by 90 per cent. and there will be no people waiting for more than two years by the end of March 1992.

Ambulance Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of the merger of the Mersey ambulance service and the Cheshire county ambulance service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Donald Wilson, the chairman of the Mersey regional health authority, for details.

Bio Products Laboratory

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what activities of the Bio Products Laboratory were deemed to be activities as defined under schedule 8 to the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 in relation to the transitional arrangements on licensing applying to loss of Crown immunity status on 1 April 1991.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Activities related to the sale, supply, manufacture and wholesale dealing of medicinal products which are licensable activities by virtue of sections 7 and 8 of the Medicines Act 1968.

Nurses, Cheshire

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of nurses employed in the county of Cheshire; and if he will give the totals for 1970, 1980 and 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is available only for health service regions and districts.

Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the criteria by which a company is assessed for inclusion within the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The pharmaceutical price regulation scheme is a voluntary agreement between the Health Departments and the Association of the British Pharmaceutical industry. It is intended to apply to all companies supplying national health service medicines which are prescribed by medical or dental practitioners.

The term "national health service medicines" refers to any human pharmaceutical product which is marketed under a specific brand name. The agreement therefore does not cover pharmaceutical products which are sold under their generic title, nor packs which are predominately intended for sale to the public without a prescription.

GP Budget Holders

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department gives to hospitals on the procedures concerning the relative priority with which patients of budget holders may be seen compared to non-budget holder patients; what representations he has received on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Following representations made by the BMA we discussed this issue with the Joint Consultants Committee; and issued joint guidance to hospital consultants in June 1991 in executive letter (91)84. The guidance clearly states that "provider units will not offer contracts to one purchaser which would disadvantage the patients of another purchaser". Copies of the executive letter are available in the Library.

Cosmetic Treatment

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether female transplant patients may receive free cosmetic treatment from the national health service for such things as hair growth caused by anti-rejection pills.

Mr. Dorrell: The treatment of such a patient under the NHS is a matter for the clinical judgment of the doctor responsible for her care.

Rehabilitation Medicine Consultants

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of consultants in rehabilitation medicine in post at 31 December 1990, 31 March 1991, 30 June 1991, 30 September 1991 and 31 December 1991, respectively.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information on the number of hospital medical staff is collected on an annual basis by census as at 30 September each year. The latest information available is for 30 September 1990 and this shows that there were 11 consultants in rehabilitation medicine in England at that date.

Census data for 30 September 1991 will be available later this year, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Hospital Appointments

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the number of people within Trent regional health authority who failed to attend national health service hospitals after being granted firm appointments in the year to March 1991; and how many of these obtained private treatment instead.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary gave my hon. Friend the Member for New Forest (Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson) on 19 November 1991 at column 130. The total number of patients on the waiting list at 31 March 1991 in Trent for ordinary or day case admission who had deferred admission at their own request was 4,417. Information is not collected centrally on numbers who failed to attend for in-patient and day case treatment or who obtained private treatment instead.

Meningitis

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on information campaigns about meningitis in each of the last three years; and what plans his Department has for future campaigns.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Health education campaigns are conducted on behalf of the Government by the Health Education Authority which is funded by the Department. During the coming year, as part of its promotion of immunisation, the HEA will provide information on the new vaccine to be introduced against haemophilus influenzae b, a major cause of bacterial meningitis in young children; it is not possible to break-down this expenditure. In addition the Department makes an annual grant of £15,000 per annum to the National Meningitis Trust to help fund its information campaigns for both members of the public and professionals, and the HEA has assisted the trust with production of an information pack for GPs.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what governmental initiatives have been taken in the last five years as to research into meningitis; what financial assistance has been given, and to which bodies, to organisations involved either in research into the disease or support to families affected; and whether such assistance is able to be separately identified as to amounts spent on research, administration and salaries of those working for organisations receiving Government support.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science. Figures for the last five years for MRC research into meningitis are as follows:

1986-87	144,057
1987-88	215,603
1988-89	160,467
1989-90	339,091
1990-91	460,000

MRC research on meningitis funded in 1990-91 was as follows:

Direct support (through MRC's own Units):
- Clinical Research Centre, Division of Communicable Diseases, Harrow, Middlesex.
  - Pathogenesis and immunobiology of meningococcal infection.
- MRC Laboratories, The Gambia, West Africa.
  - Serological studies with Haemophilus Influenzae Type B polysaccharide/protein conjugate vaccines.

Indirect support (through grants to University departments):
- Professor E. R. Moxon, Department of Paediatrics, University of Oxford.
  - Molecular basis of Haemophilus Influenzae pathogenicity.
- Dr. G. J. Boulnois, Department of Microbiology, University of Leicester.
  - Genetic engineering of Polysaccharides.
- Professor T. H. Pennington, Department of Bacteriology, University of Aberdeen.
  - Studies on the population genetics and typing of Neisseria Meningitidis.
- Dr. J. E. Heckels, Department of Microbiology, University of Southampton.
  - Immunobiology of meningococcal outer membrane proteins.
- Dr. D. M. Jones, Manchester Public Health Laboratory, Public Health Laboratory Service Board, London.
  - To investigate Neisseria Meningitidis surface antigens for induction of protective antibody after disease/carriage.
- Dr. J. J. McFadden, Department of Microbiology, University of Surrey, Guildford.
  - DNA probes to study epidemiology and virulence of Neisseria Meningitidis infections.
- Dr. B. G. Spratt, School of Biological Sciences, University of Sussex, Brighton.
  - Molecular basis and molecular epidemiology of the emergence of penicillin resistance in Neisseria Meningitidis.
- Dr. Rosalyn A. Davies, Department of Neuro-otology, Institute of Neurology, London.

The use of brain-stem acoustically evoked responses to predict permanent hearing loss following bacterial meningitis.

Dr. A. Robinson, Bacterial Antigens Group, Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research, Porton.

A preliminary investigation into the mechanisms of meningococcal meningitis.

In the last five years the Department of Health has commissioned the following meningitis related research projects:

1. "A Prospective Case-control Study of Meningococcal Disease in Eight West Country Health Districts". Total cost: £58,874. Study undertaken by Bristol and Weston Health Authority;
2. "Meningoencephalitis Associated with the Measles, Mumps and Rubella (MMR) Vaccine." Total estimated cost: £129,195. Study being undertaken by Oxfordshire Health Authority;
3. "Clinical Trial of Haemophilus Influenzae Vaccine." Total estimated cost £129,275. Study being undertaken by the Public Health Laboratory Service.

It is not possible to break down this expenditure into amounts spent on research, administration and salaries. Money given to the National Meningitis Trust is not intended for research purposes.

Community Nurses

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each years since 1979 the number of community nursing staff employed and the number of visits undertaken to patients over retirement age.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 6 February 1992]: The information is not available in the form requested. Also, definitional changes between 1979 and 1990 and differences in definition between manpower and activity statistics make detailed comparisons difficult.

Table 1 shows the number of community health care nursing staff between 1979 and 1990. Included in the figures are all primary health care staff, except school nurses, agency staff and midwifery staff: community psychiatric nurses and community mental handicap nurses are included from 1981, the first year for which data were available.

Table 2 shows the number of people aged 65 and over who were seen by a home nurse or health visitor between 1979 and 1987-88, and by a district nurse, health visitor, community psychiatric nurse, community mental handicap nurse or other community nurse in 1988-89 and 1989-90, following the introduction of a new data collection system. Figures are not collected centrally on the total number of contacts with community nurses by age.

[1] For 1988-89 and 1989-90, there was a change in the method of data collection, and therefore the figures are not comparable to past years.

[2] This estimate was based on incomplete age data for the first year of a new data collection system and appears to over estimate the true figure.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Statistics

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what percentage the levels of notifiable criminal offences and crimes of violence, respectively, changed in Leicestershire during the last 12 months for which records are available.

Mr. John Patten: In the 12 months to September 1991, recorded crime in Leicestershire increased by 29·5 per cent. over the previous 12 months and crimes of violence increased by 9·8 per cent.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what number and what percentage reported (a) criminal offences and (b) crimes of violence have altered in Leicestershire during the last six months for which records are available.

Mr. John Patten: In the six months to September 1991, recorded crime in Leicestershire increased by 29·6 per cent. over the corresponding six months of 1990. Crimes of violence increased by 14·6 per cent. over the same period.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) notifiable criminal offences and (b) crimes of violence were notified to the police during the last six months of 1979 and of 1991, respectively.

Mr. John Patten: In the last six months of 1979 there were 1,296,570 notifiable offences recorded in England and Wales of which 69,023 were crimes of violence. Information for the last six months of 1991 is not yet available.

Police Manpower

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what number and by what percentage the number of police officers in Leicestershire has altered since May 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: At the end of December 1991 police strength in Leicestershire constabulary was 1,808. This is an increase of 107, or 6·3 per cent., since the Government first took office in May 1979.

Press Code of Practice

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to consult the chairman of the Press Complaints Committee on strengthening the code of practice of national newspapers to protect mentally disordered persons from intrusion by the presss; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None. Changes to the code of practice are matters for the newspaper industry to consider. The Government have, however, made it clear that they will review the effectiveness of press self-regulation in the middle of this year.

Poll-Tax (Liability Hearings)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many liability hearings for outstanding poll tax have so far taken place with the defendant present; of these how many (a) orders were made or (b) no order were made; and what is the status of those not falling into either categories (a) or (b).

Mr. John Patten: Information on liability hearings for non-payment of community charge where the defendant was present is available for the period 1 April 1991 to 31 December 1991. During that period the total number of liability hearings conducted where the defendant was present was about 129,000. Liability orders were made in about 107,000 of these hearings. Other information about liability hearings with the defendant present is not collected.

Auto Crime

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motor vehicles were (a) broken into and (b) stolen, during the latest year for which figures are available in England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: The available information relates to thefts of and from motor vehicles recorded by the police in England and Wales. Provisional figures for 1991 show that there were 582,267 thefts of a motor vehicle and 913,706 thefts from a motor vehicle. These figures were released earlier today in Home Office statistical bulletin 2/92, a copy of which will be available in the Library shortly.

Overseas Voters

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total cost of establishing and publishing the system of overseas voter registrations.

Mrs. Rumbold: Advertising campaigns to inform British citizens living abroad of their voting rights were undertaken in 1986, when the overseas franchise was introduced by the Representation of the People Act 1985; and in 1990, upon the extension of the qualifying period from five to 20 years, under the Representation of the People Act 1989. The total costs involved were £279,000 and £705,000 respectively. In 1991 a total of £1,400 was spent on updating the posters used in British diplomatic posts abroad.

The costs of the passage of the 1985 and 1989 Acts were largely absorbed within existing provision. Estimates of any additional costs involved could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The cost to local authorities of registering overseas electors under the 1989 Act in 1990 and 1991 is estimated to be £172,000. Estimates for the years 1986 to 1989 are not available.

Police Statistics

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list, in rank order, for each (i) police authority and (ii) county police authority in England, including average figures (a) the number of police offices in 1979, (b) the number of police offices for the latest year for which figures are available and (c) the difference between the two ranking by (c);

(2) if he will list, in rank order, for each (a) police authority and (b) county police authority in England, including average figures (i) the number of police officers in 1981, (ii) the number of police officers for the latest year for which figures are available and (iii) the difference between the two, ranking by (iii).

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Drugs

Mr. Nelson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiative on drugs is being planned to coincide with the United Kingdom presidency of the European Council in the second half of 1992.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: European drug prevention week will take place on 16 to 22 November, and we shall be playing a full and active part. This initiative was proposed by the United Kingdom, and has been taken up by all our EC partners. In the United Kingdom, a wide range of national, regional and local events is being planned with the overall objective of raising awareness of the dangers of drug and solvent misuse, especially among young people.

Life Sentence Prisoners

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has established the order in which existing discretionary life sentence prisoners, who are eligible for consideration under the provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 1991, will have their cases considered by the Parole Board; and where the hearings will be held.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The hearings will be held in the establishments in which the prisoners concerned are located. It will be for the Parole Board to decide the order in which cases are heard. To assist it in this task, I will provide the board with a list of those eligible in each establishment in suggested order of priority for hearing. The lists will be prepared on the following basis.

Prisoners due for a review under existing arrangements between now and 1 October, when the new provisions come into force, will be offered the opportunity to defer their reviews so that they can benefit from the new arrangements. Those who opt to defer will be at the top of the list, in original date order.

Next will be any prisoner for whom the Parole Board has previously made a release recommendation which was not accepted. Thereafter, prisoners will be ranked in order of the month in which, under existing procedures, their next Parole Board review would have been due to commence. Where a number of cases rank equally in the same month, account will then be taken of the length of time served past expiry of the tariff period of sentence, with priority being give to those who have been detained longest. If further fine tuning within the same month is necessary, any prisoner who has previously been released on licence, but recalled to prison, will be placed below others who have previously been detained for the same length of time past tariff. Account will also be taken of any compassionate considerations indicating that an early hearing is appropriate.

Police Complaints Authority

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has made to appoint a successor to Judge Francis Petre as chairman of the Police Complaints Authority.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Her Majesty the Queen has approved the appointment of Sir Leonard Peach as chairman of the Police Complaints Authority with effect from 1 August 1992 when the current chairman, Judge Francis Petre, retires on 31 July 1992. I welcome this appointment. Sir Leonard Peach, who served from 1986-89 as chief executive of the NHS management board, is shortly to retire from IBM (UK) Ltd. after a distinguished career.

PRIME MINISTER

Women's Issues

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to alter the present departmental structure for consideration of women's issues.

The Prime Minister: I am currently examining existing departmental responsibilities for women's issues.

Value Added Tax

Dr. Marek: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy not to widen the scope of VAT by introducing a positive rate on those items that are presently zero-rated.

The Prime Minister: The Government have no plans to extend the scope of VAT to any items which are currently zero-rated, and no need to do so.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to meet with non-governmental organisations which specialise in non-proliferation issues to discuss the outcome of the special session of the United Nations Security Council decisions on nuclear non-proliferation agreed in New York on 31 January.

The Prime Minister: I have no specific plans to do so. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is in close touch with non-governmental organisations in this field.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister whether the library at 10 Downing street contains a copy of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the main points of the agreed United Nations Security Council special session policy to control nuclear proliferation held in New York on 31 January; indicating what plans he has to publicise the strategy agreed on nuclear non-proliferation.

The Prime Minister: The agreed conclusions of the high-level meeting of the Security Council on 31 January are set out in the statement which I made at the time on behalf of all members of the Security Council, and on which I reported to the House on 3 February at columns 21-35. The statement has been published as Security Council document S/23500, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Scotland

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions on which he has officially visited Scotland since he assumed his present office, and the engagements he undertook during those visits.

The Prime Minister: I have made five official visits to Scotland, when I undertook a number of different engagements.

Wales

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions on which he has officially visited Wales since he assumed his present office, and the engagements he has undertaken during those visits.

The Prime Minister I have made one official visit to Wales, when I undertook a number of different engagements.

National Health Service Improvements

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Prime Minister how many letters he has received in the past six months seeking improvements in the national health service.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 6 March 1992]: I have received many representations on the national health service.

The Government have increased the resources available to the National Health Service with the result that National Health Service spending has risen by 55 per cent. in real terms under this Government and next year National Health Service spending in England will rise to £618 per person, compared with £409 per head—1992-93 prices—in 1979.

The Government's reforms are beginning to deliver improved health care. In 1991-92, the first year of our reforms, the National Health Service is forecast to treat 5·6 per cent. more in-patients and 4·3 per cent. more out-patients than last year.

Libya

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the visit to Libya by Vasily Safranchuk, the United Nations envoy.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 February 1992]: The United Nations Secretary-General has now reported to the Security Council the outcome of Mr. Safronchuk's recent visits to Libya. That report states that Security Council resolution 731 has not yet been complied with. We agree with that assessment. Libya must comply with United Nations Security Council resolution 731 or face further measures.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will state the total funds made available for research into the causes of myalgic encephalomyelitis in the last five years; and how much of this has been for research into the physical causes of myalgic encephalomyelitis.

Mr. Hanley: No grant applications for research into the causes of myalgic encephalomyelitis have been received by the Department of Health and Social Services. However, I understand that in the last five years research at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast into the physical causes of ME has been supported by grants of approximately £20,000 from the ME Association and other private sources.

Dentistry

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial resources will be made available to the dentistry profession in Northern Ireland to implement the Poswillo report.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Foyle (Mr. Hume) on 5 March, Official Report, column 238.

Heating (Health Problems)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will support and encourage the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and health boards in Northern Ireland jointly to investigate the cause of asthma and repeated chest infections in children and report on the incidence of these health problems in relation to the type of heating installed in homes.

Mr. Hanley: I am not aware of any evidence of a causal link between asthma or other chest infections and any types of home heating and have no immediate plans to instigate such an investigation unless evidence is forthcoming.

Social Security

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give, for each year from 1978-79 to the latest available, the total number of staff administering the social security programme.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Total number of staff
1984	4,488
1985	4,435
1986	4,508
1987	4,692
1988	4,544
1989	4,470·5
1990	4,352·5
1991-92	4,284

Information prior to 1984 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Unrest (Compensation)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications for compensation under the scheme of compensation for loss of employment through civil unrest have been rejected since 1970 on the grounds that the applicant had not been employed for two years or more and what percentage of rejected applications such rejections represent.

Mr. Needham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave him on 3 February 1992 (Official Report, Vol. 203, col. 30).

CIVIL SERVICE

Morale

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what new initiatives he intends to introduce to improve morale in the civil service.

Mr. Renton: Our aim is to have an efficient, effective and well-motivated civil service. Managers in Departments and agencies continually work to achieve this.

SCOTLAND

Students' Allowances

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish details of any changes in students' allowances for session 1992-93.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am publishing today the main rates of allowances payable under the postgraduate students' allowances scheme for vocational postgraduate courses which do not attract student loans, together with the rates of various supplementary allowances payable to both undergraduate and vocational postgraduate award holders. The main rates of maintenance allowance for undergraduates will remain frozen at their 1990-91 cash levels following the introduction of student loans.

Details of the new rates have been placed in the Library. The increases in these rates are broadly in line with the 4·5 per cent. increase in the overall provision for student maintenance announced by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Agricultural Scientific Services

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about his plans to establish the agricultural scientific services of the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department as an executive agency.

Mr. Lang: I have decided that, under the "next steps" initiative, the agricultural scientific services will become an executive agency from 1 April 1992. The agency will be called the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency—SASA—and will continue to be part of the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department.

For 1992-93, the first year of operation, I have set the following key performance targets for SASA:

development of a full accruals accounting system by April 1993; completion of 95 per cent. of all scientific tests and analyses within the timetable set by the customers;

evaluation of quality assurance schemes for all laboratory activities leading to accreditation during 1993-94; achievement of at least 1½ per cent. efficiency gain; establishment of base line figures for quantitative indices of performance including (eg unit cost per sample; cost per scientist direct hour; staff utilisation) including the development of a comprehensive work-recording system, leading to an average efficiency gain for these indices of 1½ per cent.;

charges for charged services to be set at full economic cost to achieve full cost recovery; make the progress necessary in the first year to ensure the implementation of full customer-contractor arrangements by 1 April 1994;

by a formalised process, secure the views of all customers on the quality of the work done by end March 1993.

Fish Protection

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will designate more waters under the EC directive for protection or improvement of freshwaters to support fish life.

Mr. Lang: Yes. I have today made arrangements for over 2,300 km of Scottish waters to be added to those already designated for protection or improvement under directive 78/659/EEC. The waters concerned have all been designated as salmonid.

The designations, based on submissions from the river purification boards—RPBs—bring the total length designated in Scotland to 36,577 km. More than three quarters of the total length of all Scottish rivers are now covered, almost 98 per cent of which conform to the directive's provisions. I should like to pay tribute to the RPBs, local authorities and industry for their contribution towards maintaining and improving the quality of these waters.

Natural Heritage Areas

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will issue the statement of the Government's position on the implementation of natural heritage areas in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have written today to Magnus Magnusson, chairman of Scottish Natural Heritage, to send him the text of the Government's statement on the implementation of the natural heritage areas provision, contained in the Scottish Natural Heritage Act 1991, following the period of public consultation last year. In preparing this statement full account was taken of the points made during the passage of the Act, as well as the many views expressed by the public bodies and individuals during the consultation period. A copy of this statement and a summary of the responses to the consultation paper has been placed in the Library of the House.

I am very grateful to all who responded formally to the consultation paper. A wide range of views were expressed. Many showed strong support for the principle of natural heritage areas and for the associated concept of integrated management of areas of outstanding importance to the natural heritage in Scotland. Many respondents agreed that the implementation of the designation should be based where possible on the voluntary principle. There was considerable stress on the importance of ensuring the active involvement of local communities in natural heritage areas. It was also generally agreed that there was a need to influence in many areas sensitive and sustainable land management while taking account of the public desire for access. I am confident that the new designation will provide a suitable and successful framework which will allow Scottish Natural Heritage and others to develop successful partnerships which will safeguard and enhance areas of outstanding importance to the natural heritage of Scotland.

A number of respondents doubted whether the natural heritage area concept alone would be sufficient to protect every area of outstanding natural heritage significance in Scotland. The statement of the Government's position makes plain that such designation should only apply where Scottish Natural Heritage has made a clear case that it will provide an effective mechanism for protection and where the proposal for designation has the backing of the relevant interests. If Scottish Natural Heritage were to advise, after careful examination, that another model of administration is necessary for a particular area, I would give that advice most careful consideration.

Water Quality

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the quality of Scotland's rivers and other surface waters.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A full report of the wate quality survey of Scotland 1990 is being prepared for publication, but I am pleased to announce that a summary has been published today and copies have been placed in the Library. The results of the survey are like a breath of fresh air in the current climate of pollution scare stories.

Hon. Members will be interested to note the main findings of the survey which was carried out by the river purification boards and is the most comprehensive yet undertaken. They are:

the proportion of Scotland's rivers which are "unpolluted" has risen from 94·9 per cent. in 1985 to 97 per cent. in 1990, representing a net increase of 968 km;

there has been a 56 per cent. reduction in the length of "grossly polluted" rivers in Scotland between 1985 and 1990;

there have been significant improvements in the quality of Scotland's estuaries—96·2 per cent. of estuaries and 91·3 per cent. of coastal waters are of a satisfactory quality.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Lindane

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Advisory Committee on Pesticides will conclude its investigations on lindane.

Mr. Maclean: The Advisory Committee on Pesticides should conclude its investigations on lindane by this autumn.

Investment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give figures for investment in agriculture for each of the last eight years in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) England.

Mr. Gummer: Estimates of investment in fixed capital in agriculture for the United Kingdom and for England in the last eight years are as follows:

£ million

Year	United Kingdom	England
1983	1,366	903
1984	1,353	850
1985	1,267	804
1986	1,048	641
1987	968	622
1988	1,125	776
1989	1,123	754
1990	1,182	[1]—

[1] Not yet available.

Experimental Husbandry Farms

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the experimental husbandry farms that have been closed since 1980, giving in each case the date of their closure.

Mr. Gummer: The only experimental husbandry farm to close since 1980 was Great House which closed on 26 May 1982. The experimental husbandry farm at Trawsgoed was transferred to the Agriculture and Food Research Council on 1 April 1991 to form part of the new Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research.

Meat Inspection

Mr. Alison: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the levels of charges paid by the meat industry to local authorities for the inspection of fresh meat.

Mr. Gummer: Charges for the inspection of fresh meat, including poultry meat, are levied in accordance with Community legislation intended to harmonise their collection by member states. This legislation is currently under review. In Great Britain, charges are levied by local authorities to recover the costs of the inspection services which they provide; under the new arrangements for meat hygiene enforcement which I have announced today, this work will transfer to the new service when it is established.

In preparation for future discussions on this subject within the Community, and reflecting our concern over existing variation in the levels of charges set by local authorities for the inspection services which they provide, the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and I have decided to carry out a review of inspection charge levels at a sample of plants in Great Britain. This review will be carried out by the Government in conjunction with independent consultants, and will seek to identify any possible means of reducing inspection costs whilst maintaining existing inspection requirements. It will also seek to collect information relevant to the operation of revised United Kingdom and Community charging arrangements. We intend to publish the results of the review within two months.

Under EC legislation the European Commission was due to submit a report to the Council of Ministers on the operation of the harmonised arrangements in the light of experience acquired before 1 January 1992, accompanied by any proposals for their revision. This report is still awaited and I have written to the Agriculture Commissioner to emphasise the importance which the United Kingdom attaches to this review, in order to achieve conditions of fair competition which have not yet been attained. I have also drawn his attention to some of the charges set by the French Government, which appear not to conform to Community rules. I have written to the French Minister of Agriculture on the same point.

Meat Hygiene

Mr. Alison: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made on future meat hygiene enforcement arrangements.

Mr. Gummer: The review of fresh meat hygiene enforcement was commissioned last year by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Health, for Scotland and for Wales, and myself as part of our preparations for implementing the European single market.

My right hon. Friends and I have given careful consideration to the findings of the detailed study of methods of providing a meat hygiene service, which was carried out by officials of my Department and the Department of Health, assisted by Price Waterhouse. We have concluded that for Great Britain the interests of the meat industry, our consumers and overseas customers would best be served by the creation of a national meat hygiene service. The service would be constituted as an agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and would therefore be fully accountable to British Ministers. We are confident that this is the best way of achieving a consistent and cost-effective enforcement service in the special circumstances of the fresh meat sector. Local authorities' responsibilities for enforcing other food legislation are not affected by the decision to create a specialist meat hygiene agency.

Officials will work very closely with the local authority associations, the organisations representing the veterinary and environmental health professions and the meat inspectors, and the meat industry, to ensure a smooth transition to the new arrangements. The date for transfer of responsibility of meat hygiene enforcement to the agency will depend on the availability of parliamentary time for the necessary primary legislation. For the time being, local authorities will remain responsible for enforcing the meat hygiene legislation and providing the meat inspection service.

The decision to create this service is a further element in the Government's policy of ensuring that food safety standards in this country remain second to none. The new service will ensure that hygiene standards in the British meat industry allow it to compete effectively both in the single market and worldwide, and further enhance consumer confidence in the high standards of British meat.

Pesticides

Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the use of ethylene bisdithiocarbamate pesticides.

Mr. Maclean: The Environmental Protection Agency —EPA—has, I understand, decided to reinstate approval for the use of ethylene bisdithiocarbamate pesticides—EBDCs—on 42 crops. This decision is very much in line with the view we took on this issue over two years ago, based on advice from the independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides—ACP—which was published in January 1990. After an exhaustive examination the committee found no evidence of cancer or other adverse health effects to consumers from the use of EBDCs or from the metabolite ethylenethiourea. I am glad that the EPA has now reached a similar conclusion. This is a further vindication of work carried out by the ACP and reinforces the confidence the public should have in the effectiveness of the United Kingdom system for approving pesticides.

Fishing Vessel Licences

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the new rules applying to the aggregation and transfer of fishing vessel licences, and to the licensees of vessels of 10 m registered length and below.

Mr. Gummer: The required reduction in capacity where fishing vessel licences are aggregated is increased with immediate effect from 10 to 20 per cent. In addition all transfers of single licences between vessels are now subject to a 20 per cent. reduction in capacity. The formula for calculating vessel capacity remains unchanged. Fisheries Departments are writing to fishing organisations notifying them of the change and seeking views as to whether these reductions should be varied, for instance, according to type and/or age of vessel.

These rules apply to all new applications. Applications for transfers or aggregations lodged with Fisheries Departments on or before 27 February will be dealt with under the rules in force at the time.

In addition, from 1 January 1993 all vessels of 10 m and below wishing to fish for sea fish for profit will require a licence. However, fishing for salmon or migratory trout and fishing by vessels used wholly for the purpose of conveying persons wishing to fish for pleasure with rod and line and by hand line will continue to be exempt from this requirement. Licences will in principle be issued only to vessels which are already actively involved in fishing. This will be assessed by reference to whether the vessel was registered under part II of the Merchant Shipping Act 1988 on 27 February 1992, the date of my original announcement, and whether it was fishing for profit in the preceding 12 months. Fisheries Departments will be consulting the industry about the detailed operation of these rules, including their application to replacement vessels, and about other matters arising from the licensing of this part of the fleet.

Correspondence

Sir Robin Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when a full reply will be sent by his Department to the letters dated 26 November and 18 December from Cheriton Bishop parish council to his divisional veterinary officer at Exeter, and passed by him to his London headquarters.

Mr. Maclean: The Ministry's regional veterinary officer did discuss the matters raised in this correspondence with the clerk of the parish council. However, I concede that an unacceptable delay has occurred in concluding this correspondence, because the papers were lost. This is an unusual occurrence for which I apologise. The omission had in fact been noticed when the parish council recently wrote to the Prime Minister, myself and others and a repy covering the points raised in all these letters will be sent shortly.

TRANSPORT

Network Express

16. Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with British Rail concerning the ordering of the Network Express trains for the Kent coast services.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend and I meet the chairman of British Rail regularly when we discuss all current issues.

30. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the new Networker rolling stock to be supplied for the north-west Kent commuter service is still scheduled for introduction from April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The first Networker units delivered to network SouthEast are currently undergoing testing. NSE expects to introduce some Networkers into service with the May timetable.

Roads, London

17. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with local authorities and service providers about the state of roads in London.

Mr. Chope: I chair the London Consultative Committee which provides a forum to discuss road and traffic issues with the London local authority associations. The committee last met on 6 February 1992.

M66

18. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress on the M66 from Denton to Middleton.

Mr. Chope: I expect work on the first construction contract at the the northern end of the scheme to start early next year, subject to resources being available. A public inquiry into revised orders and compulsory purchase order for the central and southern sections of the scheme ended on 5 February. Subject to a satisfactory outcome, I expect work to start on the Tameside section south of the River Medlock next year and on the final section north of the River Medlock in 1995.

BR Maintenance Repairs

19. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from organisations concerning the disruption to other transport users and pedestrians by British Rail when carrying out maintenance repairs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I am aware from British Rail that a bridge renewal scheme in the hon. Member's constituency has led to a petition from local residents about the disruption to bus services. British Rail consults highway authorities and the police where road closures and diversions are needed. In this case, I understand that BR has also recently agreed to pay for extra bussing while the bridge is closed for three weeks.

Underground Proposals

20. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made in developing proposals to extend the tube network to Camberwell, Dulwich and beyond.

Mr. Freeman: London Transport and the five London boroughs directly affected are working together on the south London rail study. I understand that phase I of the study, which looks at the transport needs of the area, is now close to completion. Phase II, which will look at the case for extending underground lines, should start later this year.

Pensioners' Travel Concessions

21. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial arrangements are being made with the transport authorities in the west midlands to ensure that pensioners can continue to use their travel concessions at all times of the day and without additional costs to them.

Mr. McLoughlin: The responsibility for concessionary fares schemes in the west midlands lies entirely with the passenger transport authority and the district councils. It is for them to decide what level of concessions is appropriate in relation to other local spending priorities.

Buses, London

22. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much capital investment has been made in London Buses Ltd. in 1991-92.

Mr. Freeman: Capital investment in London Buses Ltd. is expected to reach £38 million in 1991-92, an increase of £10 million over the previous year. Of this, some £24 million will be spent on purchasing almost 300 new buses.

27. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many double-decker buses, how many hoppa buses and how many buses of other types are currently licensed for use in the metropolis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: London Buses Ltd.'s vehicle fleet is made up as follows: 3,705 double-deckers, 991 midibuses and 154 single deckers and coaches. There are vehicles other than those owned by London Buses Ltd. which operate bus services in London: for example, vehicles owned by private bus operators running services under contract to London Transport or on London local service licences. Information on the number and types of those vehicles is not held centrally.

Train Builders

23. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what encouragement he intends to give to British train builders to develop new techniques and services for British Rail.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 21 February a £15 million collaborative research programme for the railway equipment industry. The programme will operate in close co-operation with the Department of Transport and other interested parties.

Freight Transport

24. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that more freight is transferred from road to rail and that the freight passes round rather than through London.

Mr. McLoughlin: We are actively supporting BR's participation in joint ventures with the private sector; paving the way for liberalisation of access to the rail network to widen customer choice; backing investment for BR's new channel tunnel services; and encouraging companies to take advantage of freight facilities grants. The routeing of freight services is a matter for British Rail.

Bypasses

25. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the number of bypasses commenced in 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Chope: In 1990-91, 21 bypasses, 93 miles in length, were started. It is expected that a further 13 bypasses, 33 miles in length, will have been started by the end of March 1992. In addition to these schemes, there were 34 other scheme starts in 1990-91 and 34 planned for 1991-92. Although not described as bypasses, most of these relieve one or more communities of through traffic. For example, the 13-mile long A30 Okehampton-Launceston improvement will benefit a number of villages on the existing trunk road.

Speed Limits (Commercial Vehicles)

26. Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in the Council of Ministers towards agreeing speed limits for commercial vehicles.

Mr. Chope: The Commission made a proposal in 1988 to harmonise vehicle speed limits in the European Community, but it has not been discussed in the Council. A directive agreed at the Transport Council on 16 December 1991 will set a maximum speed for EC-registered heavy goods vehicles over 12 tonnes. The setting of speed limits will remain, however, a national responsibility.

Multi-airline Business

28. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of implementing a competitive multi-airline business in the United Kingdom.

Mr. McLoughlin: The United Kingdom has a large number of airlines which operate in a very competitive market. This has been aided by the United Kingdom's liberal licensing policies. The Government are seeking to ensure that the new European Community licensing regime, which will come into force throughout the EC as part of the single market, is as liberal as possible. The Government believe that this is the best way to bring about a market in which a range of airlines can compete and thus meet effectively the needs of consumers.

New Road

29. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of new road have been opened since 1979.

Mr. Chope: A total of 1,250 miles of new road has opened between April 1979 and December 1991, including 840 miles of trunk road and 410 miles of motorway.

Roads Programme

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of the roads programme involves expanding capacity on existing routes.

Mr. Rifkind: Over 90 per cent. of the roads programme covers projects which are either bypasses or involve the improvement of existing roads.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amount of public money was spent on motorway trunk road construction in 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: Expenditure on construction of motorways and trunk roads in England during 1990-91 was £1,281 million.

Central European Time

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has undertaken on the potential effect on the number of road accidents if the United Kingdom were to move to central European time.

Mr. Chope: The research carried out by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory is referred to in "Summer Time: A Consultation Document", Cm 722, June 1989.

Transatlantic Air Services

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he discussed transatlantic services between Birmingham and the east coast of the United States at the bilateral talks between the United States Administration and Her Majesty's Government in connection with transatlantic air services.

Mr. McLoughlin: The interests of Birmingham and other regional airports are very much borne in mind as we pursue our negotiations with the Americans. The recent round of discussions covered the possibilities for opening up additional opportunities for both sides, including new routes, without going into the detail of specific services at this stage.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the bilateral talks between the United States Administration and Her Majesty's Government in connection with transatlantic air services.

Mr. McLoughlin: Discussions with the United States Government are continuing about the possibilities for the liberalisation of transatlantic air services. Our aim is to remove obstacles to fair competition between airlines, and to remove unnecessary regulation.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the total cost of strengthening roads and bridges from 1999, following implemention of EC regulations to allow 44-tonne heavy goods vehicles on United Kingdom roads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Department has an existing 15-year programme of bridge rehabilitation for trunk roads and motorways, which commenced in 1987-88. The programme includes the assessment and where necessary strengthening of bridges and other structures, to deal with shortfalls in existing bridge strengths which have occurred as a result of the increased loading from and density of heavy traffic since the bridges were designed, and to get ready for heavier axle weights in 1999. The Department is also funding corresponding activities by local authorities in respect of their own bridges. Similar programmes exist in respect of the bridge stock owned by British Rail, British Waterways Board and London Underground Ltd. Expenditure after 1999 will depend on the progress with these programmes.

Pavement wear after 1999 will depend on the growth of heavy goods vehicles, the extent of changes in the composition of the goods vehicle fleet including the take up of 44-tonne vehicles and whether 44-tonne vehicles are equipped with five or six axles.

Construction Companies (Contracts)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the construction companies awarded contracts worth over £250,000 by his Department since 1 April 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Since 1 April 1991 the following companies have been awarded works contracts valued at £250,000 or more:

A. R. C. Ltd.
Amey Construction Ltd.
Armstrong Addison and Co. Ltd.
T. Armstrong (Construction) Ltd.
Associated Asphalt Co. Ltd.
Balfour Beatty Ltd.
Birse Construction Ltd.
Henry Boot Northern Ltd.
Henry Boot Southern Ltd.
Bovis Construction Ltd.
A. F. Budge (Contractors) Ltd.
C. M. R. Electronics Ltd.
Cambridgeshire Construction Ltd.

P. J. Carey (Contractors) Ltd.
Cementation Construction Ltd.
Colas Roads Ltd.
Costain Civil Engineering Ltd.
Cumbrian Industrials Ltd.
Currall Lewis and Martin Ltd.
R. M. Douglas (Construction) Ltd.
Eden Construction Ltd.

Autoguide Traffic System

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what deadline he has given to the current licensee for the introduction of an autoguide traffic direction system;

(2) when he expects the pilot scheme for the introduction of the autoguide traffic direction system to become operational in London.

Mr. Chope: My Department is reviewing the situation in the light of extensive developments in relevant technology.

Hazardous Chemicals

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has concerning the number of incidents in which accidents have led to the leakage of hazardous chemicals when being transported by (a) roads and (b) railways; what were the respective volume of chemicals carried and distances travelled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Information on incidents is available in the recently published Health and Safety Commission advisory committee on dangerous substances report on major hazard aspects of the transport of dangerous substances, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice is given by his Department on the use of railways or roads for the movement of hazardous chemicals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Consignors of dangerous substances are free to choose the mode of transport most appropriate for their needs, provided that they comply with the relevant safety requirements. There is no evidence that one mode of transport is generally safer than another.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assistance is given by his Department to companies producing hazardous chemicals towards the cost of constructing and maintaining rail terminals to enable them more easily to move their products by rail.

Mr. Mcloughlin: Freight facilities grants are available under section 8 of the Raiways Act 1974 to assist with the capital cost of rail freight facilities where there is a significant benefit to the environment through the removal of lorries from sensitive roads. They are payable where, without grant, the commercial decision would be to use road transport and are available for any type of goods.

Trust Ports

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about implementation of the Ports Act 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement my right hon. and learned Friend made earlier today.

Ashford International Station

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress with the study of the options for an international passenger station at Ashford.

Mr. Rifkind: British Rail has completed its preliminary study of the options for a less costly international passenger station than its original proposal. I consider that a central Ashford option best meets the various objectives. I have accordingly invited Sir Bob Reid to put forward a full investment submission for a central Ashford international passenger station to share the site of the present Network SouthEast station.

British Rail Station Car Parks

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the Government are taking to encourage the involvement of private sector firms in the management and security of British Rail station car parks.

Mr. Freeman: The Government have requested the British Rail board to explore the possibility of contracting out more of its support functions. A number of station car parks within the Network SouthEast area are already privately managed. I am asking British Rail to consider the feasibility of contracting out responsibility for the provision of other station car parking facilities.

St. Pancras Chambers

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the future of St. Pancras Chambers.

Mr. Freeman: The long term use of St. Pancras Chambers, the grade I listed former Midland Grand hotel, has been under review by British Rail, whose preferred solution is to return the building to use as a high-quality hotel, but no options are ruled out. British Rail is exploring options with private sector involvement.

British Rail considers that it is unlikely that the full commercial potential of the building can be realised until the benefits resulting from the works included in the King's Cross Railways Bill and the associated lands development scheme are completed. During the interim period British Rail is therefore examining possible alternative uses.

As a first step in the overall programme there is a need to undertake extensive works to stabilise both the interior and exterior of the building and ensure that it remains in a safe condition. Following a very detailed survey by specialist architects, British Rail is therefore shortly to embark on a major programme of remedial works.

Full consultation with the local authority and appropriate heritage bodies have commenced. Provision of the necessary funds for this work is already covered by the external finance provision made by the Government for British Rail. This work will take about two years to complete, and during that time British Rail will keep options for both short and long term under review.

Her Majesty's Coastguard

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will announce his decision on the proposed definition of the primary role of Her Majesty's Coastguard as recommended in the coastal review.

Mr. McLoughlin: Following consultations with the other authorities concerned, I have accepted the recommendation of the coastal review that the role of Her Majesty's coastguard need to be clearly defined and formally promulgated.

Accordingly, by the authority given to the Secretary of State by the Coastguard Act 1925 my right hon. and learned Friend has agreed that:

> "Her Majesty's Coastguard is responsible for the initiation and co-ordination of civil maritime search and rescue within the United Kingdom search and rescue region. This includes the mobilisation, organisation and tasking of adequate resources to respond to persons either in distress at sea, or to persons at risk of injury or death on the cliffs or shoreline of the United Kingdom."

In view of the importance of the cliff and shoreline task, particularly in holiday areas, I have instructed the Chief Coastguard to liaise with the police authorities to set up local coastal search and rescue committees to provide a consultative body to consider the co-ordination problems on the shoreline, improve liaison between the interested authorities concerned and to assess the availability and readiness of rescue resources. Additionally, coastguard sector officers are to be formally tasked to establish regular meetings with local community representatives to ensure that matters of concern involving marine or shoreline search and rescue are fully aired and brought to the attention of the search and rescue committee.

Drivers (Sleep)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his officials will hold discussions with Professor Jim Horne of Loughborough university on the dangers of sleep among drivers on motorways.

Mr. Chope: My officials were present on 3 March when Professor Horne gave a presentation of his work on this subject to the transport committee of the Medical Commission on Accident Prevention.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff, and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Maples: There have been no pay and grading reviews of any part of my Department in the last 12 months.

Third-world Countries (Debt)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what extent he is prepared to cancel rather than reschedule debts of third-world countries.

Mr. Maples: The Government have consistently taken the lead in developing an international strategy to tackle the debt problems of the poorest countries. Many of the poorest countries with the heaviest debt burdens can never realistically be expected to pay back their debts, and in these cases the Government believe that a substantial degree of debt cancellation is the only way forward. The Prime Minister's Trinidad terms initiative, launched in September 1990, proposed cancellation by all creditors of around two thirds of the whole stock of debt of eligible countries. The Paris club of creditor countries began implementing Trinidad terms in December 1991, and the United Kingdom is continuing to press for their full implementation by all creditors.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make the Trinidad terms available to all low-income countries and all lower middle income countries with debt problems.

Mr. Maples: No. Trinidad terms are specifically designed to address the debt problems of the poorest and most heavily indebted countries.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take action to address the whole stock of debt of third-world countries.

Mr. Maples: In cases where a country's inability to meet its debt servicing obligations arises from a temporary liquidity problem, it is neither necessary nor appropriate to offer relief on the whole stock of that country's debt. In certain more difficult cases, however, the Government believe that restructuring the debt stock represents the best approach to resolving that country's debt problem once and for all. This applies in particular to the poorest and most heavily indebted countries, and the Government hope that, in accordance with the new Paris club agreements implementing Trinidad terms, stock of debt reductions can be agreed for these countries within the next few years.

Tax Yield (Benefits)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the tax yield from each of the taxable benefits, and the total, for each year from 1978-79 to the latest available at current and at 1991-92 prices.

Mr. Maude: Available estimates are published in table 9.6 of the 1989 and 1991 editions of the "United Kingdom National Accounts"—the CSO Blue Book, which provide calendar year estimates of total income tax on social security benefits, applying the recipients' average rate of income tax on the whole of their income to the amount of benefits received. These amounts are shown in the table at current and 1991-92 prices.

Tax yield on social security benefits

	Current prices £ million	1991-92 prices £ million
1978	383	1,035
1979	441	1,048
1980	537	1,082
1981	703	1,267
1982	936	1,554
1983	1,038	1,646
1984	1,070	1,617
1985	1,107	1,577
1986	1,206	1,662
1987	1,213	1,605
1988	1,143	1,441
1989	1,128	1,320
1990	1,167	1,248

Employment Statistics

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current ratio of women to men in senior civil service posts and the corresponding position in 1979.

Mr. Maples: At grade levels 1 to 7 in the home civil service the proportion of women has increased from 7 per cent. in 1984 to 12·1 per cent. in 1991. Because of the changes that have taken place in the grade structure of the civil service comparable data before 1984 are not available.

Trade Unions

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make it his policy to consult civil service trade unions where decisions are taken affecting the employment of civil servants.

Mr. Maples: The Government already have a longstanding policy of consulting recognised Civil Service trade unions on decisions directly affecting the employment of civil servants.

North Sea Oil and Gas

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the amount of revenue received from North sea oil and gas for each year since 1979; and if he will forecast the revenue for the next decade.

Mr. Maude: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the Member for Wentworth (Mr. Hardy) on 18 December 1991, at column 165, for annual revenues from the North sea since 1979-80. Available forecasts of future revenues will be included in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" to be issued on Budget day.

Cross-border Transport

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what customs and excise arrangements for cross-border transport will prevail after 1 January 1993.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In the United Kingdom frontier formalities will be removed for EC traffic from 1 January 1993. Regulatory and fiscal controls such as import licensing and the collection of duties and taxes will not be conducted at the frontier. The extensive documentation required for commercial importations of goods will therefore be abolished. However, customs will continue to conduct sharply focused anti-smuggling spot checks to detect illicit drugs and other serious threats to society. These measures, conducted on the basis of risk assessment, intelligence and profiling, will remain an essential part of an integrated law enforcement effort throughout the United Kingdom. This will apply to the Northern Ireland land boundary as well as to all other intra-EC points of entry to and exit from the United Kingdom.

Customs Station, Newry

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the future use of the current customs station site at Carnbane industrial estate, Newry.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise have decided to relocate certain administrative VAT work to a new unit which will employ around 100 staff at the current customs station site at Damolly—Carnbane industrial estate—Newry.

Illicit Drugs

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give, by volume and street value, the quantity of illicit drugs intercepted at United Kingdom (a) airports and (b) seaports by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise during the 12 months ended 29 February.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is as follows:

	Kilos
	Airports	Seaports	Value £ million
Amphetamine	16·3	342·7	29·5
Cannabis (Herbal)	1,004·5	2,972·3	9·5
Cannabis (Resin)	168·5	12,499·6	38·0

	Kilos Airports	Seaports	Value £ million
Cocaine	322·6	139·7	60·3
Diamorphine (Heroin)	155·0	92·5	27·7
Total			165·0

Notes:

1. Figures are for main types of drug.
2. Figures in respect of the latest 2 months are provisional.
3. Amphetamine figure includes 283 kilos of MDA (a derivative of MDMA which is known colloquially as "Ecstasy").
4. Value of Cocaine is taken at 72·5 per cent. purity (the average at importation).
5. Value for Diamorphine (Heroin) is taken at 52·5 per cent. purity (the average at importation).
6. Figures include drugs detected at sea/airports but allowed to "run" and subsequently intercepted inland in follow up operations.

Business Registers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to improve the business registers used for the collection of economic statistics.

Mr. Maples: Following the specific recommendation of the Armstrong/Rees review of DTI statistics in 1989 and the completion of a successful pilot study in 1991, a new interdepartmental business register is to be developed by the Central Statistical Office and the Department of Employment. This project is an integral part of the programme of measures designed to bring about improvements in economic statistics.

The new register will be more comprehensive in coverage and designed to eliminate the differences between the existing separate registers of the two Departments. Its use will lead to improvements in the quality of data obtained from businesses which form the basis of a wide range of economic statistics series. Most of these series should benefit, especially those concerned with employment and productivity estimates. In addition there will be indirect benefits to the national accounts, focusing on the output measure of gross domestic product.

The development cost of the project is expected to be £4·3 million and the new integrated register should come into use in 1993 for Northern Ireland inquiries and in 1994 for Great Britain inquiries.

Capital Expenditure

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the estimated cost of replacing the existing capital expenditure allowance rates by straight line rates of (a) year one-33⅓ per cent., year two-33⅓ per cent., year three-33⅓ per cent. and (b) year one-25 per cent., year two-25 per cent., year three-25 per cent., year four-25 per cent., if the levels of capital expenditure and business profits (1) stayed constant, (2) increased by 10 per cent. and (3) increased by 50 per cent.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 6 March 1992]: Maximum estimates of the annual Exchequer costs of the proposed rates for new capital expenditure on plant and machinery are:

£ billions

Assumed changed in capital expenditure and profits Percentage	Straight line allowance at: 33⅓ per cent.	25 per cent.
+ 10	2·9	2·2
+ 50	4·0	3·0

Estimates are very approximate because the precise costs would depend on the interaction of several factors.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many official visits he has made to Scotland to examine and discuss the operation of the Scottish Grand Committee.

Mr. MacGregor: I have not made any official trips to Scotland about the specific matter of the Scottish Grand Committee, but I have frequent discussions with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland about the operation of that Committee. The hon. Gentleman will know that the Committee has met twice recently, once in Edinburgh on Monday 24 February and once in Westminster, just last Thursday.

Sittings of the House

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Lord President of the Council what action he proposes to take in the light of the debate on sittings of the House on 2 March.

Mr. MacGregor: As I said on Monday 2 March during the debate on the report by the Select Committee on Sittings of the House, I welcome much in the report, but I believe it best if further action was left to the new Parliament.

Press Car Parking Spaces

Mr. Andrew Hargreaves: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what representations he has received about the number of car parking spaces allocated to members of the press in House of Commons car parks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Orme: None.

Communications Security

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what steps are taken to ensure that hon. Members' telephone and fax communications from the House are secure.

Mr. Orme: Apart from standard procedures for maintaining security within the Palace, I understand that no special arrangements are made to monitor the privacy of telecommunications equipment or messages within the House. The House authorities have no control over the public telecommunications network.

WALES

National Health Service Units (Day Cases)

Mr. Grist: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many day cases were dealt with in national health service units in Wales in 1978-79 and at the latest available date.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: In the financial year 1978-79 there were 26,456 day cases treated by the National Health Service in Wales. The equivalent figure for the financial year 1990-91—the latest available—was 100,765, an increase of 281 per cent.

National Health Service Employees

Mr. Grist: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) consultants, (b) senior registrars, (c) registrars, (d) general practitioners and (e) dental practitioners were employed in Wales by the national health service in 1978-79 and at latest available date.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The requested information is given in the table:

	1978	1990	1991	Increase per cent.
Consultants[1]	630·5	856·5	[4]—	36
Senior Registrars[1]	100·9	145·7	[4]—	44
Registrars[1]	329·5	370·1	[4]—	12
General Medical Practitioners[2]	1,323		1,634	24
General Dental Practitioners[3]	598		832	39

[1] Whole-time equivalent of hospital medical and dental staff in post as at 30 September.

[2] Number of unrestricted principles as at 1 October 1978 and 1 April 1991.

[3] Number of principals and assistants as at 30 September.

[4] Not available.

Mr. Rod Richards

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 34, if he will specify the month in which Mr. Rod Richards commenced employment and the month in which he ceased employment as his political adviser..

Mr. David Hunt: Mr. Richards was employed as my special adviser between 5 November and 14 December 1990.

Helicopters (Ministerial Use)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the annual cost of the ministerial use of helicopters in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) on 18 June 1991.

Mental Handicap Strategy

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he is yet in a position to publish his firm proposals for the future of the all Wales mental handicap strategy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I am today publishing my firm decisions on the future of the all Wales strategy which will be re-launched at the end of its first 10-year term in April 1993. A copy of my decisions has been sent today to all Welsh MPs and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. The special allocations that my Department makes to help support the strategy will total £41·5 million for 1992-93. This represents an increase of over 20 per cent. on the £34·2 million allocated in 1991-92, which in itself was almost double the 1989-90 allocation of £18·3 million.

The strategy has already helped to improve the lives of many people with mental handicaps and their families. For example, when the strategy was launched in 1983, only 41 families were receiving support in their own homes whereas today well over 3,000 receive these services; today over 1,000 adults with mental handicap live in homes of their own compared to 166 people in 1983. I am confident that my proposals for the future of the all Wales mental handicap strategy, as part of our wider "Caring for People" reforms, will provide the right foundation for the development of top quality services throughout Wales into the 21st century.

Unitary Authorities

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give an estimate of the savings that could be provided by moving to a single tier of unitary authorities in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: My proposal for a structure of 23 unitary authorities is estimated to be cost-neutral.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give a detailed estimate of the cost of setting up and running a Welsh assembly consisting of 76 members.

Mr. David Hunt: Current proposals for an elected assembly in Wales are unspecific. However, extrapolating from earlier figures in the 1975 White Paper, Cmnd. 6348, "Our Changing Democracy", I estimate that costs would be in order of £50 million.

Agricultural Investment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give figures for the investment in agriculture in Wales in each of the last eight years.

Mr. David Hunt: Total identifiable public expenditure on agriculture in Wales since 1984 is

Year	Total capital grants and livestock subsidies	Total Government contributions	Government contribution as percentage of total
1984	59·9	31·2	52·1
1985	70·2	28·8	41·0
1986	62·4	29·6	47·4
1987	71·7	31·1	43·4
1988	73·0	31·5	43·2
1989	80·7	32·5	40·3
1990	101·2	34·6	34·2
1991	132·6	38·4	29·0

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations, in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The latest information available relates to 1 April 1991.

	Properties owned by the Welsh Office	(Percentage of stock)
Total number of properties	4,956	—
Total number empty	458	9·24
Total for sale on open market[1]	Not known	—
Total intended for sale on open market[1]	Not known	—
Total for sale to housing associations[1]	Not known	—

[1] This information is not available centrally.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pension Funds

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will bring forward legislation to ensure that pension funds do not have an accounting period in excess of 12 months.

Miss Widdecombe: Occupational pension scheme trustees have a statutory obligation to obtain annually, and to make available to members and beneficiaries, audited accounts in respect of each scheme year. The scheme year must be a period of 12 months, other than exceptionally where the scheme changes its accounting year. Draft regulations tightening the present arrangements have already been considered by the Occupational Pensions Board and will be introduced as quickly as possible.

Tax Withdrawal Rates

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing (a) the number of working heads, (b) dependants and (c) families with children facing marginal tax and benefit withdrawal rates in excess of 50 per cent. in the manner of his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 248, to the hon. Member for Hornchurch.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is in the table.

Numbers with marginal deduction rates within each range (thousands) Great Britain

Per cent.	Families with children	Couples and single	Total
100	0	0	0
90 to 99	55	0	55
80 to 89	130	20	150
70 to 79	140	55	195
60 to 69	0	5	5
50 to 59	0	0	0

Figures are based on pooled family expenditure survey data, uprated to 1991-92 prices, taxes and benefit levels.

Calculated for benefit units in receipt of income-related benefits where at least one partner works 24 hours a week of more. Figures are rounded to the nearest 5,000. Figures may not sum due to rounding.

Earnings

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women in each region earn (i) above and (ii) below the national insurance lower earnings limit; and how many are between the lower earnings limits and the upper earnings limit, in Great Britain.

Mr. Jack: Figures are not available for each region in England. Such information as is available is in the table.

Numbers of people earning:[1]

	Less than the Lower Earnings Limit million	Between the Lower and Upper Earnings Limit million	Above the Upper Earnings Limit million
England
Men	0·7	7·0	2·3
Women	2·0	6·6	0·4

Women	0·2	0·7	Negligible[1]
Great Britain
Men	0·8	8·2	2·6
Women	2·3	7·6	0·4

[1] Figures shown in the table have been rounded.

Expenditure

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give, for the years 1979-80, and the latest available, in cash terms and at 1991-92 prices, social security spending on (1) elderly people, (2) sick and disabled people, (3) families, (4) unemployed people and (5) widows and orphans, indicating the numbers of claimants in each category, and dependants in the houshold, and the percentage increase in spending in real terms.

Miss Widdecombe: Details of expenditure as shown in the table.

Information on the numbers of claimants and their dependants in each category is not available, since claimants may receive more than one benefit at any one time.

	1979-80 cash (£ million)	1979-80 at 1991-92 prices (£ million)	1991-92 cash (£ million)	Real terms percentage increase
Elderly people	10,130	23,554	31,446	33·5
Sick and disabled people	2,779	6,460	13,333	106·4
—short-term sick	680	1,581	1,079	−31·8

	1979-80 cash (£ million)	1979-80 at 1991-92 prices (£ million)	1991-92 cash (£ million)	Real terms percentage increase
—long-term sick and disabled	2,099	4,879	12,254	151·2
Families	3,640	8,463	11,492	35·8
Unemployed people	1,470	3,418	7,362	115·4
Widows and others	760	1,767	1,364	−22·8

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the latest estimate of the cost of benefits to the unemployed, administration of unemployment benefit, and redundancy payments for 1991-92.

Mr. Jack: Benefit expenditure on unemployed people is expected to be £7,360 million in 1991-92. The cost of administering unemployment benefit in 1990-91, the latest year for which figures are available, was £182 million. For other benefits it is not possible to identify separately the administration costs attributable to unemployed people. The administration of redundancy fund payments is the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment, but I am advised that in 1991-92 they are expected to total £126·9 million.

Fraud Investigations

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many home visits, excluding specialist visits, including those for the purposes of investigating suspected fraud, were made per 1,000 claimants for the latest available year; and how many were made in 1978-79 in Great Britain.

Mr. Jack: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Local Offices

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of claimants for each individual benefit at each of his Department's office covering the Tooting constituency as of 31 January.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Ombudsman

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the table given in his answer of 2 April 1990, Official Report, column 497, to the hon. Member for Gower (Sir A. Meyer) about the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

Miss Widdecombe: Information for the latest years for which figures are available is in the table.

Complaints against the Department of Social Security

	Complaints[1] made	Complaints[1] upheld
1990	200	38
1989	223	36

Claimants, Wandsworth

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest figures for the London borough of Wandsworth for the number of claims for (a) housing benefit, (b) income support and (c) family credit.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available, and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Claimant Welfare

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will introduce legislation to reinstate the requirement on his Department's officers to promote the welfare of claimants.

Miss Widdecombe: The welfare promotion requirement which was appropriate to the discretionary schemes which preceded it was not essential to income support which provides a clearer, more predictable method of directing extra help, through the award of premiums, to groups of people most likely to have extra needs. The Department was thus able to develop a prompt, accurate and effectively-run income maintenance system. The Benefits Agency includes customer care as the primary core value in its operations. At a local level, managers are committed to consulting their customers to establish their needs and expectations for service delivery and responding accordingly. We have no plans to alter the current provisions.

Departmental Offices (Interviews)

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what warning is given to clients by Department of Social Services offices and benefit agencies about the consequences of failure to attend an appointment; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of social security benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his policy on suspension of benefit for clients who are unable to attend interviews with Department of Social Services offices or benefit agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Under regulation 37 of the Social Security (Claims and Payments) Regulations 1987, benefit may be suspended when a question arises as to whether the claimant continues to be entitled to benefit; whether the award should be revised; or whether an appeal to a higher appellate body ought to be brought against an award made by an appeal tribunal. The decision to suspend should always be made in the light of the circumstances of the individual case.

Suspension will not normally be appropriate when a claimant fails to attend an interview at an office of the Department. However, where facts are known that indicate that an award ought to be revised or terminated and the interview is intended to allow the claimant to provide evidence as to continuing entitlement, suspension of some or all of the award may be appropriate.

Pension Rebates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security pursuant to his statement on the contracting-out rebate on 27 February, Official Report, column 1131, if he will give, for men and women separately, the age at which it would be wise to opt back into the state earnings-related pension scheme after April 1993 assuming (a) a 4·8 per cent. rebate and (b) a 4·8 per cent. rebate and a one per cent. age related rebate for the over-30s.

Miss Widdecombe: The circumstances of the person concerned and the precise terms of the personal pension contract they are considering will vary from one individual to another. It is not possible to give the general advice requested. In the case of personal pension schemes which are investments as defined in the Financial Services Act 1986, persons regulated by bodies under that Act have a duty to provide best advice on such products. Anyone wishing to establish his or her own position should seek advice appropriate to their needs.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security pursuant to his statement on the contracting-out rebate for 1993 on 27 February, Official Report, column 1131, if he will give, for each year covered by the statement, the cost in reduced revenue to the national insurance fund on (a) the 4·8 per cent. rebate and (b) the age-related 1 per cent. incentive, at 1991-92 prices.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is given in the table which recognises the time-lag in the payment to providers of the amounts in respect of personal pensions and the cost to the national insurance fund appears in the year following that in which contributions are paid.

The information requested is given in 1991-92 prices.

£ billion

	1993-94	1994-95	1995-96	1996-97
4·8 per cent. rebate for occupational schemes	4·6	5·3	5·4	—
4·8 per cent. rebate for personal pensions	—	1·7	1·8	1·8
1 per cent. addition for personal pension holders	—	0·2	0·2	0·2

These estimates are based on the assumption of 5 million personal pension optants in each year and have been rounded to one decimal place.

Social Fund

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the amount of money so far paid to people in Wales from the social fund; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is available in the Library.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the amount of money which will be spent in Wales out of the increased sum allocated to the social fund.

Mr. Scott: Details of the 1992-93 social fund allocations were placed in the Library on 3 March 1992.

National Insurance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when the (a) 5·8 per cent. national insurance rebate and (b) 2 per cent. additional national insurance incentive for 1991-92 will be fully paid for everyone who makes a claim before the end of the current financial year; and when he anticipates the (i) rebates and (ii) incentives for 1992-93 will start to be paid;

(2) what is the latest payment period for which the (a) 5·8 per cent. national insurance rebate and (b) 2 per cent. additional national insurance incentive have been paid to any contributors opting-out of the state earnings related pension scheme into a personal pension.

Mr. Jack: Payment of the 5·8 per cent. national insurance rebate and the 2 per cent. additional incentive are paid to personal pension providers together. The latest year in respect of which payments are being made is 1990-91. We expect payments in respect of 1991-92 to commence in May 1992 and in respect of 1992-93 in May 1993. Such payments will continue to be made as long as late or corrected earnings and contributions information continues to be received.

Rent Arrears Scheme, Hackney

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the extra housing benefit paid to council tenants in Hackney during the operation of that borough's arrears-to-rents scheme.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter) on 7 February at column 324. We do not have the information to provide an estimate of the amount of housing benefit that may have already been paid.

DEFENCE

Suicides

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, columns 454-58, if he will list the names and home towns of the men who committed suicide in the Royal Engineers, the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers and the Royal Signals in the years 1987 to 1991.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the right hon. Member.

Teamwork

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the purpose of the NATO naval exercise, Teamwork, that began off Norway on 2 March; and what contribution was made to the exercise by the Royal Navy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Teamwork 92 began on 6 March, and will run until 25 March. It is a maritime, air, amphibious and field training exercise designed to maintain the professionalism and operational effectiveness of NATO forces. Nineteen Royal Navy ships and submarines, nine ships of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary and approximately 4,000 Royal Marines are participating.

Service Pensions

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the percentage increases in service pensions for each of the years from 1975 to 1991; and on what date they were applied in each year.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Percentage increases applicable to retired pay and pensions awarded under the terms of the armed forces pension scheme were, in the period 1975 to 1991, as follows:

Year	Increase per cent.	Effective Date
1975	26·10	1 December 1975
1976	13·80	1 December 1976
1977	17·70	1 December 1977
1978	7·40	1 December 1978
1979	16·00	12 November 1979
1980	16·50	24 November 1980
1981	9·06	23 November 1981
1982	11·00	22 November 1982
1983	3·70	21 November 1983
1984	5·10	26 November 1984
1985	7·00	25 November 1985
1986	1·10	28 July 1986
1987	2·10	6 April 1987
1988	4·20	11 April 1988
1989	5·90	10 April 1989
1990	7·60	9 April 1990
1991	10·90	8 April 1991

The first increase following the award of retired pay or pension would generally have been smaller than that shown, depending on the date of the award relative to the effective date of the next increase. In individual cases the first increase could also have been applicable from a different date than the effective date shown. All increases after the first would be at the full rate and have the effective date shown.

Where retirement occurs earlier than age 55, increases in retired pay or pension awarded on account of long service are accumulated and brought into payment from the 55th birthday.

Commonwealth of Independent States

(Nuclear Warheads)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions have been taken by Her Majesty's Government to provide technical and financial support to the nations of the Commonwealth of Independent States to dismantle and transport nuclear warheads withdrawn from deployment; what will be the cost of this assistance; and under what budget head the cost will be borne.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government have agreed to provide 250 special containers to Russia for the secure transport of nuclear weapons and a number of special nuclear weapons transport vehicles. We will also provide consultancy assistance as required in the fields of nuclear weapons safety procedures; fissile material storage and vehicle design; environmental restoration; assessing the options for converting fissile material from weapons to civil nuclear use; and, if help is needed, implementation of IAEA safeguards.

Our preliminary estimate is that the eventual cost of supplying hardware could be up to about £30 million. It will be borne on class I, vote 2.

Nuclear Submarines

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to use the Firth of Clyde as a site for the wet storage of nuclear submarines, pending decommissioning or otherwise; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: We do not currently expect such a requirement to arise.

Trident

Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 402, if he will give up-to-date details of money so far spent on the fourth Trident.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Expenditure on the fourth Vanguard class submarine to the latest available date (end January 1992) is £144 million.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

French Guyana

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the letter from the Minister for Overseas Development of 18 February to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, what is the outcome of the inquiries by the British embassy in Paris about injury to the rain forest in French Guyana.

Mrs. Chalker [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The French Ministry of the Environment has confirmed that the hydro-electric project at Petit Saut referred to in the New Scientist of 25 January 1992 has over some 10 years been the subject of extensive study, including a public inquiry, which looked at all the possible options for power generation. There had been a full environmental impact assessment undertaken on the project in which the Ministry of Environment had participated. The conclusion was that a hydro-electric dam was the best option. The scheme is intended to meet not only the electricity needs of the launch-site at Kourou, but also the wider need for electricity throughout French Guyana. I am writing to the hon. Member with further details provided by French officials.

WALES

Health Service

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) on how many days consultants have been paid, or are expected to be paid, more than £1,000 per day in total payments for operations designed to reduce waiting lists in Gwent during the current financial year;

(2) what is his estimate of the current weekly cost to the national health service of operations being undertaken on their behalf by the BUPA hospital at Pentwyn, near Newport.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Operational information of this kind is not held centrally. It is for district health authorities as commissioners of care to decide on and account for the benefits and costs of any health gain investment, including consultant fees and contracts with private sector health care providers.

Assisted Area Status, Monmouth

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names of those people who met him regarding assisted area status for Monmouth on 2 March; and if he will provide details of the bodies that they represent.

Mr. David Hunt: On 2 March, I met Cllr. W. J. Parker, Cllr. W. G. A. Hathaway, Cllr. J. Lewis and Mr. J. Martin representing Monmouth borough council County Cllr. C. White, Mr. P. Smith, town clerk of Monmouth town council and Mr. Roger Evans.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to announce his decision on assisted area status for the Monmouth travel-to-work area.

Mr. David Hunt: I am presently considering the issues put to me by local representatives at a meeting on 2 March and shall be responding in due course.

Surgical Operations

Mr. Grist: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the number of operations carried out in Wales in 1978-79 and at the latest available date for (a) hip replacements, (b) cataracts and (c) open heart surgery.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The information on hipH-Sreplacements and cataracts is given for 1978, 1979 and 1989 (the latest available year) in the following table:

Principal operations in National Health Service hospitals in Wales[1]

	1978	1979	1989
Hip replacements[2]	1,372	1,501	2,407
Cataracts	2,232	2,330	5,019

[1] Figures may understate the true position in that not all hospitals provide complete clinical details relating to patient discharge and deaths.

[2] Includes replacement of head of femur for 1989.

Source: Hospital Activity Analysis.

Information available centrally prior to 1980 on open heart operations is derived from "Hospital Activity Analysis" and is likely to understate the true position in that not all hospitals provide complete clinical details relating to patient discharges and deaths. It is not directly comparable to later information. The numbers of open heart operations reported to have been carried out in national health service hospitals in Wales in 1978 and 1979 were 185 and 161 respectively. The latest available data, however, is provided by the centrally funded, regional cardiac centre at the University hospital of Wales and shows that the following number of operations were undertaken in 1991 and up to 29 February 1992.

	By pass	Others	Total
Adult
1991	654	70	724
[1]1992	144	12	156
Paediatric[2]
1991	23	14	37
[1]1992	9	1	10

[1] As at 29 February.

[2] Opened June 1991.

Hospitals (Car Parking)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the hospitals in Wales which impose car parking charges.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This is a matter for individual district health authorities and this information is not held centrally.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the numbers of confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in each county in Wales in 1992, to the latest available date.

Mr. David Hunt: The numbers of confirmed cases of BSE in each county in Wales during 1992 to 28 February are shown in the table:

County	Number of confirmed cases
Clwyd	62
Dyfed	288
Gwent	31
Gwynedd	13
Mid Glamorgan	9
Powys	47
South Glamorgan	17
West Glamorgan	2

Vehicle Watch Scheme

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the operation of the vehicle watch Wales scheme in Gwent.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: None. Vehicle watch is a police initiative and it is for the Gwent constabulary to assess its effectiveness in Gwent.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to fund the vehicle watch Wales scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I have received representations from the Gwent police authority about the funding of vehicle watch and these are presently under consideration.

Dairy Farmers

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding the implications of the MacSharry proposals for dairy farmers in Monmouthshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I have received a number of representations from industry bodies in Wales and individual farmers, including some dairy producers from Monmouthshire, on the implications for the industry of the EC reform proposals.

Senior Citizens (Security)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to ensure that senior citizens are provided with access to suitable home security equipment to ensure the security of their homes and allay fears of crime.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Assistance for installing home security equipment for senior citizens is already being provided under specific crime prevention initiatives; as part of wider measures to improve conditions for the elderly; and as part of the action being undertaken to renovate dwellings.

Proposals for improving household security are eligible for consideration as crime prevention measures under the urban programme; any local authority in Wales may submit a bid. Projects that have received support recently include the "Cardiff Safe and Secure" initiative, and improvements to the security of the communal areas of flats on the Sandfields estate in Port Talbot. Funds made available to victim support schemes have also on occasion been used to improve household security. In undertaking such projects the needs of elderly people, especially those living alone, attract high priority. Under the Welsh Office elderly initiative scheme some £315,000 is being made available over a three-year period to support a project in Mid Glamorgan that is designed to improve the safety and well-being of senior citizens living in their own homes. In addition to providing improved door and window locks, and door viewers, the project entails the provision of advice to the elderly on how to deal with bogus officials and confidence tricksters.

Within the renovation grant arrangements those over 60 who receive income related benefits may be able to get help with home security installations in the form of minor works assistance.

Crime Prevention Panels

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement regarding the funding of crime prevention panels in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Crime prevention panels are an excellent means by which local communities can become involved through voluntary activity in the fight against crime. They are encouraged to be self-sufficient and to seek local funding arrangements. Many crime prevention panels obtain private sponsorship from local businesses. Possible sources of funding will vary from area to area. Crime Concern has published a booklet entitled "Attracting Business Sponsorship" which provides detailed advice for panels on how to obtain sponsorship for crime prevention projects. Some panels have been successful in obtaining charity status and any panels wishing to do this can contact the Charity Commission who will advise them on the necessary procedures.

Although central funding is not made available to support the panels themselves, individual projects that they propose may be eligible for consideration for support under the urban programme, provided that the bids are sponsored by the appropriate local authority.

HEALTH

Kettering RHA

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the revenue allocation to the Kettering regional health authority for (a) 1982-83 and (b) 1992-93 expressed in (i) absolute terms and (ii) 1992-93 prices.

Mr. Dorrell: Information about the funds allocated by regional health authorities to district health authorities is not held centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact Dr. Stuart Burgess, the chairman of Oxford regional health authority, for details.

Mid Cheshire Hospital Trust

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses are employed by Mid Cheshire hospitals trust; and what was the number previously employed by the health authority responsible for staffing the equivalent hospitals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Richard F. Lawrence, the chairman of the Mid Cheshire hospitals trust for current nursing levels, and Sir Donald Wilson, the chairman of the Mersey regional health authority, who may be able to provide the historical data.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost per hour of consultants employed by Mid Cheshire hospitals trust; how many patients they see on average in one week's clinics; and what time is normally taken by consultants to visit NHS patients outside the hospital.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Richard F. Lawrence, the chairman of the Mid Cheshire hospitals NHS trust, for details.

Blood

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the average cost of collection per litre of blood from (a) recovered plasma and (b) plasmapheresis for each regional transfusion centre of the National Blood Transfusion Service.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on the regional cost of collecting plasma is not held centrally.

Newmarket Hospital

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of (a) the consideration given by his Department to the report by management consultants commissioned by the Committee for the Retention of Newmarket Hospital, before his recent decision on the future of the hospital and (b) the consultations between the regional health authority and the Committee for the Retention of Newmarket Hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: On 10 February 1992 I announced our decision to accept certain proposals put forward by West Suffolk health authority on the future of Newmarket hospital, subject to the health authority agreeing to undertake a further examination of the scope for provision of day surgery, minor accident and maternity services in the new hospital proposed for Newmarket.

In reaching this decision full consideration was given to the report commissioned by the Committee for the Retention of Newmarket Hospital. Several issues were thoroughly analysed including patient safety, medical staffing, size of catchment area, patient activity levels and effective use of resources.

The Committee for the Retention of Newmarket Hospital met East Anglian regional health authority members on 24 April 1991 to present their proposals for the future of the hospital. Additionally, the region's finance manager met the committee's management consultants, J. J. Thompson and Partners, on 29 October 1991 to go through their report.

Contact Lenses

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances contact lenses can be obtained under the national health service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All general opthalmic services patients may put any optical voucher to which they are entitled towards the cost of contact lenses. Under the hospital eye service patients who require contact lenses for clinical reasons will, if they are entitled to an optical voucher, get the lenses free; other patients can take advantage of the maximum charging arrangements.

Strategy and Objectives

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he plans to publish the goal strategy and objectives in the national health service management executive and the Department of Health priorities and key challenges for 1992-93 and beyond.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have agreed a statement of the aims, goals and priorities for my Department for 1992-93 and the following three years. It covers the whole range of the Department's work relating to health services, health promotion, public health, social services, EC and other international issues, and internal management. It includes our specific priorities for the NHS management executive, which are taken forward in more detail in the management executive's statement, "The Goal and Strategies of the Chief Executive and the Management Executive of the NHS and their Objectives for 1992-93", approved by the NHS policy board. Copies of both statements have been placed in the Library.

Nurse Education

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial support trust hospitals give to post-registration nurse education.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Post-registration training which is designed to provide nurses and midwives with specific professional skills is to be funded from a separate and protected budget held at regional level. Employers are expected to bear the cost of other post-registration nurse education and training because they are in the best position to determine need. Trusts are expected to play their full part in training the staff they employ, in the same way as other employers.

Mental Handicap Hospitals

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the mental handicap hospitals planned for closure over the next five years and the district health authority in which each is situated.

Mr. Dorrell: This is a matter for regional and district health authorities and the hospitals themselves. Government policies on the treatment of people with learning disabilities in the community are well known and understood.

Sight Test Fees

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what would be the gross cost of abolishing sight test fees for all people over 60 years old.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: NHS sight tests are already free to approximately 40 per cent. of the population, including those pensioners who qualify on medical or income grounds. The estimated additional cost at 1991-92 prices of extending eligibility to all those aged 60 and over would be between £30 million and £35 million in a full year.

Hospital Trusts

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been treated privately under the waiting list initiative from (a) Leeds united hospital trust and (b) the Bradford hospitals NHS trust.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Anthony Clegg, the chairman of the United Leeds hospitals trust and Mr. Rodney Walker, the chairman of the Bradford hospitals NHS trust, for details.

National Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total level of expenditure on pay for general and senior managers in each year since 1985.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 18 February 1992]: The grades of general and senior managers were introduced as part of the new arrangements recommended by the Griffiths report in 1983. The cost of staff employed in general management grades is shown in the table:

England (HCHS)
General managers

£ million (cash)

	Regional/district general managers	Unit/other general managers
1985-86	6·8	4·1
1986-87	8·6	17·1
1987-88	9·0	20·7
1988-89	9·7	20·8
1989-90	10·7	21·3
1990-91	12·8	25·3

Notes:

1. Figures for 1990-91 are as yet subject to audit.
2. The figures are gross pay costs including employer's national insurance and superannuation contributions.

Source: Annual accounts of regional and district health authorities in England together with those of the special health authorities for the London post-graduate teaching hospitals.

Other senior management costs were not separately identified until 1989-90. The cost of staff employed in senior management grades in 1989-90 was £126·9 million and in 1990-91 was £213·3 million.

Staff employed in general and senior management grades generally hold posts which were previously classified under administrative and clerical, works staff or senior nursing grades.

Immunisations

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give figures for the number of immunisations carried out in South Derbyshire district and Trent region in 1982 and the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The numbers of two-year-olds vaccinated against diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, polio, measles, mumps and rubella in South Derbyshire and Trent in 1982 and 1990-91 are given in the table.

The uptake rates are also given to allow comparisons between the years.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cyprus

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current negotiations by the United Nations Secretary-General on a united Cyprus and on the role Britain has played since 1979.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Representatives of the UN Secretary-General have recently ocmpleted another round of talks with all parties in the region. We have throughout given full and active support to the UN Secretary-General's efforts to promote a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement.

Turkey (Miners)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what offers of assistance and expertise have been made to the Turkish Government in the search for the trapped coal miners near Zonguldak.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Government were not approached by the Turkish authorities for help in dealing with the disaster at Kozlu coal mine in Zonguldak on 5 March.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Denatured Wine

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 29, for what reasons Her Majesty's Customs and Excise did not charge excise duty on denatured wine products for culinary uses before 1 January, but did do so from that date onwards.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The excise duty liability of imported wine and made-wine, including denatured wine and made-wine, has not changed in recent years. Customs regret that an importer was incorrectly advised that if wine denatured with 2 per cent. salt was to be used as an ingredient in food manufacture it would not be liable to excise duty at importation. The correct liability has been applied since February 1991.

Taxation

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what higher rate of income tax would be necessary to raise the same revenue as would be raised by a higher rate of 50 per cent. and removing the ceiling on national insurance contributions.

Mr. Maude: At 1992-93 levels of income and assuming statutory indexation of allowances and thresholds, a higher rate of 59 per cent. would raise an approximately equivalent amount of revenue in a full year.

Taxation (Commercial Properties)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria he employs to determine whether a property with a paying guest or guests should be classified as a commercial property for Inland Revenue purposes.

Mr. Maude: Unless a paying guest or guests are using the property as their main or sole residence as defined in the Local Government and Finance Act 1988, any short-stay accommodation in excess of six bed spaces or which is not ancillary to the owners own domestic use will be treated as non-domestic property for uniform business rate purposes.

Share Ownership

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of share ownership in Great Britain.

Mr. Maude: A joint Treasury/ProShare survey carried out in January and February of this year shows that almost 10 million people, or more than 22 per cent. of the adult population in Great Britain, now own shares compared with 7 per cent. in 1979. I am placing copies of the survey report in the Libraries of both Houses.

Income Tax

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the effect on tax revenues (a) in the first year and (b) in a full year, assuming this is introduced in 1992-93 of the introduction of a 50 per cent. top rate of income tax on annual taxable incomes of (i) £31,555, (ii) £33,555, (iii) £36,555, (iv) £39,555 and (v) £42,555, in Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 9 March 1992]: The information is in the table.

Estimated yield in 1992-93 from a 50 per cent. tax rate

Threshold of taxable income at which 50 per cent. rate is charged (£)	Yield in a full year[1] at 1992-93 levels of income (£ million)
31,555	2,550
33,555	2,370
36,555	2,140
39,555	1,950
42,555	1,790

[1] About half of the yield would be collected in the first year.

These estimates do not allow for any behavioural effect that might result from such changes to the tax system and do not include capital gains tax.

Taxes and Benefits

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the table in his answer of 12 June 1991, Official Report, columns 547-50, on taxes and benefits, to include information on 1989.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 9 March 1992]: The information is as follows:

Unearned Income

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the revenue raised from a 9 per cent. charge on unearned income for those below state retirement age with a (a) £3,000 exemption, (b) £3,500 exemption, (c) £4,000 exemption, (d) £4,500 exemption and (e) £5,000 exemption, giving both full year and first year revenues for 1991-92 and 1992-93, specifying the numbers affected in each case, for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 9 March 1992]: Latest estimates for 1991-92 are as follows:

Threshold £	Yield in a full year £ million	Numbers affected Thousands
3,000	870	1,130
3,500	820	970
4,000	780	840
4,500	750	750
5,000	720	660

The amount of revenue collected in the first year would depend on the administrative arrangements for collecting such a charge. The yield in 1992-93 would depend on the levels of investment income for that year.

These estimates take no account of any possible behavioural changes following the introduction of such a charge.

Nicholas Young Fraud

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will institute proceedings, pursuant to section 48 of the Banking Act 1987, against Mr. Bengt Bangstad arising from the Nicholas Young Ponzi fraud; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 3 March 1992]: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has no powers to institute proceedings under section 48 of the Banking Act 1987. That is a matter for the Bank of England.

THE ARTS

Libraries

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give (a) the total number of books lent by and (b) the total amount of public spending on the library service in England and Wales, for each year since 1962.

Mr. Renton: Reliable and comparable information for England and Wales is available only from 1966-67 to 1989-90:

ENERGY

Electricity

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received from pottery manufacturers about the effects of the regulatory regime established by the Electricity Act 1989 as it affects contract users.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To date my Department has received one representation—from a pottery manufacturer—about electricity contracts.

British Coal

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on British Coal's external financing limit for 1991-92.

Mr. Wakeham: British Coal's deep-mine and opencast operations have achieved much in the present financial year and the corporation is likely to record a substantial profit after interest for the second year running. Cost cutting through restructuring has, however, been making calls on British Coal's cash resources in the short-term and it has been agreed that the corporation's external financing limit for 1991-92 should be raised from £542 million to £622 million to provide more financial headroom. This increase will be funded out of the existing vote provision for the current financial year.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Visits

Q10. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Prime Minister if he has plans to make an official visit to Havering Atte Bower.

The Prime Minister: I am making plans for a series of visits to all parts of the country and hope to include Essex among them.

Interception of Communications

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister whether a successor has been chosen to Lord Justice Lloyd as commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985.

The Prime Minister: Lord Justice Lloyd's second term of appointment expires on 10 April. I am most grateful for his work in carrying out his duties as commissioner. I have decided to appoint Lord Justice Bingham as commissioner for a period of three years with effect from 11 April 1992.

ENVIRONMENT

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those parts of his Department, including executive agencies, carrying out reviews over the last 12 months into the pay and grading of staff and the firm of consultants engaged, where appropriate.

Mr. Heseltine: The only part of my Department yet to conduct a detailed review of pay and grading structures is the Queen Elizabeth II conference centre. That study was assisted by MCP Management Consultants.

Community Charge

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from local authority associations or others, concerning exempting from the community charge those currently qualified to pay 20 per cent. of the full payment.

Mr. Key: Few local authorities have proposed exempting all people currently liable for 20 per cent. of the community charge. However, a number of authorities and others have supported bringing forward the principle of 100 per cent. council tax benefit to the last year of the comunity charge.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the cost for the collection of community charge for those on the minimum 20 per cent. rate.

Mr. Key: No separate information is held on collection of the community charge from those making the minimum 20 per cent. contribution. However, the average cost of collecting the community charge from all charge payers is about £14 compared to an average 20 per cent. payment of £45.

Fire Safety

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage figure of reliability for sprinkler systems he took into account when establishing the parameters for minimum periods of fire resistance in approved document B (fire safety) approved for the purposes of the Building Regulations 1991.

Mr. Yeo: Estimates of the reliability of sprinkler systems vary, and no one figure was used as the basis of the new guidance. However, the opinion of experts at the fire research station, and of the Fire Advisory Panel which the Department consulted while developing the guidance, was that a fire resistance reduction could be allowed over a wider range of cases than hitherto when a sprinkler system was installed.

Stop Notices

Mr. Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Stockport (Mr. Favell) of 6 November 1991, Official Report, columns 160-61, when the appropriate ministerial order will be made to implement section 9 of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 dealing with stop notices.

Sir George Young: My written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Esher (Mr. Taylor), Official Report, 16 December 1991, columns 68-69, announced that the main enforcement provisions in part I of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 (including section 9) would be brought into force on 2 January this year. The Planning and Compensation Act 1991 (Commencement No. 5 and Transitional Provisions) Order 1991 (SI 1991 No. 2905 (C90)) implemented those provisions accordingly.

Shopping Centres

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will establish a working group including English Heritage, the Civic Trust and the Royal Institute of Town Planning to establish ways in which town and city shopping centres may achieve security from crime combined with good visual and aesthetic quality.

Mr. Yeo: The type of security measures required to protect shops and the visual and aesthetic qualities which would be appropriate are best considered locally, informed by local circumstance and need. The Town and Country Planning (Development Plan) Regulations, which came into force on 10 February, require local planning authorities to have regard to crime prevention when preparing development plans. Furthermore, my Department's circulars 1/84—issued jointly with the Home Office—and 22/88 provide guidance on the role of planning crime prevention. Local planning authorities should use this advice to establish local policies which combine the encouragement of effective security and good design.

Archive Services

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about county archive services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: We have received a number of letters about local government restructuring and county archive services. The Local Government Commission to be established under the Local Government Act 1992 will review the structure of local government in the shire counties in England. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State intends to direct the commission to have regard to guidance which he will issue about the policy considerations which should underlie its reviews. This guidance will draw the commission's attention to the importance of satisfactory arrangements for existing archive services. Decisions about local government structure and arrangements for services will be for Parliament.

Liverpool (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the recent visit by the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities to the Liverpool, Riverside constituency.

Mr. Portillo: I visited the Liverpool Riverside constituency on 6 January 1992. At the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Hall I announced urban programme support of £3 million towards the hall's refurbishment along with city grant support of £4·5 million towards an office development at Exchange buildings. Later I visited the garden festival site to see work in progress on leisure developments, particularly at the Festival hall. I then met representatives of the Eldonian Development Trust.

I also visited the constituency on 6 March for a number of official engagements including the signing of Liverpool's city challenge implementation agreement, the launch of a civil service access training initiative for ethnic minorities in Liverpool, and a tour of the Duke street/Bold street areas with potential developers.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities awarded a higher standard spending assessment for 1992-93 per unit of population than the metropolitan borough of Rotherham together with their standard spending assessments per unit of population.

Mr. Key: The table shows 1992-93 standard spending assessments for those authorities with a higher amount per head of resident population than Rotherham.

English Heritage

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made to date, with regard to the relocation of English Heritage to Nottingham; and what is the timetable for the various stages of the move, and the expected time and date for its completion.

Mr. Yeo: English Heritage is to relocate its headquarters to Nottingham in 1994. Two city centre sites are being examined in detail before a choice of site is made and submitted to the Secretary of State for approval.

East Thames Corridor

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the report of his working party on the east Thames corridor.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend has appointed consultants, Llewelyn-Davies Planning, to consider the potential of the East Thames Corridor for development and environmental enhancement. It is anticipated that their study will be completed by June 1992. We expect that the report of the study will be published in due course.

Housing Stock, Rochester

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the final report of the district auditor investigating the sale of housing stock of Rochester-upon-Medway city council to the Medway Housing Society will be available; and if he will indicate the reasons for the delay.

Sir George Young: The district auditor has been carrying out an investigation into the sale by Rochester upon Medway city council of its housing stock to Medway Housing Society in July 1990. The auditor is currently completing the consultation process in accordance with the statutory audit code of practice. He hope to issue his public interest report to the council shortly.

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the provisional allocations of the derelict land grant for 1992-93 in England and Wales in descending order according to the size of the grant, within the following categories (a) shire county councils, (b) metropolitan district councils, (c) other district councils, (d) planning boards and (e) others.

Mr. Yeo: The information requested for England is as shown in the table. Derelict land reclamation in Wales is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Wales.

Defective Housing

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government have completed their consultations on the proposed new expenditure limits for grant eligible reinstatement works under the housing defects legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: I am most grateful to all those who have responded to our consultation proposals; we have, as a result, been able to settle the final figures for each designated house type. Our suggestion that the limits should be revised within a structure of six main cost bands was widely welcomed, as indeed were most of the individual proposals. Some concern was expressed as to whether £32,000 would be sufficient for repairs to Airey and Schindler and Hawksley SGS houses, and we have therefore decided instead to place these types within the £36,000 cost band.

The new limits will therefore be as follows:

New limit house type	Present limit £
£20,000
Cornish unit (1 storey PRC)	17,000
Gregory	17,000
Unity and Butterley (1 storey PRC)	17,000
£24,000
Dorran (1 storey PRC)	17,000
Myton (1 storey PRC)	17,000

These new limits should enable local authorities themselves to decide the appropriate level of grant, in the majority of cases, without further reference to the Department.

The parliamentary order implementing these new limits has now been made by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales and, provided that Parliament is content, will come into operation on Tuesday 31 March. My officials will be writing to local authorities, home owners groups, repairers and the professional bodies, to make sure that all those with an interest are fully aware of all the changes.

Big Ben

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what maintenance work is planned on Big Ben this year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The mechanism of the great clock is subject to regular expert inspections and routine maintenance. Included in this year's programme is the replacement of the chime main wheel. The work is expected to start in April and to last about eight weeks. During the period the quarter hour chimes will be silent. The clock itself and the hour strike will not be affected.

Milton Keynes

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what use he intends to make of his sanction powers under part III of the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980 in relation to Milton Keynes borough council.

Mr. Key: On 15 October 1991, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State served a notice under section 19A of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 on Milton Keynes borough council, setting out his view that in 1989-90 the authority has failed to achieve the required rate of return in carrying out the work described in section 10(2)(d) of the Act—maintenance work, other than such works of maintenance in connection with highways or the maintenance of a sewer.

He has now considered the response which the authority has made to the section 19A notice, and which has acknowledged the failure to achieve the rate of return in 1989-90 and also for 1990-91. The authority has also indicated that performance in the current financial year may culminate in losses between £100,000 and £150,000.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has concluded that the record of financial failure by the authority's direct service organisation is such as to justify further use of his sanction powers. He has therefore today made a direction under section 19B of the 1980 Act, prohibiting the authority from carrying out the work described in section 10(2)(d) of the Act after 1 October 1992, with the exception of emergency work.

London Borough of Haringey

Sir Hugh Rossi: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has yet considered the London borough of Haringey's response to the notice served on the authority on 12 November 1991 under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has given careful consideration to the response which the London borough of Haringey has made to the notice served on the authority on 12 November 1991, and has today given the authority a direction under section 14 of the 1988 Act. The effect of the direction is that after 1 January 1993 the authority will cease to have the power to carry out refuse collection work itself.

Direct Labour Organisations

Sir Philip Goodhart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take against those local authorities whose direct labour organisations made significant financial losses in 1989-90, and on which notices were served on 31 July and 28 October 1991.

Mr. Key: My right hon. Friend has now considered carefully the responses of the 14 local authorities on whom notices were served under either section 19A of the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980 or section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988 on 31 July and 28 October 1991. He has today given a direction under section 19B of the 1980 Act to the royal London borough of Kingston upon Thames which prevents it carrying out building maintenance work other than emergency work as from 31 October 1992. He is looking further at the responses of the London borough of Waltham Forest and Portsmouth city council (both building maintenance work).

He has decided to take no further action in respect of financial failure in 1989-90 against the London borough of Bromley (building maintenance), Worthing district council (building maintenance), Wychavon district council (building maintenance), Warrington borough council (building maintenance), Gosport borough council (other cleaning), Gloucester city council (refuse collection), Lewes district council (refuse collection), Shropshire county council (other catering), Surrey county council (other cleaning), and Waverley district council (refuse collection). He has already announced that no further action will be taken against Crawley district council (other catering).

My right hon. Friend has also decided to serve notices on the royal London borough of Kingston upon Thames in respect of financial failure in 1989-90 on highway maintenance work, and on the London borough of Bromley in respect of possible anti-competitive behaviour in awarding building maintenance work to its DLO where it was not the lowest tender.

He is also considering what further action to take in respect of financial failure in 1990-91 following the receipt of local authorities' annual reports for that year.

Acid Rain

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has yet received the final report by London Economics on the possible use of market mechanisms in the control of acid rain emissions.

Mr. Trippier: The report "The Potential Role of Market Mechanisms in the Control of Acid Rain" is being published today. I am placing copies of the report in the Library.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further measures he intends to take to encourage recycling of CFCs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: We are today issuing a consultation paper, which contains proposals to ban the import and supply to the United Kingdom market of refrigerant in disposable containers. These containers impede recycling because they cannot be refilled with refrigerant. They are also particularly damaging to the ozone layer, because the heel of CFCs which remains is usually vented to the atmosphere before the container is disposed of. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

We are also intending to issue a consumer leaflet towards the end of March. This will make consumers aware which products contain CFCs and how they can help to improve their environment by encouraging industry and local authorities to provide more recycling services.

Planning Policy

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will revise planning policy guidance note No. 1 to withdraw the general presumption in favour of development as it relates to the preparation of development plans.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 4 February 1992, c. 134]: We have today published a revised planning policy guidance note 1 "General Policy and Principles" (PPG1) which replaces the 1988 version and advice in earlier circulars. The new document sets out the broad principles within which development plans are to be prepared and the basis on which planning permissions should be given or refused.

PPG1 reiterates the Government's commitment to sustainable growth and to reconciling development with conservation of the environment. The aim is to secure economy, efficiency and amenity in the use of land. Among other matters highlighted in the guidance note we have drawn to the attention of local planning authorities:

- the enhanced role of development plans in setting the framework for planning decisions;
- the need to eliminate unnecessary delay in determining planning applications;
- the particular categories of development proposals that require a full environmental assessment;
- the importance of design, crime prevention, noise considerations and access requirements, particularly for disabled people, in securing quality of environment.

Some of these matters will be the subject of more detailed guidance in forthcoming circulars. In the meantime, the new document replaces PPG1 of January 1988 and much of DOE circular 22/80.

We are also publishing today a revised planning policy guidance note No. 3 "Housing" (PPG3) which replaces the 1988 version of the PPG and advice in various earlier circulars.

The PPG reiterates the message that the planning system must provide an adequate and continuous supply of land for housing, taking into account market demand and the Government's policies for encouraging home ownership and the provision of rented housing. But in doing so it must also maintain the Government's established policies for the protection of the countryside, the conservation of natural habitats and of the built heritage, and the protection of the best and most versatile agricultural land.

The main changes to previous policy are:

- increased emphasis on re-using urban land, particularly derelict or under-used land, for housing as a means of relieving pressure on the countryside;
- encouragement for housing development on sites with permission for other development, but where there is no realistic prospect of that other development taking place;
- greater emphasis on the importance of local choice, through the local and unitary development plan process, in deciding how to meet the needs for new housing development;
- encouragement of closer co-operation between local authorities' planning and housing functions;
- withdrawal, because it is not consistent with a plan-led system, of the special presumption in favour of releasing land for housing where there is less than a five year supply;
- clearer policy on the circumstances in which new settlements may be considered as an alternative to expanding existing towns and villages; on this issue the essential message is the need to respect local choice.

The PPG also incorporates the Government's planning policies for the provision of affordable housing set out in circular 7/91, "Planning and Affordable Housing", which is now cancelled.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Meat Inspection

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the current charges levied in EC member states for meat inspection.

Mr. Maclean: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food gave on 9 March 1992, Official Report, column 403.

The position regarding levels of meat inspection charges in other member states remains unclear. It appears that some have yet to introduce national legislation to bring them into line with the EC decision on harmonisation of charges. Certain others, such as Spain and Germany, have legislated at a regional, rather than a national, level. Detailed national information is currently only available with regard to France and Denmark. In France, the published charges in francs per kilogramme for 1991 were as follows:

	Slaughterhouses	Cutting premises
Adult bovines	0·086	0·011
Calves	0·101	0·011
Horses	0·072	0·011
Sheep and Goats	0·063	0·011
Pigs	0·075	0·011
Chickens	0·022	0·0012
Turkeys	0·022	0·007
Ducks	0·022	0·0079
Guinea Fowl	0·022	0·0004

In Denmark we believe that charges at exporting slaughterhouses are based on following:

For pigs— the actual cost of inspection.

For cattle—the "EC Standard" charge.

For poultry—approximately 250 per cent. of the "EC Standard" charge (two thirds of the actual cost).

Bananas

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps the Government are taking to ensure that bananas are removed from the GATT Uruguay round of negotiations;

(2) how commitments under the Lomé convention towards African, Caribbean and Pacific banana suppliers would be honoured under a GATT agreement based on the Dunkel text of 20 December.

Mr. Curry: The European Commission has made no proposals on bananas in the GATT Round context. It is continuing to study the question. Tariffication, if it simply followed the method set out in the Dunkel paper as we understand it, would not appear to provide sufficient protection for traditional ACP suppliers of the United Kingdom market. We remain committed to fulfilling our obligations under the Lomé convention and to bringing the GATT round to an early and successful conclusion; the Government have made representations to the Commission to urge it to ensure that our Lomé commitments are not overlooked in the GATT negotiations.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the numbers of confirmed cases of BSE in each county in England in 1992, to the latest available date.

Mr. Gummer: For the reasons given in the answer to the hon. Member on 23 May 1991, Official Report, column 559, these figures are currently unavailable.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information is available concerning the range of species of mammals to which bovine spongiform encephalopathy has not been transferred by experimental injection.

Mr. Maclean: In my answer to the hon. Member for Sherwood (Mr. Stewart) on 4 March I gave details of the species which had been experimentally infected with BSE. No other species has succumbed to experimental infection.

Central Science Laboratory

Sir Michael Shaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made towards establishing the central science laboratory as an executive agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I am pleased to confirm that the central science laboratory will become an executive agency with effect from 1 April 1992.

Cost recovery will provide us with an important means of judging the efficiency of this agency. Additional performance measures relating to the objectives of the agency will also be used to measure operating efficiency and quality of service.

The financial and efficiency targets for the central science laboratory for 1992-93 will be:

100 per cent. recovery of full costs;

an overall efficiency gain of 2 per cent.;

a reduction of 1·5 per cent. in real terms of representative unit costs for services.

The targets for delivery of services by the central science laboratory will be:

at least 90 per cent. of work completed to time and within budget; at least 95 per cent. of contracts delivered to the customer's satisfaction.

The central science laboratory will implement during 1992-93 arrangements for the independent assessment of the quality of the scientific work and publications.

The measures of performance for the agency are set out in the framework document, copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House by 1 April.

ADAS

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made towards establishing the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service as an executive agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are pleased to confirm that ADAS will become an executive agency with effect from 1 April 1992.

Cost recovery will provide us with an important means of judging the efficiency of this agency. Additional performance measures relating to the objectives of the agency will also be used to measure operating efficiency and quality of service.

The financial and efficiency targets for ADAS for 1992-93 will be:

recovery of its full economic costs, through charges to its customers, including the Departments (MAFF and Welsh Office). In the case of certain charged advisory services, ADAS will recover 41 per cent. of the costs from charges to the ultimate beneficiaries and the remainder will be met by the Departments. In other cases ADAS will recover the full costs from the customer; an overall efficiency improvement of a 2 per cent. reduction in average total cost per direct hour charged to contracts;

at least a 6 per cent. reduction in average time taken to collect debts due to ADAS from non-Departmental customers;

The targets for delivery of services by ADAS will be:

achieving improvements in customer satisfaction, as evidenced in ADAS surveys, the procedures for which will be developed by 30 June 1992;

at least 80 per cent. of Research and Development project milestones to be met.

The measures for performance for the agency are set out in the framework document, copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House by 1 April.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Market Testing Programme

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Dr. Mawhinney: Two experienced private sector consultants are currently retained to advise on the market testing programmes of the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments. As their work involves them in the security field I do not wish to identify them by name but I can confirm that they were appointed after competitive tendering.

Coastal Erosion

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much money has been spent on dealing with the effects of coastal erosion (a) along the County Down coast and (b) in all of Northern Ireland, in each of the last five years;

(2) if he will list the schemes which have been undertaken to prevent coastal erosion within Northern Ireland; and if he will list each of the proposed schemes, with planned commencement dates and costs in each case.

Mr. Needham: It is extremely difficult to distinguish between works intended to prevent coastal erosion and works to deal with its effects. The objective is usually the same and the actual works can often coincide.

The following amounts have been spent by the Department of the Environment's roads service on dealing with coastal erosion in the last five financial years:

County Down coast

Financial year	Amount £'000
1987-88	51
1988-89	41
1989-90	33
1990-91	156
1991-92	152

Northern Ireland

Financial year	Amount £'000
1987-88	159
1988-89	167
1989-90	122
1990-91	241
1991-92	221

In the last five financial years, the following schemes have been undertaken by the roads service to deal with coastal erosion in areas where the stability of a road was threatened:

Year and scheme

1987-88

Barrhall road, Portaferry—new sea wall.

A2 North of Ballyhalbert—rock armouring.

Cushendun/Waterfoot/Murlough bay—general routine repairs.

A2 between Larne/Garron Point—general routine repairs.

1988-89

A20 Newtownards/Greyabbey—reconstruction of sea wall.

Magilligan Point, Londonderry—general routine repairs.

Cushendun/Waterfoot/Murlough bay—general routine repairs.

A2 between Larne/Garron Point—general routine repairs.

1989-90

Seafront road, Cultra—strengthening of existing sea wall.

Minerstown, County Down—rock armouring.

Magilligan Point, Londonderry—general routine repairs.

Cushendun/Waterfoot/Murlough bay—general routine repairs.

A2 between Larne/Garron Point—general routine repairs.

1990-91

A20 Newtownards-Greyabbey, A20 Greyabbey-Kircubbin, Loughshore road-Portaferry—storm repair work and provision of rock armouring.

Culmore Point, Londonderry, Benone, Limavady, Cushendun/Waterfoot/Murlough bay, A2 between Larne/Garron Point—general routine repairs.

1991-92

Minerstown, County Down, Killard, County Down, Kilclief, County Down—general routine repairs.

Kinnegar, Holywood—replacement of gabions.

A20 Newtownards/Cunningburn road—rock armouring and sea wall repairs.

Shore road, Portaferry—sea wall repairs.

Culmore Point, Londonderry, Cushendun/Waterfoot/Murlough bay, A2 between Larne/Garron Point—general routine repairs.

The following schemes are proposed for the 1992-93 financial year:

Portballintrae	6,000
Garron Point	20,000
Seacliffe Road, Bangor	1,000
Killard, Co. Down	20,000-40,000

Other routine maintenance work will be carried out as requested.

Waste Recycling

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken in relation to the introduction of waste recycling schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Legislation for Northern Ireland containing provisions for waste management similar to those in part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 is in preparation. It will require district councils to include recycling as part of their waste management arrangements and to provide a recycling plan for the district.

In the interim, the Government will encourage the growing interest in recycling in Northern Ireland and support the many district councils, businesses and voluntary groups who are participating in recycling materials such as glass and paper.

Housing Estates

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the age of housing estates built at (a) Shantallow, (b) Bogside, (c) Creggan, (d) Ardcarn, (e) Cregagh and (f) Moat View; and if he will state the number of houses in each estate;

(2) which of the estates at Shantallow, Bogside, Creggan, Ardcarn, Cregagh and Moat View had metal windows when constructed and which of them have had window replacements; and if he will indicate how many dwellings have had all window frames replaced and set out the cost.

Mr. Needham: These are matters for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I have been advised by the chairman that the information requested is as follows:

NIHE Estate	Date of construction	Number of dwellings constructed	With metal window frames	Metal window frames replaced	Estimated costs of window replacement £
Shantallow	Pre 1945	1	—	—
	1945-1960	9	9	9
	1961-1971	531	304	304
	Total	541	313	313	316,000

	Total	866	779	157	157,000
Moatview	1945-1960	55	55	—	—

[1] Scheme is currently in progress.

Youth Training Programme

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent by each of the education and library boards on YTP provision in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The amounts are as follows:

Education and library boards	Financial years 1986-87 £ million	1987-88 £ million	1988-89 £ million	1989-90 £ million	1990-91 £ million
Belfast	1·264	1·161	1·467	1·415	2·524
North-Eastern	1·099	1·054	1·462	1·304	2·189
South-Eastern	1·116	1·081	1·285	1·284	2·287
Western	1·237	1·224	1·230	1·007	1·485
Southern	1·391	1·034	1·080	1·203	1·256

Notes:

1. The figures represent recurrent and capital expenditure. For the years 1986-87 to 1989-90 they are taken from the boards' audited accounts and for 1990-91 from the unaudited accounts.
2. The figures do not include expenditure on the salaries of full-time teachers engaged on YTP. For the years in question these were paid directly by the Department of Education for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many young people have been employed on youth training programmes organised by further education colleges in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The number of trainees fluctuates during the year but the average number of full-time trainees involved on YT programmes in further education colleges was as follows:

Academic year	Average occupancy
1986-87	1,906
1987-88	1,886
1988-89	1,812
1989-90	1,730
1990-91	3,455

Right of Way, Carrivemoragh

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to ensure that Banbridge district council assert the right of way in the constituency of South Down known as the Carrivemoragh mass pad; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: I understand that following research by its own officers, Banbridge district council obtained senior counsel's advice in the matter of the alleged right of way known as Carrivemoragh mass pad. After considering that advice, the council decided not to assert a right of way on this path.

There is no reason for me to intervene.

Correspondence

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to answer the letter of the hon. Member for Upper Bann of 5 February.

Dr. Mawhinney: I have written to the hon. Gentleman.

Dentists

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent changes have been proposed for charges by dentists in Northern Ireland; how this relates to the increase awarded by the salary review body; how many dentists withdrew from the national health service in Northern Ireland in the most recent 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The maximum charge payable by a patient for a course of dental treatment will be increased from £200 to £225 with effect from 1 April 1992. There will be no change in the proportional charge payable by patients, which will remain at 75 per cent. of the cost up to the maximum charge.

The increase in the maximum charge is not related to the increase recently recommended by the doctors and dentists review body.

No dentists in Northern Ireland withdrew from providing health service treatment in the 12 months prior to 1 March 1992.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the numbers of confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in each county in Northern Ireland in 1992, to the latest available date.

Mr. Hanley: As of 5 March 1992 the information is as follows:

County	Numbers
Antrim	15
Armagh	2
Down	10
Fermanagh	0
Londonderry	7
Tyrone	5
Total	39

There are 1·5 million cattle in Northern Ireland and there have been a total of 342 confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in Northern Ireland to date (5 March 1992).

Water and Sewerage Services

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in re-organising water and sewerage services in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: It is planned to transfer the water and sewerage functions of the Department of the Environment to a Government-owned company on 1 April 1993. The necessary arrangements for this, including the preparation of a draft order, are being taken forward as a matter of priority.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he is yet in a position to respond to the second report of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights "Religious and Political Discrimination and Equality of Opportunity in Northern Ireland" (Cm 1107); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I have today written to the chairman of the commission responding to its second report. A copy of my letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

I welcomed the report when it was laid before Parliament and published in June 1990. It is a valuable report which, as I made clear at that time, has required careful study by the Government. The Government will continue to examine the recommendations in consultation with the commission and other interested parties.

Mr. Peter Duggan

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of the RUC on the progress of police inquiries into the identification of the person alleged to have attempted to murder Mr. Peter Duggan in Downpatrick in January 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 3 March 1992]: There is no record of an attempt to murder Mr. Peter Duggan in Downpatrick in January 1985. The circumstances surrounding the attack on him in January 1988 in the Downpatrick area have been investigated by the RUC, and two women were convicted in September 1988 of the false imprisonment of Mr. Duggan. Apart from this, the Director of Public Prosecutions has considered police reports of their investigations into this incident and has directed no prosecution.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Court of Appeal

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the convictions quashed by the Court of Appeal since 1982 and give the reason in each case.

The Attorney-General: The information requested on the reasons for quashing individual appeals could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the number of convictions quashed by the Court of Appeal are available but only from 1987. They are as follows:

Year	Number
1987	192
1988	223
1989	211
1990	256
1991	269

Consolidation Legislation

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Attorney-General what areas of statute law are currently being considered for consolidation legislation; and if he will indicate at what stage the procedures are in each case.

The Attorney-General: During the current Session, 11 consolidation Bills have been introduced into Parliament.

Seven of these Bills have already received Royal Assent and have become the Social Security Administration Act 1992, the Social Security Administration (Northern Ireland) Act 1992, the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992, the Social Security Contributions and Benefits (Northern Ireland) Act 1992, the Social Security (Consequential Provisions) Act 1992, the Social Security (Consequential Provisions) (Northern Ireland) Act 1992 and the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992. Of the other four Bills, the Protection of Badgers Bill, the Radioactive Substances Bill and the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Bill are awaiting their Second Reading in this House, while the Tribunals and Inquiries Bill is awaiting its Committee stage in another place.

Work is continuing at the Law Commission to prepare consolidation Bills on clean air, education, stamp duties, the armed forces, merchant shipping, the powers of criminal courts and solicitors. Work is continuing at the Scottish Law Commission to prepare consolidation Bills on crofters, the Scottish Land Court, the national health service, criminal procedure, lands clauses and town and country planning. In Northern Ireland, work is continuing on a consolidation Bill on pension schemes.

Central Taxation Units

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Attorney-General how many claims for taxation at the central taxation units are still awaiting taxing; what is the change over the last six months; and when it is expected they will be dealt with.

The Attorney-General: At the end of February 1992, there were 1,545 claims awaiting determination by the central taxing teams. At the end of August 1991, there were 2,201 claims outstanding. Targets have now been established that 75 per cent. of claims should be determined within three months of the claim becoming ready to tax—when all related claims have been lodged —and that all claims should be determined within six months of becoming ready to tax. At the end of January 1992 three out of five teams were meeting this target. All the teams are expected to be meeting their targets by the end of July 1992.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Attorney-General what estimate he has made of the effect on public expenditure of the setting up of the central taxation units for barristers and solicitors' fees; and how much of this is due to notional interest saved to the Treasury by reason of changes in the timing of payments.

The Attorney-General: The central taxing teams were established last year in order to group together those officials most experienced in the assessment of bills submitted for the most complex and weighty claims for work done by solicitors and barristers in Crown court cases. The purpose of the establishment of these teams was to ensure that these assessments are dealt with in a consistent and proper way, in accordance with the legal aid regulations. No estimate has been made as to how those bills might have been assessed if the teams had not been in existence.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Attorney-General how many claims, which will be dealt with by the central taxation unit, have been submitted to the local court and are waiting to be called for from those courts by the central taxation units.

The Attorney-General: It is not possible to give the information requested. When a claim is submitted which may be for the central taxing team to determine, it is held until all other claims in relation to that case have been lodged. It is not until that stage that a decision can be taken about whether the claim is to be determined by the team or within the court. Under the regulations, practitioners have three months after the completion of the trial in which to lodge their claims.

Asil Nadir

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General what evidence the Director of Public Prosecutions has received in connection with breaches of company law by companies formerly controlled by Asil Nadir, concerning political donations; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: None.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the amendments made to the code for Crown prosecution since the publication of the annual report of the Crown prosecution service for 1990-91.

The Attorney-General: Five amendments have been made to the code for Crown prosecutors since the publication of the Crown prosecution service's annual report for 1990-91. These amendments were issued to Crown prosecutors in January 1992 and may be summarised as follows:

> The public interest criteria
> The public interest criteria will only arise for consideration once the Crown Prosecutor is satisfied that the evidence itself can justify proceedings.
> (i) Paragraph 8
> The first amendment to this paragraph emphasises that the interests of the victim are an important factor to be taken into account in determining whether or not a prosecution is required, whilst re-affirming the primacy of overall public interest considerations.
> (ii) Paragraph 8
> This paragraph has been further amended by the identification of "racial motivation" as an aggravating feature when considering whether the public interest requires the institution of proceedings.
> (iii) Paragraph 8 (v)—Mental illness or stress
> This part of the code has been re-written. It now clearly sets out that there is a rebuttable presumption that a person suffering from a mental disorder should not be prosecuted unless there is a wider public interest requirement for such action.
> Mode of trial
> (iv) Paragraph 18
> This paragraph has been revised as a result of the Mode of Trial Guidelines contained within the Practice Note issued by the Lord Chief Justice [1990] 1 WLR 1439.
> (v) Paragraph 19
> The decision of the House of Lords in R v. Brentwood Justices, ex parte Nicholls means that the guidance formerly contained in this paragraph concerning the position of the co-accused in mode of trial decisions is no longer accurate. The paragraph has accordingly been deleted and other paragraphs renumbered.

Arrangements have been made for these and previous amendments to be consolidated and printed in a new booklet containing the code, which is now available for distribution. I will cause a copy to be placed in the Library of both Houses. I commend the code in its amended form to all prosecuting authorities and to those, such as the police, who are responsible for the institution of criminal proceedings.

SCOTLAND

Crime, Glasgow

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what police powers Acts remain available within the boundaries of the city of Glasgow to combat crime.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The powers vested in the police in Glasgow are the same as elsewhere in Scotland and are found in the common law of Scotland and in relevant statutes. Questions about local legislation and byelaws should be addressed to the relevant local authority.

Electoral Registers

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the electorate for each parliamentary constituency in Scotland according to the new electoral registers published on 15 February.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total electorate for each parliamentary constituency in Scotland, as at 16 February 1992, is as follows:

Strathclyde Structure Plan

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the source of estimated needs for land he inserted in the Strathclyde regional council structure plan.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend took account of information provided by Strathclyde regional council in its structure plan as submitted, of representations received and of evidence from a range of sources, before reaching his decision to propose the modifications to the Strathclyde structure plan update 1990, announced on 6 February 1992.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to include estimates of land needs from groups other than the Scottish House Builders Association in the modified Strathclyde regional council structure plan.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend will be prepared to consider representations from any interested parties before reaching his decision on whether or not to approve the Strathclyde structure plan update 1990.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the numbers of confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in each region of Scotland in 1992, to the latest available date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: For the reasons given in the reply by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the hon. Member on 23 May 1991, Official Report, column 559, these figures are not available.

Child Care Policy Inquiry

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give an estimate of (a) the total costs incurred to date by the inquiry into child care policy in Fife and (b) of the costs of the chairman, the adviser and the clerk with appropriate office support for a period of three years;

(2) if he will give an estimate of the costs incurred by (a) Fife regional council and (b) the other principal parties represented at the inquiry into child care policy in Fife.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The estimated total costs incurred to date by the Scottish Office in relation to the inquiry is £792,000. This includes £500,000 in respect of the costs of the chairman, the adviser and the clerk with appropriate office support. I have no information on the costs incurred by others who are parties to the inquiry.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland is he will list those inquiries into child care policy in Scotland which have taken more than two years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Three inquiries have been established under section 99 of the Childrens Act 1975. Of these only the Fife inquiry has extended beyond two years of the date of establishment.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the inquiry into child care policy in Fife will be completed; when the report will be submitted; and whether it will be published.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend has been advised by the chairman of the inquiry that he expects to submit his report at the end of April. As soon as he has considered the report my right hon. Friend will make a decision about publication.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will exercise the powers available to him under section 210(8) of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 to meet the costs incurred by Fife regional council and the other parties to the inquiry into child care policies in Fife from central Government funds;

(2) if he will exercise the powers available to him under section 210(7) of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 to meet the total costs incurred by the inquiry into child care policy in Fife from central Government funds.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Once my right hon. Friend receives the report of the inquiry into child care services in Fife, he will consider whether and in what way to exercise the powers contained in section 210 sub-sections (7) and (8) of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973.

Drinking Water

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish a report on drinking water quality in Scotland in 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A report has been published today by the Scottish Office Environment Department giving a national overview of drinking water quality in Scotland in the period 1 July to 31 December 1990, the first six months of monitoring under the Water Supply (Water Quality) (Scotland) Regulations 1990. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library. The report shows that the overall level of compliance with the quality standards was high, some 97 per cent. of all analytical results having met the requirements. For 48 of the 55 numerical standards in the regulations, 99·6 per cent. of all analytical results complied. The failures to meet quality standards fully did not represent a risk to public health.

Roads Directorate

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he proposes to publish the report of the efficiency scrutiny into the Scottish Office roads directorate carried out in 1990.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A copy of the efficiency scrutiny report and of the action plan on implementation of the report's recommendations have been lodged in the House Libraries. Copies of both are available for purchase from the library in New St. Andrew's house.

Assisted Places Scheme

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the income scale which will apply to the assisted places scheme in Scotland in school session 1992-93.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: For school session 1992-93, I propose to lay regulations before the House in due course providing for progressive parental contribution for one assisted pupil in relation to family income as follows:

Part of relevant income to which the specified percentage applies

	Parental Contribution (percentage)
That part (if any) which exceeds £9,218 but which does not exceed £10,023	9
That part (if any) which exceeds £10,023 but does not exceed £10,842	12
That part (if any) which exceeds £10,842 but does not exceed £12,467	15
That part (if any) which exceeds £12,467 but does not exceed £14,965	21
That part (if any) which exceeds £14,965 but does not exceed £18,227	24
That part (if any) which exceeds £18,227	33

The relevant income scale is open ended, but the remission can, of course, be given only where the parental contribution is less than the school tuition fee.

Training, Scotland

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were in training through (a) youth training and (b) employment training in each month from January 1991 to January 1992 inclusive in each of (i) Scotland, (ii) Renfrew, Dunbarton and Argyll, (iii) Lothian and Borders, (iv) Lanarkshire, (v) Highlands and Islands, (vi) Grampian and Tayside, (vii) Glasgow city, (viii) Central and Fife and (ix) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The information sought is not available for the period from January 1991 to March 1991 inclusive, nor is it available thereafter in the format requested.

The information shown in the tables gives the number of youth training and employment training participants for each month from April 1991 to January 1992 inclusive in each of the local enterprise company areas served by Scottish Enterprise and for Highlands and Islands and Scotland as a whole.

Air Pollution

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the most recent figures on air pollution levels in Scotland in each of the last five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The most recent published information on air pollution can be found at section 3 of "The Scottish Environment—Statistics" Issue No. 2 (1989). The next issue will be published shortly.

Warren Spring Laboratory also compiles data on the atmospheric concentrations of a number of substances from a United Kingdom-wide network of monitoring stations. The available data from the Scottish sites are set out in tables 1 to 5. All data are expressed as average hourly readings for each month for the available years.

Food Industry

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of people employed in the food industry in Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 9 March 1992]: The latest figure available, showing the number of people employed in the food industry in Scotland, comes from the 1989 Employment Department census of employment. The figure is 49,400.

Scottish Economy

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish an index of production and construction for Scotland by market sector, indicating an annual figure for each year from 1974 up to and including 1990; and if he will give the figures for the first three quarters of 1991.

Mr. Allan Stewart: [holding answer 9 March 1992]: An index of production and construction for Scotland (1985 = 100) by market sector, with annual figures for each year from 1974 up to and including 1990, and quarterly figures for the first three quarters of 1991, is set out in the table.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate the annual average change in (a) total output and (b) manufacturing output in real terms between (i) 1974 and 1979 and (ii) 1979 and 1990 in (1) Scotland and (2) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 9 March 1992]: The annual average changes in (a) total output and (b) manufacturing output in real terms between (i) 1974 and 1979 and (ii) 1979 and 1989, the latest year for which all figures are available, in (1) Scotland and (2) the United Kingdom are set out in the table:

	Annual average change
	Scotland	United Kingdom
1974-79
Total output	+1·1[1]	+2·0[2]
Manufacturing output	−1·2[3]	−0·6[4]

Manufacturing output	+1·1[3]	+1·3[4]

Note: The Scottish and United Kingdom measures of total output are on a different basis and are therefore not directly comparable. Scottish data are output-based GDP and United Kingdom data are average GDP.

Brussels (Secondees)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were seconded from the Scottish Office to the United Kingdom's permanent representation to the European Community in Brussels, in 1990 and 1991; and if he will break these figures down by Scottish Office department.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 6 March 1992]: A Scottish Office official with a background in the Agriculture and Fisheries Department was seconded to the office of the United Kingdom's permanent representative to the European Communities between April 1987 and September 1990; a Scottish Office official with experience in a number of Scottish Office departments was seconded in October 1990 and continues in post.

ScotRail

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the director or representatives of ScotRail; what issues were discussed; what future meetings are scheduled; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 March 1992]: Regular contact is maintained with British Rail by Scottish Office Ministers and officials. Such contacts cover a wide range of topics relating to rail services in Scotland.

Homelessness

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total in each district council area of households applying as homeless, by household type, for 1990-91.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 9 March 1992]: The table gives the available information for the 31,709 applicant households in 1990-91 for whom case returns have been received from local authorities. It is estimated that in 1990-91 there were 34,600 applicant households under the homeless persons legislation in Scotland.

Child Care Law

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he intends to take to implement the recommendations of the Scottish Office review of child care law in Scotland; and what the timetable is for this.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 9 March 1992]: Having consulted extensively on the recommendations of the child care law review, we shall take them into account along with the recommendations of the Orkney and Fife inquiries and the review of residential child care, when we come to prepare a White Paper later this year. The White Paper will set out our proposals for a range of reforms in the field of child care.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Auction Market Preferred Stock

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has referred the accountancy valuation status and practice of auction market preferred stock to the Accounting Standards Board.

Mr. Redwood: No. The Accounting Standards Board raised the question of auction market preferred shares in its recent discussion paper on accounting for capital instruments.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has had about the status of auction market preferred stock.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Bickershaw Colliery

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the communities affected by the closure of Bickershaw colliery will be eligible for EC RECHAR funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: Bickershaw colliery is within an area eligible for RECHAR grants. The allocation of grants to individual projects within eligible areas is a matter for the programme committees.

Applications for grants under the Lancashire RECHAR programme should be sent to the office of the Department of Trade and Industry in Manchester.

Inspectors' Reports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he published his Department's inspectors' report on the Animal Defence Society Ltd.

Mr. Redwood: On 17 April 1991.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 22 November 1991, Official Report, column 345, if he will propose legislation under which any hon. Members may examine copies of the inspectors' reports given to trade associations but not yet published.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Financial Reporting Review Panel

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will launch an independent investigation of the operations of the financial reporting review panel.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Ramor Investigation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 22 November, Official Report, column 347, if he will provide a breakdown of the total cost of the Ramor investigation, showing fees paid to the inspector from the auditing firm.

Mr. Redwood: The accountant inspector was paid a total of £651,609 as follows:

Inspector and accountancy support staff from his firm	568,762
Disbursements including VAT	82,847
	651,609

Pre-fitted Plugs

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list all the bodies he (a) has consulted and (b) intends to consult on regulations to require that all new electrical appliances are sold with a pre-fitted plug.

Mr. Leigh: My Department is currently drawing up a consultative list from industry, trade associations, the enforcement authorities and consumer bodies, including those representing the disabled, who have an interest in the proposed regulations.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which groups representing disabled groups he is consulting on his proposed regulations to require that all new electrical appliances are sold with a pre-fitted plug.

Mr. Leigh: My Department is currently drawing up a list of consultees with an interest in the proposed regulations, which will include representatives of the disabled.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 130, on fitted plugs, what consideration he has given to drafting the regulations in such a way as to make it a requirement for pre-fitted plugs on electrical appliances to meet the requirements of disabled people including those with wasting muscles and other difficulties in manipulating appliances.

Mr. Leigh: The proposed regulations will not prevent manufacturers fitting approved plugs to their appliances which are adapted to meet the requirements of the disabled, although it must be expected that manufacturers will in the main fit the standard design 13 amp plug because this is most commonly used in the majority of households.

Moreover the type of plug and devices which assist the disabled will still be available for people who wish to continue to fit them to their appliances.

Eco-labelling

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has for amending the trade description legislation to take into account eco-labelling; and if he will propose that it should be an offence to claim a product is environmentally friendly if it has not been awarded an eco-label.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 9 March 1992]: Many environmental claims are clearly within the scope of the Trade Descriptions Act 1968. We intend to amend the Act to put it beyond doubt that all such claims are covered as soon as parliamentary time permits. We do not think it would be right to outlaw environmental claims for goods not eligible to bear the eco-label but these claims will be subject to the Trade Descriptions Act.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

UNCED

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals his Department is developing on (a) extending literacy and (b) sharing scientific research costs and results for submission to the United Nations conference on environment and development in June.

Mr. Eggar: The Government give high priority to basic skills—that is literacy and numeracy—education for adults. The Further and Higher Education Act will strengthen the position of basic skills. The Further Education Funding Councils will be under a specific duty to secure adequate provision of basic skills education for adults.

The Government also support the sharing of scientific research costs when it is an appropriate and cost effective approach to a particular problem.

Data Protection

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether school governors and heads who use a computer to perform statutory duties are required to make a separate registration under the Data Protection Act 1984; what steps he is taking to indemnify them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: Guidance to schools on the implications of the Data Protection Act, issued last November, was prepared in consultation with the Data Protection Registrar. The guidance contained advice that school governing bodies and head teachers should register if, in connection with their statutory duties, they keep information containing personal data (as defined in the Act) that can be automatically processed. The guidance identified those duties which fall to either the governing body or head teacher.

The cost of registration under the Act was one of a range of pressures on LEAs which the Government took into account in fixing education standard spending at a level 7 per cent. higher than in 1991-92. Registration lasts for three years, and may cover as many purposes as appropriate, for a single fee.

School Leavers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number of young people in the Durham local education authority who have left school without any qualifications, the number going into further education and the numbers achieving higher education for each year since 1981; and if he will give the figures for each group in percentage terms from the total of young people leaving school.

Mr. Eggar: The table shows the estimated proportions of school leavers from maintained schools in the Durham local education authority area who had gained no graded examination results, or whose intended destination was further or higher education for the academic years 1980-81 to 1989-90. Information for further and higher education is not available separately at local education authority area level.

Infant Education

Sir John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will now take the necessary steps to impose upon local education authorities an obligation to provide nine terms' infant, or pro-rata first school education for all children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so. The existing statutory framework enables LEAs to respond flexibly to local needs and priorities.

Teachers of Deaf Children

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration he has given to the need for mandatory qualifications for peripatetic teachers of children with a hearing impairment.

Mr. Fallon: Part IV of the Education (Teachers) Regulations 1989 applies only to the employment of teachers at schools. The regulations do not apply to part-time teachers, not to peripatetic teachers. The aim of the regulations is to ensure that teachers of classes of hearing impaired children have a mandatory qualification.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to increase the number of training places in higher education establishments for practising and trainee teachers to become teachers of deaf pupils.

Mr. Fallon: Trainee teachers cannot become teachers of the deaf, since a period of post-training experience is required of all teachers who wish to undertake specialist training. The number of practising teachers who might be supported under the grants for education support and training (GEST) programme for training to become teachers of the deaf is currently under review.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration he has given to reviewing the procedure for the training of teachers of deaf children.

Mr. Fallon; The Department has been carefully reviewing the procedures for this and other training in special educational needs. We have now identified a number of technical improvements to the mechanisms for supporting such training, about which we will be writing shortly to the bodies most directly concerned.

Parents Charter

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total cost to public funds of the parents charter, listing separately costs to date for (a) preparation, (b) production, (c) launch, (d) all forms of distribution, (e) advertising and (f) total cost.

Mr. Eggar: The costs of the parents charter, broken down as requested, are as follows: (a) preparation, £21,000; (b) production, £491,000; (c) launch, £36,500; (d) distribution, £696,000; (e) advertising, £713,000; (f) total cost, £1,957,500.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many copies of the parents charter have been printed.

Mr. Eggar: Some 6·[illegible] million copies of the parents charter have been printed. In addition, a total of 326,000 have been printed in eight ethnic minority languages.

Teachers Pensions Agency

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what performance targets he has set the new Teachers Pensions Agency in 1992-93.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have set the following key targets for the Teachers Pensions Agency in 1992-93 which together cover its main activities comprehensively and focus on the principles of improving the quality of public services embodied in the citizens charter:

1. The implementation of a new computerised pensions administration system by the third quarter of 1992-93.
2. To process 95 per cent. of applications for retirement awards by the payable date or, if later than the payable date, within 30 calendar days of receipt of the application form.
3. To collect on time 95 per cent. of the total sum of superannuation contributions due to be paid by employers.
4. To demonstrate that there is a 95 per cent. probability that the error on individual pension-related calculations did not exceed 2 per cent. of the value of each calculation.
5. Following the introduction of the new computer system, to provide a substantive answer to 95 per cent. of written inquiries within 15 working days of receipt (excluding time waiting for essential information from third parties).

Special Needs

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is now able to issue the addendum to circular 22/89 on special educational needs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: In September 1989 my Department and the Department of Health issued circular 22/89 giving guidance to education, health and social services authorities on the procedures for assessments and statements under the Education Act 1981. Recent developments, in particular the implications of several legal cases, have made it necessary to provide further advice to authorities on certain aspects of those procedures. A draft addendum to circular 22/89 was issued last autumn for comment.

We have considered all of the comments received during the consultation period and today issued a final version of the addendum. The addendum includes guidance on the form and content of statements and makes clear that, where speech therapy is specified as special educational provision in a statement, the local education authority has a duty to ensure that it is arranged.

Copies of the addendum have been placed in the Library.

Swimming

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the findings of the surveys undertaken by his Department of provision made for swimming by maintained schools are now available.

Mr. Atkins: Copies of the findings from the surveys of primary schools and local education authorities in England have been placed in the Library. Over 95 per cent. of the primary schools and all the local education authorities consulted responded to the surveys. Of the schools responding, over 80 per cent. indicated that they already provide swimming as part of the physical education curriculum. Of those not providing swimming, only 28 schools (2·3 per cent. of the schools responding) said that they were more than five miles from the nearest swimming pool. The survey of local education authorities revealed that 2,385 primary schools (9·5 per cent.), 855 secondary schools (21·4 per cent.) and 11 tertiary colleges (11 per cent.) currently have a pool on site in working order.

Music

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the teaching of music in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1992, Official Report, columns 344-45]: I have today laid the final orders with associated documents setting out attainment targets and programmes of study for art and music in the national curriculum for pupils aged five to 14. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Physical Education

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to publish a draft order setting out the requirements for physical education in the national curriculum.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1992, Official Report, column 423]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have today laid before the House an order for physical education in the national curriculum.

TRANSPORT

Light Dues

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on light dues.

Mr. Rifkind: My responsibility for ensuring that the finances of the general lighthouse fund are maintained on a satisfactory basis compels me to increase the level of light dues. Now that the objective of reducing the fund's liquid reserves to a minimum necessary level has been substantially achieved, as the payers of light dues have wanted, it is essential to restore the dues tariff closer to the level required to cover the general lighthouse authorities' operating expenses and depreciation charges. The alternative would be an unacceptably high cash outflow which could be corrected only by exceptionally large dues increases at a later stage.

I am accordingly laying regulations today to increase the light dues voyage tariff by 6·5p to 41·5p per tonne with effect from 1 April; I am also increasing the tariff for periodical payments, including those for fishing vessels, from £192 per annum plus £19 a metre (for 10 metres and over) to £205 plus £21 respectively, with consequential increases in related rates.

The lower increase for fishing vessels takes account of the continuing special restrictions on the level of the industry's activities. These include the quota management system, the requirement on some vessels to tie up in port for specified periods each year, and the closure of certain fisheries to specific boats to meet conservation requirements.

I share the concern expressed by the shipping and ports industries over the periodic need for sharp changes in the light dues tariff and over certain other features of the system. I propose to take a number of steps to improve the position. First, I am inviting the Irish Government to join with the United Kingdom in an approach to the European Commission over the distortion to competition currently caused by the different methods of financing marine navigational aids within the Community. Secondly, I wish to review with the Irish Government the arrangements for financing the lights service in the Republic with the aim of securing a substantially increased contribution to the fund from sources within the Republic. Thirdly, I am asking the general lighthouse authorities to make cuts of about £1·5 million in their planned expenditure for 1992-93. Fourthly, I am asking my Department to consider, with the general lighthouse authorities and the payers of light dues, whether improvements can be made in forecasting light dues income. Fifthly, I am examining the difficult task of light dues for pleasure craft, but on this I am not yet in a position to make any announcement.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further progress he has made towards establishing executive agencies in his Department under the Government's "next steps" initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: I am pleased to announce that I shall be establishing two new executive agencies on 1 April Drivers, Vehicles and Operators Information Technology —DVOIT—and the Transport Research Laboratory— TRL. I will delegate to the chief executives clear responsibilities for improvements in efficiency, effectiveness and quality of service. These delegations will be set out in the agencies' framework documents which will be published on 1 April; I shall place copies in the Library.

Each year, I shall set both agencies challenging targets, which will form part of the agencies' annual business plans. DVOIT's business plan for 1992-93 will be commercial in confidence and will not therefore be published. However, the agency's key targets will be published on 1 April, and I shall then place a copy in the Library. TRL's business plan will be published on 1 April, and I shall place a copy in the Library. Both agencies will also publish annual reports; again copies will be put in the Library.

DVOIT was formerly the information technology arm of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency. It has about 500 staff based in Swansea. It will continue to provide IT services to DVLA and to other parts of the Department of Transport, but on a more commercial basis. It will have to compete with external suppliers of IT services for new contracts within my Department. It will also be able to bid for contracts in other parts of the public sector and in the private sector. Agency status will allow DVOIT to develop a more commercial style of operation and, in particular, establish more formal contractual relationships with its customers. I hope this will pave the way for eventual privatisation in a few years' time.

Following an open competition, I have appointed Mr. David Evans, formerly PSA's director of information technology, to be DVOIT's first chief executive.

DVOIT's key targets for 1992-93 are to: fulfil service level agreements with its customers; cover full costs with income from customers; reduce prices for existing services to current customers by RPI-3 per cent.; increase revenue per employee by 10 per cent. a year; achieve an annual rate of return of 6 per cent. on total assets employed.

TRL has about 640 staff based in Crowthorne, Berkshire. It will offer research services to the Department of Transport and to other customers, both in the public and private sectors. From 1 April, TRL will be untied from the Department, with responsibility for commissioning and funding research work passing to customers in policy divisions within the Department who will increasingly place contracts for new work by competitive tender.

Following an open competition, I have appointed Mr. John Wootton, formerly chairman of Wootton Jeffreys Consultants Ltd., to be TRL's first chief executive.

TRL's key targets for 1992-93 are: 90 per cent. of projects to be completed to customer satisfaction; net revenue per person year to be a minimum of £40,000; production costs as a percentage of total costs to be greater than 55 per cent.; to recover full economic costs from revenue, while meeting the net control total in supply estimates.

This will increase to six the number of executive agencies in my Department. Nearly 70 per cent. of the staff employed by my Department will be working in executive agencies, which is good news for taxpayers, customers and the staff themselves.

I wish the chief executives and their staff every success for the future.

Pacific Crane

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what procedures are in place for consultation with his Department about crew changes on the United Kingdom-registered ship Pacific Crane, following its arrival in Japan in connection with a cargo of plutonium; and if he will give details of the proposed crew changes.

Mr. McLoughlin: None. There is no requirement for shipowners-managers to consult my Department when changing the crews of their ships, this is an operational matter for the owners-managers provided that the legal requirements are met.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the proposed crew changes on the British registered ship Pacific Crane following its arrival in Japan are compatible with the officer nationality requirements of the United Kingdom Register of Shipping.

Mr. McLoughlin: It would be premature to consider whether a future unidentified crew would comply with the Department's manning requirements, but steps can be taken to ensure that United Kingdom law is observed in this respect.

Tilbury

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy, upon receiving a recommendation from the Port of London authority as to a buyer for the Port of Tilbury, to consider the credit rating of the recommended bidder before making his decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. and learned Friend announced yesterday in a statement to the House that he has given his consent to the sale of the Port of Tilbury to International Transport Ltd., as recommended by the board of the Port of London authority. My right hon. and learned Friend explained that, in reaching this decision, he was satisfied that the recommended bid met the agreed objectives of sale.

PNTL Fleet

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the safety record of the PNTL fleet in carrying radioactive materials.

Mr. McLoughlin: The PNTL fleet has been used to carry spent nuclear fuel from Japan to reprocessing facilities in Europe for almost 20 years, without any release of radioactive material.

Rail Fares

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a real fares index for (a) British Rail and (b) Network SouthEast, for each year since 1971, with 1971 G = G100.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The information is in the table:

Real fares index and real passenger receipts per passenger kilometre: British Rail and Network SouthEast: 1971-91

	Real fare index		Real passenger receipts per passenger kilometre[1]

1991	151·3	163·9	111·3	112·1

[1] The real fares index reflects changes in ticket prices. However, the index of receipts per passenger kilometre, which takes account of the increased use of discounted tickets and travelcards, is a better indicator of the costs of rail travel, and it has remained relatively flat during the 1980s.

[2] Network SouthEast was formed in 1986. The pre-1986 figures apply to the current sector definition.

Rail Safety

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list (a) the total number of passenger fatalities, (b) the total number of serious injuries to passengers and (c) the total number of minor injuries to passengers on (i) British Rail and (ii) Network SouthEast (1) in each month since April 1989 and (2) in each year since 1962 and for each category the number which occurred in (A) train accidents, (B) accidents through the movement of railway vehicles, (C) accidents on railway premises and (D) trespassers and suicides;

(2) how many notifiable train accidents have occurred on (a) British Rail and (b) Network SouthEast (i) in each month since April 1989 and (ii) in each year since 1962; and how many of these were the result of (1) collisions, (2) derailments, (3) running into level crossing gates and other obstructions, (4) fires, (5) falling from trains and (6) other accidents;

(3) if he will list (a) the total number of staff and contractor fatalities, (b) the total number of serious injuries to staff and contractors and (c) the total number of minor injuries to staff and contractors on (i) British Rail and (ii) Network SouthEast (1) in each month since April 1989 and (2) in each year since 1962 and for each category, the number which occurred in (A) train accidents, (B) accidents through the movement of railway vehicles, (C) accidents on railway premises and (D) trespassers and suicides;

(4) if he will list (a) the total number of staff and contractor fatalities, (b) the total number of serious injuries to staff and contractors and (c) the total number of minor injuries to staff and contractors on London Underground (i) in each month since April 1989 and (ii) in each year since 1962 and for each category above, the number which occurred in (1) train accidents, (2) accidents through the movement of railway vehicles, (3) accidents on railway premises and (4) trespassers and suicides;

(5) if he will list (a) the total number of passenger fatalities, (b) the total number of serious injuries to passengers and (c) the total number of minor injuries to passengers on London Underground (i) in each month since April 1989 and (ii) in each year since 1962;

(6) how many notifiable train accidents have occurred on London's underground (i) in each month since April 1989 and (ii) in each year since 1962; and how many of these were the result of (a) collisions with buffer stops, (b) derailments of passenger trains, (c) derailments of non-passenger trains, (d) running into obstructions, (e) fires on trains and (f) other accidents;

(7) if he will publish the total number of fires which have occurred on London Underground and list the number which occurred (a) on rolling stock, (b) at stations, (c) on tracks in tunnels, (d) on open tracks (e) on escalators, (f) on lifts and (g) other locations, (i) in each month since April 1989 and (ii) in each year since 1962;

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The information requested for the years 1962-90 is contained in Her Majesty's railway inspectorate's annual reports on railway safety, copies of which are in the House Library.

Computer derived figures for information which is readily available for the years 1984-90 are set out in tables subject to the following points:

(i) Separate statistics relating to Network SouthEast are not available;

(ii) Statistics relating to London Underground have been shown separately since 1988; for the period 1984-1987, they are included with BR and other railways.

(iii) Statistics for 1991 will be published in the report for the 15 month period to March 1992.

Copies of the tables have been placed in the Library and I have written to the hon. Lady with a copy.

Rail Crimes

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the total number of (a) crimes, (b) assaults on staff, (c) assaults on passengers, (d) indecent assaults, (e) rapes and (f) violent robberies which have occurred on (i) British Rail and (ii) Network SouthEast; (1) in each month since April 1989 and (2) in each year since 1971.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 6 March 1992]: This information is only available at a disproportionate cost. The tables show figures for crimes reported in 1990 and the first nine months of 1991, for British Rail as a whole and for Network SouthEast alone; and total crimes reported for British Rail from 1982 to 1990.

	1 January 1991 to 30 September 1991		1990

1985	64,185
1984	65,299
1983	56,152
1982	51,779

Note. From 1 January 1990 the BTP force brought its crime reporting into line with Home Office counting rules. This change means that exact comparisons with previous years are not always possible.

British Rail

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what responsibility his Department has in relation to the finance, policy and operations of British Rail.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 9 March 1992]: The Secretary of State's main responsibilities in relation to British Rail are:

to appoint the chairman and board members, and determine their pay;

to set overall policy and objectives for safety, quality and financial performance;

to discharge various responsibilities on safety through Her Majesty's railway inspectorate; to set the external finance limit;

to set an investment ceiling, and to approve major investment projects;

to issue a public service obligation and to set an annual grant ceiling;

to control borrowing;

to decide on opposed proposals for the closure of stations and services; and to exercise various statutory controls on procedure and finance.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Hotels (Fire Regulations)

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what European Community regulations come into force in January requiring self-employed hoteliers with premises of under six bed spaces to conform to fire regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: European Community Directives 89/391/EEC and 89/654/EEC relate to the health and safety of workers at work and contain fire safety requirements for which we must make legislative provision by 31 December 1992.

We plan to give effect to those requirements by regulations made under section 12 of the Fire Precautions Act 1971. Those regulations will generally apply to every place in which one or more persons work and come into force on 1 January 1993. There will, however, be an extensive public consultation exercise before they are made.

Ecstasy

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been made in connection with (a) the use, (b) the selling of, (c) the possession and (d) the importation of the drug Ecstasy (MDMA), in each of the last 12 months.

Mr. John Patten: The number of prosecutions for drugs offences involving ecstasy (MDMA) in each month of 1990 were as follows:

Prosecutions for drugs offences involving ecstasy (MDMA). 1990

Court of Appeal

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the cases he has referred to the Court of Appeal under section 17 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 since 1982 and the outcome in each case.

Mr. John Patten: Since 1982 to 31 December 1991 the following cases have been referred to the Court of Appeal under Section 17(1)(a) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 with the result as indicated.

Merseyside Police

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 101, if he will now request the chief constable of Merseyside to make a special study on the number of officers engaged in obtaining admissions from convicted criminals.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. It is for the chief constable of Merseyside to decide whether to make a special study of the number of officers engaged in obtaining admissions from convicted criminals. I understand that the chief constable does not intend to carry out such a study at the moment.

Central European Time

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of moving to central European time.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Field) on 18 November 1991, Official Report, column 15.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of (a) men and (b) women being held on remand in police cells in England and Wales on 29 February.

Mrs. Rumbold: The figures given are for 28 February, data is not collected on Saturdays or Sundays.

On Friday 28 February there were 1,593 males and 33 females held in police cells in England and Wales. It is not possible, from the information available, to distinguish between remand and sentenced prisoners, but most would have been held on remand.

Mr. Ian Borovikov

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what legal grounds Mr. Ian Borovikov (xc1225) is currently being detained at Her Majesty's prison, Pentonville.

Mrs. Rumbold: Mr. Borovikov was released on 13 February 1992 when the Court of Appeal quashed the recommendation for his deportation which had been made by Winchester Crown court.

Magistrates Courts, Cheshire

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost of administration of Cheshire magistrates courts in each year since 1982.

Mr. John Patten: The information available centrally about net revenue expenditure (excluding loan charges and revenue contributions to capital outlay) by Cheshire magistrates courts committee is as follows:

[1]1982-83	2,162,794

Horserace Betting Levy

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the determination under section 1 of the Horserace Betting Levy Act 1969 of the horserace betting levy scheme beginning 1 April.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have today sent the following letter to the Chairman of the Horserace Betting Levy Board and written similarly to the chairman of the Bookmakers' Committee. A copy of the scheme has been placed in the Library of the House. The letter reads:

> In your letter of 1 November 1991 you reported to me that the Board and the Bookmakers' Committee had failed to agree the Scheme to have effect for the 31st levy period and that the Scheme accordingly fell to be determined by me. I have now reached my decision and enclose a copy of the Scheme which I have determined.
> In reaching my decision, I have taken into account all the submissions made to me by the Government-appointed members of the Levy Board and by the Bookmakers' Committee, together with other submissions and representations, including from the Jockey Club and the Horseracing Advisory Council, on which the Board members and the Committee were afforded the opportunity to comment. I have also taken fully into account the reduction in General Betting Duty announced by the Chancellor today in his budget.
> The cash yield from the Scheme will depend upon the level of leviable betting turnover in the 31st Levy period. Assuming turnover of £4,300 million, I have determined a scheme which aims to produce a total estimated levy yield of about £48 million.
> This yield is higher than would have been the case if General Betting Duty had not been reduced, but in determining the Scheme I have only taken account of the reduction in duty on horseracing bets. In all the circumstances, I am satisfied that the bookmakers can make their levy payments under the Scheme without any increase in their deductions from punters.
> As a result of the reduction in Betting Duty, it has been possible to achieve a substantial increase in the levy yield. I believe that this creates a new opportunity for bookmaking and racing to work more closely together for their mutual long-term benefit. In order to inform that process of closer co-operation, I will be inviting the Levy Board to consider ways in which improved value for money can be obtained from how the levy is spent and, separately, to advise on what steps racing might take to achieve a sound long-term basis for the improved level of levy contribution from bookmakers.
> As part of that general process of closer co-operation, I hope that the two industries will explore further together the alternatives to the present scheme. The process of determining an annual levy scheme is not the vehicle for seeking changes to the basic principles of the levy. The levy was never intended to provide a price for product. Indeed, it is difficult to see how it could do so. But if racing and bookmaking can agree changes to the present arrangements, which were originally introduced with their joint agreement, I should certainly be prepared to consider their proposals. In the meantime, the levy must continue to be determined in the normal way and in accordance with the established criteria.

Crime

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the number of crimes reported and the crime detection rate in each police force area in each of the last seven years.

Mr. John Patten: Information for 1985-89 is published in tables 2.4 and 2.21 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1989". Figures for 1990 are published in Home Office statistical bulletin 4/91. They are annotated as provisional in the bulletin, but only the south Wales figure has since been revised, to 36 per cent. Figures for the number of offences recorded in 1991 were published yesterday in Home Office statistical bulletin 2/92. This includes an estimate of the clear-up rate for England and Wales but this information is not yet available by police force area. Copies of all these publications are available in the Library.

Correspondence

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter of the hon. Member for Upper Bann of 28 January to the Minister of State.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have now written to the hon. Member.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to answer the letter of the hon. Member for Upper Bann of 5 February.

Mrs. Rumbold: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 2 March, explaining that since the matters raised in his letter related to the electoral registration system in Northern Ireland, they were the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Civil Debt

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been imprisoned for civil debt each year since 1979 in (a) England and Wales and (b) the Leeds metropolitan district.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information for England and Wales is published annually in Prison Statistics England and Wales (table 6.3 of the latest volume, for 1990, Cm 1800), a copy of which is in the Library.

The home address of inmates of prison service establishments is not recorded centrally. The table gives details of debtors known to have been committed by courts in the Leeds district.

Movement within the EC

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the United Kingdom legislation which imposes limitations and conditions, as referred to in article 8A of the Maastricht treaty, to the right of every citizen of the Union to move and reside freely within the territory of the member states.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The new article 8A which the treaty on European union inserts into the treaty of Rome provides that every citizen of the union shall have the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the member states, subject to the limitations and conditions laid down in the treaty—the treaty of Rome—and by the measures adopted to give it effect. At present the right of free movement, and the limitations and conditions applicable, are contained in the following directives and regulations:

Already in force

Council regulations	161/68 EEC, 1251/70 EEC;
Council directives	64/221 EEC, 68/360 EEC, 72/194 EEC, 72/148 EEC, 75/34 EEC, 75/35 EEC;

Due to take effect on 30 June 1992

Council directives	90/364/EEC, 90/365/EEC, 90/366/EEC

These provisions have overriding legal effect in the United Kingdom.

Crime Prevention Panels

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement regarding the funding of crime prevention panels.

Mr. John Patten: Crime prevention panels are an excellent means by which local communities can become involved through voluntary activity in the fight against crime. They are encouraged to be self-sufficient and to seek local funding arrangements. Many crime prevention panels obtain sponsorship from local businesses. Possible sources of funding will vary from area to area but Crime Concern has published a booklet entitled "Attracting Business Sponsorship" which provides detailed advice for panels on how to obtain sponsorship for crime prevention. A few police forces are known to have given financial support for specific initiatives run by panels. In support of the work of crime prevention panels in the areas concerned, grants have also been made under the safer cities programme which brings extra crime prevention resources to 20 selected high crime areas in England. Some panels have been successful in obtaining charity status and any panel wishing to do this may contact the Charity Commission which will advise it on the necessary procedures.

Usk Prison

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has plans to privatise Usk prison.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are no present plans to contract out the management of Her Majesty's prison Usk.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next proposes to visit Her Majesty's prison, Usk.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit Her Majesty's prison, Usk, in the near future.

Vehicle Watch

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce a vehicle watch scheme following the pilot project undertaken in Wales.

Mr. John Patten: The introduction of vehicle watch schemes is a matter for individual chief police officers. A decision on whether the Home Office should advise the police to extend such schemes throughout the country will be made after the evaluation has been completed later this year.

DNA Register

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the introduction of a national DNA register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have not had any recent representations about the introduction of a national DNA register. As I said in my reply to the hon. Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) on 7 February, I have sought the advice of the Royal Commission on criminal justice about this delicate issue.

Reunite

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will announce his decision in respect of the grant application submitted by Reunite, the National Council for Abducted Children.

Mr. John Patten: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Ronald Loco

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons he has failed to answer the letters to him from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton dated 15 October and 20 December 1991 and 23 January with regard to Mr. Ronald Loco, 18 Cheston road; if he will now send a reply without any further delay; and if he will apologise for the failure to reply to correspondence over this period.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend replied on 7 November 1991 to the right hon. Gentleman's letter of 15 October. We have not been able to trace any record of having received the letters of 20 December 1991 and 23 January 1992. If the right hon. Member would care to let me have copies of them, I will look into the matters that he wishes to raise and let him have a further reply as soon as possible.

Prisons (Privatisation)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the privatisation of prisons.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations from hon. Members, organisations and members of the public.

Prison Population

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the latest figures for the number of inmates accommodated in (a) Her Majesty's prison, Durham and (b) Her Majesty's prison, Belmarsh.

Mrs. Rumbold: On 9 March, the populations of the two establishments were as follows:

	Number
Her Majesty's prison Durham	922
Her Majesty's prison Belmarsh	798

Voters

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce emergency legislation with regard to the qualifying date for registration for the vote in a parliamentary election to equalise the position between people living abroad and those living on the streets.

Mrs. Rumbold: The qualifying date for registration as an elector is already the same both for overseas electors and for electors living in this country.

Police Manpower

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications there have been in each police force in England and Wales for increased police manpower; and what are the numbers involved and the numbers agreed to, for the current year and each of the two previous years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Details of applications received and posts approved are set out in the table for the years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93. These figures include posts whose costs are fully reimbursed by a third party, for example at major airports.

National Transcommunication Limited

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total paid in consultancy fees by his Department during the sale of National Transcommunication Ltd., previously the research and engineering wing of the Independent Broadcasting Authority.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Total costs for the sale, completed on 24 October 1991, were £2·2 million. The initial proceeds were £70 million and the Government will receive further proceeds under certain conditions, if the company is floated successfully.

Community Relations

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make available the report of the community relations project of the Council of Europe.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have arranged for a copy of the report, "Community and Ethnic Relations in Europe", to be placed in the Library of the House.

The committee of experts which produced the report is to be congratulated on its penetrating analysis of the issues faced by multi-racial societies, and of the possible policy responses to these issues.

Safer Cities Programme

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of the safer cities programme.

Mr. John Patten: The programme is making good progress. Four new local projects began operating late last year, and the 16 longer-established ones have between them started or planned a total of 2,205 local crime prevention schemes since 1989, supported by £13·8 million of Home Office grant funding.

The programme's evaluation should be completed in the first half of 1993, but at present I am satisfied that the safer cities programme is working well, and should continue in its present form. I have recently informed chairmen of local steering committees for the 16 longer-established projects that they may plan action and commit grant money for an extended period to March 1994.

Remand Prisoners

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what length of time the current longest serving prisoner has been held on remand awaiting trial.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 2 March 1992]: According to the records held centrally, which are approximate, on 29 February 1992, the longest period for which a person had been held in custody awaiting or during trial was almost two years.

Assaults on Police

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusions he has reached as a result of the Home Office survey of sentences awarded to persons convicted of assaulting police officers.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1992, col. 322]: I have published the results of the survey, which covered the last six months of 1991 and was conducted with the assistance of the Crown prosecution service, in the Home Office bulletin issue 3/92 "Sentencing for Assault on Police Officers", copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The survey demonstrates that the courts clearly recognise that assaults on police officers are despicable and deserve to be punished more severely, immediate custody being imposed for a significantly higher proportion of the assaults on the police covered in the survey than for assaults on all victims in 1990.

The Government are committed to protecting our protectors who have a difficult job to do on our behalf.

I am setting up a working group to review the physical protection of the police. I am sure that the group, which will involve police representatives, will have a valuable contribution to make to improving still further the protection from attack available to the police, the need for which has been recognised by the Government and the courts.

DEFENCE

Surplus Army Tents

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated number of surplus Army tents as at 31 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: On 31 January there were no surplus Army tents.

TRIGAT

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about long-range TRIGAT.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Last autumn we decided that the United Kingdom should not continue in the collaborative long-range TRIGAT programme unless we could do so on a basis that was consistent with our future priorities. Negotiations with our collaborative partners have now reached a successful conclusion. As a result, we shall be continuing with the development programme on a revised basis.

Army Training

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in restructuring the Army's training base in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Command Paper 1595 referred to proposals to restructure the Army's training organisation and, in particular, to our intention to improve basic training for adults and young soldiers, juniors and apprentices at a reduced number of larger and more efficient establishments. The first part of the review is nearing completion, and we now need to begin detailed planning. Starting later this year, we propose to concentrate junior leader training at Bramcote, Harrogate and Winchester and all adult and young soldier training in new Army training regiments to be formed at Glencorse, Lichfield, Bassingbourne, Pirbright and Winchester. To permit these changes to take place, specialist infantry training which now takes place at divisional depots will in future be conducted at Strensall, Ouston and Crickhowell though further reorganisation may follow later. Recognising the importance of the regimental system, we will ensure that training will continue to be organised on a capbadge basis.

Final decisions on the future use of the establishments concerned have still to be taken, and a number of establishments will be required for use by units of the field Army. It is too early to say what the detailed implications will be for the staff of the establishments affected. With the exception of the WRAC training centre at Guildford, we do not expect any to close as a result of this announcement. Full consultation with the trade unions will take place in the normal way before final decisions are taken.

Decisions on the future rationalisation of apprentice training have not yet been taken, but from September onwards we shall introduce a one-year standard foundation course at each of the existing Army apprentice colleges in place of the current two-year course. Apprentices will then go on to complete their technical training elsewhere within the Army.

Work is continuing to develop proposals for the rationalisation of other areas in specialist training and further proposals will be announced in due course.

Defence Contractors

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the major changes between the basis of calculations used to produce the list of contractors which appear on page 15 of the "Statement of the Defence Estimates Volume 2", and those of similar, previously published, lists which relate to the six years to 31 March 1989.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There have been no major changes.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total amounts paid by his Department to United Kingdom-based contractors in each of the five years to 31 March 1988.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Ministry of Defence paid the following total amounts to United Kingdom-based contractors for the financial years 1983-84 to 1987-88:

	£ million
1983-84	6,609·33
1984-85	7,012·56
1985-86	7,458·92
1986-87	7,366·12
1987-88	7,836·89

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the precise amounts paid to each of the 10 contractors which received the largest share of contracts awarded by his Department in each of the five years to 31 March 1988.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The 10 contractors who received the largest payments from my Department in each of the years specified were:

Job Losses

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 139, whether he has established how workers at Trecwn heard the news of closure and job losses via the media in advance of the announcement to staff; and what steps he intends to take to ensure that, in future, such decisions are first communicated to the work force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The rundown and closure of Royal Navy Armaments Depot—RNAD—Trecwn was part of a package of measures for the restructuring of the fleet support area proposed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 16 July 1991, Official Report, columns 148-49 and confirmed, following extensive consultation on 24 January 1992 Official Report, column 377. Details of the final decision were provided to the work force at each establishment affected through a series of management briefings timed to coincide with the answering of the parliamentary question on 24 January. In the case of RNAD Trecwn, it was unfortunate that media speculation anticipated these announcements.

Falkland Islands (Flights)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason civilian passengers have to bear the loss of seats on flights to and from the Falkland Islands when a change of aircraft results in reduction in the total number of seats.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence has agreed with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office that capacity will be provided for civilian passengers on flights to the Falkland Islands, subject to overriding military requirements. When a change of aircraft is necessary which entails a reduction in the total number of seats, military requirements may dictate that civilian passengers should be off-loaded.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the delayed or diverted flights on which seats were for sale to civilians to and from the Falkland Islands in 1991 and to date, in 1992.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Flights to the Falkland Islands on which seats were for sale to civilians from 1 January 1991 to 28 February 1992 and which arrived more than two hours late at RAF Mount Pleasant, or were diverted, are listed.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason 27 civilian fare passengers were removed from the Falklands bound flight on Monday 24 February.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The aircraft earmarked for the Falkland Islands flight on 24 February became unserviceable shortly prior to the scheduled departure time. It had to be replaced with an aircraft offering less capacity and, consequently, some passengers and all freight had to be re-booked to the next flight.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what account is taken of the effect on civilian morale when civilian passengers only are delayed for 24 hours or more on flights to and from the Falkland Islands; and if he will make it his policy to ensure such passengers are kept informed about progress on their flight.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Any delays on flights to the Falkland Islands are regretted whether they affect civilian or military passengers. In such circumstances the staff do all that they can to mitigate the impact of the delay. When the time permits, civilian passengers are notified of delays via the Falkland Islands Government office. Otherwise they are briefed by the RAF movements staff at the reporting airfield, or en route, as appropriate.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what increase in total costs was incurred by the use of Britannia Airways to provide flights to and from the Falkland Islands during the Gulf war.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is commercially confidential.

Service Children's Education Authority

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names of those schools which have been approved by the Service Children's education authority; how often representatives from the authority pay visits to the schools; what criteria are used for deciding whether schools are listed; and whether on the change of ownership of a school it is required to re-apply for approval.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend.

Boarding School Allowance

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service and Foreign Office families are currently benefiting from the boarding school allowance.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: For the spring term 1992, the numbers are as follows:

Service	Families	Number of children
Royal Navy	1,955	3,076
Army	5,318	7,998
Royal Air Force	3,236	4,875

EMPLOYMENT

Minimum Wage

18. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what response he has made to the representations recently made to him by industrialists on the subject of a statutory minimum wage.

Mr. Howard: I have assured business leades that I shall continue to take every opportunity to point out the damage which the statutory minimum wage would cause. Labour's plans could cost up to 2 million jobs in Britain.

Unemployment

19. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to arrest the increase in unemployment.

Mr. Howard: The Government's main role is to ensure a sound and stable economic framework within which enterprise can flourish and the battle against inflation can be won. There are in fact more people in work today in Scotland than there were in 1979. We also have in place the most comprehensive range of help ever made available to unemployed people.

20. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement concerning the current levels of unemployment.

Mr. Howard: The present level of unemployment clearly reflects the fact that recovery is being affected by world economic circumstances. But the battle against inflation is being won, the foundations are in place for recovery and we are uniquely well placed to take advantage of the opportunities that will increasingly become available as we emerge from recession.

25. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the number of people who would have been counted as unemployed if the methods of calculation had remained the same as those in use 12 years ago.

Mr. Howard: The information requested is not available. Consistent comparisons can be made over a period from the seasonally adjusted figures maintained by the Department's statisticians.

Manufacturing Industry

21. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently employed in the manufacturing sector of the United Kingdom economy; and what were the figures in each of the last five years.

Mr. Jackson: In September 1991 there were 4,780,000 employees in employment in manufacturing industries in the United Kingdom. Over the previous five years, the numbers were 5,200,000 in 1986, followed by 5,176,000, 5,217,000, 5,214,000 and 5,136,000 respectively.

Unemployment, Bolton and Bury

22. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the measures he intends to introduce in order to ameliorate the conditions caused by the loss of manufacturing jobs in the Bolton and Bury travel-to-work area.

Mr. Jackson: The local Employment Service and the Bolton/Bury training and enterprise council, deliver a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes to help unemployed people in the Bolton and Bury travel-to-work area.

Terms of Employment (Written Statement)

23. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps his Department is taking to enforce section 1 of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978.

Mr. Forth: It is for individual employees who have not received the statement to which they are entitled under this provision to seek redress by making a complaint to an industrial tribunal.

Training Credits

24. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement on the progress so far of the training credits scheme.

Mr. Howard: By January, more than 15,500 young people were in training using training credits in the 11 pilot areas. Nine more training credit schemes will come into operation in April of next year, offering a further 10 per cent. of school leavers the opportunity to obtain high quality training of their choice.

Unemployment (Greater London)

26. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the percentage increase in unemployment in Greater London during the last 12 months.

Mr. Jackson: In the Greater London region, seasonally adjusted unemployed rose by 53 per cent. in the 12 months to January 1992.

Unemployment, South Yorkshire

27. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the figures for manufacturing job losses in the South Yorkshire area in the last 12 months.

Mr. Jackson: The number of employees in employment in manufacturing industries in Yorkshire and Humberside fell by 25,000 between September 1990 and September 1991. The most recent figures for areas within standard regions relate to 1989.

Construction Industry

28. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his latest estimate of the number of persons employed in the construction industry.

Mr. Jackson: In September 1991, there were 932,000 employees in employment in the construction industry in the United Kingdom.

Part-time Workers

29. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to introduce statutory rights for people working less than eight hours a week.

Mr. Forth: Employees working fewer than eight hours a week already enjoy important statutory rights, including rights relating to health and safety, sex and race discrimination and trade union membership and non-membership. All union members also have certain statutory protections against misues of union powers.

Additional protection will be given to safety representatives and others in particular circumstances under the Offshore Safety (Protection against Victimisation) Bill, which has just completed its passage through Parliament, and when the EC health and safety framework directive is implemented at the earliest legislative opportunity.

Labour Statistics, Durham

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if, pursuant to his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 452, he will give the names and addresses of the three unemployed claimants in the City of Durham under 18 years of age.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of registered unemployed in the City of Durham constituency who have been unemployed for (a) up to three months, (b) six months, (c) one year, (d) two years and (e) more than two years respectively.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested, for unemployed claimants in the City of Durham parliamentary constituency, is contained in the following table and can also be obtained from the NOMIS database system in the Library.

Unemployed claimants in the City of Durham January 1992

Duration	[1] Total
Up to three months	1,029
Over three months and up to six months	702
Over six months and up to one year	674
Over one year and up to two years	541
Over two years	445

[1] The figures are on the unadjusted basis.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list (a) the total number of the work force in the City of Durham constituency, (b) those in full-time employment and (c) those in part-time employment.

Mr. Jackson: Figures for the total work force are not available by constituency. The latest available information about employment in parliamentary constituencies is from the September 1989 census of employment and relates to employees in employment only. The figures for the City of Durham are as follows:

Employees in employment: September 1989

	Number
Full-time	29,500
Part-time	8,200
All	37,700

Nuclear Material

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether the transportation of all nuclear material, whether for civil or military purposes, is covered by EC directive 89/618; and what guidance is to be given to the emergency services and the general public about such transport consequent upon the directive.

Mr. Forth: The European Atomic Energy Community (EURATOM) treaty is concerned only with the peaceful application of nuclear materials. Thus European Council directive 89/618/EURATOM is not applicable to the military use of nuclear materials. Transport of civil nuclear material is covered by article 2 of the directive. The Health and Safety Commission consultative document (CD37) setting out proposals for new regulations to implement this directive outlines the intention to publish Health and Safety Executive guidance. A copy of the consultation document is in the Library.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he has taken or proposes to take to implement European Community directive 89/618.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Commission's public consultation on proposals to implement EC directive 89/618 EURATOM ended on 28 February 1992. New legislation will be brought forward as soon as comments have been considered by the Health and Safety Commission and proposals scrutinised by the European Commission under the procedure set down in article 33 of the EURATOM treaty.

Coach Parking

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he will next meet the chairman of the London tourist board to discuss arrangements for coach parking.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment has no current plans for such a meeting.

Employment Service Posts

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what level and nature of criminal convictions over the past five years automatically debar an otherwise successful applicant from being offered a post in the Employment Service as an administrative officer.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service Executive Agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Benefit Recipients (Interviews)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what instructions are issued to interviewing officers examining recipients of benefits on the basis of checking that they are actively seeking work; and whether a code of conduct is followed.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Palace of Westminster (Day Nursery)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee (1) what progress has been made in implementing the 1987 recommendation of the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee in favour of a day nursery in the Palace of Westminster; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what provision will be made for a day nursery for children of hon. Members and staff in the new parliamentary buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Orme: Further progress towards the establishment of child care facilities in the parliamentary estate are dependent in the first instance on suitable accommodation being found. In its recent report on the phase 2 sketch plan, the Accommodation and Works Committee advised that, in common with certain other facilities, it had not been possible to include a creche in plans for the new building. The Committee was confident, however, that more appropriately located space could be found elsewhere in the parliamentary estate without undue delay. The Commission is understood to have invited the Accommodation and Works Committee to continue its search for appropriate space; and until that has been done the Administration Committee is unable to take the matter further. In the meantime, the Establishments Office continues to arrange for Members and staff to be informed of suitable offers of day care facilities elsewhere.

European Standing Committees

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he expects to respond to the first report from the Select Committee on Procedure of Session 1991-92 on the review of European Standing Committees (HC 31).

Mr. MacGregor: As my hon. Friend is aware, I have recently sent the Government's reply to the report to him, as Chairman of the Procedure Committee. I am placing copies in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Expenditure

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer of 15 March 1990, Official Report, columns 335-36, concerning administration costs as a percentage of benefit expenditure.

Miss. Widdecombe: Administration costs as a percentage of benefit expenditure for each year from 1978-79 to 1991-92 are in the table:

	Per cent.
1978-79	5·0
1979-80	4·9
1980-81	5·0
1981-82	4·9
1982-83	4·8
1983-84	4·7
1984-85	4·4
1985-86	4·4
1986-87	4·6
1987-88	5·0
1988-89	5·3
1989-90	5·6
1990-91	5·7
1991-92	[1]5·5

[1] Estimated.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, for each year since 1978-79 the total amount spent on social security, excluding expenditure on the unemployed, at current prices and in 1991-92 prices, showing the real terms percentage increase or decrease.

Miss Widdecombe: Details of total social security spending from 1978-79 to 1991-92, excluding the amount spent on unemployed people, are given in the table.

	Expenditure £ million Cash	1991-92 prices	Percentage change in real terms over previous year
1978-79	15,228	41,310	—
1979-80	18,146	42,190	2·1

1990-91	54,143	57,933	2·8
1991-92[1]	61,133	61,133	5·5

[1] 1991-92 figures are estimated outturn.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total amount spent on social security in Great Britain, in current and in 1991-92 prices, for each year since 1978-79; and what was the percentage real terms decrease or increase in each year.

Miss Widdecombe: Details of total social security spending from 1978-79 to 1991-92 are given in the table.

	Expenditure £ million Cash	1991-92 prices	Percentage change in real terms over previous year
1978-79	16,602	45,037
1979-80	19,616	45,608	1·3

1990-91	59,183	63,326	3·2
1991-92	68,493	68,493	8·2

Notes:

(1) 1991-92 figures are estimated outturn.

(2) The real terms decrease over the period 1987-88 to 1989-90 is largely attributable to the fall in unemployment since 1986.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer of 15 December 1989, Official Report, column 852, concerning social security spending, to include 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is given in the table.

Notes:

1. 1991-92 figures are estimated outturn.
2. Expenditure figures from 1978-79 to 1983-84 are based on the old planning total; those for 1984-85 onwards are based on the new planning total, with statutory sick pay, statutory maternity pay, and further housing benefit elements included for the first time.

Claimant Numbers

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give, for each year from 1978-79 to the latest available, the total number of households claiming a social security benefit, excluding the national insurance retirement pension and child benefit.

Miss Widdecombe: Reliable information is not available for the period and in the form requested.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the average percentage rise in the number of claimants receiving the main social security benefits and expected to claim in the years 1978-79 to 1992-93 in Great Britain.

Miss Widdecombe: The available information on estimated average numbers receiving the main social security benefits at any one time is shown in the tables. Percentage increases are given where appropriate.

National Insurance

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when Mrs. Yvonne Syme of 5 Barber close, Bartestree, Hereford applied for a refund of class 2 national insurance contributions for the period June 1988 to December 1990; and when she can expect payment to be made.

Mr. Jack: Operational aspects of the collection and refund of national insurance contributions are matters for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to my hon. Friend and copies will be place in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the business plans for all Benefits Agency districts.

Miss Widdecombe: The publication of Benefits Agency business plans is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Income Support

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements are made to allow a person receiving income support who is participating in a training course provided by a voluntary organisation, local authority, or training and enterprise council or local enterprise company and which is funded by the European social fund, to be paid a weekly voluntary or charitable payment by his or her training provider without it being deducted from his or her income support; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Charitable or voluntary payments can be made to recipients of income support in a wide variety of ways without affecting their benefit. For example, regular charitable or voluntary payments which are intended and used for items other than food, ordinary clothing or footwear, household fuel, housing costs covered by benefit, community charge or water charges are fully disregarded. Regular charitable or voluntary payments of up to £10 a week are also ignored, provided that the recipient has no other income which attracts a £10 disregard. In addition, regular payments in kind are disregarded.

Care Homes

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what level of benefits will be payable to those in independent residential care and nursing homes on the introduction of the new community care arrangements.

Mr. Newton: The Government's policy, set out in the White Paper "Caring for People"—Cmnd. 849, November 1989—is that people already in residential care or nursing homes on 31 March 1993 should continue to be eligible for help under the current special income support arrangements which include help towards the costs of care, but that those entering such homes thereafter should receive social security benefits on a basis comparable with what would be available in their own homes. Thus from April 1993, for residents entering such homes, there would be eligibility for income support under the normal rules and for a payment towards housing costs; while care costs would, where appropriate, be met directly by the relevant local authority.

Having carefully considered how the proposed payments towards housing costs should be made, I have concluded, in consultation with my right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for Health, for the Environment, for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, that the most practicable, convenient and sensible arrangement will be a residential allowance payable as part of the income support entitlement. Accordingly, we propose to introduce such an allowance for those entering residential care and nursing homes from April 1993. We intend that it should be paid at a rate established by reference to the rents typically paid by people in sheltered housing accommodation, and that there should be a higher rate in the area defined for income support purposes as Greater London. Consultation will now take place with the local authority associations about the detailed procedures for the new allowance.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his latest estimate of the number of people in receipt of income support in (a) residential homes and (b) nursing homes;

(2) what is his latest estimate of the numbers of people in (a) residential homes and (b) nursing homes in receipt of income support who are over pension age;

(3) what is the total number of people living in (a) private and voluntary residential care homes and (b) private and voluntary nursing homes.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is contained in the table:

	Residential care homes	Nursing homes
Total with income support[1]	150,000	104,000
Women over 60	89,100	73,700
Men over 65	20,400	22,100

[1] The figures have been rounded to thousands.

Source: Income support Sstatistics quarterly inquiry November 1991 residential care and nursing home report.

Information is not collected on the numbers of people in homes who do not receive income support.

Mesothelioma

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his policy towards victims of mesothelioma.

Mr. Scott: Diffuse mesothelioma has been in the industrial injuries scheme's list of prescribed industrial diseases since 1966. Disablement benefit is payable where disablement caused by the condition is assessed at 1 per cent. or more. payment of additional industrial injuries benefits is considered automatically where disablement is assessed at 100 per cent.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the annual contributions from Government sources to the independent living fund since its establishment, together with any initial contributions involved in the setting up of the fund.

Mr. Scott: The independent living fund was established in 1988 with an initial contribution into its trust fund of £4,500. Provision for the fund in 1988-89 was £5 million. Actual expenditure was £1 million in 1988-89; £10 million in 1989-90 and £26 million in 1990-91. Provision for the fund in the current financial year is £54 million.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the names, backgrounds and associations of the 10 trustees of the independent living fund.

Mr. Scott: The independent living fund's trustees are as follows:

Mr. Derek Chislett
Sir Geoffrey Dalton
Miss Eilis Gallagher
Mr. Joe Hennessy
Mr. Trevan Hingston (Chairman)
Mr. Stewart Lyon (Treasurer)
Mr. Bert Massie
Mr. Jack McGregor
Miss Pauline Thompson (Vice Chairman)
Mrs. Winifred Tumim

Five of the trustees—Mr. Chislett, Sir Geoffrey Dalton, Miss Gallagher, Mr. Hingston and Mrs. Tumim—were appointed by the Secretary of State. The remainder were appointed by the independent living fund's co-founders, the Disablement Income Group.

Helplines

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the location of his Department's helplines in Scotland and the number of lines available at each location.

Miss Widdecombe: The provision of helplines is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, and Miss Ann Chant, chief executive of the Contributions Agency. They will write to the hon. Member and copies of their letters will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Performance Targets

Mr. Jim Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will announce the 1992-93 performance targets which he is setting his Department's executive operations.

Mr. Newton: I have today announced the targets for 1992-93 which I have set for Department of Social Security executive operations.

A number of changes have been made to the format and range of the targets to improve the measures of performance and to cover the introduction of the new disability benefits. The targets set challenging standards of performance for the Department and represent an overall improvement over those set for the current year. The clearance time target for disability living allowance claims represents a considerable improvement over the equivalent targets for attendance allowance and mobility allowance. The war pensions disablement claims target has been modified to allow for an average 20 days before claims reach the agency and to relate it to continued work load which in 1991-92 has run at double the forecast level. While the target is lower than had previously been planned, it nevertheless represents against the background of the greatly increased number of claims a challenging target entailing a significant improvement in performance.

The targets support fully the continued success of the Government's "next steps" agencies and the citizen's charter initiative. They are as follows:

Benefits Agency

1. Benefit Clearance Times[1]
   - Social fund crisis loans—applications cleared on the day the need arises.[2]
   - Social fund community care grants—applications cleared on average in seven days.[2]
   - Income support new claims—claims cleared on average in four days.[2]
   - Sickness and invalidity benefit claims—65 per cent. of claims cleared in 10 days and 95 per cent. in 30 days.
   - Child benefit—65 per cent. of claims in 10 days and 95 per cent. in 30 days.
   - Family credit—60 per cent. of claims in 13 days and 95 per cent. in 45 days.[3]
   - Disability living allowance—60 per cent. of claims in 30 days and 95 per cent. in 55 days.[4]
   - Disability working allowance (claims from people starting work)—95 per cent. of claims in five days.
   - War pensions (new disablement cases)—60 per cent. of claims in 175 days.[5]
   - War pensions (widows' cases)—80 per cent. of claims in 75 days.
2. Benefit Accuracy
   - Income support—to pay the correct amount in 94 per cent. of cases.
   - Incapacity benefits[6]—to pay the correct amount in 96·5 per cent. of cases.
   - Family credit—to pay the correct amount in 94 per cent. of cases.
   - Disability living allowance—to pay the correct amount in 96 per cent. of cases.
   - Disability working allowance—to pay the correct amount in 95 per cent. of cases.
3. Customer Satisfaction
   - 85 per cent. of customers to regard the agency's service as satisfactory or better.
4. Resource management
   - To manage the agency's resources so as to deliver its business plan within a total budget of £1,948 million.
   - Achieve new efficiency savings worth at least £53·7 million. The budget of £1,948 million is net of these savings.
   - Keep to gross allocation for social fund loans and grants of £302 million.
5. Financial recovery
   - Recovery of social fund loans—£175 million.
   - Benefit savings from detection and prevention of fraud —£460 million.
   - Recovery of income support overpayments—£30 million. 1992-93 to include recovery from estates.

Contributions Agency

1. Performance—Compliance
   - Increase aggregate yield by:
     - (a) Increasing collection of contribution arrears (excluding central payments section) by £13·3 million over the 1991-92 outturn.
     - (b) Increasing class 1 identified from survey (arrears and in-year savings) by £12 million over the 1991-92 outturn.
   - Increase the number of surveys to 114,000, including 17,000 employer educational visits.
   - Actively identify 40,000 persons with class 2 liability.
2. Performance—Records Maintenance
   - Process 98 per cent. of available employers' end of year returns by 31 December 1992.
   - Correct 83 per cent. of rejects from employers' end of year returns by 31 march 1993.
3. Performance—Customer Service/Information Provision
   - Clear 99 per cent. of benefit inquiries handled clerically in three working days to 98 per cent. accuracy.
   - Dispatch either a full reply, or an informative response, to 95 per cent. of all customer inquiries within 10 working days of receipt.
   - Complete action to register acceptable personal pension cases and process straightforward termination notices for 92 per cent. of all cases within 28 working days of receipt.
   - Provide a level of public service considered to be satisfactory by at least 75 per cent. of customers surveyed.
4. Resource Management
   - To manage the agency's resources so as to deliver its business plan within a total budget of £142 million.
   - Achieve new efficiency savings of £2·6 million.

Information Technology Services Agency

1. General
   - To manage the agency's resources so as to deliver agreed services within the approved 1992-93 running cost and capital allocations and accruals based budgets;
   - to achieve running cost business efficiency savings of 3·9 per cent; and
   - to produce monthly profiles and actual monitoring data for all general and financial targets.
2. Quality of Service
   - Service availability—93 per cent of district offices will receive at least the weekly service availability level agreed in the relevant customer service level agreement each month; and
   - on-line response time—the average response time for on-line services is set at seven seconds or less across 95 per cent. of all responses.
3. Financial
   - Unit cost and financial ratio targets are set but are not published for reasons of commercial confidentiality.

Resettlement Agency

1. Customer Care
   - Not less than 90 per cent. of published facilities to be provided.
   - Survey of residents to confirm that not less than 85 per cent. express satisfaction with standards.
2. Resource Management
   - To manage the agency's resources so as to deliver its business plan within a total budget of £25·517 million, including £14·196 million for the costs of existing resettlement units and agency HQ.
   - To achieve £0·3 million in new efficiency savings to be reallocated to grants for replacement providers.
3. Disengagement Strategy
   - Make satisfactory alternative provision for four resettlement units and then disengage from running them by 31 March 1993.
   - Secure commitments to satisfactory alternative provision for a further four units, and then announce decisions to disengage from running them during 1993-94, by 31 March 1993.

Child Support Unit

Responsibility for the Department's existing work on collecting maintenance for children will pass in April 1992 from the Benefits Agency to the new child support unit, in preparation for the launch of the child support agency in 1993. The unit's service delivery and financial targets will be:

- Percentage of lone parents making new and repeat claims for income support for whom maintenance is arranged —20 per cent.[7]
- Number of lone parents already in receipt of income support on 6 April 1992 for whom maintenance is arranged—24,000.[7]

Annual Benefit Savings—£320 million.

To manage the unit's resources so as to deliver its business plan within a total budget of £86 million.

In addition to the above, agencies also have milestone targets to be achieved during 1992-93. Details of these will be published in agency annual business plans. Some of the above budget allocation figures differ from the plans published in the DSS report—Cm 1914. This is due to recent transfers between budgets.

[1] Clearance times normally cover the period from date of receipt of the claim in the agency to the formal decision by the adjudication officer or equivalent. Notification of the result is normally issued by the following day. All days refer to working days.

[2] Based on "calculated" measure, reflecting work outstanding, work processed and working days in the month, measuring from date of entry to date of clearance on statistical record sheet or, for social fund, from date of claim.

[3] The target value is subject to assumption about the number of cases still requiring further inquiries following procedural changes in April 1992.

[4] By comparison, the current targets for attendance allowance is 70 per cent. in 50 days and 95 per cent. in 90 days. The current target for mobility allowance is an average of 37 days, but is not directly comparable.

[5] Based on a forecast workload of 102,000 new cases, compared with an original forecast for 1992-93 of 69,500 claims: the target to be varied subject to work loads.

[6] Incapacity benefits is an overall term used to cover sickness benefit, invalidity benefit, severe disablement allowance and maternity allowance.

[7] These two targets are together broadly equivalent to a target of 27 per cent. of all lone parents on income support receiving maintenance.

Written Answers to Questions

ENVIRONMENT

Construction Industry

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of the Building Employers Federation to discuss the effects of the recession on the industry.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of the construction industry to discuss the effects of the recession on the industry.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and Ministers in the Department have regular meetings with representatives of the construction industry to discuss matters of mutual interest.

Planning Controls

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his final legislative proposals to increase local planning controls over the unnecessary demolition of dwelling houses by developers prior to any redevelopment activity.

Mr. Yeo: My hon. Friend will recall that we published proposals for public consultation in July last year. We have carefully considered the responses to the options we proposed. In the light of these responses, we have decided how to proceed. In about two months' time, we hope to make the instruments needed to commence the new controls, comprising a commencement order for the relevant parts of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991; a direction which makes clear which types of building are to be subjected to the new controls over demolition; and a general development amendment order, designed to ensure that the new controls operate in an efficient way, and without undue burden on either local authorities or potential developers.

The main effect of the new system will be that those who wish to demolish a dwellinghouse, or a building attached to a dwelling-house, will first need to notify the local planning authority and give 28 days for the authority to decide whether to call for details of the demolition, which it would then consider in the same way as a planning application—the right to demolish, subject to complying with the conditions, would not be removed or to make an article 4 direction, which would require a full planning application to be made, in which case there might be a requirement to pay the owner compensation. We do not expect the new system to result in a substantial number of planning applications for demolition, since in practice most of the details are likely to be sorted out in negotiation between the local planning authority and the developer in the context of his planning application for replacement buildings on any site.

Devon County Structural Plan

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration was given to inviting Devon's hon. Members to participate and give evidence to the public examination of the Devon county structural plan on 24 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: It is normal practice to invite MPs to participate in an examination in public only if they had expressed an interest in the submitted proposals for alteration. Any request to participate will be considered by the panel chairman.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the criteria on which the participation list for the public examination of the Devon county structural plan on 24 March was drawn up; and who was consulted.

Mr. Yeo: In selecting participants for an examination in public, the basic criterion will be the significance of the contribution which, from their knowledge or the views they have expressed, they can be expected to make to the discussion of the matters to be examined. The examination is not directed to hearing objections, and it is not intended that all those who have objected should be invited to attend.

The list of selected matters and invited participants was produced in consultation with the panel chairman, as is normal practice. It was advertised by Devon county council on 16 January. The four-week period during which representations could be made ended on 13 February.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration was given to including voluntary amenity and environmental groups from Devon localities in the public examination of Devon county structural plan; and if he will invite the South Hams Amenity Federation to give evidence.

Mr. Yeo: In drawing up the list of participants for an examination in public, the aim is to select particpants who between them represent a broad range of viewpoints. A number of local environmental and amenity groups, including the Council for the Protection of Rural England, Devon Green party, Devon Friends of the Earth and Devon Conservation Forum have been invited to participate. It was decided that those participants invited to the examination, along with the written representations already received—including those of the South Hams Amenity Federation—would provide sufficient information for a decision to be reached on the alteration proposals.

No further representations were received from the South Hams Amenity Federation during the four-week period for comments to be made about the published draft list of selected matters and invited participants. However, the chairman of the panel has assured me that any late request by the federation will be treated sympathetically.

Empty Property, Devon

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the number of empty (a) public and (b) private properties for each district of Devon.

Mr. Yeo: Local authorities report the number of their own dwellings which are empty and estimates of empty dwellings owned by housing associations, by other public sector landlords, and by the private sector in their annual housing investment programme—HIP1—returns. "Other public sector" includes dewllings situated in the local authority area but owned by another local authority.

The latest available figures, for April 1991, are in columns A71, A72, A73 and A74, respectively, of the "1991 HIP1 All Items Print". A copy is in the Library.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the list of local authorities which have debts which are not taken account of in their standard spending assessment, with the amount of those debts individually.

Mr. Key: The capital financing element of standard spending assessments is based on an assessment of interest charges flowing from a notional debt figure. There are a number of reasons why notional debt may differ from actual debt. No records are kept of individual items of excluded capital expenditure.

EC Directives

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to issue a consultation paper on the implementation of the urban waste water treatment directive and the nitrates directive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: We have today issued a consultation paper outlining the Government's proposals in England and Wales for criteria and procedures for identifying sensitive areas and less sensitive areas—urban waste water treatment directive—and "polluted waters"—nitrates directive. As far as I am aware the United Kingdom is the first member state to consult publicly on the way we intend to implement these directives. This, I believe, demonstrates the Government's commitment to openness in environmental decision making and to the proper implementation of these directives which will make an important contribution to improving our environment. A copy of the consultation paper has been placed in the Library of the House.

Cash Limits

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any changes to announce to his Department's cash limits for 1991-92.

Mr. Yeo: Yes. I propose to make the following changes:

(i) The non-voted cash limit for DOE/OES will be increased by £478,000 from £93,894,000 to £94,372,000. This results from the provision of additional supplementary credit approvals to enable local authorities to raise finance to fulfil their obligations to contribute part of the cost of certain roads built by the Commission for the New Towns and new town development corporations in England. The increase will be wholly offset by a counterbalancing new towns receipt (see (iii)(b) below).

(ii) The non-voted cash limit for DOE/LACAP will be increased by £89,260,000 from £3,019,202,000 to £3,108,462,000. This results from the provision of additional supplementary credit approvals to enable Milton Keynes BC and The Wrekin DC to raise finance to purchase housing stock from Milton Keynes Development Corporation and Telford Development Corporation respectively. This increase is also wholly offset by counterbalancing new town receipts (see (iii)(b) below).

(iii) The non-voted cash limit for DOE/NT (New Towns) will be increased by £95,262,000 from minus £449,800,000 to minus £354,538,000. This net increase is the result of the following individual changes:

  (a) an increase of £185,000,000, reflecting the effect on receipts of the present state of the property market. This increase will be charged to the reserve and will therefore not add to the planned total of public expenditure;

  (b) reductions of £478,000 and £89,260,000 respectively resulting from additional receipts from local authorities financed by the cash limit increases described in (i) and (ii) above.

(iv) The external finance limit for Letchworth Garden City Corporation will be increased by £231,000 from minus £500,000 to minus £269,000. This reflects changes in the corporation's financing profile as a result of the continuing depression in the property market.

Manchester Concert Hall

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the proposed Manchester concert hall.

Mr. Key: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has today announced a grant of up to £22 million to Central Manchester development corporation towards the cost of the Manchester concert hall, which is part of the Great Bridgewater initiative. The concert hall will provide a much needed new home for the Hallé orchestra and is central to the Great Bridgewater regeneration initiative.

Irish Sea (Science Co-ordinator)

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether agreement has been reached on the appointment of an Irish sea science co-ordinator.

Mr. Baldry: I am glad to report that my Department and the Departments of the Environment and of the Marine of the Republic of Ireland have agreed to commission EOLAS, the Irish Science and Technology Agency, to provide the services of Mr. Richard Boelens for three years as Irish sea science co-ordinator. Mr. Boelens will act as secretary of the co-ordination group to be set up to review existing and proposed monitoring and research programmes in the Irish sea and to assess priorities for further work to improve our knowledge of environmental issues affecting the Irish sea.

In the course of this work he will prepare an inventory of Irish sea research and monitoring, identify gaps in these programmes and needs for co-ordination and prepare, in liaison with the relevant agencies, proposals for meeting these needs. Consideration will also be given to the timing, content and research requirements of a further quality status report on the Irish sea.

CITES Controls

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government support proposals before the conference of the parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora—CITES—in Kyoto aimed at strengthening controls on trade in wild caught animals and birds.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have made clear their determination to work within CITES to ensure that wildlife species are not exploited by trade. The United Kingdom delegation to the CITES conference has played a leading role in negotiating proposals aimed at improving consultation with wildlife exporting countries and providing for tough action to crack down on trade which is being conducted at unsustainable levels. These proposals have been supported by the conference.

Charterhouse Estates Ltd.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities will consider visiting the Liverpool 1 area to look at the Charterhouse Estates Ltd's involvement in the inner-city area.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 5 March 1992]: During my visit to Liverpool on 6 March, I met the managing director of Charterhouse Estates Ltd and toured the Liverpool 1 area with him.

Mortgage Rescue Schemes

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the housing associations, building societies and local authorities within Derbyshire who are involved in negotiations with the Council of Mortgage Lenders to provide mortgage rescue schemes.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 10 March 1992]: Nine members of the Council of Mortgage Lenders have so far announced details of their mortgage rescue schemes, some of them involving agreements with housing associations; others are still being negotiated. I hope that borrowers in Derbyshire will benefit from these schemes, and from the other measures announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 19 December, as will borrowers in other parts of the country. I understand that Amber Valley district council is intending to introduce a mortgage rescue scheme in conjunction with Walbrook housing association. Derby city council has said that it regards the introduction of a mortgage rescue scheme as a priority.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 2 March, Official Report, columns 45-46, if he will produce three tables listing percentage figures for the 1992-93 settlement for (a) each district council, (b) each metropolitan district and (c) each shire county in England and Wales, based on the criteria used in that answer, in each case listing authorities in descending order according to the percentage size of the Government grants.

Mr. Key [holding answer 10 March 1992]: The information requested is not available for individual authorities for 1992-93.

Heritage and Archaeology

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many civil servants are employed in his Department on matters relating to (a) the heritage and (b) archaeology.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 10 March 1992]: The heritage division of my Department has 41 staff, 12 of whom deal with archaeology. They are supported by English Heritage who are my statutory advisers on conservation matters. My Department's conservation unit, which advises on the good management of the Government's own historic estate, has five staff. In addition, staff in this and other Departments who are engaged on building construction and maintenance programmes recognise and discharge responsibilities for heritage conservation.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what expenditure was made by his Department in the last financial year for which figures are available on (a) the heritage and (b) archaeology.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 10 March 1992]: The Department's expenditure on the heritage in 1990-91 was £148·4 million. The estimated outturn for 1991-92 is £176·5 million. Expenditure on archaeology, within the heritage total, is funded through English Heritage and the Royal Commission on the historical monuments of England, whose archaeology expenditure in 1990-91 was £8·1 million and £1·8 million respectively.

Mentally Ill Homeless People

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what funds are being made available through the Housing Corporation in 1992-93 to provide revenue funding for housing associations providing permanent housing for mentally ill homeless people ready to move out of specialist short-term hostels in central London;

(2) how many permanent places for mentally ill homeless people currently living in specialist short-term hostsels in central London will be provided by housing associations in 1992-93.

Mr. Dorrell: I have been asked to reply.

The Department revenue funds the specialist short-term hostels set up under the homeless mentally ill initiative at the rate of £14,630 per place per annum—1992-93 costs. Permanent accommodation for those moving on from the hostels is being provided via the Housing Corporation. In 1992-93 it expects to make available 150 new units and 150 units from housing association relets. The corporation monitor this provision regularly. The social care of people moving on from the short-term hostels is the responsibility of local social services authorities. To ensure that the transition takes place smoothly the Department has included within the homeless mentally ill initiative £500,000 per annum for the three years 1992-93 to 1994-95 to provide resettlement support.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Part-time Students

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to restrict benefit entitlement for people who currently study part time under the 21-hour rule.

Miss Widdecombe: We have no such plans.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will evaluate the performance of the independent living fund since its inception in 1988.

Mr. Scott: We are proud of the many achievements of the ILF since it was founded nearly four years ago. It has played an important role in the run-up to community care and is currently helping nearly 12,000 people to live independently in their own homes.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review his decision to abolish the independent living fund in March 1993.

Mr. Scott: A successor body will be established to take over all the cases where beneficiaries of the independent living fund are receiving help at the end of March 1993. This new body will continue to make cash payments to its beneficiaries in the same way as the fund does now.

It is planned that from April 1993, people needing such help will be dealt with under the mainstream arrangements for community care.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what provision will be made available to the independent living fund for 1992-93.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if it remains his policy to ensure that the independent living fund can help existing beneficiaries and admit new people during 1992-93;

(2) how much his Department has allocated for funding the independent living fund for 1992-93; and if he will take steps to ensure that the independent living fund has sufficient funds to meet new applications throughout 1992-93.

Mr. Scott: In addition to the £82 million already proposed for the independent living fund in 1992-93, the Government have decided to grant a further £15 million, bringing a total provision to £97 million. The trustees assure me that this will be sufficient—in conjunction with other steps they are taking—to enable the fund to continue operating until April 1993.

Parliamentary approval for the additional sum, which will be met from the reserve without adding to the planning total for public expenditure, will be sought in the usual way.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many young people in (a) Coventry, (b) the west midlands and (c) nationally have had their benefit cut as a result of coming off the youth training scheme prematurely or because they refused a place when offered one.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is not available.

Pensions

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the percentage increase since 1979 in the real value of (a) retirement pension, (b) invalidity benefit and (c) widows' pension; and if he will give the latest figures for the numbers of people receiving each benefit.

Miss Widdecombe: Basic retirement pension, invalidity benefit and widows pension have each increased by 2·8 per cent., in real terms, after allowing for inflation between the two complete uprating years ending November 1979 and April 1990.

The estimated average numbers of people, in thousands, in receipt of these benefits at any one time are in the table.

	'000
Retirement pension	10,000
Invalidity benefit	1,209
Widows' pension	285

Note: The figures in the table are for Great Britain and are rounded to the nearest thousand; the source is "DSS Statistics". The retirement pension figure is based based on March 1991 data. The invalidity benefit figure is based on March 1990 data. The widows' pension figure is based on September 1990 data.

Disabled People (Benefits)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes he has recently made to benefits for disabled people and their carers.

Mr. Scott: We have already issued a quarter of a million disability living allowance claim packs—to people who are currently not entitled to benefit and to those who can now claim extra benefit. Our extensive TV and press advertising campaign has resulted in over 250,000 inquiries from people who want information about the new benefits. To them we have issued a specially designed colour-coded guide which not only explains the two new benefits but also covers the many other benefits available to disabled people.

We have also begun to take claims for the new benefit, disability working allowance which is aimed at disabled people who are able to work, but have limited earnings' potential. The first awards of the benefit have already been made.

We are shortly to make several other changes which will help disabled people and their carers.

We have today laid regulations that raise to £40 the limit on the weekly amount that a carer can earn without it affecting their entitlement to invalid care allowance. This means that the limit will have increased by over 200 per cent. in the last two years.

We have also laid regulations which will, from April, raise from 12 to 21 the number of hours of study that someone claiming invalid care allowance can undertake without it affecting their entitlement to that benefit.

Other regulations will be laid shortly to bring the residence and presence conditions for severe disability allowance into line, from April, with those which we have introduced for disability living allowance. This means the removal of the long-criticised "10 in 20 years" residence test.

I am also pleased to announce that I laid yesterday regulations which will allow disabled people, who receive either invalidity benefit or severe disability allowance, to serve for one day a week as members of the new disability appeal tribunals and receive the full fee for taking on that invaluable work—without it affecting their entitlement to those benefits.

National Insurance

Sir Timothy Raison: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans for technical adjustments to the system of national insurance contributions and credits which would assist people to qualify for contributory benefits.

Mr. Scott: We propose to lay regulations shortly which will amend the Social Security (Credits) Regulations 1975 to provide that people who receive a payment in lieu of notice or certain other compensatory payments will no longer be prevented from obtaining unemployment credits for the period covered by the compensatory payment.

This will assist people to qualify for contributory benefits by covering potential deficiencies in their contribution records.

We are also laying the Social Security (Contributions) Amendment (No. 5) Regulations 1992, which will further assist people to qualify for contributory benefits by the reallocation of national insurance contributions—NICs —paid in one tax year to another tax year.

Those who will benefit are employed earners who commence employment towards the end of the tax year and whose first payment of earnings from that employment is made in accordance with the employer's normal pay practice in the following tax year. If the NIC record in the first tax year is deficient for contributory benefits, the class 1—employed earners—NICs paid for the first payment of earnings can be treated as paid in respect of the tax year in which the employment began if that would enable the employee to satisfy the contribution conditions for benefit.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for attendance allowance were received in 1990-91.

Mr. Scott: In 1990-91, there were 445,000 claims for attendance allowance. This is a correction to the figure of 395,000 in table 10 of the "DSS Departmental Report", Cm 1914.

Pensioners

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of (a) women and (b) men in 1980 and in the latest year for which the figures are available reached retirement age with entitlement to (i) the full basic state pension, (ii) some state earnings-related pension or additional pension, (iii) an occupational pension and (iv) a personal pension.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 12 February 1992]: information is not available in the precise form requested, however such information as is available is given in the tables:

Table 1

	Per cent.
1. Percentage of men age 65 at 28 November 1980 in receipt of:
1. Any state retirement pension	84·35
ii. Full rate basic pension	79·47
iii. Some additional pension (SERPS)	55·14
2. Percentage of men age 65 at 31 March 1991 in receipt of:
i. Any state retirement pension	79·77
ii. Full rate basic pension	69·45
iii. Some additional pension (SERPS)	71·49
3. Percentage of women age 60 at 28 November 1980 in receipt of:
i. Any state retirement pension	63·10
ii. Full rate basic pension (own contributions)	20·01
iii. Some additional pension (SERPS)	10·16
4. Percentage of women age 60 at 31 March 1991 in receipt of:
i. Any state retirement pension	67·44
ii. Full rate basic pension (own contributions)	15·04
iii. Some additional pension (SERPS)	28·04

(a) The "recently-retired" are defined as men aged 65-69 and women aged 60-64.

(b) Estimates are for the United Kingdom and are based on the 1979 and 1987 Government Actuary's Department (GAD) Occupational Pensions Surveys and the 1979 and 1988 Family Expenditure Surveys.

TRANSPORT

Coach Parking, London

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in meetings with representatives of the coach and tourist industries, London local authorities, the police and other Government Departments to alleviate coach parking problems in central London.

Mr. Freeman: I have today announced a series of initiatives which will help to improve the central London coach parking situation. The measures include the provision of more than 160 new coach parking spaces in or close to central London; the lifting of evening coach parking restrictions on the Victoria embankment and Park lane; the relaunch of the Bus and Coach Council code of conduct for the operating and parking of tourist coaches; arrangements for distribution of the revised code of conduct to coach drivers at continental channel ports and Dover; a new pay and park facility for coaches at the North Mall coach park; Sunday morning opening at the Tower of London; the freezing of charges at the Tower coach park for a third consecutive year and a feasibility study for a radio call back experiment in the area close to Westminster abbey.

Dial-a-Ride

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements have been made to fund the London dial-a-ride service.

Mr. Freeman: I am pleased to announce that the grant to London dial-a-ride services for 1992-93 will be £10·5 million. It has been most encouraging to see the rapid expansion of the scheme in recent years, and this announcement will allow London Transport to improve the services still further in 1992-93: increasing the number of dial-a-ride trips from some 740,000 in the present year to more than 800,000 next year. It will also enable the completion of the planned regionalisation of the service.

Rail Passengers Charter

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the bonuses to be paid to British Rail board members in relation to the passengers charter performance standards.

Mr. Freeman: For 1990-91 BR board members could have earned a maximum 25 per cent. bonus on salary for meeting a series of targets, including up to 7 per cent. for quality of service. Members actually received a maximum of 4 per cent. which included 1 per cent. for quality of service.

Details of a revised BR board bonus scheme for 1992-93, including quality of service targets based on the passengers charter, are currently being developed. On the basis of a possible maximum 10 per cent. bonus for quality, the actual bonus in 1991 would have been less than 2 per cent. of salary if the charter standards had applied, equivalent to around £4,000 for the chairman.

Channel Tunnel Freight Services

Mr. Grist: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has yet approved any order for freight wagons to equip British Rail's proposed channel tunnel freight services.

Mr. Freeman: I have authorised British Rail to invest in initial builds of 450 intermodal wagons and up to 550 automotive wagons for channel tunnel freight services, at a total cost of up to £65 million. The intermodal wagons will be used to carry standard containers and swap bodies in terminal to terminal services between BR's network of regional freight terminals in Britain and key destinations on the continent. The fully enclosed automotive wagons will enable BR to offer high quality services for the delivery of finished cars for import and export, minimising the risk of damage to vehicles en route.

Airedale Route Strategy

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made on the A650 Airedale route strategy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Airedale strategy will eventually provide a high standard dual carriageway road from Skipton in the north-west, via Bradford, to the M62. Good progress has been made on a number of sections. I am today announcing preferred routes for the Shipley eastern bypass, which would link to a tunnel on section 4, and for the Hard Ings road improvement, which improves a section of single carriageway in Keighley to dual two-lane carriageway standard.

We are also pressing ahead with the preparation of main works for section 3 of the route, with advance works at Park road in Bingley currently out to tender and expected to start soon. We are well advanced in the preparation for inviting consultants to bid for the commission to carry out the preliminary design work for the tunnel option for section 4 and will invite bids soon.

Vehicle Mileages (Clocking)

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he proposes to take to combat the clocking of vehicle mileages.

Mr. Chope: We are working closely with the private sector in the development of effective and practical proposals to combat this abuse. Some companies already offer mileage check information services for the public and the motor trade, and the introduction of more comprehensive schemes is being actively considered. To provide the fullest possible data to underpin these services a "mileage box" is to be included on the vehicle registration document. Vehicle mileages at both the time of sale and of purchase will be collected by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency and passed to companies running mileage check services. I believe that this development will prove to be a significant step forward in our drive to stamp out the fraudulent alteration of vehicle odometers and will be welcomed by the motoring public and motor dealers alike.

Airline Failures

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will introduce a scheme to compensate scheduled airline passengers for financial loss arising from the failure of an airline in the light of the Civil Aviation Authority's advice to him published in 1991.

Mr. Rifkind: I have considered the Civil Aviation Authority's advice and have decided in principle that it would be desirable to introduce such a scheme, to provide financial protection for passengers who book tickets on United Kingdom airlines. I envisage that, in line with the CAA's advice, a fund would be set up from which any compensation would be paid, financed by a levy on United Kingdom airlines. I do not expect the levy to have a significant effect on fares. It would be of short duration —a matter of months—and should not exceed £1 per traveller. The scheme would complement the financial protection arrangements which already exist for people who book charter holidays by air.

I am asking the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority to develop detailed proposals along these lines, and to consult as appropriate. Primary legislation would be necessary to implement such proposals and an opportunity to introduce such legislation will be sought in due course.

Red Routes

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will be in a position to make public the full analysis of the survey of the red route pilot scheme carried out last autumn; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I have today published the results of the autumn monitoring of the pilot scheme independently designed and assessed by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory. Copies are being placed in the Library, and I am writing to all London MPs about them. The report shows that red route measures bring shorter, more reliable journey times for existing traffic, notably for buses, ease the flow of traffic and greatly improve safety on and off the route. London Buses is planning to introduce a new, limited stop, bus service on the pilot route taking advantage of the benefits to buses being produced. The environment is enhanced through the reduction of stopping and starting on the route, the improvement of roadside conditions, and the attraction of traffic away from residential side roads. Improvements are being achieved in spite of an increase in the volume of traffic now using the route, nearly all of which appears to be coming from side-roads in the corridor. Variations in trading activity are recorded but they seem to depend more on the type of business being conducted and the economic climate than on red route measures.

Traffic Management, London

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will issue his draft traffic management and parking guidance for London for consultation under the Road Traffic Act 1991.

Mr. Rifkind: I have published draft traffic management and parking guidance for London for consultation, as required by the Road Traffic Act 1991. Copies are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses and are being sent to each London Member.

The draft guidance explains London's transport needs and the Government's approach to meeting them. It refers to the Government's desire to maximise the use of public transport where it offers a realistic alternative to the car and to see a coherent approach to the management of traffic and parking, so that public and private transport can move efficiently, smoothly and reliably on the main routes and supporting action can improve conditions throughout London. In particular, it explains how the Government propose that the major traffic management initiatives in the Road Traffic Act 1991; red routes and the new system of local authority enforcement of "decriminalised" on-street parking controls, should contribute to the approach and tackle the problems of congestion in the short term. It will help the London traffic director to start planning the introduction of the red routes and the local authorities, the introduction of their new parking system.

Comments on the draft have been invited by 12 June 1992.

Railway Investment

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much Government financial assistance was given in relation to each train kilometre in (a) France and (b) Britain, over the last five years.

Mr. Freeman: International comparisons of railway subsidy cannot be made with precision because of differences in accounting practice. For instance, past debt write offs mean that British Rail pays significantly less interest that SNCF. Comparative information is published by the International Union of Railways in "International Railway Statistics". I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library.

The following figures are available for Great Britain.

£ per train kilometre

	BR (Great Britain)
1985	2·2
1986	2·0
1987	2·1
1988	1·3
1989	1·4
1990	1·5
[1]1991	2·1

[1]:Estimated.

Notes:

Train kilometres include all passenger and freight kilometres. There is no subsidy paid to BR for freight.

Rail Stations (Security)

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail concerning the improvement of the design of railway stations with the aim of reducing injury in the event of a terrorist bomb.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend met the chairman of British Rail and London Transport and the chief constable of the British Transport police on 3 March to discuss security arrangements for BR and London Underground. The design of railway stations is primarily a matter for British Rail. I understand that BR has produced a code of practice for its architects, on future station design changes and security implications.

Kent Rail Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has held with British Rail over improvements to Kent services and the placing of the order for the class 465 Networkers.

Mr. Freeman: I meet the chairman of BR regularly to discuss current issues, including improvements to Kent rail services. A total of 486 Kent link Networkers are already under construction at a cost of £364 million. BR is not yet in a position to say when the order for a further 188 Networkers will be placed.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the results of the consultation on the proposal to direct London Transport to dispose of the Docklands light railway to the London Docklands development corporation.

Mr. Rifkind: Having considered the comments received in the consultation I have concluded that the strength of the case for uniting the DLR with the LDDC remains undiminished. I have, therefore, today directed London Regional Transport to dispose of the DLR to the LDDC for a nominal sum with effect from 1 April 1992.

Worksop Bypass

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons his Department is withholding £330,000 in compensation and interest charges from Bassetlaw district council as the final payment for land for the A57 Worksop bypass; and when he expects the payment to be made.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 10 March 1992]: The Department is not withholding compensation and interest payments from Bassetlaw district council. Agreement was reached in March 1990 on the compensation due and in December 1990 a 90 per cent. advance payment was made to the council—this was the maximum allowed by the legislation in force at the time. Under the new provisions of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 payment of accrued interest is also required to be made, and a payment in respect of that amount will reach the council shortly. The outstanding balance and any further interest due will be paid on completion of the land ownership transfer procedures, in the usual way.

Rail Investment

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out (a) the level of investment by Network SouthEast in each year since 1962 at current prices and (b) the total operating grant paid to (i) British Rail and (ii) Network SouthEast in each year since 1962 at current prices.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The information is as follows:

NSE Investment (£ million at 1991-92 prices)
(Capital and revenue)

	£ million
1982[1]	192
1983	181
1984-85[2]	168
1985-86	162
1986-87	183
1987-88	305
1988-89	381
1989-90	414
1990-91	323
1991-92[3]	380

---

[1] NSE was formed in 1986. Previous comparable figures are available only from 1982.

[2] 1984-85 was a 15-month period. The figure quoted is the 12-month equivalent.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Gifted Children

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will consider the statementing of children of exceptional ability.

Mr. Fallon: It is for LEAs to make appropriate provisions for gifted children.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what proportion of the resources made available for children with special needs is made available for the education of gifted children;

(2) how many local education authorities have able child resource centres;

(3) what proportion of the national educational budget is devoted to providing additional resources for children of exceptional ability.

Mr. Fallon: This information is not available centrally. It is for individual local authorities and schools to determine the deployment of their resources to meet additional educational needs, including the needs of exceptionally able pupils.

HIV and AIDS

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what account he has taken of the Education Act 1986 and the European convention on human rights in considering implementation of the recommendations of his pamphlet, "HIV and AIDS: a Guide for the Education Service"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The purpose of my Department's publication "HIV and Aids: A Guide for the Education Service" is to present, for education professionals, the basic facts about HIV, draw attention to ways in which the education service can contribute to the dissemination of knowledge about HIV and AIDS, and give guidance on standard hygiene practices which educational institutions should adopt to guard against the risks of accidental transmission. My right hon. and learned Friend consistently made it clear, in line with section 46 of the Education (No. 2) Act 1986, that sex education, including education about the sexual transmission of HIV, should be given in such a manner as to encourage pupils to have due regard to moral considerations and the value of family life; and that detailed decisions about how such education is delivered in the classroom should take full account of local circumstances, the particular needs of pupils, and the views of parents. This approach is consistent with the requirements of the European convention on human rights on the need to respect the right of parents to ensure that their children's education conforms with their own religious and philosophical convictions.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to confirm the Government's proposals for teachers' pay for 1992.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: After careful consideration of the representations I have received from associations representing teachers and their employers, I have decided to accept all the recommendations of the School Teachers' Review Body. The order I have signed today will bring into effect the provisions in the 1992 School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document from 1 April 1992. This will make it possible for all school teachers to receive the pay increases recommended by the review body in full and on time.

Parents Charter

Mr. Ground: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science which local education authorities in England have distributed copies of the parents charter to parents in their areas; which local education authorities have refused to do so; and what alternative arrangements have been made for distributing copies of the parents charter to parents in those areas where local education authorities are not doing so.

Mr. Eggar: Sample copies of the charter were sent to headteachers and chairmen of governors at every school, together with an order form for further copies. More than 16,400 schools—66 per cent.—requested some 4 million copies to distribute to parents. The charter was widely advertised in the national press with a freepost coupon or a freephone number for ordering copies. It is also available in public libraries and post offices. Some 1·9 million copies have now been distributed through these means.

We are aware that a few local education authorities actively discouraged their schools from distributing copies of the charter, but we do not have comrehensive information about local authority attitudes. This is essentially a matter for schools, and the great majority have requested copies for distribution.

Sex Education

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the provisions for the teaching of sex education in schools.

Mr. Atkins: School governing bodies are responsible, under the provisions of the Education (No 2) Act 1986, for deciding whether their schools should provide sex education beyond those aspects required by the national curriculum; and for maintaining a written record both of that decision and of their policy on the content and organisation of any six education they decide should be provided. Schools are required to ensure that any sex education they may provide encourages pupils to have due regard to moral considerations and the value of family life. The circular "Sex Education at School", issued by the Department in 1987, offers guidance on these provisions.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishery Decommissioning Scheme

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 27 February, Official Report, columns 612-14, what proportion of funding for the proposed decommissioning scheme for the fishing industry has been allocated by (a) the European Community and (b) Her Majesty's Government over the period concerned, giving these sums both as a percentage and as a capital sum.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend has explained that expenditure on decommissioning will be limited to £25 million. Assuming that all expenditure is eligible the Community will reimburse between 50 and 70 per cent. depending on the method of withdrawal. However, the EC budget is funded in such a way that the United Kingdom taxpayer will have to meet 73 per cent. of the Community contribution as well as all the national contribution. The net result of this is that the United Kingdom taxpayer will have to contribute about £20 million of the £25 million available for decommissioning or in percentage terms about 80 per cent. of the total.

Crown Immunity

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to lift immunity of Crown premises for food safety; what progress has been made on implementing this provision; when he intends to issue the code of practice in connection with this measure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Food Safety Act 1990 extends food safety law to Crown premises with effect from 1 April this year.

Crown premises will need to be registered before 1 July 1992 in accordance with the Food Premises (Registration) Regulations 1991.

A code of practice on the enforcement of the Food Safety Act 1990 in relation to Crown premises will be issued under section 40 of the Act later this month.

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate in 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The chief executive of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate—VMD—has submitted his proposals to me and I have agreed that the VMD should be set the following performance targets for 1992-93:

full cost recovery for the three business activities of licensing, policy work and residues monitoring;

100 per cent. of new licence applications to be issued within 210 clock days; 80 per cent. within 120 days;

an overall efficiency gain of 2 per cent.

These are challenging targets, which will build on the improvements already made in efficiency and quality of service by the directorate since its establishment as a next steps agency, and for which I commend the chief executive and his staff. In addition, I have agreed with the chief executive that the VMD's corporate plan 1992-93 to 1994-95 should be published. Copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

Cash Limits

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to make any changes to his Department's cash limits for 1991-92.

Mr. Gummer: Yes. The cash limit for Class III Vote 4 (other agricultural and food services, support for the fishing industry, arterial drainage, flood and coast protection) will be reduced by £2,000,000 from £267,044,000 to £265,044,000. Within this limit expenditure will be reduced by £1,900,000 on emergency and strategic food services reflecting a reduction in the size of the emergency food stockpile and by £100,000 on extensification to reflect a reduction in demand under these schemes.

The reduced cash limit will offset an increase in the financial ceiling for United Kingdom hill livestock compensatory allowances.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Authorised Practitioner Scheme

Mr. Moss: To ask the Attorney-General when the relevant provisions of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 will be implemented to establish the authorised practitioner scheme.

The Attorney-General: The consultation document on the draft Authorised Practitioner Regulations which was published last April produced a large number of responses representing a wide variety of views. Last December a further consultation was undertaken involving those bodies with a principal interest in the conveyancing market. Responses to the further consultation have confirmed that there is insufficient demand for authorisation to justify the implementation of the relevant provisions of the 1990 Act at the present time. In addition, the Law Commissioners and the Securities and Investments Board are presently reviewing aspects of the regulation of commissions in the financial services market, the outcome of which may affect the approach taken towards the regulation of authorised practitioners in this respect. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor intends therefore to postpone implementation for the present. He will keep the position under review and will reassess the situation should there be a future increase in the demand for authorisation.

Public Record Office

Mr. Moss: To ask the Attorney-General when the Public Record Office is to be established as an agency.

The Attorney-General: Further to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Twickenham (Mr. Jessel) on 23 January, at column 181, I am pleased to confirm that the Lord Chancellor will establish the Public Record Office as an executive agency on 1 April 1992. I will arrange for a copy of the Public Record Office's framework document to be placed in the Library.

The table sets out the key performance targets that the Lord Chancellor has set for the Public Record Office for 1992-93.

Public Record Office key performance targets—1992-93

Indicator	Target
1. Efficiency
Cost of selecting and accessioning records per unit quantity (foot-run).	To establish a baseline cost for the year 1992-93 with a view to setting a target for 1993-94.
Unit costs of providing record storage space, document productions and reader services.	To increase the cost of providing records storage space per linear foot by no more that 5·5 per cent. from £0·90 to £0·95[1].
	To decrease the cost per cost per document produced to readers by 18 per cent. from £1·71 to £1·40.
	To decrease the total reader service costs per reader visit (Census microforms) by 10 per cent. from £2·18 to £1·96.
	To decrease the total reader service cost per reader visit (other records) by 8 per cent. from £6·85 to £6·28.
Backlog of records awaiting review.	To reduce the backlog of records over 30 years old which have not been reviewed, by 500 ft.
Provision of acceptable storage conditions.	The store 81 per cent. of records to an acceptable standard.
Management efficiency in running services and projects.	To establish systems to permit specific targets to be set for 1993-94.
2. Quality of Service
Hours during which the office is open to the public.	To run a pilot scheme from 4 July 1992 to 31 December 1992 of opening the census reading rooms on a Saturday and to continue the service if customer demand is great enough.
Provision of finding aids	To produce a new edition of the "Current Guide' and to begin work on a single set of finding aids for all the records.
Public availability of staff.	On 90 per cent. of days on which the office is open to the public there will be a minimum of four staff available to assist the public at Kew, four staff in the census rooms and four staff in the other rooms at Chancery lane.
Response time for answering correspondence	Replies to letters requiring a response to stock letter will be sent within one week and those to other letters will be sent within three weeks.
Speed of producing reprographic copies.	Copies of records will be provided within the following periods: Electrostatic copies: Same day service: up to a stated maximum number of copies per person. Other orders: five working days. Prints from film (from existing microfilm): eight working days. Bromide prints: three weeks. A self-service copying service will be available at Kew and in the census rooms at all times.
Quality of copies made.	No more than 5 per cent. of copies to require to be re-taken.

[1] The cost of storage has been increased by the cost of installing the new records information system, which will enable longer term efficiency savings to be made.

Personal Injury Claims

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Attorney-General whether the small claims procedure in the county courts will be extended to cover lower value personal injury claims.

The Attorney-General: The small claims arbitration procedure provides an accessible, informal and inexpensive means of resolving straightforward money claims through the county courts. The level at which claims are automatically referred to arbitration on receipt of a defence was doubled last year from £500 to £1,000. Plaintiffs claiming unspecified amounts, as is often the case where people claim compensation for personal injuries, are at present free to limit their claim to £1,000 if they wish to benefit from the advantages of the informal procedure. It is the intention of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor to encourage more personal injury litigants to benefit from these advantages, in a way which would safeguard equally the interests of both parties to a claim. The responses to a consultation paper published last year have suggested that provisions for costs should be part of the scheme. The Lord Chancellor is considering further what can be done to meet this suggestion.

SCOTLAND

Environmental Grants

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement concerning the amount of grant aid being made available under the special grants (environmental) programme in 1992-93 to voluntary bodies in Scotland working in the environmental field.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am pleased to announce that grant aid totalling £303,125 has been offered to voluntary bodies to assist them in carrying out environmental conservation, improvement or educational work in Scotland. The special grants (environmental) programme offers two different types of funding: core funding to help organisations with their central administrative costs, and project funding for distribution to projects designed to further government environmental policy aims as set out in the White Paper "This Common Inheritance". Core funding has been allocated to 39 organisations as follows:

Organisation	Grant £
Association for the Protection of Rural Scotland	2,000
Ayr Architectural Heritage Trust	5,000
Buchan Countryside Group	2,000
Centre for Human Ecology	6,500
Council for Scottish Archaeology	13,500
Community Service Volunteers	6,500
Environment Centre	4,500
Friends of the Earth (Scotland)	12,000
Garden History Society	4,500
Habitat Scotland	3,000
Heartland Radio Association	2,000
Heritage Education Trust	1,500
Highland Forum	11,000
John Muir Trust	4,000
Locus Breadalbane	2,500
Mid Craigie Community Business Ltd.	1,000
National Society for Clean Air	3,500
Royal Zoological Society Scotland	3,000
Rural Forum	14,000
Royal Society for the Protection of Birds	9,000
Scottish Conservation Projects	25,000
Scottish Ecological Design Association	1,400
Scottish Environmental Education Council	24,000
Scottish Environment News	2,000
Scottish Field School of Archaeology	3,000
Scottish Field Studies Association	3,000
Scottish Historic Buildings Trust	11,700
Scottish Native Woods Campaign	5,500
Scottish Rights of Way Society	7,000
Scottish Scenic Trust	1,750
Scottish Wildlife and Countryside Link	9,000
Scottish Wildlife Trust	21,000
Strathclyde Building Preservation Trust	6,300
Sustrans Scotland	10,000
Touchstone	2,000
Venture Scotland	2,000
Water of Leith Conservation Trust	5,000
West Galloway Fisheries Trust	1,350
Woodland Trust	4,000
TOTAL	256,000

Project funding has been allocated to 12 organisations as follows:

Organisation	Project	Grant £
Age Concern (Orkney)	Inter-island glass recycling project	3,225
CSV Media Green Action	Aberdeen media action video project	3,700
Council for Scottish Archaeology	Archaeological action information packs	3,000
Friends of the Earth (Scotland)	Consumer awareness information pack	5,000
Lothian and Edinburgh Environmental Partnership	Edinburgh and Lothians car sharing project	3,550
Scottish Native Woods Campaign	Growing up with trees project pack	4,000
Scottish Wildlife Trust	Wildlife information network	5,000
Skye Forum	Salmon ensilage project	3,750
Slide Workshop	Model school grounds information dissemination project	900
Sustrans Scotland	Rutherglen bridge project	5,000

Organisation	Project	Grant £
Touchstone	Aldie Burn adventure trail	5,000
Water of Leith Conservation Trust	Community environmental action	5,000
TOTAL		£47,125

Further sums are being held in reserve to support suitable proposals which may arise during the year. The experience of the scheme to date has been generally very good. I am satisfied that the grants now offered will greatly assist the voluntary organisations to increase their level of activity and do much useful work.

EC Directives

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to issue a consultation paper on the implementation of the urban waste treatment directive and the nitrates directive.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have today issued a Scottish consultation paper outlining the Government's proposals for the criteria and procedures to be used to identify sensitive areas and less sensitive areas in terms of the urban waste water treatment directive and "polluted waters" in terms of the nitrates directive. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Similar papers are being issued for England and Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Traffic Offences (Fixed Penalties)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he proposes to make any changes to the extended fixed penalty system for road traffic offences.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the light of consultation with representative organisations, my right hon. Friend proposes to increase fixed penalty levels to £20 for non-endorsable offences and £40 for endorsable offences from 1 April 1992.

Schools Inspectorate

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are employed in Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools; and what increase or decrease is being proposed for Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 12 December 1991]: At the beginning of April, Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools in Scotland will consist of 107 professional and 65 support staff. Little change to these numbers is foreseen in the near future.

Psychiatric Beds

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the average number of staffed beds for all NHS hospitals in Scotland was represented by psychiatric specialties in each year since 1980.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 6 March 1992]: The information requested is shown in the table. During this period the percentage of psychiatric beds fell as the Government's care in the community policy took effect.

National health service hospitals in Scotland—available staffed beds; psychiatric specialties as a percentage of all specialties; for years ending 31 March per cent.

1980	29·4
1981	29·2
1982	28·9
1983	29·0
1984	28·7
1985	29·0
1986	28·9
1987	28·6
1988	28·5
1989	28·0
1990	27·6
1991	27·5

Higher and Further Education

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to appoint a chief executive for the Scottish Higher and Further Educational Funding Council; and what civil service grade the successful applicant will have.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 2 March 1992]: We intend to commence the recruitment process, through open competition, as soon as the Further and Higher Education (Scotland) Bill receives Royal Assent. The terms and conditions of service for the post will be announced later.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Spending

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give gross spending for his Department in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms using April 1979 as 100 both (i) as a percentage of gross domestic product and (ii) per 100,000 of the population for each year 1978-79 to the latest available year.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested is as follows:

Financial year	Northern Ireland block		Northern Ireland block as a percentage of United Kingdom gross domestic product	Northern Ireland block expenditure per 100,000 population
	Cash terms £ million	Real terms (April 1979 = 100) £ million	per cent.	Cash terms £ million	Real terms (April 1979 = 100) £ million
1978-79	2,099	2,099	1·20	138	138
1979-80	2,451	2,098	1·17	160	137
1980-81	2,837	2,051	1·19	185	134
1981-82	3,158	2,084	1·21	205	136
1982-83	3,464	2,133	1·21	225	139

1985-86	4,209	2,235	1·16	270	144
1986-87	4,427	2,277	1·13	283	145
1987-88	4,758	2,320	1·10	302	147
1988-89	5,373	2,444	1·12	340	155
1989-90	5,645	2,412	1·08	357	152
1990-91	5,784	2,279	1·04	364	143

Note:

(i) Figures for 1978-79 to 1983-84 have been adjusted to the new planning total definition.

(ii) Figures for 1988-89 and 1989-90 reflect the privatisation of Short Brothers and Harland.

Social Security

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost of benefit expenditure on the unemployed and the administration costs of unemployment benefit and redundancy payments in 1991-92.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows.

Estimated Benefit Expenditure on Unemployed People—1991-1992

Type	Expenditure £ million
Unemployment Benefit	39·4
Income Support	189·0
Redundancy Payments	2·0
Total	230·4
Estimated Administration Costs—1991-1992
Benefits	12·7
Redundancy Payments	0·2

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many offices, providing public access for the purpose of claiming benefit, including unemployment benefit, were in operation on 1 April 1979, and at the latest available date;

(2) how many home visits, excluding specialist visits, including those for the purpose of investigating suspected fraud were made per 1,000 claimants in the latest available year; and how many were made in 1978-79.

Mr. Hanley: Social security operational matters are the responsibility of Mr. Alec Wylie, chief executive of the Social Security Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies of his reply will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Criminal Injuries (Compensation)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to maintain the principle that all innocent victims of violence are entitled to fair compensation, within a reasonable time, following the introduction of new minimum levels of compensation for personal injury and mental injury or shock.

Dr. Mawhinney: The existing statutory criminal injuries compensation scheme in Northern Ireland provides fair and reasonable compensation to the innocent victims of violence. The scheme contains two thresholds or lower limits on compensation—one in respect of physical injuries and the other in respect of mental injury.

Thresholds have been a feature of the scheme for many years. Their purpose is to exclude lower value claims from compensation and to set a limit which the Government believe that it would be reasonable to expect those criminally injured to bear themselves.

Voters

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of married women in Northern Ireland who would need to produce their marriage certificate as proof of identity in order to cast their ballot in the forthcoming general election.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of people in Northern Ireland who hold each of the documents necessary to identify themselves at the forthcoming general election.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, one of the documents concerned, the medical card issued by the Central Services Agency, is available to all electors in Northern Ireland free of charge. There is, therefore, no need for any elector to be without their vote.

Household Statistics

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of households in each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: I understand from the chief electoral officer that the number of households in each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland is approximately as follows:

Constituency	Approximate number of households
Belfast East	29,800
Belfast North	24,200
Belfast South	32,800
Belfast West	33,300
East Antrim	34,500
East Londonderry	36,300
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	30,900
Foyle	32,500
Lagan Valley	36,200
Mid Ulster	30,100
Newry and Armagh	30,500
North Antrim	33,600
North Down	35,800
Strangford	35,000
South Antrim	34,200
South Down	35,400
Upper Bann	33,200
TOTAL	558,300

Tourist Board

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the present term of appointment of the chairman of the Northern Ireland tourist board ends; and when he will announce the name of the chairman for the next period of office.

Mr. Needham: The NITB chairman's appointment ends on 30 June 1994; the name of a chairman for the next period will be announced at an appropriate time before that date.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide details about the launch of the Government's next steps agency administering the Ordnance Survey for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: The Ordnance Survey executive agency will be formally established on 1 April 1992.

Its performance targets for the period 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993 are as follows:

To survey 33,175 house units in the continuous revision programme; to complete 756 data capture units representing 1,220 basic scale map sheets converted to digital format;

to update the digital topographical database with 90 per cent. of the surveyed change within seven days of receipt of the field date; to despatch within seven working days 90 per cent. of orders for folded and basic scale maps; and to reduce unit costs so that the weighted mean percentage reduction of selected representative activities is 2 per cent.

A framework document has been prepared for the agency and a copy has been placed in the Library.

Driver and Vehicle Testing

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide details about the launch of the Government's "next steps" agency for administering the vehicle inspection and driving test centres in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: The Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency will be formally established on 1 April 1992.

The key performance targets set for the agency for 1992-93 are:

Throughput of drivers tested (per person per day)
Target—7·6 tests per person per day.
Throughput of vehicles tested (per person per day)
Target—15·75 vehicle tests per person per day.
Waiting time for driver testing
Target—80 per cent. to be tested by 8 weeks; 100 per cent. by 10 weeks.
Waiting time for vehicle testing
Target—80 per cent. to be tested within 4 weeks; 100 per cent. within 5 weeks.
Error rates (percentage of faulty inspections)
Target—faulty inspections will not exceed 0·5 per cent. of tests conducted.
Unit cost of driver of vehicle tests
Target—composite unit cost £16·16.
Level of complaints
Target—complaints about booking arrangements should be less than 1 per cent. of applications received; complaints about the conduct of tests should be less than 1 per cent. of tests conducted.
Customer satisfaction levels
Target—Greater than 92 per cent. satisfaction with booking arrangements; Greater than 96 per cent. satisfaction with testing procedures.

A copy of the framework document setting out the terms within which the agency will operate will be placed in the Library shortly.

Compensation Schemes

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about progress towards the establishment of a "next steps" agency in the Northern Ireland Office to administer the compensation schemes.

Mr. Brooke: The Compensation Agency will be formally established on 1 April 1992. I have made arrangements for copies of the agency's framework document to be placed in the Library. I have set a number of key performance targets for the agency to achieve in its first year. These are:

Financial Targets

To live within a running costs budget of £3·5 million, reflecting a 2·1 per cent. cash efficiency saving.

To manage the agency's budget for demand-led expenditure within the financial limit approved by the Department, including in-year adjustments, while ensuring that expenditure is within a margin of 0·5 per cent. of the approved provision.

To reduce the unit cost of processing each type of compensation claim by at least 4 per cent. in real terms.

Claims Processing Targets

Target	Criminal Injuries Claims	Criminal Damage Claims	Emergency Provisions Claims
Number of claims cleared:	11,750	4,500	4,600
To reduce the average time taken to reach a decision on an application by:	4 weeks	4 weeks	3 days
To reduce the number of claims over 3 years old[1] where no decision has been reached by:	25 per cent.	25 per cent.	25 per cent.

[1] Over one year old in the case of emergency provisions claims.

EC Directives

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to issue a consultation paper on the implementation of the urban waste water treatment directive and nitrates directive.

Mr. Needham: We have today issued a consultation paper outlining the Government's proposals for Northern Ireland for criteria and procedures for identifying sensitive areas and less sensitive areas—urban waste water treatment directives—and "polluted waters"—nitrates directive. As far as I am aware, the United Kingdom is the first member state to consult publicly on the way it is intended to implement these directives. This, I believe, demonstrates the Government's commitment to openness in environmental decision making and to the proper implementation of these directives which will make an important contribution to improving our environment.

WALES

Job Losses, Clwyd

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have lost their jobs in Clwyd, South-West over the last (a) three months, (b) six months and (c) 12 months.

Mr. David Hunt: In the 12-month period to December 1991 there were 23 notified redundancies in Clwyd, South-West. None of these was in the last six months. These figures are the latest available and are still provisional.

Elective Surgery

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will respond to the sixth report of the Welsh Affairs Committee, Session 1990-91, on elective surgery, House of Commons paper 390.

Mr. David Hunt: I am pleased to announce that the response has been published today as Command Paper 1863.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to develop cancer treatment services for the people of north Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: Having carefully reviewed all the options set out in the Deloitte, Haskins and Sells report I have decided that cancer patients in north Wales will best be served by the establishment of a dedicated cancer centre in north Wales itself. I have consequently, commissioned a detailed investment appraisal of this option. Provided the conclusions of this are satisfactory I am hopeful that a start on such a centre can be made in 1993.

The remaining recommendations of the DHS report are primarily for health authorities in north Wales to consider in the light of their local strategies for health and the development of cancer services in the areas concerned.

Neighbourhood Amenities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to establish a community initiative fund to promote the development of neighbourhood facilities and amenities.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett [holding answer 26 February 1992]: EC Community initiatives and associated funding are the responsibility of the European Commission. The Commission's mid-term review of the last reform of the EC structural funds, which is to include a chapter on "Guidelines for the Future", is expected to issue later this month. One of the issues under consideration is the case for modifying objective 2 areas—areas of industrial decline, in Wales, Industrial South Wales and Clwyd—to give greater emphasis to urban regeneration. During the review, we will be pressing for designation of as many eligible areas as possible within Wales.

Both the EC RECHAR and LEADER programmes, for industrial south Wales and rural mid-Wales respectively, have recently received European Commission approval and will make European regional development and European social fund grant assistance available for a wide range of measures in coalfield and rural areas, including social infrastructure and local community based developments.

The Community Development Foundation—CDF—has set up an office in Wales with the aim of promoting greater understanding of the value of community development and assisting specific community projects in the Principality. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales was pleased to launch this initiative formally in October 1990—one of the many community initiatives under the programme for the valleys—and provide urban programme aid to run two pilot schemes in Rhondda and Ogwr.

The Welsh Development Agency is providing support for a community enterprise initiative within the valleys programme area, which is aimed at stimulating a range of community self-help projects offering economic benefit —for example, community businesses—encompassing the provision of advice as well as financial assistance. Some £200,000 per annum has been provided under this initiative by the WDA since the programme started.

"Landscape Wales", the WDA's land reclamation and environmental programme, aimed at the restoration of the Welsh landscape, includes schemes which assist in the provision of local amenities—for example, sports fields, recreation facilities, country parks, picnic sites, cycle ways, the external improvement of redundant buildings in order to bring them into reuse for the benefit of the community, and so on. In 1991-92 the budget for Landscape Wales is £31 million.

Last December, my right hon. Friend announced, as a further stage of the rural initiative, a fresh series of measures to strengthen and carry forward rural programmes across the economic, environmental and social fields. These measures include an annual competition of local authority capital projects designed for the benefit of rural communities. We are particularly keen that the community councils are allowed full opportunity to put forward proposals on behalf of their local communities, and that social as well as economic and environmental schemes are adequately represented. For 1992-93, the Secretary of State has allocated £6 million to fund the competition.

The Development Board for Rural Wales is also actively involved in the social development of its area. In 1991-92, £1 million has been made available to launch the board's social development action programme, which covers youth, community, sports, arts and cultural development. Emphasis will also be placed on improving the environment, better entertainment and cultural provision, and enhancing activities which promote the Welsh language and culture.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Fiji

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid Britain currently gives to Fiji; and whether the United Kingdom's assistance has been reconsidered in the light of the Harare declaration.

Mrs. Chalker: Our bilateral aid programme consists of technical co-operation in the form of the provision of expert manpower and advice from the United Kingdom together with the training of Fijians in areas where it is most needed.

The Government keep their aid policy to Fiji, as elsewhere, under regular review.

Withholding aid would not further the objective of a return to democracy. No useful purpose would be served, for example, by depriving the ordinary people of Fiji of medical services made possible by our aid. There has been no evidence recently of a pattern of regular or systematic abuse of basic human rights in Fiji.

Angola

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about his recent visit to Angola; and what information he now has about the recent deaths of British tourists whilst in Angola.

Mrs. Chalker: My planned visit to Angola from 1 to 3 February had to be cancelled owing to ill health. An Angolan Government investigation is under way into the murder of the British tourists. Our embassy is in close touch with both the Government and UNITA on this investigation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Weapons

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the most recent United Kingdom owned and controlled nuclear weapons withdrawn from deployment, and dismantled, as a result of negotiations, pursuant to article VI of the 1968 nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The United Kingdom's nuclear defence requirements are reviewed on a regular basis and kept at the minimum necessary to ensure effective deterrence. Those weapons no longer required are taken out of service and dismantled. The Defence Secretary announced in October last year that we would be making substatial reductions in the United Kingdom's sub-strategic nuclear capability, including a reduction of about 50 per cent. in the number of our free-fall bombs.

European Union

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the effect from 1 January 1993 of ratification by all member states of the treaty on European union.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The treaty on European union will enter into force on 1 January 1993, if all member states have ratified it before that date. On entry into force member states will become subject to the obligations of the treaty.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what effect ratification of the treaty on European union will have on the official name and description of what is now the European Community.

Mr. Garel Jones: The treaty on European union provides that, throughout the treaty establishing the European Economic Community, the term "European Economic Community" shall be replaced by the term "European Community".

Diplomats (Offences)

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many serious offences were allegedly committed in 1991 by persons entitled to diplomatic immunity; and how many foreign diplomats were withdrawn from their posts in Britain in that year following alleged offences.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Forty alleged serious offences by persons entitled to diplomatic immunity were drawn to the attention of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 1991. "Serious offences" are defined in accordance with the Report to the Foreign Affairs Committee "The Abuse of Diplomatic Immunities and Privileges"—1985—as offences falling into a category which would in certain circumstances attract a maximum penalty of six months or more imprisonment. The majority involved drinking and driving, and shoplifting.

Seven diplomats were withdrawn from their posts in Britain in 1991 following alleged offences, as against six in the previous year.

Diplomats (Parking Fines)

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish up-to-date figures recording the number of unpaid parking fines incurred by each diplomatic mission in London during 1991.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The information requested by my hon. Friend is given in the table, which also includes those international organisations which incurred unpaid fines. The figures may be reduced by late payment.

The total of 1991—5,145—indicates a 22 per cent. reduction over the total 1990 figure—6,551—and is only 5 per cent. of the 1984 figure—108,932—the last to be published before the introduction in May 1985 of the Government's policy on parking by members of diplomatic missions. We welcome the further reduction in unpaid parking fines that has been achieved during 1991 and appreciate the co-operation of diplomatic missions since the introduction of the parking policy. We shall continue to monitor carefully the level of unpaid fines and bring pressure to bear on diplomatic missions to reduce this still further.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Clearing Banks

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has held with chairmen of major clearing banks following his initiative last year on the treatment by banks of small businesses; what information he has on the measures taken to ensure that each bank has dealt satisfactorily with complaints, especially in relation to any compensation made to borrowers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I am pleased to say that seven banks—Midland, Lloyds, National Westminster, Barclays, TSB and the Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland—have now published codes of banking practice for their business customers. The codes are well written, in plain English and they all reflect the seven principles I outlined in my statement on 17 July to the House Official Report, columns 181-83. In some cases they go beyond. All the codes explain how complaints may be pursued, and that would include any requests for compensation where errors have been made.

The codes are, of course, only now being implemented. I have not held any further discussions with the chairmen of the banks. In the final analysis, it is the reaction of customers, not the Government, which matters, as the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee said in its report published on Monday. I warmly welcome the Committee's encouragement to small businesses to compare the different banks' codes and stimulate competition by letting the banks know if they do not feel the codes meet their requirements in any way. Four of the banks have said explicitly that they will be reviewing their codes so that further improvements can be made in the light of customer opinion. I hope that the others will do the same. I believe these codes are an important step in improving the relationship between banks and their small business customers. But I hope that small businesses will also play their part in building and maintaining effective relationships with their bankers by discussing with them, in advance, any problems or opportunities they may foresee.

North Sea Oil and Gas

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what purposes the Government have used the revenues from North sea oil and gas production since 1979.

Mr. Maples: Revenues from individual taxes are not allocated to specific spending programmes.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the retail price index following the abolition of the community charge and its replacement by the council tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 7 February 1992, c. 256]: I announced in my answer on 7 February my intention to reconvene the Retail Prices Index Advisory Committee. The membership of the RPIAC will be as follows:

Membership of the retail prices index advisory committee 1992

Chairman

Mr. W. P. McLennan (Director, Central Statistical Office)

Members

Mr. J. Astin (EUROSTAT, Luxembourg)
Mr. S. Brittan (Financial Times)
Professor D. Currie (London Business School)
Professor M. C. Fleming (Loughborough University)
Mr. K. H. B. Frere (Nominated by National Federation of Consumer Groups)
Mr. S. G. B. Henry (Bank of England)
Mr. T. Hoyes (Nominated by Age Concern)
Mr. J. Hughes (Nominated by National Consumer Council)
Mr. D. Lea OBE (Nominated by the Trades Union Congress)
Miss R. Lea (The Mitsubishi Bank Ltd.)
Dr. R. J. Maurice
Mr. C. Mowl (Her Majesty's Treasury)
Professor J. F. Pickering (Portsmouth Polytechnic)
Professor G. Rhys (Cardiff Business School)
Mrs. B. Rosewell (Business Strategies Ltd.)
Dr. P. Rowlatt (National Economic Research Associates)
Mr. A. Sentance (Nominated by the Confederation of British Industry)
Professor R. Turvey (London School of Economics)
Mr. R. G. Ward (Central Statistical Office)

Secretary

Mr. D. J. Sellwood (Central Statistical Office)

Assistant Secretary

Mrs. M. S. Dolling (Central Statistical Office)

One or two further members may be added later.

Corporation Tax

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Exchequer of exempting from corporation tax (a) the first £1,000 of profits and (b) the first £5,000 of profits in respect of (i) small limited companies and (ii) all limited companies; and if he will state the equivalent income tax cost for unincorporated businesses.

Mr Maude [holding answer 6 March 1992]: On the assumption that a single exempt amount would be available to a company group and would be divided equally between the members of the group, the direct corporation tax cost is tentatively estimated to be:

Exempt amount £	Companies liable at the small companies rate £ million	All companies £ million
1,000	20	30
5,000	100	150

The equivalent income tax cost in a full year for unincorporated businesses is of the order of £600 million for an exempt amount of £1,000 and £2·5 billion for an exempt amount of £5,000.

These estimates are based on the existing distribution of taxable profits and therefore exclude probable behavioural changes. These cannot be quantified readily, but they are likely to increase the cost substantially.

Income

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated (a) mean and (b) median, (i) original, (ii) gross, (iii) disposable and (iv) post-tax income in 1991-92 and 1992-93, in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude: The estimates requested for 1991-92 and 1992-93 will not be available until data from the Family Expenditure Surveys for 1991 and 1992 have been analysed. The most recent estimates available, for 1989, were provided in the reply given to the hon. Member on 26 February, at column 501.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Minimum Wage

11. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received from business men about the impact of a minimum wage in other EC countries on British industrial competitiveness.

Mr. Lilley: I am aware of the very widespread concern among business men of the harmful impact a minimum wage in Britain would have on our industrial competitiveness with the consequent loss of output and jobs.

35. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what would be the aggregate costs to British industry of introducing a statutory minimum wage of (a) £3, (b) £3·40 and (c) £3·80 an hour assuming the maintenance of constant employment levels.

Mr. Lilley: On the basis of earnings distributions in the April 1991 "New Earnings Survey", the estimated impact cost to British industry of introducing a statutory minimum wage is:

Minimum Wage	Increase in Costs
£3·00 per hour	Around £1·0 billion a year
£3·40 per hour	Around £2·5 billion a year
£3·80 per hour	Around £5·0 billion a year

These estimates take no account of attempts to maintain earnings differentials.

Manufacturing Investment

16. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has recently received about manufacturing investment.

Mr. Leigh: In 1991, manufacturing investment was over one third higher than 10 years earlier.

Industrial Policy

22. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet representatives of the North East regional CBI to discuss industrial policy.

23. Mr. Radice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet representatives of the North East regional CBI to discuss industrial policy.

Mr. Lilley: I next expect to meet representatives of the North-East regional CBI on 18 September 1992.

26. Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet representatives of the West Midlands regional CBI to discuss industrial policy.

Mr. Lilley: I next expect to meet representatives of the West Midlands regional council of the CBI on 12 March 1992.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

24. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the latest situation regarding the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The multi-fibre arrangement has been extended for a period of 17 months to 31 December 1992, pending the outcome of the GATT Uruguay round negotiations.

Estate Agents

25. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he proposes to introduce regulations in respect of misrepresentation by estate agents.

Mr. Leigh: Misrepresentation about offers received or prospective purchasers was made an undesirable practice by an order that came into effect last July under section 3 of the Estate Agents Act 1989.

My Department is currently reviewing the outcome of consultation on a proposed order under the Property Misdescriptions Act 1991. The order would specify those aspects of property in respect of which misdescription would be an offence.

ECGD

27. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the average premium rate of the Export Credits Guarantee Department in (a) France, (b) the United Kingdom and (c) Germany.

Mr. Sainsbury: The premium rates quoted by export credit agencies vary greatly according to such factors as the market, the buyer and the horizon of risk. The average premium rate will therefore reflect the risk of business insured. The average premium rate charged by ECGD on business insured to date in 1991-92 is 4·27 per cent. Similar information on the average rate charged by French and German export credit agencies is not available.

Machine Tools

28. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet representatives of the Machine Tool Technologies Association to discuss the effects of the recession on the machine tool industry.

Mr. Leigh: I have no plans for such a meeting.

World Trade

29. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the latest figures for the United Kingdom's share of world trade.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom share of total world trade (visible and invisible imports and exports) was 7·7 per cent. in 1990. Our share of the volume of world exports of manufactured goods is estimated to have risen in 1991 for the third successive year.

34. Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the latest figures of the United Kingdom's share of world trade.

Mr. Lilley: The United Kingdom share of world exports of total manufacturers was 6·4 per cent. in 1990.

Fraud

30. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to review the procedures in his Department for handling fraud cases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: As my hon. Friend will be aware, the handling of fraud cases imposes responsibility on a number of Ministers. My right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General is responsible for the Serious Fraud Office and Crown prosecution service, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary is responsible for matters of criminal procedure and my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor has responsibility for matters relating to the judiciary. The prosecutions for fraud handled by my Department are cases which are not large or complex enough to have been accepted for handling by the Serious Fraud Office or the fraud investigation group of the Crown prosecution service.

My hon. Friend will be aware of the work being carried out by the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice in relation to the handling of fraud cases. The Government are keen to see rapid and successful pursuit and prosecution of fraud.

Engineering Industry

31. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current output levels of the engineering industry.

Mr. Leigh: Output in 1991 was 24 per cent. higher than in 1981.

EC Presidency

32. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement about the role of his Department during the British presidency of the EC later in the current year.

Mr. Lilley: Without doubt the Government will face a very busy presidency. To us will fall a number of important tasks:

- the completion of the single market;
- preparing the Community for enlargement;
- developing the Community's links with eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union;
- dealing with the outcome of the GATT talks, be it success or failure;
- reform of the CAP, and;
- depending on the progress under the Portuguese presidency, perhaps taking forward the review of the Community's finances.

While undertaking these tasks we shall encourage our partners to place greater emphasis on several key themes:

- first, deregulation: the rigorous scrutiny of all directives to ensure they do not impose unnecessary burdens;
- secondly, the implementation and enforcement nationally of Community directives;
- thirdly, the phasing out of beggar-my-neighbour credit and trade support policies;
- fourthly, the maintenance of competitive rather than interventionist policies.

My Department will have a key role to play in our presidency. My colleagues and I will chair five Councils: Internal Market, Telecommunications, Industry, Research and Consumer Affairs. We will also field trade policy issues in the Foreign Affairs Council.

I gave further information about my Department's priorities to an audience at the Institute of Directors on 21 February. A copy of my speech has been placed in the Library.

Quality Standards

33. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies in the United Kingdom have achieved the BS 5750 quality standard.

Mr. Leigh: Approximately 7,500 companies have been certified as complying with BS5750.

Technological Innovation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals his Department plans to put forward on technological innovation at the forthcoming United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in Rio de Janeiro.

Mr. Leigh: My Department commissioned two reports looking at the role of technology transfer in the context of "Global Climate Change" and "Conservation of Biological Diversity" for the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED). The reports were jointly funded with the Overseas Development Administration and the Department of the Environment respectively and have been well received by the international community. Copies of both reports are in the Library of the House.

My Department is currently working with the Department of the Environment on producing case studies which examine technology co-operation that exists between the United Kingdom and the developing countries. These will be presented at the UNCED.

During the UNCED in Rio de Janeiro there will also be an environmental technology exhibition in Sao Paulo, "ECOBRASIL 92". My Department is providing financial assistance to eligible British firms who wish to participate.

My Department is actively promoting technological innovation by United Kingdom companies. The outcome of the UNCED may well lead to increased market opportunities for innovative environmental technology.

Supervisory Bodies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) pursuant to his answer of 22 November, Official Report, column 346, what information he has on the duration of a visit by the Chartered Association of Certified Accountants and the number of files which its compliance officers will examine during each visit;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 22 November, Official Report, column 346, what information he has about the number of client files which the supervisory bodies will examine during each visit.

Mr. Redwood: I understand that, including time spent on preparation, discussion of the findings with the firm, review, and reporting conclusions and recommendations, the length of time spent on monitoring visits by the Chartered Association of Certified Accountants, in its capacity as a recognised supervisory body, will typically range from one and a half to four days.

The association will monitor members of the Association of Authorised Public Accountants on the same basis under the terms of arrangement between those bodies.

The number of files to be examined will vary according to the circumstances but will be sufficient for the compliance officer to determine whether the required standard of audit work has been attained.

The joint monitoring unit of the three Institutes of Chartered Accountants will normally examine not less than three client files on each visit although in many cases the number of files to be examined will be considerably greater.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the cost of the Ernst and Young staff seconded to his Department, the functions they are performing, and their supervision by his Department.

Mr. Redwood: The Department has one member of staff on secondment from Ernst and Young at an annual cost, including salary, national insurance and superannuation which is linked to the civil service grade 7 salary scale.

The secondee's main functions, performed under the direct supervision of a civil servant, are the authorisation of new insurance companies and the provision of expert advice on the supervision of insurance companies.

Inward Investment

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the level of inward investment in the United Kingdom and in the United Kingdom's European competitors.

Mr. Lilley: The United Kingdom has been the most successful country in Europe in attracting inward investment.

Single Market

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he plans to make on the single market during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: During the United Kingdom presidency, the Government intend to make progress on the remaining programme of measures, to ensure that the single market can be declared genuinely open for business on 1 January 1993.

We shall be focusing on those measures which are central to the successful operation of the single market. The Government will also put particular emphasis on considering the quality, effectiveness and enforcement of legislation already in place.

Making the single market work, rather than planning more new legislation, will be a central theme of our presidency.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Lilley: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission has a very important role under United Kingdom competition legislation as an independent investigative body.

Car Exports

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to the United States Government about the effect which the United States luxury tax is having upon British car manufacturers seeking to export to the United States; and what response he has received.

Mr. Sainsbury: Vigorous representations have been made to the Administration on the adverse impact of the luxury tax on United Kingdom car exports. While a formal reply is awaited to my right hon. Friend's request to the United States Secretary of the Treasury that exemption for cars should be included in the budget, we are continuing to put over the case for repeal in tandem with our own industry to both the Administration and senior Members of Congress.

British Shipbuilders

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on British Shipbuilders' external financing limit for 1992-93.

Mr. Leigh: British Shipbuilders' external financing limit for 1992-93 was set at minus £5·0 million as recorded in the Government's expenditure plans 1992-93 to 1994-95 published in January 1992 (Cm 1904). I am now able to announce a reduced EFL for 1992-93 of minus £6·85 million which amounts to an improvement of £1·85 million. This has been made possible by the inclusion in British Shipbuilders' internal resources of forecast receipts from RENAVAL funding and interest earned on accumulated cash balances.

Greenhouse Gases

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the consultancy study commissioned by his Department on the implications for trade policy of measures to control greenhouse gas emissions.

Mr. Lilley: The study was commissioned jointly by my Department and the Department of the Environment. I have today placed a copy of its report in the Library of the House.

Telephone Adaptations

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with licensed telephone operators about making telephones adaptable and accessible to people with hearing difficulties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 March 1992]: The licences issued to BT, Mercury, Kingston Communications and all the fixed link public telecommunications operators under the Telecommunications Act 1984 require them to ensure that telephones for the hearing impaired are available to meet all reasonable demands and to install facilities for the hearing impaired in all their public call boxes. The licences under which most private systems are run require that certain telephones installed for emergency use, such as those in lifts, can be coupled inductively to suitable hearing aids.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on available telecommunications systems in other countries to help people with hearing difficulties to use telephones; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 March 1992]: Comprehensive information on how other countries' telecommunications systems cater for people with hearing difficulties could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

In the USA, the Hearing Aid Compatibility Act (1988) has made mandatory the fitting of inductive couplers to certain types of telephones. In Europe, the European Telecommunications Standards Institute (ETSI), in which the United Kingdom is a major participant, requested funds from the European Commission last month to study the possible development of pan-European standards in this area. In framing this proposal, ETSI's Human Factors Committee noted that only two national regulations, on inductively coupled telephones and amplification for the hard of hearing, existed in Europe, both from the United Kingdom.

Media Expenditure

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what expenditure was made, in the last financial year for which figures are available, on (a) film, (b) video, (c) publishing, (d) the record industry and (e) the press.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 10 March 1992]: In the current financial year, my Department has provided support for film totalling £5·6 million. Overall Government support for film in the current financial year amounts to £25·9 million.

There are no specific support schemes for video, publishing, the record industry or the press.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many civil servants are responsible in his Department (a) part time and (b) full time for (i) film, (ii) publishing, (iii) video, (iv) the record industry and (v) the press.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 10 March 1992]: There are nine civil servants in my Department with full-time responsibility for issues relating to film and video.

For the other sectors there are no staff with specific responsibility, but the Department's market intelligence unit handles issues relating to most individual industries and market sectors.

CFCs

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the quantity of chlorofluorocarbons exported from the United Kingdom in 1991.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 10 March 1992]: This information is not published, for reasons of commercial confidentiality.

British Technology Group

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the Government's plans for the sale of the British Technology Group.

Mr. Lilley [pursuant to the reply, 4 March 1992, columns 183-84]: I am pleased to announce that an agreement for the sale of British Technology Group was entered into today, 11 March, following negotiations between Government and a management-led consortium. The initial proceeds will be £27·75 million.

The consortium represents a balance between financial institutions, individuals, and organisations. The lead investor is CIN Venture Managers Limited (CIN Ven) the second largest European venture capital house. (CIN Ven manage the unquoted securities portfolios of the pension funds of British Coal, British Rail and Barclays Bank). The consortium members include 10 other financial institutions, BTG management and staff, and up to 13 United Kingdom universities, under the aegis of the CVCP (the Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals). A holding company has been formed to purchase the shares. Management and staff will participate in the company both directly, through individually subscribing for shares, and indirectly, through an employee share trust which will acquire up to 26 per cent. of the share capital. Apart from the trust, no individual member of the consortium will own more than 15 per cent. of the voting rights in the holding company.

The consortium was selected as the preferred purchaser following a two-stage competitive bidding process against a number of criteria, which arose from the objectives for the sale of maximising proceeds consistent with a good prospect for the continuation of BTG's technology transfer activities. The Government are convinced that the consortium offers the best prospect that BTG's present activities will be continued as an independent organisation.

The proceeds of the sale will be made up from two elements. The initial proceeds will be:

	£ million
Initial consideration	14·25
Special dividend to be paid on completion	12·00
Dividend paid in February in respect of NEB	1·50
TOTAL	27·75

The initial consideration is dependent on certain working capital requirements being met at completion, which is due to take place on 31 March 1992 provided that certain conditions of the type commonly found in share purchase agreements are fulfilled by that date.

Future proceeds will arise if over the next five years the business performs at a level in excess of the net revenues forecast by BTG management in its business plan. The Government will be entitled to 60 per cent. (less tax) of the sum by which aggregate net revenues exceed the target which has been agreed with the purchaser. Net revenues principally comprise the revenues from licences which accrue to the company less the payments which are made to inventors from those licence income streams. Further proceeds may also arise from clawback on the proceeds of sale of real property.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Vagrancy Act Prosecutions

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted (i) of begging and (ii) sleeping out in north Yorkshire in 1979 and each year since then.

Mr. John Patten: The information for North Yorkshire police force area for the years 1979, 1981, 1983, 1985, 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990 (which is provisional) is given in the table. To produce further information for the other years requested would involve disproportionate cost.

Number of persons prosecuted and convicted of begging and sleeping out offences under the Vagrancy Act 1824 in the North Yorkshire police force area 1979 to 1990[1]

Ethnic Minority Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state, for England and Wales, the total expenditure under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966, for each year since 1982, identifying separately expenditure by training and enterprise councils in ethnic minority grants; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The total amount of section 11 grant paid to local authorities in each financial year between 1982-83 and 1990-91 was as follows:

	£ million
1982-83	60·8
1983-84	76·2
1984-85	76·3
1985-86	63·4
1986-87	102·2
1987-88	93
1988-89	88·8
1989-90	114·8
1990-91	135·5

The figure for 1991-92 is not yet available. The new, separate, ethnic minority grant, under which funds will be paid by this Department to TECs to support projects undertaken by voluntary organisations, comes into effect from 1 April 1992.

PC Seymour

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the result of an appeal by former police constable Seymour which took place on 12 and 13 December in relation to events which took place in 1988 in Brixton.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. Friend has allowed Mr. Seymour's appeal against finding. The parties to the appeal were notified by letter on 28 February.

Community Charge

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) to what extent the community charge court workload has led to (a) delay in processing general criminal court business, (b) the postponement of magistrates court hearings and (c) the arrangement of extra court sittings in each petty session division in England and Wales;

(2) what assessment has been made of the additional costs to the magistrates court system caused by the processing of community charge summonses in England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: It is not possible to make an overall assessment of the possible impact of community charge enforcement proceedings on delays in criminal proceedings, which are the product of the interplay of many factors, especially since in some areas additional sittings have been arranged to accommodate liability order applications. Neither the number of such additional sittings nor the number of postponed sittings is, however, collected. It follows that it is not possible to calculate the extent to which the total estimated costs of community charge enforcement proceedings between 1 April 1990 and 31 December 1991 of £6·2 million represent additional costs.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community charge summonses have been withdrawn in England and Wales for the latest date for which figures are available; and how many are currently outstanding.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not collected centrally.

Prison Catering

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give his latest estimate for the annual wage and food costs in the catering service at (a) Her Majesty's prison, Durham and (b) Her Majesty's prison, Belmarsh and state whether the catering service expenditure at either prison is likely to exceed the projected annual budget for the current financial year.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 10 March 1992]: The estimated expenditure on wage and food costs in the catering service at Her Majesty's prison Durham for the financial year 1991-92 is:

Prison service staff	161,000
Inmates	12,000
Victualling	363,000
TOTAL	536,000

The catering service for Her Majesty's prison Belmarsh is supplied by contract, the details of which are confidential for commercial reasons. The estimated victualling costs in addition to the contract costs are £279,000 for the financial year 1991-92.

The total cost of the catering service is not separately identified in each establishment's budget. Moreover, victualling costs are on a per capita basis and thus vary depending on the size of the inmate population.

Prison Service Review

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has yet received the report of Sir Raymond Lygo's review of the management of the Prison Service.

Mr. Kenneth Baker [pursuant to his reply, 16 December 1991, col. 13]: Sir Raymond Lygo submitted to me a report, published on 16 December 1991, which provided a cogent analysis of the problems of the management of the Prison Service in England and Wales, and offered a wide-ranging and coherent set of recommendations for tackling them. I am indebted to Sir Raymond, and to Lord Rayner who assisted in producing the report, for the speed and thoroughness with which the review was carried out. I am grateful for the wide range of comments on the report which have been received from both within and outside the Service—including from Lord Justice Woolf and His Honour Judge Tumim, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons. I was impressed by the general level of support for the great majority of Sir Raymond's recommendations.

The central recommendation in Sir Raymond's report is for the Prison Service to move to executive agency status under the "next steps" initiative. I have concluded that this is indeed the way forward for the Prison Service and I intend that the service should become an agency as from 1 April 1993. Consultations with the trade unions and other interested parties will begin shortly.

In line with Sir Raymond's recommendations, I intend to create a supervisory board, which would have responsibility for advising the Home Secretary on strategic, policy and resource questions affecting the service. I believe that the supervisory board should be chaired by the Home Office Minister responsible for prison matters. I do not share Sir Raymond's view that there is a role for a part-time non-executive chairman to head the management board. The chief executive, who will be appointed by open competition, and who will chair the management board, will be directly accountable to the Home Secretary.

Sir Raymond's other recommendations cover a wide range of personnel and management issues; they will be followed up appropriately in the coming months. I strongly endorse his recommendation that the Prison Service should be prepared to recruit from outside to management posts at headquarters and establishments, and expect to see that objective progressed vigorously.

One recommendation to which I am not attracted is the extension of the wearing of uniform to all governors in establishments. I share the concerns expressed by a number of commentators about the impact that would have on the future direction of the service. I await with interest the recommendations of the current internal review on modes of dress in the service.

Sir Raymond's important report merits a vigorous and decisive response. I believe that the move of the Prison Service to executive agency status, with the other measures which I have announced, will provide the right framework for placing the management of the service on a more professional footing, providing the most positive environment for staff to work in and, above all, ensuring the delivery of an improved service both to the public and to those held in custody.

Solicitors' Fees

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will refer the question of fixed fees for solicitors at magistrates courts to the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice.

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

No. Fee structures are a matter for consultation with the legal professions. The Royal Commission is considering the question of standard fees in so far as it affects subjects within its remit, and has agreed to accept a submission from the Law Society. The Royal Commission's recommendations and any consequent changes to fee structures will be considered in due course.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

INFO 92

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee if he will make INFO 92 available to hon. Members and their staff.

Sir Fergus Montgomery: INFO 92 is a factual and bibliographical database on progress achieved towards the single market in line with the European Commission's White Paper on the implementation of measures for completing the internal market. The Library expects to have online access to this database shortly. It may also be available on CD-ROM disk. If hon. Members wished to use it in their offices they would have to take out their own contract with one of the online hosts for which there would be a charge.

EMPLOYMENT

Jobcentre, Burnley

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what is the cost of the proposed removal of Burnley jobcentre; and what will happen to the existing furniture and equipment;

(2) what representations and consultations he has received regarding the proposed removal of Burnley jobcentre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give his initial estimate of the number of applications to industrial tribunals for the years 1990-91 and for the year 1991-92, the number of tribunals actually registered for 1990-91 and the most up to date figures for the year 1991-92, the original allocation for running costs in both these years and the final total.

Mr. Forth: The figures are as follows:

	1990-91	1991-92
Applications registered	43,243	[1]61,762
Cases heard	11,864	[2]13,344
Original allocation	£11,402,160	£12,320,232
Total running cost expenditure	£12,222,824

[1] (to end of February).
[2] (to end of January).

The total running cost expenditure for the industrial tribunals in 1991-92 will not be known until the end of the current financial year.

Youth Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will state for Great Britain as a whole, and separately for each region, the number of trainees entering youth training, both in total, and disaggregated by employee and trainee status, for each quarter between April 1991 and the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Information about the number of entrants is given in the following table. A breakdown by employed and trainee status is not available.

Region	QTR 1 (1 April-23 June)	QTR 2 (24 June-15 September)	QTR 3 (16 September-5 January)

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will state for Great Britain as a whole, and separately for each region, the number of trainees entering youth training, who, under the terms of the training and enterprise councils operating agreement, are in the guarantee and extended guarantee groups for each quarter between April 1986 and the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested is not available.

TECs

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide a list of the qualifications against which training and enterprise councils may claim an output-related funding bonus in youth training and employment training, and the numbers of output bonuses claimed against each qualification; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: There are over 700 vocational qualifications which are accepted by the Employment Department in payments to TECs for output-related funding (ORF) in youth training and employment training. I have arranged for a copy of the January 1992 edition of the Department's listings of acceptable vocational qualifications to be placed in the Library. In addition to these vocational qualifications, TECs may in some cases claim for the achievement of GCSEs, A/S levels and A levels.

Figures for ORF payments against individual vocational qualifications are not collected, and it would not be cost effective to do so. Available figures are for payments by national vocational qualification (NVQ) (or equivalent) level. Payments for the numbers of trainees achieving NVQs on ET and YT in England and Wales during the 1991-92 financial year to 5 January 1992 are given in the following table.

Numbers of payments to TECs for trainees in England and Wales achieving national vocational qualifications (1 April 1991 to 5 January 1992)

	Number
Youth training (including credits)
NVQ level 1	3,015
NVQ level 2	34,221
NVQ level 3 or above	10,262
Employment training
NVQ level 1 or 2	19,060
NVQ level 3 or 4	1,293
NVQ level 2 (for skills shortage trainees and labour market returners who also gain employment)	555
NVQ level 3 or 4 (for skills shortage trainees and labour market returners who also gain employment)	111

Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will state for Great Britain as a whole, and separately for each region, the number of people entering employment training, both in total and disaggregated by employee and training status for each quarter between 1988 and the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The information is not available as requested. Information about the number of employment training entrants since 1988 is given in the following table. Information about the employment status of people entering employment training is not collected centrally. The number of trainees with employment status has risen since the programme began and it is estimated that currently about 3 per cent. of all those in training have employed status. Those trainees without employed status have trainee status.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will state for Great Britain as a whole, and for each region the number of trainees entering employment training who, under the terms of the training and enterprise councils operating agreement, are in the aim and guarantee groups for each quarter between 1988 and the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: As the information requested is contained in a number of tables I will write to the hon. Member.

Tourism

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement about Government policy on tourism in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Howard: I have published today, along with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland, Wales and Scotland, "Tourism in the UK—Realising the Potential". I have placed a copy in the Library.

The document sets out the extent of the Government's support for the tourism industry, both financially and in creating an environment in which the industry can prosper. It describes activities and initiatives that directly or indirectly benefit tourism. It is an impressive record, which features the work of most Government Departments.

The document also announces a package of further measures to help the industry. They include:

A major new foreign language initiative to improve the quality of service that the tourism industry can offer foreign visitors.

The setting of standards for the times that visitors from abroad should expect to wait before being seen by a United Kingdom immigration officer.

Consultation on possible changes to the liquor licensing laws in England and Wales which would provide for a system of children's certificates; for a new category of liquor licence specifically for café type premises; and possibly for other reforms, in order to make it easier for families to eat and drink together.

Research into how the system of central Government grants to local authorities can best take account of the costs of serving day visitors.

Measures to improve coach parking in London.

The designation of 1993 as Industrial Heritage Year.

A proposal by the United Kingdom Government to the European Commission for an initiative to ensure that all member states co-operate to give people with disabilities information on the tourist facilities available to them and to exchange best practice on this subject.

Employment Service

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what the targets for the Employment Service will be in 1992-93.

Mr. Jackson: Targets for the Employment Service in 1992-93 will be announced later in the year.

HEALTH

Plasma

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will permit the Bio Products Laboratory to offer for sale to national health service hospitals 8SM high purity factor VIII produced from plasma that has neither been tested nor screened for (a) hepatitis C or (b) ALT —alanine aminotransferase.

Mr. Dorrell: The Bio Products Laboratory markets products in accordance with the requirements of the United Kingdom licensing authority and of the European Community. These requirements include screening for HCV antibody, which demonstrates the presence of Hepatitis C.

ALT testing in this country has been considered by experts who advised us that it is unnecessary. There is currently no European Community requirement for ALT testing.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of small hospital units in areas where former hospitals have been closed, since 1979.

Mr. Dorrell: The reforms of the NHS have centred upon the importance of establishing the role of district and family health authorities as the purchasers of hospital, community health and primary care services and prevention. They have important functions in translating patients' needs and concerns into improved services. One of the main aims of the reforms is to bring all those involved in securing and delivering health care services closer together so that they are more aware of the needs and wishes of patients, including those concerning the location of facilities, and can therefore be more responsive to them.

Consultants

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will hold discussions with the Trent regional health authority about the ratio of male to female consultants employed by the region.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department, through the Opportunty 2000 scheme launched by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, has set the NHS the goal of improving the ratio of male to female consultants to four to one by 1994. Regional health authorities will be required to monitor appointments procedures and to ensure that all appointments committees receive equal opportunities training. The Department will shortly be scrutinising Trent's action plan for meeting all the goals set by Opportunity 2000 and will contine to hold discussions with the authority about the action to be taken to improve opportunities for women in medicine.

GP Prescriptions

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the difference between numbers of general practitioner prescriptions issued and those filled.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Unplanned Pregnancies and Sex Education

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provisions exist for advising on unplanned pregnancies for the under-25s;

(2) if he will make a statement on the provisions for the teaching of sex education for young people.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Long-standing guidance to the NHS draws attention to the need for separate, informal family planning services for young people, with staff experienced in dealing with the particular needs of this group and their problems. New guidelines on family planning service provision, issued by the NHS management executive in January, remind health authorities of the special needs of young people and draw on the findings of a study funded by the Department into the family planning and counselling needs of young people. NHS provision in this area is complemented by the work of a number of voluntary organisations, which receive financial support from public funds, such as the Family Planning Association and Brook Advisory Centres. These organisations produce a range of information material for young people. The provision of sex education in schools is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Dentists

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the figures from 1979 to 1992 inclusive for the amount collected by dentists for writing out prescriptions in England.

Mr. Dorrell: Dentists have been able to claim such a fee, in specified circumstances, since the introduction of the dental contract on 1 October 1990. The amount received by dentists in England and Wales for issuing prescriptions was as follows:

1990—£39,639 (1 October 1990 to 31 December 1990)
1991—£325,607 (1 January 1991 to 31 December 1991)

Figures for England only are not available.

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the details of circumstancess under which dentists may charge for writing out a prescription.

Mr. Dorrell: A dentist may claim a fee for issuing a prescription where no other treatment is being given and no other fees are being claimed in a particular course of treatment. A dentist may, however, also claim a fee for a prescription issued when a patient has been visited at home and a claim is made for the associated fee for a domiciliary visit, or when the dentist has returned to and re-opened the surgery and a claim is made for the associated recalled attendance fee.

Southern Derbyshire Health Authority

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give, for the Southern Derbyshire health authority, for the years 1986-87 and 1991-92 (estimate) (a) the number of nurses employed, (b) the number of doctors employed, (c) the number of professions ancillary to medicine and (d) the total staffing.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is in the table:

NHS directly employed staff in post by specific staff groups Southern Derbyshire district health authority

	Nursing and midwifery[2,1]	Medical[3,1]	Professions allied to medicine[1]	Total staff[1]
30 September 1986	3,850	190	320	7,510
30 September 1991[5]	3,800[4]	200	400	7,420

[2] Includes agency staff.

[3] Includes permanent paid, honorary and locum staff but excludes consultants and senior registrars whose contracts are held by Trent region.

[4] Some nurse manager and student posts are no longer included in this definition.

[5] These figures have not yet been validated centrally.

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of spending in Southern Derbyshire health authority for the years 1986-87 and 1991-92 (estimated), showing the rate of growth in cash and real terms.

Mr. Dorrell: The total revenue expenditure of the Southern Derbyshire health authority was £93·6 million (cash) in 1986-87. The authority estimates its 1991-92 revenue expenditure at £164·7 million (cash). This represents an increase of 76 per cent. in cash terms and 26 per cent. in real terms, measured at 1991-92 prices.

Appointment of DHA Chairmen

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names of those people appointed to be chairmen of district health authorities with effect from 1 April.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have today placed in the Library a list of those people appointed as chairmen of district health authorities with effect from 1 April 1992.

Ward Closures

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of temporary ward closures and the number of beds involved, in each hospital in each London constituency since 1 November 1991, the occasions on which any hospital was unable to accept admissions from major incidents and the relevant times and dates.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

Bone Marrow Transplants

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have died in each year since 1979 while waiting for bone marrow transplants to be carried out.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available.

Statistical Information

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to meet future needs for statistical information on population and housing of the type currently provided by periodic censuses.

Mr. Dorrell: I have decided, together with my colleagues responsible for the census offices in Scotland and Northern Ireland, that there should be a review of the future needs for census-type information on population and housing in the United Kingdom and the options for providing it.

Arrangements have therefore been made for the census offices of the United Kingdom—the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, the General Register Office (Scotland), and the Census Office (Northern Ireland)—to lead an evaluation and reappraisal of census policy in consultation with other Government Departments. This will cover what kind of information will be needed, how it is to be collected, how frequently it should be provided, and how it should be disseminated.

The census offices will shortly begin to consult organisations and individuals with interests in the future of census-type information in the United Kingdom. This will include the national health service, local government, the academic community, commercial bodies, and the European Community.

Copies of the paper on which the consultation will be based have been placed in the Library.

Census Records

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether final approval has been given for the production and supply of the Economic and Social Research Council of samples of anonymised records from the 1991 census.

Mr. Dorrell: In my reply to my hon. Friend, the Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mrs. Hicks) on 1 February 1991 at column 682, I said that a final decision about producing and supplying samples of anonymised records (SARs) would be taken after the report of the technical assessor, Professor David Holt, once the confidentiality aspects had been considered.

In his report, Professor Holt expressed his conclusions as follows.

> "As a reasonable statistical judgement, the risk of disclosure is negligible for the large majority of the population and thought to be extremely small for the remainder. International experience indicates that the levels of risk are consistent with a decision to go ahead with the release of SARs, and I so advise".

Having considered the report, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland, and I have given approval for the production by the registrars general of two samples of anonymised records.

A copy of Professor Holt's report and the specifications of the two samples of anonymised records have been placed in the Library.

Homelessness

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many units of permanent accommodation are to be provided in 1992-93 in central London for mentally ill homeless people moving out of specialist short-term hostels funded by his Department;

(2) what resources his Department are to provide in 1992-93 to meet the needs of mentally ill homeless people

currently living in specialist hostels in central London once they are ready to move into more permanent accommodation;

(3) what arrangements he has made to co-ordinate the provision of more permanent accommodation for mentally ill homeless people currently living in specialist short-term hostels in central London.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department revenue funds the specialist short-term hostels set up under the homeless mentally ill initiative at the rate of £14,630 per place per annum (1992-93 costs). Permanent accommodation for those moving on from the hostels is being provided via the Housing Corporation. In 1992-93 they expect to make available 150 new units and 150 units from Housing Association relets. The corporation monitor this provision regularly. The social care of people moving on from the short term hostels is the responsibility of local social services authorities. To ensure that the transition takes place smoothly the Department has included within the homeless mentally ill initiative £500,000 per annum for the three years 1992-93 to 1994-95 to provide resettlement support.

DEFENCE

Gurkhas

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the maximum levels of pensions payable in 1992-93 to Gurkha personnel specially or prematurely retired or discharged as part of the planned reduction in the Brigade of Gurkhas for (a) privates, (b) corporals, (c) sergeants, (d) warrant officers class I, (e) lieutenants, (f) captains and (g) majors with (i) six years' reckonable service, (ii) nine years' reckonable service and (iii) 12 years' reckonable service.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Gurkhas' redundancy scheme provides for credit of service to be given to Gurkhas specially or prematurely retired or discharged before completing the normal maximum length of service for their rank. The effect is that the pensions shown in the table, which are the rates payable at their normal maximum length of service, will be paid to personnel made redundant with reckonable service within the bands listed. In addition privates and corporals made redundant with between four and 10 years service will receive a pension at the special rate of £15·34 per month at 1991-92 levels. Rates for 1992-93 are not yet available.

Major—QGO	21—28 years	73·97

QGO—Queen's Gurkha Officer.
Monthly rates are in £ Sterling calculated at an exchange rate 34·50 Indian Rupees/£.

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify for 1992-93 the single and married levels of (i) the Hong Kong Gurkha addition and (ii) the special rate Gurkha addition payable as a component of the special capital payment to Gurkha personnel specially or prematurely retired or discharged as part of the planned reduction in the Brigade of Gurkhas.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The table shows the single and married accompanied levels of the Hong Kong Gurkha addition payable from 1 July 1991, and the rates of special Gurkha addition used in the calculation of special capital payments to Gurkhas made redundant. The rates of 1992-93 are not yet available.

Monthly rates are £ Sterling at an exchange rate of HK$ 12·60/£ as at 1 July 1991.

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide figures for 1992-93 of the maximum levels of special grant payment to Gurkha personnel specially or prematurely retired or discharged as part of the planned reduction in the Brigade of Gurkhas for (a) privates, (b) corporals, (c) sergeants, (d) warrant officers Class I, (e) lieutenants, (f) captains and (g) majors with (i) six years' reckonable service, (ii) nine years' reckonable service and (iii) 12 years' reckonable service.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The table shows the levels of special capital payment payable to Gurkhas made redundant, against the years of service for each rank for which redundancy is currently envisaged. This amount is shown in pounds sterling as calculated at August 1991. Rates for 1992-93 are not yet available.

Payments in respect of soldiers are calculated for class I personnel on the lowest band.

All figures take account of length of service increments, but not good service pay, which is calculated on an individual basis.

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy for the rules governing Gurkhas' pensions always to be interpreted to provide the maximum theoretical entitlement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is the Department's policy that pensions are paid to Gurkhas at the rates to which they are entitled under the provisions of the appropriate code.

Live Firing Ranges

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider removing some of the live firing ranges from national parks to areas of army training land which the National Audit Office has identified as under-utilised.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The live-firing facilities that the Ministry of Defence retains in certain national parks are mainly for field-firing of small arms, heavy calibre infantry or anti-tank weapons, or artillery. Alternative locations where this live-firing could be safely accommodated are already fully subscribed. Transfers are not a practical proposition at the present time.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Lords of Appeal in Ordinary

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary together with their date of appointment and the date by which they are required by law to retire.

The Attorney-General: The information requested is as follows:—

	Appointment Date	Retirement Date
Lord Keith of Kinkel	10 January 1977	7 February 1997
Lord Templeman MBE	30 September 1982	3 March 1995
Lord Griffiths MC	23 May 1985	26 September 1998
Lord Ackner	30 January 1986	18 September 1995
Lord Goff of Chieveley	6 February 1986	12 November 2001
Lord Jauncey of Tullichettle	9 February 1988	8 May 2000
Lord Lowry	5 August 1988	30 January 1994
Lord Browne-Wilkinson	1 October 1991	30 March 2005
Lord Mustill	10 January 1992	10 May 2006
Lord Slynn of Hadley	11 March 1992	17 February 2005

Polygamous Marriages

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Attorney-General what plans the Government have to implement the recommendations of the Law Commission and the Scottish Law Commission in their report on "Polygamous Marriages: Capacity to Contract" (Law Comm. No. 146, Scots Law No. 96).

The Attorney-General: Following the publication of this report in 1985 the Government consulted on its recommendations, the main purpose of which is to ensure that those domiciled in England and Wales or in Scotland should not lack the capacity to contract a marriage which is in fact monogamous merely because it is celebrated in polygamous form according to foreign law. Marriages that are actually polygamous would continue not to be recognised as valid in this country. In the light of the views expressed on consultation the Government have decided to accept these recommendations and will introduce legislation to implement them when a suitable opportunity occurs.

ENERGY

Sizewell B

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consultations he has had, and what undertakings he has given to the European Commission, in connection with state aid requirements, regarding the commercial rules for operating Sizewell B nuclear power station.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The notification of commercial arrangements relating to Nuclear Electric plc's operations up to 1998 made to the European Commission in March 1990 under state aid notification procedures included Sizewell B.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many visits were made by the hon. Member for Lewisham, East (Mr. Moynihan) in his capacity as Minister in 1990, 1991 and the current year, respectively; and what were the places and duration of each visit.

Mr. Wakeham: I shall ask my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, East (Mr. Moynihan) to write to the hon. Gentleman.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Brixton Prison

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve the treatment of medical and psychiatric prisoners at Brixton prison.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is the Government's policy that mentally disturbed offenders should receive care and treatment from the health and social services. They should be diverted from the criminal justice system at the earliest possible opportunity.

However following adverse criticism of the arrangements in Brixton prison, we felt it entirely appropriate to develop enhanced activities and general support for patients undergoing observation or treatment. We are now in the final stages of developing an acute psychiatric unit to provide a high standard of medical and nursing care for acutely disturbed inmates, for whom transfer to hospital is not possible.

The necessary building works are nearing completion and the unit is expected to be ready by the end of March for the receipt of patients in April.

"Custody, Care and Justice"

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons have been selected for the pilot schemes of staff compacts described in paragraph 4.12 of the White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice".

Mrs. Rumbold: The commitment given in the White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice" to providing a statement of the facilities for staff, and the standards expected of them, is being addressed alongside the work on a new staff handbook, and standards for the treatment and care of prisoners. Work is progressing on the most appropriate format for the delivery of these objectives, but is not yet sufficiently advanced to implement any pilot programmes.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the outcome of the review of the reception and induction arrangements for prisoners referred to in paragraph 7.17 of the White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice".

Mrs. Rumbold: Guidance based on the review is to be issued to prison governors within the next few months.

Bail

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons he expects to provide bail units, and how many to provide bail information schemes, before the end of the current financial year.

Mr. John Patten: All local prisons and remand centres have a bail unit or bail officer. Bail information schemes currently operate at 15 establishments. Two further establishments have schemes approved, but they will not be operational before the end of the financial year.

Male Prisoners

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many prisons male convicted prisoners are now allowed to wear their own clothes.

Mrs. Rumbold: The White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice" announced the Government's intention to extend the wearing of own clothess by male convicted prisoners. A pilot scheme began at HM prison Belmarsh in April 1991 and this is expected to be extended to two further establishments later this year. In addition, some establishments already allow male convicted prisoners to wear certain items of their own clothing.

Criminal Justice Consultative Council

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate the immediate programme of work agreed for the Criminal Justice Consultative Council following its initial meeting in January.

Mr. John Patten: The council's work programme will be considered by its members at its next meeting on 9 April, following a preliminary discussion at its first meeting.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Criminal Justice Consultative Council will hold its next meeting.

Mr. John Patten: The Criminal Justice Consultative Council will hold its second meeting on Thursday 9 April 1992.

London Bridge Bomb

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those injured as a result of the London bridge explosion were injured by flying glass.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: A figure for those injured specifically by flying glass as a result of the London Bridge explosion of 28 February is not available, but of the 30 people who went to hospital as a result of the explosion, 12 were suffering from cuts, bruises or other associated pains.

Retail Premises (Security)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Chartered Institute of Loss Adjusters concerning its recommendations on appropriate security shutters for retail premises.

Mr. John Patten: I have had no discussions with the Chartered Institute of Loss Adjusters and I understand that the institute has made no such recommendations.

Crime Statistics, Manchester

Mr. Dickens: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the latest crime figures in the Greater Manchester police area.

Mr. John Patten: The latest information is for 1991 and is published in table 3 of "Home Office Statistical Bulletin" 2/92, a copy of which is in the Library.

Name Badges (Prisons)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to introduce name badges for all staff on duty in prisons.

Mrs. Rumbold: Work is progressing on the commitment given in the White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice" to the wearing of name badges by all staff on duty in prisons. Procurement action will be initiated when the consultations with the trade unions about the detailed arrangements have been satisfactorily concluded.

Cardphones (Prisons)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether cardphones are now available in all prisons.

Mrs. Rumbold: Cardphones for prisoners' use are available at all category C and D prisons, including equivalent female and young offender establishments.

On publication of the Woolf report my right hon. Friend announced that cardphones would be installed in the rest of the prison estate. The installation programme is scheduled to be completed by the end of June 1992.

Prisoners (Television)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in which prisons he proposes to conduct experiments under which prisoners may have televisions in their cells or rooms.

Mrs. Rumbold: The White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice" announced that closely monitored trials would take place at a small number of establishments to test the use of televisions in cells.

A trial of battery-operated televisions began at HM prison The Mount in December 1991. Trials of mains-powered sets will be held at Manchester and Stockton prisons when the necessary cabling work has been completed in the summer. In-cell television will be tested in other establishments if the need arises.

Sexual Offences

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average sentence imposed in each of the last 10 years upon offenders convicted of (a) indecent assault on a female, (b) unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 16, (c) unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 13 and (d) incest;

(2) how many offenders convicted of (a) indecent assault on a female, (b) unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 16, (c) unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 13 and (d) incest were given sentences of (i) immediate imprisonment, (ii) suspended imprisonment, (iii) community service, (iv) probation, (v) a fine and (vi) discharge in each of the last ten years.

Mr. John Patten: The information for England and Wales for the years 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990, which is provisional, is given in the tables. To produce further information for the other years requested would involve disproportionate cost.

Drug Abuse

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of drug addicts in each regional health authority each year since 1979.

Mr. John Patten: The number of addicts notified by doctors to the Home Office are given for each regional health authority and the years 1987 to 1990 in table A7 of "Statistics of the Misuse of Drugs: Addicts Notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1990—Area Tables", a copy of which is in the Library. Figures for earlier years are not available by regional health authority.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug-related convictions there were in each police area in England and Wales since 1979.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is given in the table.

Overseas Electors Scheme

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total cost to date, broken down into all expenditure heads, of the implementation of the overseas electors scheme.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 9 March to a question by the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist).

Crime Statistics, Merseyside

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions for criminal offences on Merseyside were made in each of the years 1978 to 1991 inclusive; how many crimes were reported on Merseyside in each of those years; and what percentage of the crimes reported the convictions constituted in each of those years.

Mr. John Patten: Information on convictions and cautions within police force areas is published annually in the Command Paper "Criminal statistics, England and Wales". Tables 3*(a), 7(a)* and 35*(a)* of the 1978 edition, tables 3*(a), 7(a)* and 34*(a)* of the 1979 edition and tables S3.2(A), S3.4(A) and S3.7(A) of the supplementary tables volume 3 from 1980 to 1989 refer. The 1990 Command Paper has yet to be published but provisional figures show 49,000 convictions and 9,800 cautions for all offences in the Merseyside police force area. This information covers offenders and the convictions data records the principal offence only—that is, does not take into account additional findings of guilt or offences taken into consideration. Court proceedings data for 1991 are not yet available.

Information on offences recorded by the police is also published annually in the Command Paper. Table 32 of the 1978 and 1979 editions, table 2.5 of the 1983 edition and table 2.4 of the 1989 edition refer. Figures for 1990 and 1991 are published in table 2 of "Home Office Statistical Bulletin" 2/92. Copies of all the publications referred to above are available in the Library.

Because of the different collection basis, it is not possible to compare statistics on offences recorded by the police with those on court proceedings.

Travellers

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the reasons why the officer commanding Southwark division Metropolitan police did not alert Kent county constabulary, Gravesend, that six traveller families were moving into the county of Kent; for what reasons the usual protocol was ignored, and on whose authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Commissioner accepts that Kent constabulary should have been told about the movement of these families and regrets that this did not happen. Police officers on Southwark division have been reminded of the importance of inter-force co-operation in similar cases.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated level of payments under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 to the London borough of Tower Hamlets and previously to ILEA in the current year and in each year since 1966.

Mrs. Rumbold: The amount of section 11 grant provision payable direct to Tower Hamlets in respect of each financial year from 1967-68 to 1990-91 is as follows.

The figures for each year up to 1989-90 relate to grant in service areas other than education. It is not possible to isolate precise figures for the grant payable to ILEA during this period in respect of education provision within Tower Hamlets. The figure for 1990-91 includes education provision transferred from ILEA. The figure for 1991-92 is not yet available.

National Lottery

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that the headquarters of the proposed national lottery be established on Merseyside; if he will consult the Union of Shop, Distributive and Allied Workers and the Football Pool Promoters Association in connection with the expertise they have available and the preservation of jobs of pools workers on Merseyside; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government's White Paper published on 6 March invites views from all interested parties, including the pools companies, about the possible effect of a national lottery on their activities. Decisions about the headquarters of the national lottery cannot be taken at this stage, but the pools companies would, of course, be able to make a bid for a contract to operate the national lottery if they so wish. I should welcome comments on the proposals in the White Paper, which should be sent to my Department by 1 June.

United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in establishing a new body to supervise the work of the refugee unit of the United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: At the joint invitation of my right hon. Friend and the London representative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, a planning group has been established, which will be chaired by Mrs. Usha Prashar.

Mr. Geoffrey Bindman and Ms. Janet Lewis-Jones have also agreed to participate, and the group may co-opt other members.

The group has been asked to consult voluntary organisations and others concerned with the welfare of refugees, and to devise a constitution for a new organisation, whose objective will be to provide legal counselling for asylum seekers and representation in appeals against adverse decisions by the immigration authorities. These proposals will take account of the need for the trustees of the new body to be able to meet their responsibilities under charity law and to satisfy my right hon. Friend and the UNHCR that there will be proper accountability for grants received. When agreement has been reached on the constitution of the new body, it is envisaged that the group should play a leading part in its establishment. In the meantime, the director of the refugee unit will report to the group, which will assume responsibility for general oversight of the unit until the new body is established.

I am grateful to Mrs. Prashar and her colleagues for taking on this task.

Fire Service College

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards establishing the Fire Service college as an executive agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I am pleased to announce that the Fire Service college will be established as both a Home Office executive agency and a trading fund on 1 April. It will continue to be known as the Fire Service college under this new status. I shall be placing a copy of the college's framework document in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

The main aim of the Fire Service College will be to provide fire-related training and to promote fire safety awareness. It is recognised as being pre-eminent in its field and will therefore be starting from a sound basis in fulfilling this aim. I am confident that the enhanced freedoms and responsibilities which the framework document grants to the chief executive of the agency, together with the additional financial flexibilities of a trading fund, will enable the college to deliver further improvements in its services to customers by providing better value for money.

The key targets which I have set the agency for its first year of operation are:

i) to break even financially with a return on capital employed of 6 per cent.

ii) to achieve a cost per student week of £787;

iii) to achieve a throughput of 16,650, 3,202 and 2,182 student weeks, or equivalent consultancy income, in respect of the United Kingdom fire service, the commercial and industrial sector and the international sector respectively; iv). 85 per cent. of students to achieve a 70 per cent. pass rate in assessments;

The chief executive, Mr. Brian Fuller CBE, will be directly accountable to me for the performance of the Fire Service College. An advisory board comprising representatives of the Home Office, the Scottish Office and fire authorities, together with two independent members, will help me to assess the college's performance.

Magistrates Courts Rules

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the changes to the magistrates courts rules recommended by the working group on pre-trial issues are being implemented; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor has today made the Magistrates' Courts (Miscellaneous Amendments) Rules 1992 which give effect to the rule changes recommended by the working group. Of particular note are the new rules governing the service of summonses, which allow the courts to use more effective and economical procedures where appropriate.

We have also taken this opportunity to bring the magistrates courts rules into line with the provisions of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 in respect of the tools and implements of trade which bailiffs may seize where a court authorises distress.

Asylum Applications

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on decisions made since December 1991 on applications for asylum in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: On 1 December 1991 new arrangements were introduced to record, manually, decisions on asylum applications. Under these arrangements decisions are counted at the time they are made in the asylum and special cases divison. This provides a more up-to-date count of decisions than the information previously available, which is subject to delays in recording on the computer system.

Figures for December 1991 and January and February 1992, produced under these new arrangements are given in the tables.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Interest Rates

18. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the business community on the impact which the current level of interest rates are having on its performance.

Mr. Maples: I have received a number of such representations.

Public Debt

19. Mr. Hind: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is Britain's public debt as a proportion of national income; and what are the figures for other EC countries.

Mr. Mellor: The ratio of general Government gross debt to gross domestic product is lower in the United Kingdom than any other country in the European Community, except Luxembourg.

Inflation

20. Mr. Rost: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest assessment of the prospects for retail price inflation.

24. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast of United Kingdom inflation in 1992.

Mr. Maples: The Budget forecast is for RPI inflation to be down to 3¾ per cent. in the fourth quarter of 1992 and 3¼ per cent. by mid-1993.

23. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of (a) United Kingdom inflation and (b) European Community average inflation in the third quarter of 1992.

Mr. Maples: In the Financial Statement and Budget Report my right hon. Friend forecast United Kingdom inflation of 3¾ per cent. in the final quarter of 1992. We have made no forecast of EC inflation but in January 1992 it was 4·7 per cent.

Taxation

21. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about his proposals for income tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The reductions in income tax I announced in the Budget on Tuesday have been widely welcomed.

26. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the overall tax burden for a married couple, both working on 100 per cent. of male average earnings in 1978-79; and what it was in 1990-91.

Mr. Maude: Over this period, the couple's real take-home pay would have risen by 31 per cent. Their overall tax burden is estimated to have risen from 36½ to 38½ per cent.

28. Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the basic rate of income tax.

Mr. Maude: I have received a large number of representations on the basic rate of income tax reflecting a variety of views.

29. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many wage earners would benefit from a 1p cut in income tax.

Mr. Maude: Following the introduction of a 20p lower rate of tax which will now be the marginal rate of tax for almost 4 million individuals, a 1p cut in the basic rate of income tax would benefit about 21 million individuals in 1992-93.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the change in revenue to the Exchequer from taxation over the remainder of the current financial year as a result of the proposals announced in his Budget.

Mr. Maude: The Budget measures will have a negligible effect on receipts in 1991-92.

Savings

22. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further proposals he has regarding the taxation of savings.

Mr. Mellor: On Tuesday, we doubled the PEP limits for qualifying unit and investment trusts. We intend to continue reducing taxes on savings and giving incentives on a wider range of investments.

Football Stadiums

25. Mr. Pendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to fund the Football Stadia Advisory Design Council.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Earnings Statistics

27. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much the take-home pay of a married man with two children on average earnings increased (a) between 1974 and 1979 and (b) between 1979 and 1992.

Mr. Maude: A man on average male earnings with a wife and two children has enjoyed a 35 per cent. real increase in take home pay since 1978-79. The increase between 1973-74 and 1978-79 was a mere 1 per cent.

Business Investment

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of gross domestic product at current prices business investment in current prices represented in 1979 and in the fourth quarter of 1991.

Mr. Mellor: The figures requested are 14·3 per cent. and 12 per cent. In volume terms, the share of business investment in GDP rose from 12¾ per cent. in 1979 to 14¼ per cent. in 1991.

Leisure Courses

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance he issues on the definition of leisure courses on which VAT is chargeable.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Customs and Excise have issued guidance on the VAT liability of supplies of education, and courses in sporting or recreational activities, in VAT leaflet 701/30—education. Additional guidelines for local authorities and higher education institutions have also been made available.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much the gross domestic product has increased in real terms since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Gross domestic product at constant 1985 factor cost increased by 23 per cent. between 1979 and 1991.

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to introduce fiscal measures to prohibit the sale and export of ozone-depleting substances.

Mr. Maude: No. We have urged other countries to ratify the London amendment to the Montreal protocol. We are committed to phasing out the production and consumption of ozone depleting substances by the end of 1995 and are urging the Community to adopt this target.

VAT Control Staff

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many value added tax control staff will lose their jobs up to 1 January 1993.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Each year the reassessment of VAT visiting priorities results in the redeployment of staff engaged in VAT control work, but it is Customs' intention that no one will lose their job as a result.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases were brought by the Inland Revenue involving evasion of house purchase stamp duty in each year since 1983; and in how many cases convictions were secured.

Mr. Maude: No such cases have been brought by the Inland Revenue.

Widowers' Benefits

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many women have been disallowed tax relief in respect of the facility for women teachers to cover pre-6 April 1988 service for widowers' benefits.

Mr. Maude: The information requested is not available. Teachers, both men and women, may contribute up to 15 per cent. of their earnings to the teachers' superannuation scheme with the benefit of tax reliefs.

Value Added Tax

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the amount of uncollected VAT in each constituency in England and Wales.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Customs do not maintain statistics for individual constituencies or countries within the United Kingdom. Information on average daily arrears of value added tax on the basis of financial years, can be found in "Volume 12: Classes XVIII to XIX" of the 1990-91 appropriate accounts, pages vii and xiii respectively. A copy is available in the House of Commons Library.

EC Budget

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the value for money received from the European Community budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have written to Commissioner Schmidhuber to underline the importance which the United Kingdom attaches to the responsibilities of the Commission for the guidance principles of Community expenditure: economy and cost-effectiveness. These principles were endorsed at Maastricht.

The recent Court of Auditors' report on the 1990 Community budget—Official Journal C324, volume 34—shows that there is still a great deal of progress to be made in order to ensure that the taxpayer receives value for money even from current levels of spending. Sound financial management is of continuing importance; but assumes a particular relevance now in view of the Commission's recent proposals for Community expenditure over the five years after 1992. The need for progress bears directly upon the three major areas of Community spending in which the Commission's proposals envisage significant growth: the structural funds, external aid, and research and development. However, as the Court of Auditors emphasises, the principles of sound financial management are applicable generally to the Community's expenditure.

The Maastricht treaty has consequences for the quality of Community expenditure, by placing responsibility for sound financial management firmly upon the Commission. Finance Ministers will discuss the Court of Auditors' report next Monday; and we shall be looking for clear evidence that the Commission is acting upon the criticisms of the court.

I have placed copies of my letter to Commissioner Schmidhuber in the Library of the House, together with copies of the similar letters which I have written to colleagues on the Economic and Finance Council and to the chairman of the European Parliament's committee on budgetary control.

BCCI

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the fourth report from the Treasury and Civil Service Committee of the current Session on "Banking Supervision and BCCI" (HC 177).

Mr. Maples: The Government will consider the Committee's comments and recommendations carefully. The Government will, however, await Lord Justice Bingham's report on BCCI before reaching any conclusions on the Committee's recommendations.

In response to the Committee's report, the Bank of England issued a statement yesterday, a copy of which I am placing in the Library.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Lip Reading

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy to ensure that lip reading classes are available as a right to all who need them.

Mr. Eggar: It is not for the Government to prescribe which form of communication should be employed in schools where there are pupils with hearing impairments. Such decisions are best made locally by the governing bodies of individual schools.

Special Needs

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what importance he places on the personal and social development of children with special educational needs.

Mr. Eggar: Schools have an important part to play in the personal and social development of all their pupils. Section 1 of the Education Reform Act 1988 requires that the curriculum of every maintained school should > "promote the spiritual, moral, cultural, mental and physical development of its pupils and of society" and prepare pupils for the > "opportunities, responsibilities and experiences of adult life".

That applies equally to pupils with special educational needs, although there is provision for their curriculum to be considered on an individual basis where necessary. This might include more personal and social education where that is in their best interests and in keeping with the requirement that they receive a broad and balanced curriculum.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements are made for the procedures for, and personal teaching of, statemented pupils attending grant-maintained schools; on what basis their allocated personal teachers are supplied and paid; and what are the statutory responsibilities of local education authorities for such pupils.

Mr. Eggar: Local education authorities have a statutory duty to arrange the special educational provision specified in the statements they issue for all children in their area. Arrangements will vary to meet an individual pupil's statement. School governors, including GM school governors, have parallel statutory duties to provide for their registered pupils with statements.

Degrees (Validation)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the institutions previously accredited by the Council for National Academic Awards and the students registered with the CNAA for degrees will be transferred without interruption to other validating bodies by the date of closure of the CNAA without any increase in fees payable by institutions or students and under the same conditions.

Mr. Alan Howarth: As indicated in my answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 250, we remain confident that new validation arrangements for institutions without degree awarding powers will be in place for the academic year 1992-93, with no further fee charged to students for whom the full registration fee has already been paid to the CNAA in a previous year. The validation fee to be paid by new students will be determined, following consultations set out in the Department's letter of 15 January 1992 to higher education institutions.

London Regional Office

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the budget and forecast actual expenditure for 1991-92 and 1992-93 of his Department's London regional office.

Mr. Atkins: With the exception of HM inspectorate's local offices, the Department does not have a regional structure. The Department's headquarters functions are undertaken jointly in its London and Darlington offices. In 1991-92 the Department's administration budget excluding that for HMI local offices, is £102 million and the forecast outturn £100 million. The planned budget for 1992-93 is £104 million on the same basis.

Departmental Programmes

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science since 1979, what has been the annual expenditure on (a) the professional industrial commercial updating programme—PICKUP—and (b) REPLAN, expressed (i) in cash terms, (ii) in constant 1991 prices and (iii) as a figure which indicates the amount of EC funding included in each programme.

Mr. Eggar: The annual expenditure on the Department's PICKUP and REPLAN programmes in England since they began in 1982 and 1984 respectively is given in the table. Information on EC funding to individual further and higher education institutions which may have been used to support their PICKUP or REPLAN type activities is not held centrally by the Department.

	PICKUP programme		REPLAN programme

[1] Estimates.

Notes to table:

1. The PICKUP figures include the salary costs of PICKUP regional offices.

2. They exclude funding by the Universities Funding Council (and its predecessor, the UGC) and the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council (and its predecessor, the NAB) to meet the start-up costs of developing vocational continuing education: figures are not available on a basis that allows for a comparison over time or which is consistent with figures for the directly DES funded programme. It is estimated that the UFC will provide some £10 million to support the development of PICKUP provision in England in academic year 1991-92; and the PCFC will provide some £5 million in financial year 1991-92.

3. The figures include both the local education authority and the DES shares of expenditure on PICKUP and REPLAN supported by Education Support Grants, In-service Teacher Training Grants, LEA Training grants (LEATGS) and Grants for Education Support and Training (GEST).

Croydon College of Art and Technology

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether his prior approval was required of Croydon college of art and technology's establishment of a further education employers' forum; and what sums of money have been spent on this venture.

Mr. Eggar: Neither the establishment of an employer's forum nor expenditure in respect of it would require the approval of my right hon. and learned Friend. The costs are a matter for those involved.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will update the table given in his answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn of 9 May 1991, Official Report, columns 562-64, giving the latest available information in respect of each city technology college or proposed and planned city technology college.

Mr. Eggar: The table covers announced CTCs:

[2] The sponsors commitment is stated net of the proceeds of sale of the site of the former school: the Exchequer contribution will be reduced by the amount of the proceeds of sale.

[3] The confirmed contribution is net of the proceeds of sale of the former school site and of contributions to community provision and the chapel.

[4] This figure includes the donation of the present site, which has been valued at £3·445 million.

[5] In each case, LEA, local schools and other interests consulted on proposals to establish CTC.

Industrial Relations

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what restrictions exist on the use of Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council funds for the creation of companies to deal with further education industrial relations.

Mr. Eggar: The activities eligible for funding by the PCFC are set out in section 132 (5) of the Education Reform Act 1988.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Incomes

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of the level of income of those people employed in the agriculture sector in the United Kingdom and each other state of the European Community in each of the years since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Data on incomes for people employed in agriculture in each member state of the Community are not readily available. Some information on the hourly earnings of regular whole time agricultural workers is contained in the Eurostat publication "Earnings in Agriculture".

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of the level of income for those people employed in the agriculture sector in Scotland, England, Wales and Northern Ireland, and for the United Kingdom as a whole, for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The average weekly earnings for regular whole-time male agricultural workers aged 20 and over is given in the table.

Wild Birds

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the latest average mortality rate among wild birds which are imported into the United Kingdom; and whether he has set a target rate for mortalities for wild caught birds (a) in transit and (b) in quarantine.

Mr. Gummer: The latest statistics on mortality in imported captive birds, relating to imports in 1990, were published on 27 February and copies have been placed in the Library of the House. Average mortality, in transport and quarantine combined, was 12·3 per cent. compared with 12·7 per cent. in 1989 and 13·7 per cent. in 1988.

Our objective is to reduce mortalities to the lowest possible level. As explained in the reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) on 27 February, the Government are taking vigorous action to address this issue in international negotiations.

GNP Statistics

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will give details of the contribution agriculture has made to the gross national product of each of the member states of the European Community, expressed in cash and percentage terms, for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will give details of the contribution agriculture in Scotland, England, Wales and Northern Ireland made to the total United Kingdom gross national product, expressed in pounds sterling and in percentage terms, for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is contained in the tables, which show the contribution of agriculture to gross domestic product at factor cost. The national currency values which underlie the percentages shown in the first table are available in the Eurostat publications "Economic Accounts for Agriculture and Forestry", which are available in the Library of the House.

As the tables show, agricultural gross value added has declined as a proportion of total gross domestic product over the period in the great majority of members states.

DEFENCE

Bunkers, Iraq

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the number of bunkers in Iraq built to designs supplied by Her Majesty's Government's international military services organisation to the Iraqi Government; and how many of these bunkers have survived the allied bombing offensive.

Mr. Alan Clark: No operational bunkers were supplied or designed by IMS for Iraq. IMS supervised the construction of a reinforced testing and servicing facility between 1981 and 1987. We have no record of the precise location of this facility and so cannot say whether it survived the coalition bombing offensive.

Merchant Shipping

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) of 14 February, Official Report, column 677, when he expects to make a statement on the review of the strategic and defence role of British merchant shipping.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Shipping on 20 November 1991, Official Report, column 156.

Army Reservists

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 6 March, Official Report, column 336, when and for what reason the annual reporting exercise for Army reservists was suspended; when it will be resumed; what was the total expenditure on payment to Army reservists attending the annual reporting exercise in the last year for which figures are available; what assessment he has made of the effects of the suspension on the quick and effective mobilisation of reservists when required; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The annual reporting exercise for Army reservists was suspended in January. A new strategy for individual reservists is being developed as a result of the restructuring of the Army and in the light of the consultative open government document "The Future of Britain's Reserve Forces" which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence published on 5 March. As part of this work we are looking afresh at arrangements for annual reporting. Payment of grant to Army reservists reporting during 1990-91 amounted to £4,700,000. The short-term suspension of annual reporting is considered acceptable given the changes in the threat, concept and readiness requirements.

South Korea

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has been involved in discussions with British Aerospace and South Korea, to allow South Korea to build Hawk fighter/trainer aircraft, or any other aircraft, under licence in South Korea.

Mr. Alan Clark: No.

Metallurgy

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 290, when the expert concerned made notes of his telephone conversation; and whether copies of these notes were made.

Mr. Alan Clark: The notes were made in June 1988; so far as can be ascertained, no copies were taken at the time.

Air-to-Air Missiles

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 3 March, Official Report, column 161, when he estimates he will achieve a satsifactory agreement with British Aerospace regarding ASRAAM; how much money will be spent on the contract in each year for the next five years; and in which year he expects to take delivery of the first ASRAAM.

Mr. Alan Clark: Subject to the agreement of satisfactory terms, we expect to place the contract by the end of this month. The first ASRAAM is scheduled for delivery in 1998. It is not our practice to publish details of our future expenditure plans on a year-to-year basis.

Naval Vessels (Replacement)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 13 February, Official Report, column 1142, how much money will be spent in each of the next five years on the replacement programmes for HMS Fearless and Intrepid; and in which year these new vessels will come into service.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is not our practice to publish details of our future expenditure plans on a year-to-year basis. The planned in-service date for these vessels is 1999 for the first ship and 2001 for the second.

Procurement Programmes

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he is prepared to change his policy relating to the publication of details of the future levels of expenditure per year for individual procurement programmes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: No.

Redundancies

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army personnel who have applied for redundancy have indicated that it was their intention to find rented accommodation in (a) the private sector and (b) the public sector.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Of the 4,240 Army personnel who had indicated that they would be willing to be considered for selection for redundancy, and filled in a questionnaire on their future housing intentions, 289 indicated they might, amongst other possibilities such as purchase, look to housing associations and the private sector to rent; 770 indicated they would seek local authority housing. Work has now commenced to establish the housing intentions of those 3,338 Army personnel who were notified of their selection for redundancy on 26 February.

Anti-radar Missiles

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 19 February, Official Report, columns 331-32, in which year he will order a further batch of air-launched anti-radar missiles; how much money will be spent in each of the next five years on that order; and what information relating to this order he has supplied to the management of Marconi Defence Systems, Lucas Aerospace, Irving and Thorn EMI.

Mr. Alan Clark: Subject to the agreement of satisfactory terms, we expect to order the further batch of air-launched anti-radar missiles this year. It is not our practice to publish details of our future expenditure plans on a year-by-year basis, nor of our contacts with individual companies about prospective defence contracts.

Lynx Helicopter

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 19 February, Official Report, columns 331-32, when he will be placing a contract to convert the Royal Navy's Lynx mark three helicopter to mark eight standard; how much this will cost; how much money will be spent in each of the next three years on this conversion; and when it will be completed.

Mr. Alan Clark: Subject to the agreement of acceptable contractual terms, we expect to sign a contract with Westland for conversion of the first seven Lynx mark three airframes to mark eight standard by the end of this month. The work is planned to be completed within three and a half years. The overall cost will be in the order of £20 million. It is not our practice to publish details of our future expenditure plans on a year-by-year basis.

Sea King Helicopters

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 19 February Official Report, columns 331-32, when he intends to order a further six Sea King helicopters; and how much money will be spent in each of the next four years on this order.

Mr. Alan Clark: Subject to agreement of acceptable contractual terms, we expect to sign an initial contract with Westland in April and the main contract before the end of the year. It is not our practice to publish details of our future expenditure plans on a year-by-year basis.

Recruitment

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his letter of 3 March relating to his answer of 19 December, Official Report, column 285, if he will now change his policy relating to the release of information on the recruiting levels of individual units; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Amphibious Forces

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 13 February, Official Report, column 1142, when he expects to begin the overhaul and re-equipment programme for the three landing ships logistic to begin; and how much will be spent on it in each of the next three years.

Mr. Alan Clark: Design studies are already under way. We expect work to begin in the summer of 1993. It is not our practice to publish details of our future expenditure plans on a year-by-year basis.

Private Housing

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 293, when he began assembling information on the private housing arrangements of Army personnel who have applied for redundancy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: December 1991.

Housing Task Force

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 290, which representatives of local authority associations he hopes to meet.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Precise representation from the local authority associations is yet to be determined.

Satellites

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 19 February, Official Report, columns 331-32, how many new satellites will be ordered; in which years they will be ordered; and how much money will be spent on their procurement in each year up to 1997.

Mr. Alan Clark: We expect to place a firm-price, incentivised order for the production, launch and in-orbit testing of two Skynet 4 stage 2 satellites in autumn 1993. This order will be subject to the outcome of project definition, the contract for which was placed with British Aerospace plc. earlier this month. We expect the total cost of this programme to be in the order of £300 million at 1991 prices. It is not our practice to publish details of our future expenditure plans on a year-by-year basis.

PRIME MINISTER

Income Tax

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Prime Minister how many letters he has received in the past six months calling for cuts in the standard rate of income tax.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations on a range of taxation issues.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the number and purpose of each of his and his predecessor's visits to Liverpool in each of the years 1979 to 1991 inclusive.

The Prime Minister: I am making plans for a series of visits to all parts of the country and hope to include Liverpool among them. My right hon. Friend the Member for Finchley (Mrs. Thatcher) made four official visits to Liverpool.

Mirror Group Pension Funds

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 31, to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, if he has now made a decision on whether to meet a deputation from the committee representing the staffs of Mirror Group Newspapers about the recovery of pension assets from the banks which are holding them; and if he will make a statment.

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury will be writing to Mr. David Thompson, chairman of the committee representing the staff of Mirror Group Newspapers, very shortly.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for 12 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Northern Region

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Prime Minister whether he will list the Government's achievements in the northern region since 1987; and whether he will list by Government Department the principal aid given to the northern region since 1987.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 11 March 1992]: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) on 16 December at columns 22-25.

Defence Establishments (Information)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he has taken to ensure that Ministers in Departments other than the Ministry of Defence do not release information about the proposed closure of or job losses in defence establishments prior to the work force being informed of those plans by officials of the Ministry of Defence.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 11 March 1992]: It remains the policy of the Ministry of Defence that such information should be first provided to the work forces at defence establishments by management.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Pre-fitted Plugs

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will identify any obstacles to requiring pre-fitted plugs on electrical appliances to meet the requests of disabled people including those with wasting muscle and other difficulties in manipulating appliances.

Mr. Leigh: The proposed regulations will retain the approval of safety requirement of the Plugs and Sockets Etc. (Safety) Regulations 1987. It is likely that manufacturers will ordinarily choose to fit the standard design 13 amp plug because this is the type that is commonly used in the majority of households. However, provided that the plug to be fitted has the necessary approval the proposed regulations will not prevent manufacturers from fitting plugs to their appliances that are adapted for use by the disabled.

Moreover the type of plug and devices which assist the disabled will still be available for people who wish to continue to fit them to their appliances.

Expo '92

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements he is making for United Kingdom representation at the Seville Expo '92; what sponsorship arises directly, or indirectly, from public funds; and if he will list the bodies and approximate expenditure in respect of each.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 23 January, Official Report, column 293. The public expenditure was provided by £7 million from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, £7 million from the Employment Department and the balance from my Department.

Regional Assistance, Merseyside

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total amount of financial regional assistance granted to (a) manufacturing industry and (b) services on Merseyside in each of the years 1978 to 1991 inclusive.

Mr. Leigh: Financial regional assistance paid to companies on Merseyside is as follows:

£ million

	Manufacturing industry	Services
1978	24·8	0·5
1979	12·2	0·5
1980	6·1	0·5
1981	5·3	0·5
1982	5·2	0·5
1983	4·5	0·5
1984	6·2	0·5
1985	7·7	0·3
1986	11·1	1·8
1987	15·5	2·1
1988	30·0	2·7
1989	21·7	3·4
1990	18·9	1·9
1991	16·0	1·9

Manufacturing industry has been defined as division 2—excluding classes 21 and 23—3 and 4 of the standard industrial classification revised 1980.

Figures include expenditure on regional selective assistance; the revised regional development grants scheme which started in November 1984 and closed to new applications in March 1988 and the regional enterprise grants scheme which started in April 1988.

Grant was also paid to companies on Merseyside under the original regional development grants scheme which closed in November 1984. Information about that scheme was never recorded on a computerised data base and therefore unless the information has already been published it is available only at disproportionate cost. Published information on the scheme included a regional analysis which showed inter alia the amount of grant paid to companies in the north-west of England. For comparison purposes grant paid to those companies with projects in the north-west from 1977-78 was:

Year	£ million
1977-78	49·8
1978-79	64·3
1979-80	58·7
1980-81	105·7
1981-82	143·4
1982-83	97·3
1983-84	83·0
1984-85	79·9
1985-86	56·5
1986-87	82·9
1987-88	22·6
1988-89	4·9
1989-90	1·7
1990-91	1·2

Services are defined as divisions 6, 7, 8 and 9 of the standard industrial classification revised 1980.

Figures include expenditure on regional selective assistance; office and service industries scheme which closed to new applications in November 1984; the revised regional development grants scheme and regional enterprise grants.

Manufacturing Costs

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the percentage increase in manufacturing costs in each of the years 1978 to 1991 inclusive.

Mr. Leigh: Changes in wages and salaries per unit of output in manufacturing, and in the costs of materials and fuel purchased by manufacturing industry, are shown in the table.

Changes from previous year

	Manufacturing wages and salaries per unit of output Per cent.	Materials and fuel purchased by manufacturing industry Per cent.
1978	13·4	3·5
1979	15·3	13·1
1980	22·3	8·5
1981	9·2	9·2
1982	4·3	7·3
1983	0·4	6·9
1984	3·1	8·2
1985	5·8	1·1
1986	4·0	−7·6
1987	1·8	3·1
1988	2·5	3·3
1989	4·6	5·7
1990	8·8	−0·2
1991	8·2	−1·2

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department was represented at the conference on degreasing substances that deplete the ozone layer, held on 15 October 1991 in Birmingham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: No, but a representative of the Department of the Environment, with whom my Department works closely on ozone depleting substances, did attend.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the United Kingdom consumption and production figures for hydrochlorafluorocarbons for each year from 1986 to 1991.

Mr. Leigh: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the regulatory measures that exist to prohibit the advertising, sale and export of ozone depleting substances; and whether he has any plans to strengthen or introduce such measures.

Mr. Leigh: There are no regulatory measures to prohibit the advertising of ozone depleting substances. The production, consumption and export to non-parties of these substances is regulated by the Montreal protocol on substances that deplete the ozone layer and, in the European Community, by EC regulation 594/91.

The Montreal protocol is due to be reviewed in November 1992 and it is likely that dates for phase out of these substances will be brought forward.

Aircraft Building, South Korea

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has been involved in discussions with British Aerospace and South Korea, to allow South Korea to build Hawk fighter/trainer aircraft, or any other aircraft, under licence in South Korea.

Mr. Leigh: My Department has not been involved in discussions with British Aerospace and South Korea on the building of any aircraft under licence in South Korea.

Expenditure, London

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the budget and forecast actual expenditure for 1991-92 and 1992-93 of (a) his Department's London region office and (b) the London city action team.

Mr. Leigh: (a) For the south-east regional office of the Department of Trade and Industry, which is the London region office, the estimated expenditure for the running costs for 1991-92 is £3·1 million compared with a budget of £3·3 million. For 1992-93 the budgeted expenditure for running costs is £3·6 million.

(b) The running costs of the London city action team together with the special budget for projects are the responsibility of the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Rover Group

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action the Government will take in the light of the European Commission's announcement that it is initiating new proceedings against the United Kingdom to secure the repayment of £44·4 million of aid in connection with the sale of Rover Group to British Aerospace.

Mr. Lilley: The European Commission has formally notified the United Kingdom that it is initiating the procedure in article 93(2) of the treaty in respect of the repayment of £44·4 million of state aid provided as part of the sale of the Rover Group. This follows the recent judgement of the European Court of Justice annulling an earlier Commission decision of 17 July 1990 requiring the Government to recover this sum from British Aerospace and Rover. I can confirm that the Government will abide by and implement a new Commission decision resulting from the new procedure, in accordance with our Community obligations.

WALES

Heartbeat Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 34, if he will give the names of the evaluation advisory group from within the United Kingdom with reference to Heartbeat Wales; and if he will publish their terms of reference.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Due to the complexities of analysing a community-based heart disease prevention programme, Heartbeat Wales, when established in 1985 sought advice on the development of the evaluation strategy for the programme from a wide range of people including Professor Geoffrey Rose, Professor Andrew Henderson, Professor Michael Marmot, Dr. Tom Meade, Professor Michael Oliver, Dr. Edward Coles and Dr. George Davey-Smith. Since then, the evaluation strategy has been subject to scientific peer review by Professor David Murray and Professor Bosse Haglund. Advice has also been sought from the principal researchers of other community-based heart disease prevention programmes, such as Professors Henry Blackburn, John Farquhar and Craig Lefebvre.

Data from the programme are currently being independently analysed at the school of public health, university of Sydney and the school of psychology, university of Wales college, Cardiff. Papers from the programme are reviewed prior to publication by international experts such as Professor Leif Aaro and Cheryl Perry and Drs. Les Irwig and Bob Spassof, as well as by normal academic publishing procedures which includes peer review.

In 1987, the Heartbeat Wales programme was incorporated into the work of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales which also has a remit to develop initiatives in other areas such as cancer risk reduction and healthy sexuality. Within this broader remit, the authority identified a group of researchers known as the evaluation advisory group to support its research work. The remit of this group is > "to act as a resource for the Authority, providing scientific and technical advice concerning its research and evaluation strategies and individual studies".

Advice and support is sought from individual experts as appropriate to need. These experts include Professor Ray Hodgson, Dr. Beverley Littlepage, Mr. Robert Anderson, Dr. Gerald Hastings, Professor Geoffrey Rose, Professor Don Nutbeam, Dr. Ceri Phillips, Dr. Chris Skinner, Mr. Trefor Williams, Beaufort Research Ltd and Research and Marketing Ltd. Many other experts have been consulted informally, including the World Health Organisation which has recently designated the Health Promotion Authority for Wales, together with the university of Wales college of medicine institute for health promotion, as a joint collaborating centre, the only one of its kind in the United Kingdom and Europe.

United Nations Conference on Environment and Development

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what contribution is being made by his Department to the United Kingdom policy proposals to be put forward to the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development to be held in Rio de Janeiro in June.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is directly involved in the consideration of United Kingdom policy proposals to be put forward at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in June. Welsh Office officials are also being consulted on, and are making an appropriate contribution to, the Government's preparations for the conference.

Welsh Language Examinations

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show the number of students who passed Welsh language at (a) O-level or GCSE and (b) A-level in 1989, 1990 and 1991.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The numbers of students who achieved grade A to G at GCSE or grades A to E at A-level in the Welsh language in 1989, 1990 and 1991 are shown in the table[1]:

	1989	1990	1991
GCSE	8,673	8,337	8,740
A-level	541	638	733

Planning Inspectorate Agency

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in establishing a joint planning inspectorate agency for England and Wales under the "next steps" initiative.

Mr. David Hunt: I am pleased to say that the planning inspectorate will be launched as an executive agency in the Department of the Environment and the Welsh Office on 1 April 1992. The agency will have a distinct Welsh team to deal with planning inspectorate work in Wales.

A framework document setting out the organisational, financial and management structure of the agency will be published on 1 April. The Welsh Office will pay for the service provided by the agency in Wales.

Key objectives for the agency will be to preserve the impartiality and quality of the inspectors' work while seeking to improve efficiency. A range of performance targets which will measure the efficiency and value-for-money of the service in Wales will be set out in the business plan for 1992-93.

The agency's key performance targets in Wales will be:

Timeliness

Eighty per cent. of planning appeals by written representation to be decided within 19 weeks and to provide an inspector for local plan inquiries on request within six months of the end of the objection period;

Volume

To determine 1,340 planning and enforcement appeals subject to intake not declining;

In addition the activities of the inspectorate in Wales will contribute to the achievement of the following joint England and Wales targets:

Financial

Unit costs (average) of these appeals not to exceed £706 per case;

Efficiency

Generate a 2 per cent. efficiency improvement in the use of gross running costs compared with 1991-92;

Quality

High Court appeals and/or other justified complaints allowed against Inspectors' decisions not to exceed 1 per cent. of intake;

Information and guidance

To complete a customer survey by 31 December 1992.

Separate timeliness and volume targets for the agency's work in England are being announced today by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning.

Land Drainage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 534, what consultations he has had with the Cardiff Bay development corporation on feasibility studies into the remedial land drainage measures required in residential areas affected by the proposed Cardiff Bay barrage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I do not expect my personal involvement in the technical issue of remedial drainage measures to extend beyond my acceptance in principle of the concept. The development corporation is pursuing this matter with its consultants and will keep my officials informed of developments.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Cardiff Bay development corporation concerning the feasibility study being undertaken into de-watering wells as a remedial measure against groundwater rise in the areas affected by the proposed Cardiff Bay barrage; when he expects to receive a copy of the initial study report; when he expects the terms of reference for the full-scale study to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: My officials have discussed the terms of reference for the feasibility study with officers of the development corporation. I understand that initial computer modelling has been carried out, which will inform the further feasibility work now in hand. The report of the feasibility study is expected next month. Whether further work will be carried out depends on consideration of that report.

Hackney Carriage Licences

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on (a) the number of hackney carriage licences issued by each district council, (b) the ratio per head of population in each and (c) the charge made by each district for the licence and associated annual charges.

Sir Wyn Roberts: This information is not collected centrally.

Wentloog Wading Birds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Countryside Council for Wales, the Cardiff Bay development corporation and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds regarding the search for an alternative site to the proposed Wentloog wading birds feeding lagoon.

Mr. David Hunt: My officials have held meetings with officers of the Countryside Council for Wales, Cardiff Bay development corporation and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds to discuss mitigation measures for the birds which will be displaced from Cardiff bay by the construction of the barrage. These discussions are continuing.

Council Tax

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish his estimate of the total number of discounts for (a) single person households and (b) other eligible groups he expects to be available under his council tax proposals.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: It will be for billing authorities to decide which households qualify for discounts under the council tax. The Welsh intercensal survey estimated that in 1986 there were about 256,000 single-adult households in Wales. The other information requested by the hon. Gentleman could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the numbers of single people with incomes of over £40,000 per annum who will qualify for a 25 per cent. discount under his council tax proposals.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I have made no estimate of the number of single people with income over £40,000 per annum who will qualify for a 25 per cent. discount under the council tax.

Ambulance Authorities

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give for each year since 1987 and for each ambulance authority the number of complaints lodged.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: This information is not held centrally.

Waiting List Initiative

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent financial provision he has made for the expenditure of waiting list initiative money on long waiting-list elective surgery cases at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic hospital, Rhydlafar near Cardiff; what arrangements he has made with the South Glamorgan health authority; and what the comparable follow-on arrangements will be for the same category of cases after 1 April.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The total level of funding made available in 1991-92 for the treatment centre at the Prince of Wales hospital, Rhydlafar is £654,777. This will enable a total of 250 operations to be performed. Under the waiting times initiative a further 40 operations have been funded at a cost of £64,000. The treatment centres will continue to be centrally funded in 1992-93 and district health authorities will shortly be informed of the arrangements.

Signposts

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he intends to erect signposts, indicating the way to the Pembrokeshire national park, on the western end of the M4, in line with similar signposting for English National Parks.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Pembrokeshire Coast national park covers several geographical areas. This presents problems as to where drivers should be directed after leaving the M4.

Watershed Training Centre

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 536, what proposals he has for the allocation of expenditure on the Cardiff Bay development corporation watershed training centre in 1992-93; when he expects further details of his 1992-93 spending proposals to be agreed with the training and enterprise councils; and when he expects to lay such details before the House.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department has no plans for direct expenditure on the proposed Watershed project. Details of the training and enterprise councils 1992-93 spending proposals are in the final states of preparation and my officials anticipate allocating funds shortly. Details of provision for training programmes for 1992-93 have been presented to Parliament in the Welsh Office departmental report, Cm 1916.

Children's ENT Hospital, Cardiff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the South Glamorgan health authority regarding the alteration of the date of closure of the children's ear, nose and throat hospital, Cowbridge road west, Ely, Cardiff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: None.

Emergency Calls (Wales)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give, for 1987 and 1991, and for each ambulance service in Wales, the percentage of emergency calls responded to within (a) seven to eight minutes and (b) 14 to20 minutes.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The available information is shown in the table:

	1987-88[1] per cent. response time within		1990-91 per cent. response time within
	0-8 minutes	0-20 minutes	0-8 minutes	0-20 minutes

South Glamorgan	66	99	56	95
West Glamorgan	55	94	64	97
Wales	83	99	83	97

[1] Data not available prior to 1987-88.

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce the membership of the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The following have accepted invitations to become members of the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales.

Professor Sir John Cadogan CBE FRS
Mr. Alan Cox CBE
Professor Sir Sam Edwards FRS
Mr. Michael Griffith CBE
Professor Richard Griffiths
Sir Philip Jones CB
Dr. Alfred Morris
Dr. Brynley Roberts
Dr. Ann Robinson

I expect that the appointments will be for three years from the date on which the council is established.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Malawi

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what ways Her Majesty's Government's policy of linking aid and good government has been applied to Malawi.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Lady to the answers to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr.

Kirkwood), on 14 February 1992, at column 649; and on 2 March 1992, to my right hon. Friend the Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale (Mr. Jopling), at column 2.

As my right hon. and noble Friend, the Earl of Caithness said in another place on 20 November 1991, we have already cut our programme aid to Malawi from £10 million to £5 million because of lack of progress on human rights and good government. The Malawi Government are aware that we will place increasing emphasis on adherence to these principles in determining future aid levels.

Angola

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom aid and assistance for the Angolan peace process.

Mrs. Chalker: Following a troika visit by EC Development Ministers to Angola in February, the European Commission is preparing an assistance plan for consideration by Community representatives later this month. We shall be contributing our normal share of the cost of Community aid to be provided under the plan. Bilaterally, we have provided food and other assistance for soldiers awaiting demobilisation; we are assisting, through British non-governmental organisations, with resettlement and agricultural rehabilitation; and we expect to provide financial and technical assistance for the planned election process. Under military assistance arrangements, Britain is also helping with the formation of a new integrated army.

Food Aid

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been contributed by the United Kingdom towards the European Community's programme of food aid credit and food aid grants; how much the EC programme is in total; how much has so far been spent; and what representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the European Commission to prevent delays in allocating money to British companies willing to assist the former Soviet Union.

Mrs. Chalker: The Community programme for the former Soviet Union comprises:

(a) Technical assistance of 400 million ecu (£280 million) in 1991 which has been fully committed, and 450 million ecu (£315 million) in 1992 which is so far unallocated.

(b) Food grants of 450 million ecu (£315 million), which is mostly distributed.

(c) Loans and credits totalling 1·75 billion ecu (£1·225 billion), the first tranche of which is about to be distributed.

The United Kingdom's share of the aid and grants is some 18 per cent. The loans have made no charge on the EC budget. The United Kingdom has repeatedly pressed for both humanitarian food aid and technical assistance for the former Soviet Union to be released rapidly once a clear need has been established, and for companies in the United Kingdom to play a full role in these programmes.

Aid and Trade Provisions

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 27 November, Official Report, column 553, what further measures he proposes to take to promote the use of United Kingdom companies under the aid and trade provisions.

Mrs. Chalker: The aid and trade provision is currently the subject of an interdepartmental policy review.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Eritrea

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Eritrea and the extent to which it is practicable for child refugees from that territory to be reunited with their families in safety.

Mrs. Chalker: Eritrea has enjoyed a very large measure of peace and stability since the collapse of the Mengistu regime in May 1991. The economy continues to suffer from drought and the consequences of the civil war, but I am not aware of any general factors which now need prevent Eritrean children refugees wishing to return, from being reunited with their families in safety. Cases of Eritrean children who have sought asylum in the United Kingdom will continue to be assessed on their individual merits.

Angola

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Angola and the extent to which it is practicable for child refugees from that country to be reunited with their families in safety.

Mrs. Chalker: Peace offers the potential for recovery in Angola and should be cemented by free and fair elections in September this year. But though the fighting has stopped there remains a serious law and order problem, the criminal activity plus the danger from unexploded mines still hamper the return home of people displaced by the war. The return of such people, especially children separated from their families, plus troop demobilisation are the highest priorities for international aid. We very much admire the excellent work of non-governmental organisations, such as Save the Children Fund which has a successful and expanding programme of child tracing in Angola. The European Community has just committed a substantial sum for assistance in these areas.

Ethiopia

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Ethiopia and the extent to which it is practicable for child refugees from that country to be reunited with their families in safety.

Mrs. Chalker: Since the end of the civil war and the collapse of the Mengistu regime in May 1991, Ethiopia has enjoyed relative peace and stability. There is still some insecurity in the east of the country, but I am not aware of any special factors which need prevent Ethiopian child refugees wishing to return, from being reunited with their families in safety. Cases of the Ethiopian children who have sought asylum in the United Kingdom will continue to be assessed on their individual merits.

Uganda

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Uganda and the extent to which it is practicable for child refugees from that country to be reunited with their families in safety.

Mrs. Chalker: Since President Museveni came to power in 1986, the security and economic situation has improved considerably in Uganda. Peace and stability prevail in most regions of the country, although there are still isolated pockets of rebel activity in parts of the north and north-east.

Cases of Ugandan children who have sought asylum in the United Kingdom will continue to be assessed on their individual merits, but I am not aware of any general factors which need prevent Ugandan child refugees from returning to that country to be reunited with their families in safety.

European Union

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the articles in the draft treaty on European union which affect the prerogatives of the Crown of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The prerogatives of the Crown will remain unaffected by the treaty on European union.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the earliest and latest dates respectively when he expects the treaty on European union to be published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office; and what arrangements he has made for members of the public to obtain, or to peruse, copies before those dates.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The treaty on European union will be published as a Command Paper as soon as it is possible to do so, and in any case before any legislation is put before the House. We expect it to be ready by the end of April. Members of the public will be able to obtain copies through Her Majesty's Stationery Office. In the meantime, copies have been made available to Parliament and may be obtained by members of the public on request.

Guyana

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions are being taken to ensure that free and fair elections are held in Guyana; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Guyanese Government have introduced electoral reforms and invited a team of international observers. We take every opportunity to impress upon Guyanese Ministers the importance that Her Majesty's Government attach to the holding of free and fair elections in Guyana as soon as possible.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to ensure that the United Nations sponsored referendum on the future of the western Sahara takes place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We remain concerned that a UN supervised referendum should be held soon and are encouraging the secretary-general in his efforts towards that goal. We have also made our views clear to the parties to the dispute.

Albania

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the holdings in the United Kingdom of gold owned by the current or former Albanian Governments so far as the affect United Kingdom-Albanian relations.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There is gold bullion and coin in the account at the Bank of England of the tripartite commission for the restitution of monetary gold. Some of this gold has been earmarked for eventual delivery to Albania.

El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role is being played by representatives of Her Majesty's Government in the monitoring of the El Salvador ceasefire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Our ambassador in San Salvador is closely following developments in the peace process there, and is in regular contact with the chief of mission of ONUSAL, the body established by the United Nations to monitor all the elements of the peace agreement including the ceasefire.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current position in respect of the quota arrangements for the import of wine from the six republics which formerly constituted Yugoslavia; if he will seek a review of these arrangements within the European Community in order to ensure an even-handed approach as between these republics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: As part of the European Community's positive measures programme for those republics considered to be co-operating with the peace process, the European Community has restored to Slovenia, Croatia, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Macedonia and Montenegro the quota arrangements which previously applied to Yugoslavia as a whole. The republics share a quota of 545,000 hectolitres. The extension of these privileges to Serbia or a review of these arrangements depends on Serbia's attitude to the peace process.

HEALTH

General Practitioners (Budgets)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated over or undershoot in cash and percentage terms of general practitioner indicative prescription budgets nationally and in each FHSA area.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Copies of the Prescription Pricing Authority's breakdown of the total basic price of drugs and appliances prescribed by general practitioners in England and in each family health services authority showing monthly spend to January 1992; cumulative spend; projected annual outturn and percentage projected over/underspend, have been placed in the Library.

Eye Tests

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has been taking to monitor the pattern of referrals by general practitioners to consult ophthalmologists since the introduction of eye test charges.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Patients are referred for out-patient consultation, usually in a consultant clinic. The majority of referrals are made by GPs, although the referrals may be made by others, including self-referral by the patient. The information collected centrally on referrals is given in the table.

Consultant ophthalmology clinics
National health service hospitals
England

Year	Number of referrals seen	Did not attend	Total
1987-88	588,973	76,286	665,259
1988-89	574,532	82,822	657,354
1989-90	579,693	83,948	663,641
1990-91	599,520	82,626	682,146

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned into the long-term effects of charges for eye tests.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Questions on sight tests have appeared in the general household survey in 1987 and in each year since 1990. In addition, figures on referrals to the hospital eye service are collected on a regular basis. These show that referrals rose by 3·6 per cent. in 1988-89, fell slightly by 1 per cent. in 1989-90 and rose again by 3·3 per cent. in 1990-91.

Blood Cholesterol Testing

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to be in a position to respond to the report of the standing medical advisory committee on blood cholesterol testing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The report of the Standing Medical Advisory Committee on blood cholesterol testing raised many complex issues and we decided that it should go out for public consultation. A large number of comments were received. The subject of cholesterol levels is also part of the wider issue of limiting the levels of coronary heart disease. This was one of the areas of health highlighted in the "Health of the Nation" Green Paper issued last June, on which more than 2,000 responses were received and are now being studied. A high proportion of these included comments on coronary heart disease in general and the relevance of cholesterol. In the light of these two consultation exercises, and continuing medical debate relating to cholesterol, the Government will publish their conclusions as soon as possible.

Opticians (Referrals)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of patients who were referred to doctors by opticians for each year since 1981.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Barking, Havering and Brentwood Health Authority

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 November 1991, Official Report, column 591, whether he can now give the total expenditure by the Barking, Havering and Brentwood health authority in the year 1990-91; and what estimate he has made of total expenditure in the year 1991-92.

Mr. Dorrell: Total expenditure attributable to the area covered by Barking, Havering and Brentwood health authority amounted to £148·2 million, cash, in 1990-91. This figure represents a cash increase of 9·8 per cent. on 1989-90.

The information for 1990-91 is derived from annual accounts on the same basis. Expenditure information from the 1991-92 accounts should be available in the autumn.

Non-cosmetic Surgery

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will indicate, for non-cosmetic surgery undertaken at Sheffield hospitals from outside the Sheffield health authority boundary within the Trent region (a) how many operations have been performed, (b) how many operations are planned, (c) the average waiting time for such operations and (d) how much money has been spent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. J. Neill, chairman of Sheffield health authority, for details.

Skin Cancers and Cataracts

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the current cost of treating a patient with (a) non-melanoma skin cancer and (b) an eye cataract.

Mr. Dorrell: Based on hospital in-patient average lengths of stay, the estimated costs are:

	Cost per case (1990-91 prices) £
Non-melanoma skin cancer	1,200
Cataract	1,200

Health Staff, Wiltshire

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors, dentists and nurses there were in Wiltshire in 1979; and how many there were in 1991.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information required is not collected by county boundaries. The earliest and latest available information in respect of Wiltshire family health services authority is given in the tables.

Private Health Care

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to reply to the letter of 18 February from the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby on the subject of Norwich Union health care.

Mr. Dorrell: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 9 March.

Organ Transplants

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the number of people currently awaiting for organ transplants in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and in each of the health regions in England; and if he will state the number of successful transplants carried out in those regions during 1991.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on the place of residence of patients awaiting transplants is not collated centrally. The table gives, by United Kingdom territory and English region, the numbers of people registered for transplantation according to the location of the unit with which they are registered and the numbers of transplants performed according to the location of the unit.

Whittington Hospital, Islington

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has received for a trust hospital at the Whittington in Islington; when he expects to consider them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has approved the Whittington hospital's expression of interest in becoming an NHS trust, operational from 1 April 1993. A draft application is expected by the end of March and, in line with other applicants, the Whittington hospital will submit its final application by the end of April. All applications for NHS trust status are subject to a statutory public consultation period.

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the annual consumption of CFCs used for essential medical purposes; if he will detail these individually; and if he will make a statement about how many of these uses could be replaced by non-ozone destroying products.

Mr. Dorrell: The figures of anual CFC consumption for essential medical purposes are not held centrally, but are believed to be a small proportion of total CFC consumption.

The three main volatile anaesthetic agents for major surgery are CFCs, for which no acceptable alternatives are available. However alternatives are increasingly used for some day surgery procedures. The other essential medical use of CFCs is as propellants for certain pharmaceutical aerosols where measured dosage is an essential requirement. Pharmaceutical use of CFC propellants only accounts for ½ per cent. of all CFC aerosol use. The Department is supporting industry's efforts to find suitable alternatives which do not have adverse effects on drug stability, clinical efficacy, measured dose control and have acceptable overall development costs relative to use.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for the years 1987 to the latest available year and for each ambulance authority in England, the number of complaints lodged with each authority.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

Meningitis

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will tabulate the number of incidents and fatalities for each type of meningitis (a) per district health authority and (b) per regional health authority, for each of the last 10 years, or the most convenient period.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 9 March 1992]: The information is not available in the form requested. Cases of infectious diseases are notified by the doctor in attendance to the proper officer for each local authority area. Notifications of meningitis are therefore not generally available at the district health authority level. However, the number of cases notified for each type of meningitis at regional health authority level for the years 1981 to 1990, is shown in the tables. The data for 1991 are not yet available.

The information in respect of fatalities could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Irregular and unexplained upsurges of meningitis, particularly of meningococcal infection, occur in the United Kingdom. The location of outbreaks cannot be predicted, although it is known that most cases occur in the winter months.

A vaccine—"Hib"—against invasive haemophilus disease, one of the major causes of bacterial meningitis, is to be added to the United Kingdom infant immunisation schedule from next October. This should help to reduce considerably the overall total reports of deaths and illness from meningitis.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) registered private residential home beds and (b) part III home beds there were in (i) North Yorkshire and (ii) the York health authority area, and previously in York health district, in 1979 and each year since then.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 11 March 1992]: The information is not available in the form requested.

The available information on the number of residential care places in registered private and voluntary homes, and local authority staffed homes in the North Yorkshire local authority and the York health authority area are set out in the table.

Bone Marrow Transplants

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether those waiting for bone marrow transplants are included within waiting lists of patients for national health service treatment.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 11 March 1992]: Yes. If there is no suitable related donor available, an unrelated donor has to be found before a patient can be treated, and this can delay treatment.

Northern Regional Health Authority

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many operations were carried out by the Northern regional health authority in 1979, 1987 and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 5 March 1992]: Operating theatre cases and sessions data have been collected annually since 1987-88 although the figures are not necessarily equivalent to the number of surgical operations carried out. Theatres are sometimes used for medical procedures requiring a sterile environment; some minor operations are performed outside a theatre.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Job Losses (East Antrim)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action is being taken to reverse continuing job losses in East Antrim and to create alternative employment in manufacturing industry for those who have lost their jobs as a result of factory closures.

Mr. Needham: The east Antrim area benefits from the wide range of measures currently undertaken by the Government to promote economic and industrial development throughout Northern Ireland. Following the closures of GEC Alsthom in Larne, the Industrial Development Board is continuing to search for a viable project which could utilise the site of the former GEC operation.

Youth Training

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many young people have been engaged in employer-based YTP courses in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years.

Mr. Needham: The number of trainees fluctuates during the year but the average number was as follows:

Financial year	Average Occupancy
1987-88	1,495
1988-89	1,949
1989-90	2,864
1990-91	3,170
[1]1991-92	3,473

[1] April to January.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many young people have been engaged in YTP courses in community-based workshops in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years.

Mr. Needham: The number of trainees fluctuates during the year but the average number engaged in the YT programmes in community-based workshops was:

	Average occupancy
1987-88	3,291
1988-89	3,039
1989-90	3,229
1990-91	3,746
[1]1991-92	4,427

[1] April to January.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teachers have been employed by each of the education and library boards in YTP provision in each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The numbers are as follows:

Academic Year

Education and Library Board	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91

1991-92	2,099·0	2,099·0	32·6

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list, for each year since 1978-79 the total number of households claiming for social security benefit, excluding the national insurance retirement pension and child benefit.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the total administration costs as a percentage of benefit expenditure for social security for each year from 1978-79 to the latest year available.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows. Administration costs for the years 1978-79 and 1979-80 are not available. The figures for administration cost include the costs of services provided by other Departments.

Year	Total benefit expenditure £ million	Total administration costs £ million	Administration costs as percentage of total benefit expenditure

1990-91	1,704·9	106·5	6·3
1991-92	1,977·8	115·6	5·8

The figures for 1991-92 are estimates only.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of (a) claimants and (b) partners and dependent children on supplementary benefit or income support in each year from 1979 to the latest available date.

Mr. Hanley: The information is as follows:

	Number of Claimants	Number of Dependent Partners	Number of Dependant Children	Total Number of Dependants
1979	115,400	26,300	64,800	91,100

[1] The number of claimants based on 100 per cent. count of caseload at November 1985. Statistical information on dependants is not available for the 1985 year.

Source: annual statistical exercise—five per cent. sample of caseload.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his latest estimate of the average percentage rise in the number of claimants receiving the main social security benefits, or expected to claim, in the years 1978-79 to 1992-93.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Caseload	Percentage yearly rise
1978-79	982,000	—
1979-80	974,000	−0·8
1980-81	1,011,900	+3·9

1991-92	1,431,300	+5·4
1992-93	1,509,600	+5·5

The average percentage yearly rise is +1·5 per cent.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list, for each year since 1978-79 the total amount spent on social security, excluding expenditure on the unemployed, at current prices and in 1991-92 prices, showing the real terms percentage increase or decrease.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested, which is available only for the years 1983-84 onwards, is as follows:

Expenditure on Social Security excluding the unemployed

Year	Current prices £'000s	1991-92 prices £'000s	Percentage increase or decrease
1983-84	835·2	1,335·1

Mortgage Repossessions

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) families and (b) individuals accepted as homeless by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive became homeless as a result of mortgage repossessions; and what percentage of the total in each category and in total these figures represent.

Mr. Needham: I am advised by the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that in the period April to December 1991, 122 families, including couples with no children, were accepted as homeless or threatened with homelessness because of mortgage difficulties. This represents 6 per cent. of all families accepted and four per cent. of all applicants accepted. In the same period eight single applicants were accepted as homeless or threatened with homelessness because of mortgage difficulties. This represents 1 per cent. of all single applicants accepted and 0·2 per cent. of all applicants accepted.

Noise

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when circular 10/73 "Planning and Noise" will be adopted in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has drawn the advice contained in circular 10/73 to the attention of divisional planning officers in Northern Ireland and has issued guidance of its own to them on the question of noise as a planning consideration.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he proposes to implement in Northern Ireland, the Noise Insulation Regulations which apply in Great Britain.

Mr. Needham: It is planned to introduce noise insulation regulations relating to road schemes in Northern Ireland towards the end of this year.

Medical Cards

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of persons in Northern Ireland who still hold a medical card issued by the Northern Ireland general health services board and do not hold the more recent type of medical card issued.

Mr. Hanley: It is not possible to estimate accurately the number of people who still hold a medical card issued by the former Northern Ireland general health services board.

Airports Authority

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the present term of appointment of the chairman of the Northern Ireland airports authority ends; and when he will announce the name of the chairman for the next period of office.

Mr. Needham: The present term of appointment of the chairman of Northern Ireland Airports Limited expires on 30 June 1992. The name of a chairman for the next period of office will be announced at a suitable time before that date.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the status of the Maryfield secretariat of the Anglo-Irish intergovernmental conference during the present periods of inter-party talks in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: In my statement of 26 March 1991 I made it clear on behalf of the two Governments that, during the period when the Anglo-Irish conference would not be meeting, the secretariat at Maryfield would not be required to discharge its normal role of servicing such meetings, as provided for in article 3 of the agreement. Since the new talks are to be conducted on the basis of the terms of my 26 March 1991 statement, the same arrangement will apply again.

ENVIRONMENT

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number and location of sites of special scientific interest in the County of Durham.

Mr. Baldry: I am advised by English Nature that there are currently 76 sites of special scientific interest in Durham. I am writing to the hon. Member with the details.

Shops (Security)

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last consulted (a) the Civic Trust and (b) English Heritage on the best way to halt the spread of security shuttering in retail outlets.

Mr. Yeo: There have been no consultations with the Civic Trust or English Heritage on security measures to protect shops and no approaches from these bodies on this matter.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 10 March Official Report, column 443 to this question on the establishment of a working group on security in city shopping centres.

Public Buildings (Security)

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with architects and relevant experts on improving the design of public buildings following the recent terrorist attacks.

Mr. Yeo: Measures to improve the design of public buildings so as to reduce the risks of injury from terrorist attacks are kept under review by my Department in consultation with others. Architects and relevant experts are consulted as part of this ongoing review.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to encourage the fitting of laminated glass in public buildings to reduce injuries caused by flying glass in terrorist bombings.

Mr. Yeo: The use of laminated glass in public buildings is kept under review and general advice on this and other protective measures is issued from time to time. Individual advice is also available.

Terrorist Attacks

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken since January 1984 to eradicate the danger of flying glass injury as a result of terrorist attacks.

Mr. Yeo: Protection against the danger of flying glass injury is kept under review, together with assessments of the efficacy of the protective measures available. General guidance is issued from time to time. Individual advice is also provided.

City Challenge

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional cash resources he proposes to make available to those authorities successful in the second wave of city challenge applications; what percentage of those resources will be new cash; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: A total of £150 million per year, for up to five years from 1993-94, has been allocated to fund the 20 winning authorities' action plans in round two of city challenge. This is additional to the £82·5 million allocated to fund the 11 round one 'Pacemaker' city challenge action plans. Round one resources are being top-sliced from DOE funding regimes which currently spend in inner cities. It is expected that similar arrangements will apply for round two.

Debt Statistics

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give, for the City of Coventry, for each year since 1979, if available, or for the most convenient years (a) outstanding debt, (b) debt service charge, (c) debt repayment, (d) adult population, (e) debt per adult and (f) debt service charge per adult, in current and 1992 prices.

Mr. Key: The available information is given in the table. The figures for the outstanding loan debt are as at the end of each financial year, debt repayments are as made during the course of each financial year, population figures are mid-year estimates. Figures for earlier years are not available. Figures for outstanding debt at 31 March 1991 have been returned on an external debt basis, and are not comparable with previous years.

Coal Clough Farm

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to decide whether to call in the proposed wind farm development of Coal Clough farm, Cliviger; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend hopes to make a decision soon. When the decision is made, I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding the proposed wind farm at Coal Clough farm, Cliviger; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend has received five representations direct from amenity groups and individuals against the latest proposal. Also, Burnley borough council has sent him copies of representations that it received following the public notice.

Private Rented Sector

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of housing was accounted for by the private rented sector for (a) 1980, (b) 1985 and (c) 1990.

Mr. Yeo: Estimates of total stock by tenure are shown in table 9.3 of "Housing and Construction Statistics: Great Britain: 1980-1990". A copy is in the Library.

Humber Estuary

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will designate the Humber estuary as a special protection area.

Mr. Baldry: Consultations with Government Departments and land owners are continuing on those parts of the Humber estuary which have been proposed as a special protection area. A decision on designation will be made as soon as these are satisfactorily completed. The announcement yesterday of the designation of the Exe estuary, Lindisfarne and Old Hall marshes illustrates the Government's firm commitment to the designation of further special protection areas.

Wild Birds

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the nature of the last three communications received by him from the European Commission on the subject of special protection areas under the wild birds directive.

Mr. Baldry: The European Commission is in regular contact with officials over special protection areas under the EC birds directive. Such communications are confidential between Government and the Commission.

Travelling Showpeople

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what requirements his Department places on local authorities to assist travelling showpeople regarding winter quarters; how many local authorities provide sites; how many sites are known to be in dispute regarding planning permission; and what proposals he has to assist in the securing of suitable land for sites.

Mr. Yeo: My Department's circular 22/91—"Travelling Showpeople"—gives advice to local planning authorities about planning consideration relating to travelling showpeople. Information about sites is not held centrally.

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what advice he gives to consumers on purchasing ozone-friendly fridges;

(2) what advice he makes available to consumers who wish to avoid purchasing products that contain, or have been manufactured, by using ozone-depleting chemicals.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Swindon (Mr. Coombs) on 10 March 1992, Official Report, columns 450-51.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to use his powers under part I, section 3 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to prohibit the production and release of ozone-depleting chemicals.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend does not intend to do so—the production and consumption of ozone-depleting substances is controlled by EC regulation 594/91, which is directly applicable in United Kingdom law.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the amount in tonnes of chlorofluorocarbons recycled in the United Kingdom in each year from 1985 to 1991 inclusive.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not available.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish annually the United Kingdom consumption and production of ozone-depleting chemicals.

Mr. Trippier: Figures for United Kingdom production of ozone-depleting substances are supplied to the Government on a confidential basis. Consumption figures are collected on a European Community basis and not broken down between member states. However, a 1990 Department of Trade and Industry study indicated that United Kingdom consumption fell by 50 per cent. between 1986 and 1989, a rate faster than that claimed by any other developed country.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement outlining his policy on the production and emission of hydrochlorofluorocarbons.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have proposed a phase-out of hydrochlorofluorocarbons early next century, together with controls on the level of consumption and on applications in which these substances can be used. These proposals will be considered by the EC Environment Council on 23 March.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all essential uses of ozone-depleting chemicals that would be exempt from currently proposed EC legislation.

Mr. Trippier: Decisions on any essential use exemptions from the regulations controlling ozone-depleting substances will be made closer to the final phase-out dates. These will be taken at the European Community level, and no member state will be able to make unilateral decisions.

Council Tax

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the numbers of single people with incomes of over £50,000 per annum who will qualify for a 25 per cent. discount under his council tax proposals.

Mr. Portillo: I have no estimate of the numbers of single people with incomes of over £50,000 per annum who will qualify for a 25 per cent. discount when the council tax is introduced.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the size of the council tax bill on a property located in Westminster worth £1,000,000 in April 1991 with (a) two or more adults and (b) one adult.

Mr. Portillo: Illustrative council tax bills based on 1991-92 budgets were published and placed in the Library on 23 April 1991. I have made no subsequent estimates.

Air Pollution

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department will publish the results of the recent national nitrogen dioxide diffusion tube air pollution survey.

Mr. Trippier: I hope these will be available by the end of next month.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been his response to the complaint by Commissioner Ripa di Meana in the European Parliament of 27 November 1991 regarding the adequacy of the United Kingdom air pollution monitoring network.

Mr. Trippier: Signor Ripa di Meana's remarks related to the United Kingdom network for monitoring nitrogen dioxide for purposes of European Community directive 85/203/EEC. They were made in answer to a question in the European Parliament and were not addressed to the Government. The basis on which monitoring sites were selected for this purpose has been explained to the Commission in previous correspondence.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times, and where, the EC directive limits for nitrogen dioxide have been breached since 1980.

Mr. Trippier: The EC directive on nitrogen dioxide has been breached once at the west London monitoring site in 1989, in exceptional circumstances which were not truly representative of local air quality.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the planned enhanced urban network will meet the regulations of the EC directive 85/203/EEC for monitoring nitrogen dioxide.

Mr. Trippier: In the Government's view the existing arrangements for monitoring nitrogen dioxide already comply with the requirements of the directive. The enhancement of the urban monitoring network will however usefully supplement the data currently available on concentrations of nitrogen dioxide and a range of other air pollutants.

Environment Agency

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make available a list of the responses to the recent consultation paper on the Government's proposals for an environment agency.

Mr. Trippier: A list of the responses received has been placed in the Library of the House. Copies of individual responses may be obtained through the Library of the Department. In addition, responses were submitted by six individuals and bodies on a confidential basis.

Planning (Hazardous Substances) Act 1990

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to bring into force the Planning (Hazardous Substances) Act 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: A commencement order has now been made, and regulations laid before the House, which enable the provisions of the Planning (Hazardous Substances) Act 1990 to be brought into force on 1 June 1992.

The Act paved the way for important new planning controls over the storage and use of hazardous substances. It requires consent to be obtained from local authorities for the presence of these materials in prescribed quantities. This will give authorities the opportunity to consider whether the storage or use of a significant quantity of a hazardous material is acceptable in a particular location. The regulations define the substances and amounts to be controlled and contain detailed procedures for obtaining consent and for enforcement. These regulations will be followed by an explanatory circular for local authorities and a guidance booklet for industry.

Planning Inspectorate

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made in establishing the planning inspectorate executive agency under the "next steps" initiative.

Sir George Young: The planning inspectorate will be launched as an executive agency on 1 April 1992. A framework document setting out the organisational, financial and management structure of the agency will be published at that time.

The key objectives for the agency will be to preserve the impartiality and quality of the inspector's work while seeking to improve efficiency. A board of visitors will be established to ensure that quality standards are maintained. In addition I have set the following key targets for the agency's work in England for 1992-93:

Timeliness: Eighty per cent. of planning appeals by written representation to be decided within 22 weeks and to provide an inspector for local plan inquiries on request within 26 weeks of the end of the objection period;

Financial: Unit costs (average) of these appeals not to exceed £706 per case;

Efficiency: Generate a 2 per cent. efficiency improvement in the use of gross running costs compared with 1991-92;

Quality: High Court appeals and/or other justified complaints allowed against Inspectors' decisions not to exceed 1 per cent. of intake;

Volume: To determine 24,600 planning and enforcement appeals subject to intake not declining;

Information and Guidance: To complete a customer survey by 31 December 1992.

These and other performance targets for the agency will be included in its business plan for 1992-93 which will be published shortly.

Separate targets for the agency's work in Wales are being announced today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to take his capping decisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: On 26 November 1991 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, announced his proposed capping criteria for 1992-93. On 23 January 1992 he reaffirmed that he was minded to adopt those criteria, and they remain his firm intentions for criteria for 1992-93.

However, under the statute my right hon. Friend cannot take his decisions on the criteria to select authorities for capping, and the level of proposed caps for any authority designated, until he has considered authorities' budgets. Information on authorities' budgets must be submitted to the Secretary of State by 8 March in the case of precepting authorities and 18 March in the case of charging authorities.

My right hon. Friend intends to take his capping decisions as soon as is practicable and appropriate after the receipt of budget information. However, such decisions are of a kind which by convention Ministers do not take during an election campaign. My right hon. Friend therefore does not intend to consider these matters until the earliest practical opportunity after the election.

When he comes to take his decisions my right hon. Friend will have regard to all appropriate considerations including the budgets which authorities have set and his provisional criteria. In the light of information on the budgets he will decide on the principles for capping which he should adopt, on which his present intention is set out in the provisional criteria. On the basis of those principles he will designate authorities for capping. For each designated authority he will decide on a proposed cap. The proposed cap which he will set for any designated authority will represent my right hon. Friend's view of the appropriate and achievable level for that authority's budget in the light of all its circumstances.

At that point each authority may accept either its proposed cap, and proceed with re-billing if that is necessary, or challenge the proposed cap seeking that the Secretary of State should vary his proposal as to the amount of the cap. Authorities have 28 days from designation in which to challenge their cap.

Outdoor Advertisements

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to issue the planning policy guidance on outdoor advertisement control, of which a consultative draft was circulated in July 1991.

Mr. Yeo: We are today publishing planning policy guidance note 19 about outdoor advertisement control in England and Wales. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

Derelict Land Grant

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of derelict land grant made available by his Department in each of the last five years; and how many acres have been brought into use as a result for (a) housing, (b) industry, (c) recreation and (d) public buildings.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 11 March 1992]: The information requested is as follows. Statistics are not held on land brought back into use for public buildings.

1. Derelict Land Grant paid 1986-87 to 1990-91.

	£ million
1986-87	68·359
1987-88	75·295
1988-89	67·126
1989-90	90·804
1990-91	71·300

2. Land reclaimed for housing, industry and sport and recreation 1986-87 to 1990-91 (acres)

1989-90	104	842	1,252
1990-91	22	316	1,005

EMPLOYMENT

Disabled People (Employment Quotas)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table of the percentage of (a) private sector employers and (b) public sector employers satisfying their quota obligations under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944, in each of the last five years; and if he will also give the most recent available figures.

Mr. Jackson: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. However, tables showing the number and percentage of registered disabled people employed by a wide range of individual public sector employers are published in the Employment Gazette, copies of which are in the Library. The most recent complete published set of figures, is in the February 1991 gazette and relates to June 1990, A partial set of figures, relating to June 1991, is in the February 1992 gazette.

The percentage of registered disabled people employed, on average by employers whose individual figures are in the gazette, together with estimated comparisons for the private sector, for the years 1986 to 1990, are in the table. later comparable information is not yet available.

Percentage of registered disabled people employed

	1986 per cent.	1987 per cent.	1988 per cent.	1989 per cent.	1990 per cent.
Private sector (approximate figures)	1	1	1	0·9	0·9
Public sector (based on gazette figures)	0·8	0·8	0·8	0·8	0·8

Training Schemes

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of youth training leavers in the London borough of Newham were unemployed immediately after leaving in each of the last five years.

Mr. Jackson: Information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the unit price for youth training places in each training and enterprise council and local enterprise company.

Mr. Jackson: Unit prices per training week delivered and per national vocational qualification achieved in YT are agreed in contracts between the Departmental and individual TECs and are commercially confidential. Matters relating to LECs are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of employment training leavers in the London borough of Newham in each of the last five years were unemployed within three months of leaving; and what percentage obtained qualifications.

Mr. Jackson: Information is not available in the precise form requested.

Employment training started in September 1988 and national follow-up of leavers started in July 1989. Results are given for the East London TEC area which includes the London borough of Newham. Those show that for the period July 1989 to June 1990, 57 per cent. of leavers were unemployed three months after leaving and 14 per cent. of all leavers gained a qualification or a credit towards one. For the period April 1990 to March 1991, 67 per cent. were unemployed three months after leaving and 23 per cent. of all leavers gained a qualification or a credit towards one.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of youth training leavers obtained qualifications in the London borough of Newham in each of the last five years.

Mr. Jackson: Reliable information is not available in the form requested. The results available are for the East London area office which included the London borough of Newham. Information is available for the periods April 1986 to March 1990 and shows that the percentage of YT leavers gaining qualifications was as follows:

April 1989-March 1990	38 per cent.
April 1988-March 1989	39 per cent.
April 1987-March 1988	25 per cent.
April 1986-March 1987	11 per cent.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently in work; what were the figures 10 and 15 years ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The work force in employment in the United Kingdom stood at 24,835,000 in September 1976, at 24,198,000 in September 1981 and at 25,807,000 in September 1991. The number of people in work is now 442,000 higher than in June 1979.

Earnings

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how much average male earnings have increased in real terms since 1979.

Mr. Forth: Information on average male earnings in April of 1979 and of each year up to 1991 is published in table 1 of part A of the new earnings survey report for the year concerned.

Information on the retail prices index, all items, to convert 1979 figures to 1991 prices is published in table 6.4 of the latest Employment Gazette for April 1991, and in table 26 of the annual supplement to "Economic Trends" for April of earlier years.

Copies of the publications are available in the Library.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the new financial incentives for TECs in relation to people with learning difficulties; and whether the same unit price has been given by the Training, Enterprise and Education Directorate to TECs for the achievement of wordpower and numberpower as for any level of national vocational qualification.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 2 December 1991, Official Report, column 26.

TECs contract individually for an agreed rate of output-related payment. TECs will receive multiples of the agreed rate for trainees achieving national vocational qualifications. In the case of wordpower at foundation, half the agreed rate of output-related payment is payable. An identical unit price is payable for achievement of foundation level numberpower. Where it is agreed that a trainee requires both wordpower and numberpower then the TEC will receive two payments of half the agreed rate of output-related payment. In addition, TECs will receive further output-related payment for any trainees who progress to achieve national vocational qualifications.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from TECs about the training of people with learning difficulties, with particular reference to special needs training being provided outwith the remit of TECs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: I have received no such representations.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide details of Government financial support to each training and enterprise council during 1990-91 and 1991-92; identifying separately resources made available after the beginning of the financial year and funding for each of (a) adult training, (b) youth training, (c) enterprise, (d) local initiatives and (e) management; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: [holding answer 11 March 1992]: The total figure allocated by the Government to training and enterprise councils in 1990-91 was £1,571·91 million and in 1991-92 £1,838·66 million.

The breakdown of these figures requested in the question is available only at disproportionate cost.

Expenditure, London

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the budget and forecast actual expenditure for 1991-92 and 1992-93 of (a) his Department's London regional office and (b) the nine training and enterprise councils operating in London.

Mr. Jackson: The total budgetary allocation for the Department's Training Enterprise and Education Directorate's London region in 1991-92 was £167·263 million.

The budgets for the nine London TECs are shown in the table:

	£ million
AZTEC	10·742
CENTEC	11·951
CILNTEC	8·124
LETEC	27·618
NLTEC	9·690
NWLTEC	5·625
SOLOTEC	18·555
STTEC	20·510
WLTEC	8·945

Footnote:

The regional total figure includes expenditure by residual TEED area offices for those areas where TECs began operations during the financial year 1991-92, experience on technical vocational and education initiative, and regional office running costs.

Forecasts of outturn expenditure are produced for internal management purposes only. Budgets for 1992-93 are still subject to negotiation.

SCOTLAND

Fur Factory Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many arctic fox factory farms are currently operating in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No official statistics are kept.

Upper Solway

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will designate the upper Solway as a special protection area.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The designation of the upper Solway flats and marshes as a special protection area under EC directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds is under consideration.

House Repossessions

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the annual figures for house repossessions in Scotland since 1985 by region.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available in the form requested. The Council of Mortgage Lenders publishes statistics in its regular newsletters on various aspects of mortgage lending but this is on a GB basis and no corresponding information is available for Scotland only.

However, the Scottish Office Environment Department has recently received figures specially collated by the Committee of Scottish Clearing Bankers from the Scottish branches of the four main banks in Scotland—Bank of Scotland, The Royal Bank of Scotland, Clydesdale Bank and TSB Bank Scotland. The figures as at 31 December 1991 were 0·77 per cent. of mortgages over six months in arrears and 0·13 per cent. of houses repossessed in the six months to 31 December. This compares with UK figures produced by the Council of Mortgage Lenders, which excludes the four Scottish banks, of 2·8 per cent. and 0·40 per cent. respectively.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate how much of the money recently allocated for a decommissioning scheme for the fishing industry will be spent in Scotland in the financial year 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The arrangement announced by my right hon. Friend on 27 February will now be the subject of consultation with the industry.

Crofters

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Crofters Union; and if he will give details.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Although my right hon. Friend has not met representatives of the Scottish Crofters Union, my noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture and Fisheries in Scotland and his predecessor have had meetings with them on a number of occasions to discuss various topics of interest to crofters. The most recent meeting with the director of the Scottish Crofters Union and the hon. Member for the Western Isles Mr. Macdonald took place on 21 November 1991 when assistance for crofter housing was discussed.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of representations he has received from (a) the Scottish National Farmers Union and (b) others in relation to the MacSharry proposals for the reform of the common agricultural policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Various representations from the Scottish NFU and others have been received. We have stated clearly our opposition to the discriminatory features of the Commission's proposals, and our aim to achieve a reform which encourages a more market-oriented CAP; which applies fairly across all the agricultural sectors; which maintains financial discipline; and which builds in environmental objectives for the countryside. Discussions on CAP reform are continuing in the Agriculture Council.

SSSIs (Advisory Committee)

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now announce the membership of the Advisory Committee on Sites of Special Scientific Interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I have appointed Professor F. T. Last, FRSE as chairman of the committee along with the following members:

Dr. J. Morton Boyd, CBE, DSc, FRSE
Professor J. M. M. Cunningham, FRSE
Professor David Ingram

The establishment of this committee fulfils an important requirement of the Natural Heritage (Scotland) Act 1991. The committee will have a significant to play role in ensuring, by its advice to Scottish Natural Heritage, that the highest scientific standards are applied in the selection and consideration of sites of special scientific interest.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much he estimates will be raised from standard community charges on empty properties and second homes in Scotland in 1992-93.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 4 February 1992]: Such estimates are calculated from returns made by local authorities. These have not yet been received for 1992-93.

Foresterhill Hospital

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland under what authority the Foresterhill hospital NHS trust may issue press releases under the name of Mr. Reid, public relations officer of Grampian health board, purporting to be on behalf of the trust, prior to 1 April.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 6 February 1992]: Article 7 of the Foresterhill Hospitals National Health Service Trust (Establishment) Order 1991.

Data Information Systems

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what data information systems his Department has (a) agreed and (b) been consulted about with a view to taking part in; what are the criteria for inclusion in such systems; whether they will be linked to (i) the police national computer and (ii) other computer systems; what data protection provisions apply to them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 February 1992]: The Scottish Office has 95 data information systems holding personal data and all are registered under the Data Protection Act 1984. The Department complies with the data protection principles in relation to this information which is required to carry out effectively the business of the Department.

None of these data information systems is linked to the police national computer nor directly to any other computer systems, with the exception of a link to the Government payroll centre at Chessington for staff payroll purposes.

Building Security

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what total central and local government assistance has been given to Govan Initiative for its secure communities project; and if he will break that figure down to show the expenditure on business premises and housing respectively.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 10 March 1992]: Total support through the urban programme for the secure communities project has been set at £910,000, 75 per cent. of which is met by the Scottish Office and 25 per cent. by Strathclyde regional council and Glasgow district council.

No breakdown of this figure on the basis requested is available, but I understand that, to date, £172,000 and £117,000 have been spent on housing and business premises, respectively.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is able to offer Govan Initiative additional financial assistance towards creating secure entry systems in high-rise flats.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 10 March 1992]: Funding of secure entry systems in high flat housing is included in the secure communities project, which is funded under the urban programme. No application was received, in the current round of urban programme bids, for additional funding assistance, towards secure entry systems.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many residential properties owned by his Department are (a) empty, (b) for sale on the open market, (c) intended for sale on the open market and (d) for sale to housing associations in terms of numbers and percentage of stock.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 5 March 1992]: The information requested is as follows:

Number	per cent.
(a) 268	12·85
(b) 55	2·64
(c) 110	5·27
(d) 6	0·29

Local Enterprise Companies

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each local enterprise company and in total, the composition of boards, broken down by (a) gender, (b) ethnicity, (c) industrial sector and (d) non-private sector representation broken down by (i) local authority (except education), (ii) local authority education, (iii) other education, (iv) trades unions, (v) voluntary sector, (vi) health employer organisations, (vii) ethnic minority organisations and (viii) others; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 11 March 1992]: At least two thirds of the board members of local enterprise companies are required to be drawn from the private sector. Subject to that requirement, individual appointments are for the local enterprise companies themselves. Board membership is listed in the published summaries of the companies' business plans.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the budgets of each local enterprise company broken down by (a) adult training, (b) youth training, (c) economic development, (d) environment, (e) local initiatives and (f) management.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 11 March 1992]: The responsibility for making allocations to local enterprise companies lies with Scottish Enterprise. I understand that the amounts available to local enterprise companies for their adult and youth training blocks in 1992-93 were notified to them last month; and that they were informed of the allocations for 1992-93 for the remainder of their activities earlier this week.

The total budgets of local enterprise companies will also depend on the availability of funds from sources other than Scottish Enterprise, including the European Community.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Merchant Navy Funds

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration he has given to the accounts and assets of (a) the Merchant Navy ratings pension fund and (b) the Merchant Navy war memorial fund; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the accounts and assets of the organisations concerned rests with the respective trustees who have a fiduciary duty to act at all times in the interests of all the beneficiaries under the trusts.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer of 2 April 1990, Official Report, columns 490-91, regarding expenditure by his Department, to include 1991-92.

Miss Widdecombe: Department of Social Security spending, in cash and real terms and as a percentage of central Government spending, is given in the table.

Year	Expenditure (cash) £ million	Expenditure (1991-92 prices) £ million	Central Government spending (cash) £ million	Percentage of Central Government spending Per cent.
1979-80	19,416	45,143	77,600	25·0
1983-84	35,159	56,205	120,400	29·2
1987-88	48,771	64,613	142,610	34·2
1989-90	52,182	60,572	162,764	32·1
1991-92	65,116	65,116	205,000	31·8

Notes:

1. 1991-92 figures are estimated outturn.
2. Figures for 1979-80 and 1983-84 are based on the old planning total; those for 1987-88 onwards are based on the new planning total.
3. The percentage of central Government spending for 1991-92 is reduced largely as a result of the transfer of rent rebate expenditure in England and Wales to the Department of the Environment and Welsh Office programmes.

Benefit Rules

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many existing claimants of income support in (a) the Monmouth constituency, (b) Cwmbran Department of Social Security office, (c) Gwent and (d) Wales will be afforded transitional protection when the 16-hour rule is introduced;

(2) how many of the income support claimants who will get transitional protection are ineligible for family credit because they have no dependent children;

(3) what is his estimate of the reduction in registered unemployment in the Monmouth constituency which will result from the introduction of the 16-hour rule.

Mr. Jack: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that information showing the number of claimants entitled to protection in particular geographical areas is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Neither is it possible to say what impact the hours change may have on registered unemployment in any specific area.

We estimate that, nationally, around 45,000 families with children and 15,000 people without children are working between 16 and 24 hours a week and receiving income support. All of them will be entitled under special protection rules to continue receiving income support from April when the 16 hours rule is introduced. Of the families with children, about 30,000 are expected to be better off on family credit and so may choose to claim that benefit instead of income support.

Widows

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the assistance and benefit available to widows.

Mr. Jack: Widow's payment, widowed mother's allowance and widow's pension are available, according to circumstances, to widows aged under 60 years of age whose late husbands had met the appropriate national insurance contributions conditions. Widows aged 60 or over are in most circumstances entitled to a contributory retirement pension based upon the late husband's national insurance contribution record. Both widowed mother's allowance and basic retirement pension can attract a dependency increase for children.

My hon. Friend may like to know that the estimated expenditure on these benefits in 1991-92 is £983 million.

Under the war pensions scheme administered by the Department, war widows pensions are available, in the main, to widows of men whose deaths were due to or substantially hastened by service in the armed forces, whether in war or peacetime; additions are also payable for dependent children. These pensions are paid at preferential rates.

Further information can be found in DSS Leaflets NP45, MPL 152 and MPL 154; I will send copies to my hon. Friend.

In addition other social security benefits are available to widows who make a claim and satisfy the necessary conditions for the award of the benefit and these include child benefit and income-related benefits.

Council Tax

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will rework the table shown as figure 20—"Marginal net income deduction rates"—in his Department's published plan for 1992-93 in the light of the present proposals for council tax benefit tapers; and if he will publish the results in a similar fashion.

Miss Widdecombe: The numbers with marginal net income deduction rates calculated for benefit units in receipt of income-related benefits, where at least one partner works 24 hours a week and where council tax benefit replaces community charge benefit are as follows:

Percentage	1991-92 Thousands
90 and above	55
80 and above	220
70 and above	390
60 and above	395
50 and above	395

Note: Estimates are cumulative and rounded to the nearest 5,000.
Source: Projections based on the 1987 and 1988 Family Expenditure Surveys, and are not directly comparable to Figure 20 in the Departmental Report, which is based on Family Expenditure Surveys for 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Employment Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what conditions need to be fulfilled by participants in the employment training scheme to be able to claim in-work benefits including family credit; if he will explain what conditions the scheme has had to satisfy so that participants are able to make successful claims; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Participants in the employment training scheme can claim housing benefit if they are liable for rent and community charge benefit if they are liable for the full personal community charge in the same way as any other person. To claim family credit the claimant, or his partner, must be in remunerative work of at least 24 hours a week 16 hours a week from 7 April and responsible for at least one child. For family credit purposes the employment training scheme counts as remunerative work only if the participant has employee status. Under the terms of their contracts with the Employment Department, training and enterprise councils are responsible for ensuring that trainees are informed of their status while undergoing training.

Child Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of youngsters between 16 years and 18 years of age whose parents claim child benefit for them in each year since 1981.

Mr. Jack: The information is not available in the precise form requested. The following information has been compiled from table G1.06, formerly table 30.36, of "Social Security Statistics". The table gives the estimated numbers of 16 to 18-year-olds for whom child benefit was in payment at 31 December in each year. This includes those in full-time non-advanced education and those who have left such education but for whom child benefit is still payable.

Students Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to alter or remove the access to income support and housing benefit of students who take a year out from their studies.

Miss Widdecombe: Students who temporarily suspend their studies should normally look to the education system for support. Those in vulnerable groups may qualify for income support and housing benefit. We have no plans to change the present arrangements.

Social Fund

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether there is a full social fund section service in every benefit office in every benefit agency district.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and Public Information Office.

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of income support are aged (a) 18, (b) 19, (c) 20, (d) 21, (e) 22, (f) 23 and (g) 24 years.

OPCS Disability Survey

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total gross cost of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys survey on disability in Great Britain at cash prices and at 1991-92 prices, respectively.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The total gross cost was £2·47 million at cash prices and £3·62 million at 1991-92 prices.

Tax and Benefit

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures similar to those in his Department's tax/benefit model table, showing net weekly spending power for a lone mother with two children aged four and six years under the benefit system based on upratings already announced for April 1992, and in each of the following circumstances (a) not working, after one year on benefits, (b) earning £20 a week from part-time working and (c) working full-time and earning (i) £60, (ii) £70, (iii) £80, (iv) £90, (v) £100, (vi) £110 and (vii) £120 per week.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The information requested is set out in the table. This takes into account the upratings announced for April 1992 in respect of family credit, child benefit, housing benefit, community charge benefit and income support, but all other data and assumptions are as for the published October 1991 tax benefit model tables.

All tables of this kind are illustrative only and do not, except by chance, reflect the actual circumstances of the population at large. In particular, the hypothetical rents used do not reflect the wide range of housing costs individuals may pay. But the tables do indicate that, as a result of successive improvements in the tax and social security systems, it is now almost impossible for someone to be worse off as a result of an increase in gross pay.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the level of gross earnings in April 1992 taking into account upratings already announced for that time at which (a) a single householder, (b) a married couple and (c) a single parent with one child, aged three years, will lose in housing benefit, assuming full take-up of family credit, average rent and rates and other assumptions, as in his reply to the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay), Official Report, 1 December 1987, column 566.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 28 February 1992]: The information requested is set out in the table. This takes into account the upratings announced for April 1992 in respect of family credit, child benefit, housing benefit, community charge benefit and income support, but all other data and assumptions are as for the published October 1991 tax benefit model tables.

All tables of this kind are illustrative only and do not, except by chance, reflect the actual circumstances of the population at large. In particular, the hypothetical rents used do not reflect the wide range of housing costs individuals may pay. For these examples, the rents are as follows:

Single person: £22 a week.
Married Couple: £26 a week.
Lone Parent with one child aged three: £24.

Family type	Gross earnings at which housing benefit is lost (£ per week)	Gross earnings at which community charge is lost (£ per week)
Single Parent	92·00	80·00
Married Couple	123·00	150·00
Lone Parent with one child aged three	[1]85·00	62·00

[1] Assumes Child Benefit of £9·25. One Parent Benefit of £5·85 and Family Credit of some £41·00 a week are in payment, in addition to Gross Earnings above, which would provide a total gross income of £141·50.

[2] Assumes Child Benefit of £9·65, One Parent Benefit of £5·85 and Family Credit of some £51 a week are in payment, in addition to gross earnings above.

TRANSPORT

Road Improvement Programme

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost to his Department's road improvement programme of the increase in VAT from 15 per cent. to 17·5 per cent.

Mr. Chope: It is estimated that, in 1991-92 total expenditure on VAT of £212 million will be incurred on section A (national roads system: capital—new construction and renewal) of the national roads, England, vote. This is expected to be offset by recoveries of £79 million.

Shipping Industry

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of the amount of money allocated by his Department for the Government assistance for training scheme in the shipping industry in each financial year since 1988-89; and whether the allocated amount was duly spent in each of the above years.

Mr. McLoughlin: The money allocated by the Department for GAFT since the commencement of the scheme in 1988 is as follows:

Year	Allocation £ million	Spend £ million
1988-89	2·5	0·847
1989-90	3·5	1·756
1990-91	3·5	2·342
1991-92	2·754	[1]2·665

[1] To date.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of what proportion of the total allocation for the Government assistance for training scheme in the shipping industry has gone towards (a) officer cadet recruitment and (b) financial assistance for existing officers to upgrade their qualifications, in each financial year since 1988-89.

Mr. McLoughlin: The proportion of expenditure on officer cadet recruitment and higher grade certificates is as follows:

Year	Amount £	Per cent.
(a) Cadet recruitment
1988-89	612,000	24·5
1989-90	1,084,000	31·0
1990-91	1,572,000	44·9
1991-92 (to date)	2,064,000	74·9
(b) Higher grade certificates
1988-89	94,000	3·76
1989-90	490,000	14·0
1990-91	457,000	13·1
1991-92 (to date)	418,000	15·2

The remaining amounts being accounted for publicity for the scheme in 1988-91 and the co-ordinating agents fees.

Cycling

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the local authorities which included cycle schemes in their application for transport supplementary grant.

Mr. Chope: The following local highway authorities included cycling-schemes in their transport policy and programme statements for 1992-93:

Berkshire
East Sussex
Hampshire
Isle of Wight
Oxfordshire
Surrey
West Sussex
Avon
Devon
Gloucestershire
Wiltshire
Birmingham
Solihull

European Community

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what transport measures he intends to pursue with the European Commission and Parliament during the United Kingdom presidency of the European Community Council of Ministers and the United Kingdom chairmanship of the European Council of Transport Ministers.

Mr. McLoughlin: Our top priority during the United Kingdom presidency will be the transport measures necessary to complete the single market. We also expect to deal with transport infrastructure issues; transport external relations; and transport and the environment. Those are the issues which we intend to pursue with the European Commission and Parliament.

Passenger Deaths and Injuries

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will tabulate for 1990 the number of passengers (a) killed, (b) seriously injured or (c) less seriously injured on (1) British Rail and (2) buses and coaches.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information requested is given in the table. Information on railway passenger accidents is contained in the annual report on railway safety, copies of which are in the House Library. There are no separate figures for British Rail as the statistics for injuries relate to all railways.

Number of passengers involved in injury accidents on the railways and buses and coaches: Great Britain 1990

	Killed (fatal)	Seriously injured (major injury)	Slight (minor injury)	Total
Railways
Train accidents	0	13	144	157
Movement accidents	37	107	2,551	2,695
Sub-total	37	120	2,695	2,852
Non-movement accidents	2	104	3,543	3,649
Total	39	224	6,238	6,501
Buses and coaches	16	721	8,555	9,292

Notes:

Train accidents are accidents to trains and rolling stock.

Movement accidents are accidents to people caused by the movement of rail vehicles, other than train accidents. The largest types of incident are falls from trains and from platforms. (The sum of train and movement accidents would be the equivalent of the accidents to passengers in buses and coaches).

Non-movement accidents are accidents to people on railway premises not connected with the movement of rail vehicles (eg slipping on staircases etc.).

For definitions of railway casualties see the Railways (Notice of Accidents) Order 1986; and for definitions of casualties on buses and coaches see Road Accidents Great Britain 1990.

Buses and Coaches

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total number of buses and coaches involved in road accidents in 1990.

Mr. McLoughlin: The total number of buses and coaches involved in injury road accidents in 1990 was 12,200.

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of buses and coaches failed their MOT test at the first attempt in the year 1990-91.

Mr. McLoughlin: Thirty-five per cent. of public service vehicles, which account for the great majority of buses and coaches, failed the public service vehicle roadworthiness test in 1990-91.

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total fuel duty rebate available to buses and coaches for the fiscal year 1991-92; by how much this has changed in percentage terms since 1986-87; and how this subsidy is communicated in his Department's statistics.

Mr. McLoughlin: The forecast outturn for fuel duty rebate on local bus services in 1991-92 is £200 million, 55 per cent. higher than the outturn in 1986-87, reflecting increases in both mileage operated and the rate of duty. Figures for the rebate are given in "The Government's Expenditure Plans for Transport 1992-93 to 1994-95" (Cm. 1907) and in the statistical pubications "Transport Statistics Great Britain 1991" and "Bus and Coach Statistics Great Britain 1990-91".

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress in the allocation of resources for measures to promote bus use in the London borough of Tower Hamlets.

Mr. Freeman: I am pleased to announce the allocation of £200,000 of supplementary credit approvals in 1992-93 for bus priority measures in the London borough of Tower Hamlets. Further allocations will be considered in 1993-94.

Marchioness Inquiry

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state the name and qualifications of any assessor appointed to assist Mr. Hayes in his inquiry into the Marchioness disaster; if he will indicate the manner in which that inquiry will receive representations and conduct its business; and if it will be in public.

Mr. McLoughlin: Mr. Hayes has two advisors assisting him with his inquiry. His safety advisor is Mr. Mike Henderson, who is the site manager of the north Tees works of ICI Petrochemicals. He is a chartered engineer, a fellow of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, and a member of the Institute of Petroleum. Captain Nic Rutherford is the inquiry's marine advisor, and is retired, after a seagoing career with BP. He is a past master of the Honourable Company of Master Mariners, and is a former general secretary of the International Federation of Ship Masters Associations. He has been assessor for the Court of Appeal and the Admiralty court.

The inquiry is not being held in public. Mr. Hayes has sought written submissions from interested parties and individuals and has invited interested parties and individuals to offer oral evidence to the inquiry. The precise conduct and form of the inquiry are a matter for Mr. Hayes.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will add to the list of incidents to be considered by the Hayes inquiry into the Marchioness disaster the collision of the dredger Bowtrader with the northern terminal of the Woolwich free ferry on 30 January 1988.

Mr. McLoughlin: I shall be pleased to draw this incident to the attention of Mr. Hayes.

Vehicle Ownership

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the figures for vehicle ownership in Greater London for each year since 1980; and what his projections are for the future.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is as follows:

Currently Licensed Vehicles with Registered Keeper in Greater London

Year	Number Thousands
1980	2,387
1981	2,410
1982	2,449
1983	2,493
1984	2,547
1985	2,583
1986	2,628
1987	2,653
1988	2,737
1989	2,796
1990	2,831

My Department does not forecast the total number of vehicles in Greater London. However, provisional estimates for 1990, the latest year for which figures are available, show that the proportion of households in Greater London with one car was 42 per cent. and with two cars or more, 19 per cent. It is forecast that by the year 2001, car ownership in Greater London will increase to between 64 and 68 per cent. of households.

London Regional Office

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the budget and forecast actual expenditure for 1991-92 and 1992-93 of his Department's London regional office.

Mr. Chope: Expenditure under the roads vote for 1991-92 is forecast at £202·5 million against an April 1991 budget of £208·6 million. The budget for 1992-93 is £241 million.

Passenger Journeys

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will tabulate in percentage terms for each of the last five years the number of passenger journeys outside London undertaken (a) by bus and coach and (b) by British Rail.

Mr. McLoughlin: Passenger journeys by British Rail are not available by area.

Figures for local bus services outside London are available in "Bus and Coach Statistics Great Britain 1990-91", as follows:

Local bus passenger journeys (million)
Great Britain outside London

Year
1986-87	4,179
1987-88	4,081
1988-89	4,001
1989-90	3,881
1990-91	3,654

Radioactive Materials

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what proportion of irradiated fuel flasks imported into the United Kingdom in (a) 1990 and (b) 1991, were monitored on arrival by (i) the radioactive materials transport division of his Department, (ii) the National Radiological Protection Board and (iii) employees of Pacific Nuclear Transport Ltd and Nuclear Transport Ltd;

(2) how many consignments of irradiated fuel flasks were imported into the United Kingdom in (a) 1990 and (b) 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: One hundred and eight irradiated fuel flasks containing power reactor fuel were imported into the United Kingdom during 1990 and 92 during 1991. Three flasks of irradiated research reactor fuel were also imported during 1991. All flasks imported into the United Kingdom by Pacific Nuclear Transport Ltd. (PNTL) at Barrow are monitored by staff of PNTL or British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. before trans-shipment to rail. Flasks imported by Nuclear Transport Ltd. from Europe remain on their railwagon under a canopy and are not routinely monitored en-route. All flasks are thoroughly monitored before dispatch and on arrival at the reprocessing site. During 1990 and 1991 respectively, four and two flasks were monitored on arrival by the National Radiological Protection Board on behalf of the radioactive materials transport division.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the report prepared by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority with regard to a contaminated flask containing irradiated research reactor fuel from India which arrived in the United Kingdom on 30 January 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Health and Safety Executive fully reported on this incident in its statement of incidents at nuclear installations for the first quarter of 1991, announced in a news release of 2 July 1991. Release of United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority documents should be for the authority.

Red Route (Islington)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the operation of the red route through the London borough of Islington.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 28 November 1991, Official Report, column 575. There has been very little correspondence since then.

Rail Investment

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out (a) the level of investment by Network SouthEast in each year since 1962 at current prices and (b) the total operating grant paid to (i) British Rail and (ii) Network SouthEast in each year since 1962 at current prices.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 11 March 1992, c. 535]: The information is as in the tables.

ENVIRONMENT

Zoos

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many zoos are licensed in England and Wales under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981; if he will publish a list of these zoos; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Zoo licences are issued by local authorities. The information they have supplied to my Department indicates that 284 zoos are currently licensed in England under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981. The corresponding information for zoos in Wales is held by the Welsh Office. I have placed a list of zoos licensed in England under the 1981 Act in the Library of the House.

Homelessness

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make further statements on the measures which he has taken to reduce homelessness.

Mr. Yeo: We have spent £311 million on a two-year programme to help homeless families in the pressure areas of London and the south-east. We also plan to spend £96 million over three years to create 900 new hostel spaces and 2,500 places in permanent accommodation for single homeless people in London and £20 million on grants to organisations helping homeless people all over the country. In addition, development of low-cost housing is rising substantially as a result of increases in public expenditure through the Housing Corporation to more than £2 billion a year by 1993-94 and housing associations' ability to attract private finance. The deregulation of the private rented sector has also led to a welcome increase in private investment in rented housing.

Countryside Protection

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what effect planning policy guidance note 7 has on the Government's policy of protecting the countryside for its own sake as set out in circular 16/87.

Sir George Young: Planning policy guidance note 7 reaffirms the Government's policy that the countryside should be protected for its own sake. It states that the planning system helps to integrate development necessary to sustain the rural economy with protection of the countryside for the sake of its beauty, the diversity of its landscape, the wealth of its natural resources and its ecological, agricultural and recreational value. Planning policy guidance note 7 cancels DOE circular 16/87.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recommendations he has received from the chairman of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee on the European Commission's proposals for measures accompanying the reform of the common agricultural policy, particularly the agri-environment action programme, COM 91 415.

Mr. Baldry: None.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recommendations he has received from the chairman of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee on the European Commission's proposals for reforming the common agricultural policy, COM 91 258.

Mr. Baldry: None.

UN Conference on Environment and Development

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on (a) the seminar hosted by Her Majesty's Government on 5 February on the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development and (b) the reception given to his presentation to the final preparation committee meeting for UNCED in New York on 2 March.

Mr. Baldry: On 5 March my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister met representatives of leading environment, development and business organisations who made presentations on their objectives for UNCED. This was followed by a general discussion. The speech which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment gave to the meeting of the UNCED preparatory committee on 2 March was very well received.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the latest figures available, stating whether they are final outturns, provisional outturns or budget figures, for 1988-89 to 1991-92 on the statistical basis of table 1—summary of gross expenditure and income, excluding double counting of flows—table 2—capital and revenue expenditure by service—table 3—local authority income by source—and table 4—general fund revenue account by service—of "Local Government Financial Statistics, England".

Mr. Portillo: The information for 1988-89 is published in "Local Government Financial Statistics England No. 2 1990" which is in the Library of the House. The information for later years cannot be provided in this form as detailed gross expenditure and income figures on all accounts are not yet available.

Toxic Products

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain for his departmental library copies of the documents (a) "Environmentally Sound Management of Toxic Chemicals and Prevention of Illegal International Traffic in Toxic and Dangerous Products and Wastes", (b) "Environmentally Sound Management of Hazardous Wastes" and (c) "Safe and Environmentally Sound Management of Radioactive Waste" which were submitted for consideration to the final preparatory committee meeting for UNCED in March.

Mr. Baldry: My Department already has copies of the documents.

Bushy Park

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which contractors have been appointed to work in Bushy park to maintain trees, shrubs, grass and clearance of waste; what conditions are in the contract in relation to trees and shrubs; how long is the contract; what sanctions exist to uphold quality of work; and if he will set out, in relation to the 18 former park employees, other than the gamekeeper, how many applied for interview with the contractor and how many are employed.

Mr. Yeo: Glendale Industries Ltd. has been appointed to carry out the garden and landscape maintenance work in Bushy park for a period of four years. Thirteen former parks staff applied and were interviewed for jobs with Glendale, of whom nine were successful.

The contract specification sets down in detail all the planting and maintenance duties required of the contractor for Bushy park, including maintenance of trees and shrubs. The work will be instructed and closely monitored by the Department's site supervisors, and will be approved for payment only if it has been completed to the high standards that we have specified.

Nitrous Oxide

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give an estimate of annual United Kingdom emissions of nitrous oxide broken down by source; and of the relative global warming effect of nitrous oxide in comparison with other United Kingdom emissions of gases with global warming potential.

Mr. Trippier: Provisional estimates made by Warren Spring Laboratory for my Department are as follows:

United Kingdom emissions of nitrous oxide—provisional estimates for 1990
(thousands of tonnes per year)

Source	Emission	Per cent.
Production of adipic acid for nylon manufacture	90	57
Emissions from soil	65	41
Road transport	3	2
Other fuel combustion	2	1
Total	160	100

These estimates are very uncertain, but they suggest a direct global warming effect equivalent to about 7 per cent. of that from current United Kingdom emissions of carbon dioxide.

Water Companies

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals to amend the Water Act 1989 to enable the Director General of Water Services to ensure that the water companies follow a least-cost policy in respect of their environmental obligations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Under the Water Industry Act 1991, a consolidating measure, the Director General of Water Services already has a duty to promote economy and efficiency on the part of a water, or water and sewerage, company in carrying out its functions.

Planning Applications

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to issue tax amending orders for the advertising of planning applications before 20 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The need for local planning authorities to publicise planning applications under the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 will not require the issue of tax amending orders.

Planning and Compensation Act 1991

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps have been taken to implement the provisions of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 in England and Wales; which provisions are not yet in force; and when it is proposed to implement them.

Sir George Young: In the eight months since it received Royal Assent on 25 July 1991, almost all the major provisions of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 have been brought into effect in England and Wales in four commencement orders. The main compensation provisions, together with a number of the planning and development control measures, came into operation two months after Royal Assent on 25 September 1991. The Act provided for home loss payments improvements to be backdated to 16 November 1990. The bulk of the enforcement provisions commenced on 2 January 1992, and the new development plans system became operative on 10 February 1992. A direction relating to publicity for, and notification of departures from development plans came into force on 28 February.

Where appropriate, advice and policy guidance for local authorities and other agencies, and existing advice, has been brought up to date to reflect the provisions of the 1991 Act as follows:

DOE Circ 14/91	August 1991	Planning and Compensation Act 1991
DOE Circ 15/91	September 1991	Land Compensation and Compulsory Purchase.
MPG8	September 1991	Interim Development Order Permissions (IDOs) Statutory Provisions and Procedures.
DOE Circ 16/91	October 1991	Planning Obligations.
DOE Circ 23/91	December 1991	Awards of Costs in Planning Proceedings Following Late Cancellation of an Inquiry or Hearing.
DOE Circ 18/91	December 1991	New Development Plans System: Transitional Arrangements (England and Wales).
DOE Circ 21/91	December 1991	Implementation of the Main Enforcement Provisions.
PPG18	December 1991	Enforcing Planning Control.
PPG7	January 1992	The Countryside and the Rural Economy.
PPG12	February 1992	Development Plans and Regional Planning Guidance.
MPG9	March 1992	Interim Development Order Permissions (IDOs) Conditions.
PPG1	March 1992	General Policy and Principles.
PPG3	March 1992	Housing.
PPG19	March 1992	Outdoor Advertisement Control.
DOE Circ 5/92	March 1992	Town and Country Planning Control of Advertisement Regulations 1992.

The remaining provisions of the Act are scheduled to take effect in the spring and summer of 1992, within a year of Royal Assent as follows:

Remaining provisions on enforcement powers (sections 2, 4 (part) and 10).
Remaining provisions on planning obligations (section 12, sections 106A and 106B of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990).
Demolition of buildings (section 13).
Notices etc. of applications for planning permission (section 16).
Land of interested planning authorities and development by them (section 20).
Simplified planning zones (section 28).

DLA and DWA

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he proposes to make to the test of resources for house renovation grants to take account of the new disability living allowance and disability working allowance.

Mr. Yeo: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Wales and I have today given to local housing authorities advance notice of amendments to the test of resources applied to applicants for house renovation grants including those to help provide facilities for disabled people. These regulations under part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 come into force on 6 April. They introduce disability living allowance and disability working allowance as qualifying conditions for a number of premiums used to calculate the applicable amount in the test of resources. Disability living allowance will replace the current mobility allowance and, where the disability arose before age 65, attendance allowance. As with the two allowances it replaces, this new allowance will be disregarded in full as income in the test.

Pollution

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the number and type of notifiable pollution incidents in (a) Cornwall and (b) Cumbria in each year since 1979; what companies or organisations were involved; and what has been done to restore the ecological balance of the environment in each county.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 24 January 1992]: I will write to the hon. Member.

TRANSPORT

British Rail ("Organising for Quality")

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of British Rail's reorganisation known as "Organising for Quality".

Mr. Rifkind: Substantial progress has been made with the implementation of this reorganisation. The process will be substantially completed on 6 April 1992 with the abolition of the railway regions. The British Railways Board has recently submitted a report on this reorganisation, which I have accepted. I have today laid this report before both Houses.

Vehicle Testing Fees

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes the vehicle inspectorate is proposing to make to vehicle testing fees.

Mr. Chope: On 9 March, I laid before the House a draft order which contains the fees which the vehicle inspectorate proposes to charge from 30 March. The fees will need to be reviewed again later to take account of the incorporation into the heavy goods vehicle test from 1 September of measured checks of smoke emission. I have also asked that we should seek views on a revised structure for fees which reflect more closely the increased costs to the inspectorate of vehicles with a higher number of axles. Consultation on these matters will take place in the summer.

London Underground

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the level of capital expenditure by London Underground during each of the last five years; and what is the planned level for 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

London Underground investment

	£ million
1987-88	259
1988-89	234
1989-90	328

[2] Estimated combined total for these years—over £2 billion.

M1/M62 Link

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend the time period for consultation on his proposals for an M1/M62 link in west Yorkshire to enable the proposals to be exhibited in the Horbury area of Wakefield.

Mr. Chope: Special arrangements have already been operated for people in the Horbury area. Nevertheless, I am arranging for additional exhibitions of the M1/M62 link road proposals to be held next week both in the Horbury and Thornhill Lees areas, subject to the availability of suitable venues.

There seems no case for extending the consultation period which does not expire until 1 May, but any comments received after that date will still be taken into account.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the projected date for announcing the preferred route for the proposed M1/M62 motorway link in west Yorkshire.

Mr. Chope: No date has been set for announcing the outcome of the public consultation, into the options for a proposed link between the M1 south-west of Wakefield and the M62 east of Huddersfield, which started on 27 February 1992. This is because it is impossible to anticipate at this stage how long it will take to assess fully the large number of responses we expect to receive from the public and representative bodies.

Initial Response Teams

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those initial response teams he expects to be operating on 1 April without official vehicles.

Mr. McLoughlin: On 1 April 1992 there will be a total of 65 initial response teams.

Initial response teams operating without official vehicles are listed below. These stations have not previously operated with an official vehicle, prior to redesignation as IRTs. The implementation period for the review is four years, and alterations to the current plan could occur over this period, should circumstances change significantly.

Coastguards

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current responsibilities of Her Majesty's coastguard; and if he will implement the sector review in accordance with the definition contained in paragraph 2.12 of that report.

Mr. McLoughlin: I would refer the hon. Member to the written reply I gave to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Mr. Harris) on the same subject on 9 March 1992.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what preventive and educational measures are required by Her Majesty's coastguard of sector officers; and what proportion of their time they are required to spend on education and preventive work.

Mr. McLoughlin: Her Majesty's coastguard sector officers are primarily responsible for the management, training and operational efficiency of the several auxiliary coastguard companies within their sectors, including maintenance of buildings and equipment.

As part of their workload, sector officers will provide both solicited and unsolicited safety and educational advice in the course of their duties, including presentations at local schools, local public events, yachting and other organisations which use the sea, as well as routine daily contact with the general public. This is done in concert with the auxiliary coastguard companies under their charge. There is no requirement for a specific number of hours per month to be spent on this aspect of work.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of his study of auxiliary operations room assistance; what are the cost implications of employing administrative assistants to replace auxiliary coastguards; and when the recommendations will be implemented.

Mr. McLoughlin: The recommendation that a separate study of auxiliary operations room assistance be undertaken formed part of the long term aims of the coastal review. Although some preliminary work was put in hand it was considered that this item was secondary in importance to other recommendations contained in the review, and no conclusions have yet been reached.

Shipping Industry

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration has been given to increasing the total amount of money allocated to the Government assistance for training scheme for the shipping industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: In accordance with Treasury guidelines, a policy review of the Government assistance for training scheme was conducted last year by my Department. This review highlighted GAFT's success in revitalising cadet recruitment. It did not identify an immediate need to increase the target of 500 cadets per annum for which the scheme has been designed although it acknowledged the possibility of reviewing the GAFT budget to coincide with future public expenditure surveys.

Cycling

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what directions he has given to the London traffic director concerning cycles.

Mr. Chope: The Secretary of State's draft traffic management and parking guidance which he issued for consultation on 11 March sets out his aims for cycling in London and possible measures to assist cyclists in relation to red routes. It will be for the London traffic director and the London local authorities to have regard to the final guidance when meeting their respective traffic management responsibilities.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the budget for cycle schemes within the traffic division for 1992-93; and what is the proportion of the total budget for the traffic division of cycle schemes.

Mr. Chope: The traffic policy division of the Department of Transport has no executive responsibilities for providing cycling facilities, and so has no budget for cycle schemes. Cycle schemes are funded from other budgets as is the work on the 1,000-mile cycle route for London.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what specific schemes are planned (a) within the Department's bypass scheme and (b) within the Department's trunk road programme for cycling.

Mr. Chope: The answer is:

a). The Department's bypass demonstration project was launched earlier this year. Work is being undertaken with the local authorities in six towns. It will implement measures such as traffic calming, traffic management and environmental improvements so as to show how the fullest possible benefits to the local community can be realised. The schemes are likely to include improved provision for cyclists, pedestrians and other vulnerable road users.

b) The Department takes the needs of cyclists into account from the outset when planning new trunk road construction or major reconstruction. Where demand exists, consideration is also given to measures that would enable cyclists to cross the trunk road more safely. The information asked for on individual schemes is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research is being conducted by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory on cycles and cycle safety.

Mr. Chope: The Transport and Road Research Laboratory has begun to evaluate the effectiveness of current pedal cycle helmets in reducing head injuries.

ENERGY

Dounreay Processing Plant

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the decision announced by the European Commission and EURATOM on 4 March to prohibit the reopening of the MTR 1203 reprocessing plant at Dounreay until nuclear materials accountancy procedures have been satisfactorily approved.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Commission decision of 4 March applied a "warning" to Dounreay. This requires Dounreay to rectify failures in the implementation of accounting and records systems before the plant resumes normal operations. To this end, the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority is vigorously implementing the recommendations of its internal inquiry, and is consulting with the Commission as necessary.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the licences he has issued for gas-fired power stations giving the location and date in each case.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 24 February at columns 398-400.

Since then, four further section 36 consents have been granted, details of which are given herewith.

PRIME MINISTER

Nurses and Midwives Pay Review Body

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Prime Minister when the supplement to the ninth report of the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and the Professions Allied to Medicine will be published.

The Prime Minister: The review body's report, which deals with the pay of senior nurses and senior midwives, is being published today. The Government are grateful to the review body for the additional work it has undertaken to prepare this report.

The report recommends that with effect from 1 September 1991 the senior nurse and senior midwife pay spine should be increased by approximately 6 per cent. to the level of the senior manager pay spine and that senior nurses should each receive a single non-superannuable cash payment of £300.

The Government have accepted the review body's recommendations but have decided that the single cash payment should be superannuable, in order to comply with the provisions of the NHS superannuation regulations.

China

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his plan to send a human rights fact-finding team to the People's Republic of China.

The Prime Minister: In January in New York I proposed to Premier Li Peng that a high-level delegation should visit China later this year to look into human rights issues. My right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Surrey, East (Sir G. Howe) has agreed to lead this mission, which will take place later this year.

Planning (Countryside)

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Prime Minister whether he will make a statement on his approach to planning in the countryside in the light of the publication of the revised planning policy guidance note 7.

The Prime Minister: The Government are not, and never have been, in favour of uncontrolled development. Planning is essential. Our commitment to it was demonstrated through our introduction of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991, and the implementation of the plan-led system it provides for. We have made clear the role of the planning system in ensuring that development and growth are sustainable.

Balanced decisions within the planning system require various points of view to be heard and weighed. The views of those who oppose development are often got across very effectively indeed to those taking planning decisions. But weight must also be given to the views of individuals submitting planning applications. For them, especially those in the farming community, success may make all the difference as to whether they can continue to live and work in the countryside. In my speech to the Oxford farming conference, I was speaking on behalf of those individuals —who sometimes feel that their voice counts for relatively little—when I encouraged planning authorities to balance the need to protect the countryside with the need for jobs and houses.

This position is clearly set out in the revised planning policy guidance note 7 on the countryside and the rural economy. This note explains this Government's policy of encouraging rural enterprise, while ensuring that the environment is protected. It reminds planning authorities of the need for a balanced approach to rural development and conservation. The planning system helps to integrate development necessary to sustain the rural economy with protection of the countryside for the sake of its beauty, its diversity of landscape, its wealth of natural resources and its ecological, agricultural and recreational value. When paragraph 2.5 of the PPG says that "little weight" should normally be attached to the loss of lower grade agricultural land it means little weight in terms of agricultural value; other factors such as landscape and nature conservation need to be taken fully into account.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Southern Africa

Mr. Dickens: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution the United Kingdom is making towards the development of southern African countries faced by severe drought.

Mrs. Chalker: We have substantial and continuing programmes of development aid for countries of the southern Africa region amounting to some £165 million in 1990. As my hon. Friend is aware, I announced a package of additional assistance last week in response to the drought comprising £2½ million of balance of payments support each for Zambia and Zimbabwe plus 15,000 tonnes of food aid for Mozambique and for Mozambican refugees. I am able to announce today a further £1 million in the form of a contribution to the world food programmes's targeted feeding programme for vulnerable groups in Malawi.

Know-how Fund

Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by project the amount of know-how fund grant committed to date under the two schemes to encourage the establishment of British investment operations in central and eastern Europe, the Baltic states and the former Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: So far over £3 million has been committed to 150 successful applicants under the two schemes. The first scheme provides up to 50 per cent. grant towards the cost of pre-investment feasibility studies (PIFS) into proposed British investment operations; the second scheme finances, on a pump-priming basis, the costs of providing training in management and business skills to key indigenous personnel who will run British investment operations (the training for investment personnel scheme—TIPS). There has been a good response from a wide cross-section of British industry and service sector firms and organisations and the schemes appear to be achieving their aims. Forty-nine pre-investment feasibility studies supported by the know-how fund have so far been completed; in 35 of these, applicants have decided definitely to proceed with their investment; in a further five a final decision has not yet been taken.

Information on the grant committed by project is as follows:

Western Samoa

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the assistance given by the United Kingdom to western Samoa.

Mrs. Chalker: We do not have a regular country aid programme for western Samoa, but have provided disaster relief after recent cyclones. This included £115,000 for emergency supplies, help with reconstruction and 1,125 tonnes of rice following cyclone Ofa in February 1990; and £120,000 for emergency supplies and other relief activities following cyclone Val in December 1991.

China

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on how the overseas aid criterion about good government is applied to the People's Republic of China.

Mrs. Chalker: In allocating aid we consider recipient countries' needs, their ability to use aid well, their economic and social policies, other good government considerations and the scope for supporting activities which promote better government. These considerations apply to China where our programme includes a project to improve investment appraisal methodology and introduce social and environmental analysis into project appraisal and United Kingdom training in a range of subjects including public administration and law. We also discuss human rights concerns frequently with the Chinese Government, including most recently during the Chinese Foreign Minister's meeting with the Secretary of State on 9 March.

EMPLOYMENT

Training Programmes

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment since 1979, what has been the annual expenditure on the programmes: (a) work experience on employers' premises, (b) youth opportunities programme, (c) youth training scheme, (d) community programme, (e) job training scheme, (f) employment training, (g) technical and vocational education initiative, (h) local collaborative programme and (i) open tech and open college, expressed (i) in cash terms, (ii) in constant 1991 prices and (iii) as a figure which indicates the amount of EC funding included in each programme.

Mr. Jackson: The table shows expenditure for Great Britain at cash and constant 1990-91 prices in each year from 1979-80 to 1990-91 on youth opportunities programme (which includes work experience on employers premises), youth training scheme (which includes training credits), community programme, job training scheme (which includes new job training scheme), employment training (which includes the Gateshead garden festival), technical and vocational education initiative, local collaborative projects and open tech and the Open college. I will write to the hon. Member separately on the question of the EC funding.

Notes:

1. Figures for each year up to 1987-88 include programme administration costs on a pro rata basis except for CP where all years include administration costs and Open college which includes no administration costs.
2. Constant prices were calculated by the use of the GDP deflator index from the Chancellor's Autumn Statement published in November 1991.

[1] Expenditure on the local collaborative projects is not separately identifiable between 1987-88 and 1990-91.

City of Durham

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons under 18 years are in full-time employment in the City of Durham constituency.

Mr. Jackson: The 1981 census of population figures represents the latest available. In 1981 there were 2,413 16 to 19-year olds in full-time employment in the then City of Durham constituency.

Training Guarantee

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what response he proposes to make to the representation by the London East training and enterprise council in appendix 3 to his evidence to the Employment Committee on 27 November—House of Commons Paper 92-i—on the non-fulfilment of the training guarantee for 16 and 17-year-olds mentioned in paragraph 3.8 of Cm 1810 "People, Jobs and Opportunity".

Mr. Jackson: Our officials have been in regular contact with London East training and enterprise council (LETEC). As LETEC's evidence to the Employment Committee indicated, agreement was reached on two occasions on additional funds to enable LETEC to contract for more training places. The position on the supply of and demand for youth training continues to be closely monitored in east London as elsewhere. Under its contract with the TEC the Department stands ready to discuss any further measures that may be needed to ensure that the guarantee of the offer of a suitable training place to all unemployed 16 and 17-year-olds who want one is met.

Employment and Training

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of people benefiting from special employment and training measures at the latest available date in the constituency of Bury, North; and what is the average cost per person under each.

Mr. Jackson: This Department has a number of employment and training measures in the Bury area but it is not possible to provide figures on a constituency basis, and data on different measures is collected on different bases.

The total number of people who participated in employment service measures (restart and 13-week interviews of claimants, jobclub entrants, participants in restart courses, job review workshops and job search seminars) in the Bury area, in the period April 1991 to February 1992 inclusive was 3,501. In the period April 1991 to 7 February 1992, a total of 610 unemployed people in the Bolton and Bury area were also assisted by the job interview guarantee scheme.

The number of people participating in measures delivered through the Bolton and Bury training and enterprise council (youth training, employment training, and employment action), at 5 February 1992, was 2,732.

Information on the average cost per person under each measure is not readily available.

Youth Training

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what response he expects to make to the representations made by young people from the Canning Town and Beckton area of east London in the course of the ministerial interview on 10 March concerning the lack of quality and effectiveness of his youth training scheme.

Mr. Jackson: I had a constructive and positive meeting with these young people about a range of concerns going much wider than youth training. I invited them to write further to me through their Member of Parliament, and action will be taken in response.

TECs

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training and enterprise councils in London have not yet signed their 1992-93 operating agreements.

Mr. Jackson: As at 12 March none of the London training and enterprise councils had signed their 1992-93 operating agreements.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Social Fund

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated full cost of implementing all of the Social Security Advisory Committee's recommendations on the social fund in Northern Ireland in 1992.

Mr. Hanley: The recommendations of the Social Security Advisory Committee would entail wide-ranging changes to the social fund and the full information needed to produce a reliable estimate of the cost is not readily available.

Fund Holding

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the NHS management executive's efforts to canvass interest in general practitioner fund holding in Northern Ireland, detailing dates and venues of presentations to general practitioners or officials, names and roles of experts from Scotland, England or Wales brought over to advise interested parties and the scope of the activity of such consultants or advisers.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 19 February, Official Report, Vol. 204, column 211. Since then, the management executive has held one seminar, on 26 February 1992, for practices expressing an interest in becoming fund holders. Dr. John Steyn, a general practitioner fund holder from Scotland, and Mr. Mark Miller, a deputy director with the NHS management advisory service, spoke to the seminar about the preparatory period and the first year of fund holding.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether general medical practices which are granted fund holding status will have to specifically inform each patient of this fact and its consequences.

Mr. Hanley: Practices which become fund holders are not required to inform their patients; however it is likely that fund-holding practices will wish to explain the details of the scheme to their patients and they will receive every encouragement to do so.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he makes for each year since 1979 of (a) the total population of working age regardless of whether or not they were in work and (b) the percentage of the population which was not in work whether or not they were looking for work.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Population of working age in Northern Ireland percentage not in employment 1979-1991[1]

Year	Population of working age (000s)[2]	Percentage not in employment[3]
1979	859	35·5
1981	874	38·8
1983	888	41·5
1984	898	41·5
1985	906	41·8
1986	915	40·1
1987	923	40·6
1988	927	38·6
1989	932	37·2
1990	938	36·2

[1] Population of working age figures are general registrar's office mid-year estimates. The percentage not in employment is based on estimates from the labour force survey. This surve was not conducted in 1980 and 1982.

[2] Men aged 16-64 and women aged 16-59.

[3] Unemployed plus economically inactive as a percentage of population of working age.

Harland and Wolff

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the value of the contracts received by the Harland and Wolff shipyard in Belfast in 1991 from Pacific Nuclear Transport Ltd. for modification of ships owned by PNTL.

Mr. Needham: This is a commercial matter between the Harland and Wolff group and Pacific Nuclear Transport Ltd. The hon. Member should address his inquiry to one of those companies.

Road Accidents, Ards Peninsular

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many road accidents in the Ards peninsular during the 24 hours of Tuesday 10 March were reported to the Royal Ulster Constabulary; how many involved injuries; at which locations did these injuries occur; from which locations other ambulances were required to attend each of these road accidents in which personal injuries were involved; and how long it took for the ambulance in each instance to deliver the injured persons to hospital from the time of the initial report of a need for an ambulance.

Mr. Hanley: Two. The first occurred in Portaferry road, Cloghy, the second in Ballyvester road, Donaghadee. Both involved injuries. An ambulance from Bangor station attended the Cloghy accident. One hour and 47 minutes elapsed between the initial request for an ambulance and its arrival at the Ulster hospital. Twenty-two minutes were spent at the scene of the accident stabilising the casualty, and a further 52 minutes transporting him to hospital at a restricted speed necessitated by the nature and severity of his injuries. An ambulance from the Donaghadee area attended the second accident. Thirty-two minutes elapsed between the initial request for an ambulance and its arrival at the Ards hospital.

Social Security

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, persuant to his answer of 9 March 1992 Official Report, columns 399-400, on staff administering the social security programme, if he will give the answer per 1,000 claimants.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Number of staff per 1,000 claimants
1984	3·8
1985	3·8
1986	3·8
1987	3·9
1988	3·9
1989	3·7
1[illegible]	3·6
199[illegible]2	3·2

Child Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what would have been the gross additional cost, in cash terms and at 1991-92 prices of uprating child benefit fully in line with inflation, assuming each child in the family receives the same rate, in April of each year from 1988 to 1992.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 27 February 1992]: The information requested is set out.

	Additional Cost
	In Cash Terms	At 1991-92 Prices
	£ million	£ million
1988-89	7·3	9·0
1989-90	18·0	20·8
1990-91	32·8	35·1
1991-92	34·8	34·8
1992-93	30·3	29·0

THE ARTS

Book Statistics

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will list the expenditure on books for public libraries in the United Kingdom for each year since 1981.

Mr. Renton: Public library statistics collected by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy and supplemented with material from local authorities will shortly be published by my Library and Information Services Council (England). They show expenditure on books as follows:

	£ million
1981-82	44·0
1982-83	49·9
1983-84	54·3
1984-85	56·3
1985-86	60·7
1986-87	64·2
1987-88	68·2
1988-89	75·2
1989-90	81·4

Galleries (Admission Charges)

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Minister for the Arts by what percentage rise or fall attendances at public galleries charging for admission have changed since the charges were introduced.

Mr. Renton: The national galleries which I sponsor—the National gallery, the Tate gallery, the National Portrait gallery and the Wallace collection—do not charge for admission to their core collections. Information on charges and attendances relating to other public galleries is not held centrally.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Department of the Environment

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Lord President of the Council what proportion of time (a) on the Floor of the House of Commons and (b) in Standing Committee, has been spent on matters under the auspices of the Department of the Environment in the current Session.

Mr. MacGregor: The total time spent on the Floor of the House this Session up to the adjournment of the House on Friday 6 March 1992 was 649 hours and 37 minutes.

The amount of time spent on the Floor of the House on matters falling within the responsibilities of the Department of the Environment was 75 hours and 30 minutes, or 11·6 per cent. of total time on the floor.

The total time spent in Standing Committees up to the adjournment of the House on Friday 6 March 1992 was 491 hours and 13 minutes.

A total of 137 hours and 7 minutes were taken up by matters under the auspices of the Department of the Environment[1]. This amounts to 28 per cent. of time spent in Standing Committee this Session.

[1] This figure does not take account of suspensions in Standing Committee. It includes time "shared" with other Departments when a number of statutory instruments are grouped together for debate in a Standing Committee.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Buildings

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from local education authorities seeking approval for urgent building work for schools.

Mr. Fallon: We have received representations from six local education authorities about urgent building work at schools since our announcement last December of the distribution of annual capital guidelines to LEAs and the voluntary-aided grant allocations for 1992-93.

It is for LEAs to ensure that their schools are in a satisfactory condition. They do not need our approval to undertake building work they judge necessary.

Margaret Ward RC High School

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will reconsider the case of building work approved for St. Margaret Ward RC high school, Stoke-on-Trent.

Mr. Fallon: Grant for capital expenditure and repairs at voluntary-aided schools for 1992-93 will increase by 15 per cent., compared with the current year, to £151 million. However, it is not possible to provide grant for all the projects submitted by local education authorities. Whilst my right hon. and learned Friend cannot reconsider his decision, it is open to Staffordshire county council to submit the project again next year.

Stratford School

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the (a) pupil roll, (b) cost per pupil and (c) annual maintenance grant at Stratford school in each month since April 1990.

Mr. Eggar: The school began to receive annual maintenance grant (AMG) only on being incorporated as grant maintained on 1 April 1991: it was funded until that date by Newham local education authority.

The school's total AMG for the period 1 April 1991 to 31 March 1992, which has been paid in 12 instalments, £1,533,311. There were 574 pupils registered at the school in January 1992 as recorded on its annual departmental return: we do not collect monthly pupil data. The school's total AMG divided by 574 pupils produces a per pupil figure of £2,671.

Performance Levels

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received concerning the testing of performance levels of children with special education needs.

Mr. Eggar: The Government's objective is that the national curriculum testing arrangements should be accessible to pupils with special educational needs. My right hon. and learned Friend and I receive many helpful representations from parents and teachers about how this objective can be met.

GCSE

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many letters he has recently received from (a) right hon. and hon. Members and (b) members of the public about GCSE coursework.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has received 740 letters from Members of Parliament and 2,110 letters from members of the public about GCSE coursework.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received from (a) the National Association for the Teaching of English, (b) the Northern Examining Association, (c) the Joint Matriculation Board, (d) the National Association of Advisers in English and (e) the joint council for the GCSE, about GCSE coursework; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has received various representations from all but the Joint Matriculation Board about GSCE coursework. He is convinced that limits on coursework are needed in order to maintain public credibility in the GCSE, and is satisfied that the limits which he has set will secure that confidence whilst giving sufficient scope for the innovative assessment techniques facilitated by coursework.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement giving details of the evidence which he has considered in reaching his conclusion that changes should be made to GCSE coursework.

Mr. Eggar: My decision to limit the coursework element of the GCSE in order to maintain public confidence in that qualification was taken in the light of advice from the School Examinations and Assessment Council (SEAC) and based on evidence in the HMI report "The Introduction of the GCSE in Schools 1986-88", the SEAC report "Examining GCSE: First General Scrutiny Report", and the "Report of the Independent Appeals Authority for School Examinations". All three reports stressed the difficulty of ensuring standardising marking and adequate moderation in coursework. The first also drew attention to the unfairness caused by coursework not being conducted under uniform conditions.

Barnet

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many out of borough pupils have been educated at Barnet schools during each of the last five years.

Mr. Fallon: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
January 1987	5,296
January 1988	5,392
January 1989	4,747
January 1990	5,023
January 1991	5,377

Pupil Expenditure

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much was spent per pupil in (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) special schools in Durham in each year since 1981.

Mr. Fallon: School based spending per pupil in nursery and primary schools, secondary schools and special schools in Durham is shown in the table. The figures show spending from 1980-81 until 1989-90, the latest year for which actual expenditure figures are available.

School based spending per pupil

Year	Nursery and Primary £	Secondary £	Special £
1980-81	565	730	2,700
1981-82	635	810	3,030
1982-83	705	866	3,345
1983-84	735	905	3,735
1984-85	750	965	4,180
1985-86	840	1,095	4,640
1986-87	935	1,225	5,045
1987-88	1,050	1,405	5,405
1988-89	1,160	1,575	6,825
1989-90	1,225	1,735	8,150

Notes:

1. School based spending covers the direct costs in schools of salaries and wages, premises and certain supplies and services. It does not include the costs of school meals, home to school transport, LEA central administration, and financing costs of capital expenditure.
2. The figures in the table are derived from Durham local education authority's returns of its spending to the Department of the Environment and of its pupil numbers to the Department of Education and Science.
3. Spending on nursery and primary schools was not collected separately for years after 1986-87, so the figures for the years shown in the table cover both nursery and primary schools.

Local Education Authority Property

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will place in the Library a specimen agreement of a type he has approved between a college of further education and a local education authority regarding the college's leasing of local education authority property.

Mr. Eggar: The agreements that have been approved to date have been specific to the particular case. We expect governing bodies and local education authorities, in agreeing arrangements, to cover the following: the length of time the college is to remain on the site concerned; the nature of the occupancy—eg. lease or licence; whether any rent is to be paid; the responsibility for repairs and other outgoings; and the terms for cessation of the occupancy.

Nursery Education

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a list of nursery school provision by local education authorities in England and Wales.

Mr. Eggar: I have arranged that details of nursery provision for each local education authority in England for January 1991 will be published shortly. Details of nursery provision as at January 1990 were published last year in the DES "Statistical Bulletin 7/91", copies of which are available in the Library

Nursery provision in Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

After-school Clubs

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has to fund after-school clubs in primary schools in Wigan local education authority.

Mr. Eggar: My hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley) announced on 1 March the Government's intention to expand child care for school age children. The Government plan, through Department of Health programmes, to support a number of new development posts in voluntary organisations, which will work with schools and others to pilot the development of innovative schemes.

It is important that local education authorities and schools should play their part in the development of out of hours care schemes, and we have encouraged schools to respond accordingly by opening up their premises to meet local needs.

Technology Schools

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will state the total number of individual applications he received for his technology schools initiative, the number successful and unsuccessful, and of the latter the number he regarded as being of a satisfactory standard and the additional cost to his allocated £25 million of agreeing to those applications, together with the criteria he adopted to distinguish the categories of application referred to in the ministerial speech made at Shenley Wood school on 14 February;

(2) on what date and in what manner he informed all local education authorities of his schools technology initiative; what criteria he laid down for applications; what maximum costs in capital and revenue were indicated; and what account was taken of existing provision in maintained schools in the authorities containing successful applicants;

(3) if he will state the number of local education authorities making applications in respect of the technology schools initiative together with the number of authorities gaining all, some, or none of their applications, respectively, and the names of those authorities whose applications were satisfactory but unsuccessful.

Mr. Eggar: On 5 December 1991 chief education officers of local education authorities (LEAs) in England were invited in writing to submit up to two projects for funding under the technology schools initiative (TSI). The letter explained that proposals were to be normally for projects in the region of £250,000, although consideration would exceptionally be given to projects costing up to a maximum of £500,000. Priority would be given to bids from schools committed to making good technology provision whatever their existing level of resources. Amongst the factors stated which would be taken into account in assessing bids were:

(i) the track record of the school in technology including its use of the technical and vocational education initiative; clear evidence of a commitment to the development of teaching in technology, including plans to develop vocational courses at 14 to 16 and for older pupils;

(ii) Existing links with industry—where they are demonstrably effective, including the availability of industrial or business funding to match grant; or resources from within the schools budget;

(iii) Existing skills of the school's teaching staff and their enthusiasm for the project; and evidence of high quality school management.

Eighty-nine LEAs submitted proposals in respect of 164 schools. In addition, 30 schools submitted projects directly to the Department. In the face of intense competition, the most worthy projects at 62 schools in 50 LEAs have been approved up to a total of £15 million: 12 LEAs received approval for two bids; 38 LEAs received approval for one bid and 39 LEAs were unsuccessful. The remaining £10 million was allocated for projects at VA and GM schools.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the schools in Gravesham which have opted to become grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Eggar: There are two schools in Gravesham operating as GM and a third has recently been approved to become GM in September. The total number of schools operating or approved for GM status in Kent is now 26. I am delighted that so many schools in this area will enjoy the benefits of grant-maintained status.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many pupils applied to go to Hendon grant-maintained school in the years beginning September 1991 and September 1992; and what was the corresponding number of applicants in 1987.

Mr. Eggar: The Department does not collect centrally information on applications for admissions to grant-maintained schools. However, I understand from Hendon school that it has received 386 applications for admission in September 1992. At this time last year the school had 308 applications for admission to the school in September 1991. The corresponding number in March 1987 was 110.

Student Grants

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether in assessing borrowers' claims for deferment, the Student Loans Company will disregard income from disability living allowance and disability working allowance when those benefits are introduced.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Yes. We have today laid before Parliament regulations amending the Education (Student Loans) Regulations 1991 to ensure that these allowances are fully taken into account.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will arrange for the booklet "Student Grants and Loans—a brief guide" to be published in braille.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I am delighted that the Royal National Institute for the Blind has produced, at my Department's expense, a braille edition of the booklet. I have placed a copy in the Library. The Royal National Institute for the Blind's Peterborough office (PO Box 173, Peterborough PE2 0WS) will make further copies available on request.

Student Fees

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his estimate of the cost of extending an entitlement to student fees to part-time students on first degree courses, assuming a maximum fee entitlement of £750 and that all such students would be eligible for fees support.

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 10 March 1992]: Approximately £87 million, with some 115,000 students—the number of part-time first degree students in England and Wales in 1990, including Open university students, and representing some 29 per cent. of the 401,000 part-time students in higher education that year. This assumes that all students are personally eligible for support.

WALES

Local Government Reform

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if the Vale of Glamorgan is to be one of the unitary authorities in Wales under his recently announced proposals for local government reform.

Mr. David Hunt: Yes, the Vale of Glamorgan is one of the 23 authorities listed in my proposals.

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the reasons why the boundaries of the Vale of Glamorgan were not specified in his recently announced proposals for local government reform in Wales; and how he intends to determine them.

Mr. David Hunt: The boundaries of the Vale of Glamorgan were marked with dotted lines on the map illustrating my proposals so that I can listen to any further representations on their precise locations.

Local Government Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table, covering the years 1986-87 and consistent with Cm 1916, showing by sub-programme (a) total local authority expenditure in Wales, (b) local authority expenditure in Wales on services for which he has policy responsibility and (c) an analysis of the differences between (a) and (b).

Mr. David Hunt: Consistent with appendix 3 of Cm 1916, the information is as follows:

Local Government Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table analysing the data in appendix 1 of Cm 1916, showing separately for each line for the years 1986-87 to 1994-95, (a) expenditure within the Welsh block and (b) other expenditure.

Mr. David Hunt: The Welsh block comprises all Welsh Office programmes apart from agriculture, industry and nationalised industries. With the exception of local authority unhypothecated current grants and credit approvals, expenditure is identified on a programme basis in appendix 1 of Cm 1916. The unhypothecated current grants cannot be allocated to specific programmes. The breakdown of credit approvals between block and other programmes is as follows:

£ million

	Block	Other	Total
1986-87	266	2	268
1987-88	283	4	287
1988-89	283	3	286
1989-90	297	4	301
1990-91	252	3	255
1991-92	306	4	310
1992-93	332	5	337
1993-94	302	4	306
1994-95	293	4	297

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the latest figures available, stating whether they are final outturns, provisional outturns or budget figures, for 1988-89 to 1991-92 on the statistical basis of table 1.1 (summary of revenue expenditure and income), table 1.2 (summary of capital expenditure and income), table 1.3 (revenue accounts outturn summary), table 1.4 (capital accounts outturn summary) and table 2.3 (revenue account summary) of Welsh local government financial statistics.

Mr. David Hunt: The tables to which the hon. Gentleman refers are based on final outturn information received from local authorities. Outturn figures for 1988-89 and 1989-90 have already been published in Welsh Local Government Financial Statistics volume 14 1990 and volume 15 1991 for these years respectively. Outturn figures for later years are not yet available. Provisional or budget based figures are not available centrally at this level of detail for all accounts.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a reconciliation between (a) the local authority expenditure and its financing figures contained in figures 1.03 and 1.04 and appendices 1 and 3 of Cm 1916 and (b) the figures announced in the latest revenue support grant and other settlements.

Mr. David Hunt: Within the aggregate external finance package of £2,352 million for 1992-93 the revenue support grant—RSG—element is £1,621 million, the distributable amount from the non-domestic rating—NDR—account is £536 million and the allocation for revenue specific grants is £195 million.

The Welsh revenue support grant report 1992-93 (revised) (HC 247), approved by the House on 12 February, set out my decisions on the level of RSG and NDR for 1992-93. The RSG total includes the additional resources of £3·5 million that I am making available in recognition of the school teachers' review body recommendations. This additional sum was announced too late to be included in Cm 1916. Appendix 1 of Cm 1916 refers therefore to my original proposal for an RSG allocation of £1,617 million and provides details of the NDR distributable amount and other revenue grants to local authorities for 1992-93.

The unhypothecated support to local authorities for 1992-93 of £2,230 million in figure 1.03 of Cm 1916 includes my original proposals for RSG and the distributable amount of NDR together with the other grants itemised in the table.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish tables, covering the years 1986-87 to 1994-95 and consistent with Cm 1916, analysing (a) the Welsh block by economic category within spending sector and (b) the Welsh programme by economic category within spending sector.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is set out in tables 1 and 2. The definition of economic categories referred to is as follows:

A10	Pay and pension costs of staff employed in central government departments which are subject neither to central government trading body or trading fund treatment.
A20	Pay and pension costs of Ministers, staff of the Northern Ireland civil and court services, staff of other public bodies (eg NHS, fringe bodies, local authorities), locally engaged staff overseas, and the armed forces.
B20	Current expenditure on goods and services ("general administrative expenses") of central Government Departments, the armed forces, the Northern Ireland civil and court services including receipts from central government departments' general administrative expenses and VAT refunds of running costs expenditure.
B30	Receipts covering general administrative expenses which come from outside the government sector.
B40	Current expenditure on goods and services (other than the general administrative expenditure of central government departments) including receipts for the provision of goods and services by one part of government to another where the corresponding payment is classified as B40.
B50	Receipts from the provision of goods and services other than those rendered exclusively to another part of general government (ie covered by B20 and B40) or covering general administrative expenses (ie included under B30).
C10	Subsidies to the private sector.
C20	Subsidies to central government and local authority trading bodies.
C40	Subsidies to other public corporations.
D10	Current grants to the private sector.
E10	Expenditure on the purchase of land an existing buildings.
E20	Expenditure on the construction of new dwellings and improvements to existing dwellings.
E30	Expenditure on other new construction.
E40	Expenditure on the purchase of vehicles, plant, machinery and equipment.
G10	Capital grants to the private sector—companies.
G20	Capital grants to the private sector—persons and non-profit making bodies.
G30	Capital grants to nationalised industries.
G40	Capital grants to list I and II public corporations.
H10	Net lending to the private sector—companies.
H20	Net lending to the private sector—persons and non-profit-making bodies.
H30	Long term net lending to nationalised industries and issue of public dividend capital (PDC).
H40	Net lending to list I and II public corporations.
J10	Long term market and overseas borrowing and financial leasing by nationalised industries.
J20	Market and overseas borrowing and financial leasing by list I public corporations.
J30	Net temporary borrowing by nationalised industries (from the national loans fund, the market and overseas).
J40	Deposits by nationalised industries (bank deposits and transactions in interest-bearing securities) plus all borrowing/lending transactions with other nationalised industries and with public corporations.
M10	Current grants to local authorities within AEF/AEG (excluding EC grants and those covered by M20).
M15	Current grants to local authorities outside AEF/AEG (excluding EC grants and those covered by M20).
M30	Current grants made by the European Communities to local authorities
M40	Non-domestic rates.
N10	Capital grants to local authorities (excluding EC grants and those covered by N20).
N40	Credit approvals.

(ii) Identifiable General Government Expenditure

It is not possible to analyse the data shown in figure 1.03 of Cm 1916 in terms of the functional classifications used in the identifiable general Government expenditure tables which appear in appendix E of Cm 1920.

The main reason for this is that, for the local authority sector, general Government expenditure has a different coverage than the planning total (which underlies figure 1.03 of Cm 1916).

General Government expenditure measures the net expenditure of the local authority sector, including that which is financed from local authorities' own resources, such as income from the community charge and from capital receipts. The planning total covers those elements of local authority spending over which central government has control—grants, non-domestic rate payments and credit approvals.

Whereas the net out-turn expenditure of local authorities is allocated across the various functions shown in appendix E of Cm 1920, it is not possible to do the same with several components of the planning total, such as revenue support grant.

Specialised Employment Initiative

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from the Welsh initiative for specialised employment on the effect of residential costs on the livelihood of people with learning difficulties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Welsh Office officials have received a letter from the Welsh Initiative for Specialised Employment—WISE—principally concerned with the relationship between income support and earnings in employment. A reply will be sent when consultation with the Department of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security has been completed.

Monmouth Borough Council

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much is allocated for 1991-92 by Monmouth borough council for bed-and-breakfast accommodation for homeless persons.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The amount budgeted by local authorities for bed-and-breakfast accommodation for homeless persons for 1991-92 is not held centrally.

Mrs. Maria Hill

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from Mrs. Maria Hill, Burnt Barn road, Bulwark, Chepstow, Gwent regarding the imminent repossession of her property; and what response he has made.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: No representations have been received from Mrs. Maria Hill about the repossession of her property. However, following discussions with the Government last December, mortgage lenders have introduced a range of measures to reduce the number of repossessions and Mrs. Hill should be advised to contact her lender as a matter of urgency.

Felinteli (Port Dinorwic) Bypass

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the statement by the Minister of State on 27 February, Official Report, column 1206, on what date work on the Felinteli (Port Dinorwic) bypass will commence; what is the estimated target date for completion; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Tenders have been invited. Work is expected to start later this year although the precise date is contingent on the management of the trunk road programme as a whole. The scheme will take approximately two years to complete.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his statement of 27 February, Official Report, column 1152, how much money has been earmarked specifically for the new east Dwyfor and north Meirionydd community hospital whether a location has been determined; what is the planned date to commence work on this hospital; when it will be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: A sum of £598,000 has been reserved in the 1992-93 all Wales major capital building programme for the proposed new east Dwyfor and north Meirionydd community hospital. Management responsibility for this development rests with the Gwynedd health authority. It is for the authority initially to determine its location and the planning and construction time scale subject only to the approval in principle of the Welsh Office. No submission has yet been made.

Agricultural Investment

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales further to his answer of 9 March, Official Report, column 420, if he will give the figures for investment in fixed capital in agriculture in Wales for each of the last eight years.

Mr. David Hunt: Estimates of investment in gross fixed capital formation in agriculture in Wales in the last eight years for which information is available are as follows:

Year	£ million Wales
1982	113
1983	123
1984	133
1985	114
1986	119

1988	96
1989	89

Singleton Hospital

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he received for and against the West Glamorgan health authority's proposal to stop funding the night casualty service at Singleton hospital.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Fifty-one letters and a petition opposing the proposal have been received.

Government

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received about the government of Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: Very few individuals and organisations have written to me specifically about the establishment of an elected Assembly. I have received many representations from individuals and organisations about my proposals for local government reorganisation and the establishment of a structure of unitary authorities.

Sheltered Workshops

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is (a) the total amount of funding currently given by his Department towards the setting up of sheltered workshops for disabled people in Wales and (b) the number of places made available; and what were the corresponding figures for each year from 1979 onwards.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 14 February 1992]: Government funding for sheltered workshops is the responsibility of the employment service and details of its expenditure in Wales which it has provided are shown in the following table. These include an element from revenue support grant paid to local authority by my Department through the employment service. The employment service does not have information on expenditure before 1986-87 nor the number of places before 1981-82.

MOT Inspections

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will propose legislation to enable local authorities to tender for carrying out MOT inspections of vehicles owned by other organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: No. Existing legislation provides for MOT examinations to be carried out by inspectors appointed by any council designated by the Secretary of State for Transport. There is no restriction on the ownership of the vehicles which may be tested by such councils.

National Curriculum (Arts and Music)

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to make the orders for art and music in the national curriculum in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I have today laid the final orders with associated documents setting out attainment targets and programmes of study for art and music in the national curriculum for pupils aged five to 14. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House. The orders apply to Wales. My right hon. Friend has already published draft orders for England on 10 March.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bananas

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the present position of the European Commission on the question of banana exports from African, Caribbean and Pacific countries and GATT tarification, following the Commissioners' meeting on 4 March.

Mr. Gummer: I understand that no decision was reached at the meeting on 4 March and that the Commission is planning to discuss this question again on 25 March. The United Kingdom has pressed the importance of a GATT settlement in conformity with our continuing commitments to the Windward Islands and Jamaica.

Calf Rearing

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the criteria acceptable to his Department before an intensive calf rearing unit can be established in the countryside.

Mr. Curry: Anybody wishing to establish an intensive calf rearing unit in the countryside would have to comply with all the appropriate legislation including the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988 (as amended) and the Welfare of Calves Regulations 1987.

Dietary Supplements

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations occurred between his Department and (a) the International Society for Professional Aromatherapists and (b) the Society for the Promotion of Natural Therapy concerning his Department's initiative on dietary supplements.

Mr. MacLean: Our officials sent the European Community discussion paper on dietary supplements to the International Society of Professional Aromatherapists and the Society for the Promotion of Nutritional Therapy and received comments from these organisations. The Department will continue to consult both them and other interested groups as EC negotiations progress.

Oilseed Rape

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the average yield of diesel per acre from oilseed rape;

(2) how many gallons of diesel are used to produce 15 gallons of diesel from oilseed rape, taking into account that used by machinery, pesticides and fertilisers.

Mr. Curry: Diesel fuel from rapeseed oil is not in production in the United Kingdom, so only theoretical estimates can be given. Taking a five-year average (1987 to 1991) of rapeseed yields in the United Kingdom, very approximately 520 litres of diesel might be produced from an acre of rapeseed. Diesel derived from rapeseed could cost around three times as much to produce as diesel derived from inorganic sources. Calculating the ratio between the energy expended on the production of diesel from rapeseed and the energy released when that diesel is consumed is complex. In particular, the inputs are difficult to quantify comprehensively. The best assessment currently made by my Department is that the ratio of energy expended to energy obtained is possibly in the range 1:1 to 1:1·5.

Rovral

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ban all imports of French wine for vines in vineyards treated with Rovral produced by Rhône-Poulenc.

Mr. Maclean: I have no plans to do so.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place Rovral on off-label approval so that it can be used on English vines in English vineyards.

Mr. Maclean: Approval for off-label use can be given only where an application supported by adequate data has been received and evaluated. The relevant data have not been received to support such an application.

Sweeteners

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations he has made to the EC to ensure that aspartame is not eliminated in the new European directive on additives;

(2) what representations he has received with regard to the use of high-intensity sweeteners used as flavour enhancers in sugar sweetened chewing gum; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will make representations to the European Commission to ensure that high-intensity sweeteners are not withdrawn until a suitable alternative which permits the manufacture of chewing gum that does not stick to dentures has been found;

(4) what estimate he has made of the effect on sales of sugar chewing gum of the prohibition of high-intensity sweeteners and of the impact on employment opportunities.

Mr. Maclean: The proposals currently under discussion in Brussels would permit continuation of the existing use of intense sweeteners specified by the hon. Friend. The question of a ban or of the need for representations does not, therefore, arise. My officials have, however, discussed with representatives of the industry concerned how their existing position might best be maintained should the present proposals be changed.

Organic Farming

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on conversion payments for organic farmers; and whether he has any proposals for paying farmers for organic management.

Mr. Curry: Organic farmers and those converting from non-organic to organic methods of farming can receive assistance under various MAFF grants including the farm and conservation grant scheme, nitrate-sensitive areas scheme and the set-aside scheme.

It is hoped that the European Commission's proposals for agriculture and the environment will provide a means whereby direct assistance could be given to existing organic farmers and those wishing to convert.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what recommendations he has received from the chairman of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee on the European Commission's proposals for reforming the common agricultural policy, COM 91 258;

(2) what recommendations he has received from the chairman of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee on the European Commission's proposals for measures accompanying the reform of the common agricultural policy, particularly the agri-environment action programme, COM 91 415.

Mr. Curry: None, but the Earl of Selborne's speech on reform of the common agricultural policy, delivered in the other place on 17 October 1991, was noted with interest.

Rabies

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the number of cases of rabies reported in 1991 in the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, France, Germany, Spain and Portugal; how many of these cases arose in areas within 50 km of a main port of entry; and if he will provide separate figures for the Pas de Calais area of France.

Mr. Maclean: Precise information on the locality of rabies cases in relation to main ports of entry is not available, but the number of such cases is likely to be small. The other information requested is as follows:

Ostrich Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidelines he has laid down for ostrich farms on spongiform encephalopathy in ostriches.

Mr. Maclean: Following recent reports in the German scientific press of a spongiform encephalopathy-like disease in three ostriches which died in Germany in 1986, 1988 and 1989, guidance was issued to known keepers of ostriches in this country. The guidance provided information on these reports and asked that owners' veterinary surgeons be given copies so that they could monitor the birds for neurological symptoms. Procedures in cases of suspicion were recommended, which included in particular informing the Ministry. No reports have been received as a result.

Birds

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recommendations he has received from the chairman of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee relating to United Kingdom nature conservation and land use policies arising from the publication of the recent reports sponsored by the JNCC on birds and pastoral agriculture in Europe; the conservation of lowland dry grassland birds in Europe and breeding waders on wet grassland.

Mr. Curry: No recommendations arising from these reports have been received, but the reports are of interest to my Department in the development of its policies for nature conservation and land use.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total number of BSE confirmed cases by county or region for England and Scotland for the period 1 January 1992 until 28 February 1992.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his question on 10 March 1992, Official Report, column 453.

Water Abstraction

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the chairman of the National Rivers Authority about the provision of funds to compensate the holders of water abstraction licences whose licences have to be revoked in the interest of maintaining river flows at an acceptable level, or to protect groundwater levels.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 12 March 1992]: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State regularly meets the chairman of the National Rivers Authority to discuss the authority's business. The provision of funds for revocation of abstraction licences has not been raised in any recent discussion.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Diplomatic Wing

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he proposes to make any further changes in his Department's diplomatic wing cash limits for 1991-92.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Subject to parliamentary approval of a late spring supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class II, vote 2—other external relations—will increase by £105,857,000 from £193,370,000 to £299,227,000. This to take account of a further contribution to the United Nations Advance Mission in Cambodia—UNAMIC—an initial contribution towards the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia—UNTAC—and the agreement of the transfer of gold to the Baltic states. This increase is partly offset by a reduction in the cash limit for class II, vote 1 of £4,000,000 from £637,285,000 to £633,285,000. The running costs limit on vote 1 will be decreased by £2,600,000 from £478,460,000 to £475,860,000. The remainder will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

Ms. Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning VAT on house renovation work; and if he will reconsider his policy on charging VAT on these works.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have received a number of representations from the construction industry and individual property owners; our obligations under the EC sixth VAT directive prevent us extending the scope of our current zero-rating.

Cider

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy in the EC Council of Ministers to resist proposals that cider should be taxed as wine.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government support the industry's case for a separate tax category for cider and perry. We shall continue to oppose any proposal which would require cider and perry to be subject to the same rates of duty as wine.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing, for the latest year available, identifiable public expenditure by function in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom expressed (a) in cash terms, (b) as an index (United Kingdom total identifiable public expenditure = 100), (c) as an amount per capita and (d) as an amount per capita expressed as an index (United Kingdom amount per capita = 100).

Mr. Mellor: Identifiable public expenditure by function and territory for 1990-91 is set out in table E6 of the statistical supplement to the 1991 "Autumn Statement."

Income Tax

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 6 March, Official Report, columns 322-23 to the hon. Member for Mid Kent (Mr. Rowe) if he will give the answer at 1991-92 prices and at 1991-92 earnings (average gross male earnings).

Mr. Maude: The information is in the table at 1991-92 prices. It is not appropriate to apply a gross earnings deflator to total tax liabilities.

[1] Latest estimate based on a projection of the 1989-90 Survey of Personal Income.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the increase in the basic rate of income tax which would be required to yield the same revenue as his latest estimate of the net yield from the community charge in 1992-93.

Mr. Maude: Community charge receipts in 1992-93 are expected to be £8 billion as set out in table 1.2 of the 1992 FSBR. This is equivalent to 4p on the basic rate of income tax.

Mortgages

Mr. Walden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average mortgage loan in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France and (c) Germany.

Mr. Maples: The average outstanding mortgage in the United Kingdom was £27,200 in 1991-92. The average new mortgage in 1991Q4 was around £45,000. No directly comparable figures are available for France and Germany. However, the average mortgage loan issued by a leading lender in France is currently in the region of 370,000 French francs, while the average new loan advanced by the German mortgage banks was 270,000 deutschmarks in 1989.

Allowances

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the revenue yield in 1992-93 from freezing (a) the married couple's allowance, (b) the additional pesonal allowance and (c) the widow's bereavement allowance, instead of index-linking them.

Mr. Maude: The yields in a full year at 1992-93 levels from freezing the married couple's allowance for those aged under 65 would be about £190 million. Corresponding yields for the additional personal allowance and the widow's bereavement allowance are about £10 million and under £5 million.

Valuation Reviews

Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will institute a general valuation review of hotels, guest houses and holiday flats in north Devon.

Mr. Maples: I do not intend to institute a general valuation review of hotels, guest houses and holiday flats in north Devon.

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to carry out a general review of the rating valuations of properties used for the accommodation of tourists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maples: It is not planned to carry out a general review of the rating valuation of properties used for the accommodation of tourists although the valuation officer, Bournemouth, is reinspecting hotels in the Bournemouth area and making adjustments to the rating assessments where necessary.

National Debt

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the interest on the national debt as a percentage of gross domestic product during the past five years and in 1978-79.

Mr. Maples: Figures for both gross and net general Government debt interest during the past five years and in 1978-79 as a percentage of gross domestic product are given below:

	General Government debt interest as percentage of gross domestic product
	Gross	Net[1]
1978-79	4·3	2·6
1986-87	4·5	3·0
1987-88	4·2	2·8
1988-89	3·8	2·5
1989-90	3·6	2·2
1990-91	3·3	2·1

Government Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table, otherwise comparable to table 5.11 of Cm 1920, providing similar analyses for (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested for the years 1986-87 to 1990-91 is set out in the table. Corresponding data for later years are not available.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table, consistent with table 5.7 of Cm 1920 and showing separately for England, Scotland, Wales, Great Britain, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom, the sources of finance for that expenditure, structuring the analysis to be as closely related as possible to table 5.13 where full comparability is not possible because certain adjustments are not calculated at the level of the territories.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Budgets (Gains)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the average individual cumulative gain in 1992 prices to those with incomes (a) under £5,000 a year, (b) £5,000-10,000, (c) £10,000-15,000, (d) £15,000-20,000, (e) £20,000-25,000, (f) £25,000-30,000, (g) £30,000-40,000, (h) £40,000-50,000, (i) £50,000-60,000, (j) £60,000-70,000, (k) £70,000-80,000 and (l) over £80,000 per year (i) as a result of the Budget on 10 March and (ii) cumulatively as a result of all Budgets since 1979.

Mr. Maude: Estimates of liability to income tax compared with statutory indexation and with an indexed 1978-79 regime are given in the table. The 1978-79 and 1991-92 income tax regimes have been indexed to 1992-93 level by reference to the statutory formula, and allowing for independent taxation.

Range of individuals income in 1992-93 £	Average gain (+)/loss (−) in income tax in 1992-93 £ Compared with 1991-92 indexed regime	Compared with 1978-79 indexed regime
Under 5,000	40	200
5,000-10,000	90	420
10,000-15,000	90	730
15,000-20,000	90	1,060
20,000-25,000	90	1,430
25,000-30,000	70	1,830
30,000-40,000	−70	2,230
40,000-50,000	−90	3,570
50,000-60,000	−90	6,010
60,000-70,000	−90	9,830
70,000-80,000	−90	13,200
over 80,000	−90	45,800
Average	70	1,240

For the purpose of the calculation in the second column of the table, the indexed regime of 1978-79 has been applied directly to the income base of 1991-92. In practice, retention of the 1978-79 regime, indexed as appropriate, for the intervening years would have led to changes in the income base.

Civil Servants (Relocation)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the terms of the alternative financial assistance offered to staff civil servants when they are relocated.

Mr. Maples: A discretionary scheme to help civil servants who are permanently transferred and who are reluctant to move for domestic reasons was announced on 15 November 1990 at columns 188-89. The elements of the scheme are taxable. Departments and agencies discretion in offering this scheme will be further widened in 1992 to enable them to meet the cost-of the tax liability of the financial assistance, other than for the advance of salary, where this is cost-effective, and can be met within existing running costs.

CIVIL SERVICE

"Next Steps"

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on progress in the "next steps" initiative.

Mr. Renton: Progress is good. During April we expect the total of agencies launched to grow to 72. About 290,000 civil servants, half the total, will be working in agencies and other organisations operating on "next steps" lines. In addition, 27 candidates have been announced covering over 65,000 more civil servants. Many other areas are under consideration. As Cm 1760—"Improving Management in Government—the Next Steps Agencies, Review 1991"—shows, "next steps" is delivering benefits for customers, staff and taxpayers.

[1] 1 October 1991 figures for civil servants and armed forces personnel. Casuals are excluded. Part-time staff are counted as half units.

[2] Expected to be launched in April 1992.

[3] Trading fund.

[4] Defence Support Agency.

[5] Northern Ireland civil service.

[6] Departments operating fully on "next steps" lines. Staffing figures for Inland Revenue exclude the Valuation Office, which is a free-standing agency.

[7] Figure for total staff in agencies includes 8,070 armed forces personnel in Ministry of Defence agencies and 1,300 locally engaged staff in service children's schools (north-west Europe). Figure for total staff in candidates includes 16,330 armed forces personnel in Ministry of Defence candidates.

[8] Includes in the totals 7,900 staff in agencies and 350 staff in candidates in the Northern Ireland civil service.

[9] May be launched as a Defence Support Agency.

[10] Estimated to require 550 staff by April 1993. Of these 120 will come from the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency.

[11] Estimated to require 1,800 staff, drawn from a variety of sources.

[12] From early 1993 the agency is estimated to require 4,500 staff, 1,500 of which will come from the Social Security Benefits Agency.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service how many chief executives of "next steps" agencies have been recruited following open competition.

Mr. Renton: The Government's objective in appointing agency chief executives is to get the right person for the job. Open competition is now the norm, and about two thirds of chief executives and chief executives-designate —47 out of 74—have been recruited in this way.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Community Charge

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community charge defaulters have been gaoled in England and Wales since the charge was introduced.

Mrs. Rumbold: According to the records held centrally, which are approximate, one prisoner was received into a Prison Service establishment in 1990 following committal for non-payment of the community charge.

Data for 1991 are not yet complete but the provisional figure for such receptions in the year is about 110.

Prison Officers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional hours have been worked by prison officers, in each appropriate prison establishment, above those for which they have been contracted, and for which they are currently owed time off in lieu.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest readily available figures, for 5 January, show an average balance of 4.84 hours owed per officer. This is 34 per cent. less than the level at 1 September 1991. The situation varies in each establishment in line with a range of factors.

The overall number of net additional hours per establishment and the average balance of hours owed per officer at each establishment is as follows.

Establishment	Balance of hours 5 January 1992 (week 41)	Balance of hours per officer 5 January 1992

Community Charge Statistics

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the document which magistrates' clerks return to enable his Department to compile the quarterly progress of community charge enforcement figures and any ancillary explanatory memoranda.

Mr. John Patten: I have arranged for a copy of the last return and accompanying notes to be placed in the Library.

Departmental Expenditure

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will express the totals and sub-totals for planned expenditure given in the cash plans published in Cm 1909 in real terms as well as cash terms.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information requested is as follows. The real term figures are expressed in 1990-91 prices using the gross domestic product deflator.

[1] Estimated.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the reasons for the differences between the 1991-92 expenditure plans published last year in Cm 1509 and the 1991-92 totals for estimated outturn.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The difference of £115 million between 1991-92 expenditure plans for the prisons as shown in Cm 1909 and estimated outturn as shown in Cm 1509 is because there has been additional expenditure to pay for the cost of keeping prisoners in police cells, mainly due to an increase in prison population. Extra expenditure was also necessary to meet the construction costs of new prisons, due mainly to slippage in the programme, claims from contractors and the accelerated integral sanitation programme.

Expenditure on the police has risen because estimated outturn now includes £3 million representing the cost of superannuation in the charges made for services and £4 million to meet the cost of centralising the provision of an existing service. The Forensic Science Service estimated outturn also now includes £2 million for the cost of superannuation. The increase of £3 million for miscellaneous services is mainly due to higher than anticipated levels of transfer values and pensions payments.

The increase of £13 million for immigration and citizenship is mainly attributable to the increased resources made available in the summer supplementary estimate (HC486) for the processing of asylum applications. This also accounts for the £1 million increase for community services, which covers grants to organisations assisting asylum seekers. The £1 million reduction in the estimated outturn for other broadcasting is due to the changed requirements of the loan to the Radio Authority.

Other changes to the distribution of central Government's own expenditure are caused by reallocations of resources within the overall total.

The total increases of £168 million in central Government current grants to local authorities are attributable to changed local authority estimates of expenditure and to grant adjustments for previous years. The only difference in the outturn for capital grant is to cover an increase of £1 million in capital expenditure by the Metropolitan police, and was authorised by the summer supplementary estimate (HC486).

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what effect the rise in the estimate of outturn for 1991-92, as recorded in Cm 1909, will have on his Department's expenditure plans for 1992-93.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Some of the developments affecting estimated outturn for 1991-92 can be expected to become a regular feature of the Department's expenditure. To the extent consistent with the resources available to my Department, such developments have been taken into account in planning expenditure in 1992-93.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what differences there are between the planned outturns for 1992-93 and 1993-94 and the planned expenditure for those years as recorded in last year's annual report; and what are the reasons for these differences.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information requested is as follows:

[1] Figure shown is an amalgamation of both the Fire Service College and Other Fire, which are shown separately in the 1992 Departmental Report.

The main reasons for these differences are that additional provision has been made for extra police manpower; improved security and the ending of slopping out in prisons; increased expenditure to implement the Criminal Justice Act 1991 and continue the programme of diverting offenders from custody; and strengthening the immigration control system. Further details were given in the House Office news release accompanying the Home Office aspects of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's 1991 autumn statement. A copy of this news release was placed in the Library.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional commitments which will involve spending in the years after 1994-95 he has undertaken since the publication of his Department's 1991 annual report.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: In June 1991, I announced the appointment of Mr. Anthony Mullett, QPM as director-designate of the National Criminal Intelligence Service. The service will become operational on 1 April 1992 and will bring together a number of national units such as the national drugs intelligence unit and the Interpol bureau, together with several national intelligence functions at present performed by the Metropolitan police.

The Home Office will be responsible for meeting the United Kingdom's share of the cost of a new Europe-wide, computer-based information system for immigration control purposes (the European information system).

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what strategies he has to constrain expenditure if pay increases in 1992-93 are greater than allowed in departmental running costs plans.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: If pay increases in 1992-93 are greater than allowed in my Department's running costs plans. I will reconsider my priorities and seek offsetting savings.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes there have been in the 1991-92 estimated outturn compared with the 1990-91 outturn in (a) percentage terms and (b) after adjustment for the gross domestic product deflator.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information requested is as follows:

[1] Current, capital and special grants, and credit approvals.

[2] Current grants.

[3] Credit approvals.

[4] Due to a change from paying grant in advance to paying grant in arrears, only three quarterly payments have been made during 1991-92.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures his Department has for keeping itself informed of the regional distribution of its expenditure and for correcting any significant unintended imbalances which appear.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The nature of Home Office services is such that their provision is generally demand-led, and as the greater part of Home Office expenditure takes the form of grants to local authorities, the mechanism for achieving a fair distribution is inherently self-regulating. So far as the Home Office's own direct expenditure is concerned, it would not be feasible to adopt a policy of ensuring that such expenditure is divided proportionately between the regions because other considerations must take precedence in determining the distribution of resources. In the Prison Service, however, the vote is constructed broadly on the basis of regional structure, and each region bids for its own funds. The financial management system records expenditure against regional budgets. The position is monitored regularly by the central finance committee, which will adjust any imbalance by virement and/or by means of a supplementary estimate.

Departmental Efficiency

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of state for the Home Deparmtent what percentage growth in aggregate departmental efficiency he estimates will be achieved by the Home Office between 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The latest estimates are that between 1991-92 and 1992-93, the Prison Service will achieve efficiency savings of 1·7 per cent. and the remainder of the Department 1·9 per cent. in the use of its respective running costs.

Agencies

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to alter current financial arrangements for his Department's agencies;

(2) if it is his policy for the Passport Agency and the Forensic Science Service eventually to operate as trading funds.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: It is the policy of the Department for the two agencies to operate as trading funds as soon as they have gained sufficient experience and developed appropriate systems. In each case, work is in hand to develop improved financial and management information system.

The proposed target date for establishing the United Kingdom Passport Agency as a trading fund is 1 April 1994. Achieving this will depend on the successful development of the agency's new computerised accounting system.

The Forensic Science Service is aiming to introduce in 1992-93 an integrated IT system to support its business activities, and progress has been made in moving to a business-like basis of operation. But the further development necessary to enable the FSS to operate successfully as a trading fund is likely to take at least another three to four years.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to establish any executive agencies in 1992-93, apart from the Fire Service College.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have no plans to establish any other new agencies during the coming financial year, but, as I said in answer to a question from my hon. Friend yesterday at column 592, I intend that the Prison Service should become an executive agency from 1 April 1993. A number of other areas of the Department are also being considered as potential agencies.

Departmental Annual Report

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what publicity was given to the publication of his Department's annual report, Cm 1909.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: A Home Office news release was issued on the publication of the Department's annual report, 1909. A copy was placed in the Library.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many copies of his Department's annual report, Cm 1909, have been sold at the latest available date.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I understand that at 5 March 1992, HMSO had sold 1,748 copies of my Department's annual report, Cm 1909.

Bomb Explosion (Victoria Station)

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims for compensation from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board for injury from the bomb explosion at Victoria station on 18 February 1991 have still not been settled; when the claim from a constituent of the right hon. Member for Worthing is likely to be met; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The following information about the 42 applications for compensation arising from the bomb incident at Victoria station on 18 February 1991 has been provided by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board:

Status of applications	Number of applications
Yet to be considered by board member	11
Currently with board member for initial decision	5
Interim payment or payments awarded	23
Final award made	3
Total	42

The board recently agreed an interim award to an applicant from Worthing and an offer letter will be sent shortly. Total compensation in this case cannot be assessed until the final medical position is established and loss of earnings has been agreed.

Research (Non-human Primates)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he received a copy of the response from the Research Defence Society dated January 1992 to the Advocates for Animals report on the use of non-human primates in research in Great Britain.

Mrs. Rumbold: A copy of the Research Defence Society analysis of the Advocates for Animals report, which it sent to Members of Parliament who had signed early-day motion 214, was received in the Department on 29 January 1992.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department published its response to the Advocates for Animals report into the use of non-human primates in research in Great Britain; and if he will name those organisations to whom it was sent.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Home Office responded to the Advocates for Animals report on 3 February 1992 after detailed consideration of its contents. The Home Office response was made available to the Animal Procedures Committee, but has not otherwise been made available to any organisation.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department consulted (a) the Research Defence Society or (b) any other pro-animal research organisation before responding to the Advocates for Animals report on the use of non-human primates in research in Great Britain.

Mrs. Rumbold: In the course of the regular contact which the Home Office has with the Research Defence Society, along with other organisations concerned with the use of animals in research, the report by Advocates for Animals was discussed. The Home Office response to the report was however formulated in the light of detailed comments from Home Office inspectors about the research work in question and was not discussed with any outside organisations.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will investigate the similarity between the wording used by his Department in its response to the Advocates for Animals' report on the use of non-human primates in research in Great Britain and that contained in the response received earlier from the Research Defence Society.

Mrs. Rumbold: No. Although the Home Office was aware of the Research Defence Society's views, the responses were prepared separately.

Crime, Manchester

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to help prevent crime in Greater Manchester.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government have set up safer cities crime prevention projects in Rochdale and Salford, and drugs prevention teams in Salford and Manchester. My right hon. Friend has also approved an additional 20 posts in Greater Manchester police from 1 April this year. In addition the Government encourage the growth and development of local neighbourhood watch schemes and there are now approximately 9,000 watch schemes in the area, covering 270,000 households.

Departmental Achievements

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the principal achievements of his Department since June 1987.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Determined efforts have been maintained and developed to counter crime. The number of police posts in England and Wales has increased by 4,257, bringing the total to 127,127. The number of civilians supporting the police has increased by 6,242 to 46,948 and since 1986-87 expenditure on the police has increased by 24·9 per cent. in real terms. Action has been put in place to develop the most efficient use of resources, to enhance the police capacity to deal with crime and the other demands on them and to improve the quality of service to the public.

Twenty safer cities projects have been set up in inner-city areas supporting over 2,300 initiatives with the objectives of reducing crime, lessening the fear of crime and creating conditions in which economic enterprise and community life can flourish. Crime prevention has been taken forward rigorously with the establishment of "Crime Concern" and initiatives, including on car crime, have been taken.

Legislation has been passed to enable the United Kingdom to ratify the United Nations convention against the illicit traffic in drugs; to enhance the control of firearms; to strengthen the country's defences against terrorism; to increase the powers available to the courts for dealing with football hooligans; to improve our ability to give effect to our policy of firm but fair immigration control; to create a new and more open and competitive framework for the licensing and regulation of independent radio and television services, leading to greater choice for viewers and listeners while maintaining proper safeguards for programme quality and standards; to remove outdated restrictions on licensing laws; to enable the United Kingdom to participate more effectively an international co-operation against crime, including a major reform of the extradition law; to make provision for courts to order the confiscation of the proceeds of profitable crime; to provide for unduly lenient sentences to be reviewed; to tighten the law on possession of knives and to ban the sale of offensive weapons which have no legitimate use; to strengthen the jury system; to reform the law on official secrets by replacing section 2 of the Official Secrets Act 1911 with provisions protecting just six classes of official information; and to put the Security Service on a statutory basis, with the appointment of a commissioner and provision for complaints to be made to an independent tribunal.

Legislation has been passed to encourage key Hong Kong personnel and their families to remain there by giving them the assurance of British citizenship in order to help them maintain the future stability and prosperity of the territory. The Criminal Justice Act 1991 strengthened the range and effectiveness of community penalties and provides a new and more coherent legislative framework for sentencing.

Legislation has also been enacted for England and Wales to create an offence of prison mutiny and to increase the maximum penalty for aiding prisoners to escape and to ensure that anyone guilty of taking a vehicle without consent is liable to a more severe sentence in aggravated circumstances. A Bill was introduced to enable applications for asylum in the United Kingdom to be dealt with quickly and effectively.

A Royal Commission has been established to examine the effectiveness of the criminal justice system in securing the convictions of those guilty of criminal offences and the acquittal of the innocent.

In addition to a major programme to impose existing prisons, since the beginning of 1987 10 new prisons have been opened, providing over 5,500 places. A further three prisons are due to open in the next three months, giving another 1,600 places, and five are under construction providing over 3,000 more places. Arrangements are being made so that from the end of December 1994 all prisoners in Prison Service establishments will have access to sanitation at all times.

The White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice", presented to Parliament last September, charts a course for the Prison Service in England and Wales into the next century and plans have been announced for the management of the Prison Service, including a move to agency status for the service. My Department launched two other "next steps" agencies in 1991—the Forensic Science Service and the United Kingdom Passport Agency—and the Fire Service college will become an agency next month.

Naturalisation Applications

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outstanding applications for naturalisation as a British citizen are (a) less than one year old, (b) between one and two years old, (c) between two and three years old and (d) more than three years old.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As at 11 March 1992 the number of applications for naturalisation awaiting determination was 41,799. Of these (a) 14,992 were less than one year old, (b) 14,640 were between one and two years old, (c) 5,486 were between two and three years old, and (d) 6,681 applications were more than three years old. In addition, there were about 3,500 applications of all types for citizenship awaiting allocation to caseworkers.

Child Abuse, Rossendale

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Lancashire on the steps the police are now taking to re-open investigations arising from inquiries made by the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Mr. Trippier) in 1987 relating to alleged abuse by Mr. Michael Finn while he was a teacher at a primary school in Rossendale.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The investigation of criminal offences is an operational matter for chief officers of police.

Shops Act 1950

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the progress of his consultations about the future of the Shops Act 1950.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have recently concluded my extensive programme of separate discussions with a wide range of major interest groups on possible ways of reforming the Shops Act 1950. Once the legal position of the Act in relation to Community law is clear, I hope to be in a position to recommend a way forward to the House.

Firearms Licensing

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will undertake a review of the firearms licensing system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: New controls on firearms and shotguns were imposed by the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988. I am sure that these controls are justified and should remain.

Responsibility for administering the controls currently rests with chief officers of police. The licensing function places an onerous administrative burden on police forces and diverts police officers from skilled police work, which only they can do.

I have today issued a public consultation paper which suggests that firearms licensing might be administered by a new civilian firearms control board, staffed by trained firearms and crime prevention experts. This is an imaginative proposal: it would put public safety first by providing a licensing system operated expertly, consistently and economically; and it would release police officers for other work. I urge all those involved to study the consultation paper. Their comments will be most carefully considered. I have placed a copy in the Library.

Inquests

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of inquests into deaths in police custody or in prison where the Government Departments were represented; and how long these inquests lasted during the last five years.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 5 March 1992]: Between 1 January 1990 and 6 March 1992 there were 175 deaths in prison custody. The Prison Service was represented at 44 of the 131 inquests which have so far been held into these deaths. There is no Home Office representation at inquests into deaths in police custody.

Information on the number of inquests between 1988 and 1990 at which the Prison Service was represented could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on the duration of inquests is not available.

Police Manpower

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the results of the 1986 inter-censual survey (a) in south Glamorgan and (b) other areas were used to supplement the results of the 1981 census in determining the factors considered in calculating the number of officers needed by the South Wales constabulary as part of his Department's recent review of police manpower.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [pursuant to his reply, 12 December 1991, c. 508]: I now understand from OPCS that an inter-censual sample survey did take place in Wales in 1986; there was however no survey in England. The results of the Welsh survey could not have been used to calculate the relative establishment need of the South Wales constabulary because the formula used to assess relative need requires comparable information for all force areas in England and Wales.

HEALTH

North Staffordshire DHA (Radiation Treatment)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the terms of reference of each of the two inquiries into the radiation treatment at the North Staffordshire district health authority; and when he expects each of the reports to be published.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department has assigned an inspector, appointed to enforce the Ionising Radiation (Protection of Persons Undergoing Medical Treatment) Regulations 1988, to investigate the circumstances of this incident. He will make recommendations, when he has completed his investigations, to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on what action, if any, is needed and what wider lessons can be learned. In addition, North Staffordshire health authority has appointed two independent experts, Dr. Ash of Cookridge hospital, Leeds and Dr. Bates of St. Thomas' hospital, London, to carry out a clinical review of all cases and West Midlands regional health authority has announced an independent inquiry, chaired by Sir Peter Baldwin, into how the incident occurred. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir James Ackers, the chairman of West Midlands regional health authority, for the terms of reference for both these inquiries.

Computer Expenditure

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was (a) the capital expenditure and (b) the revenue expenditure incurred on computer hardware and software by each individual health authority in England in each year since 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: A table showing the information requested for 1987-88, which was derived from the annual accounts of health authorities in England for that financial year, has been placed in the Library. For comparable information for the years since 1987-88 and notes on this expenditure, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 28 January at columns 541-43.

GPs Examination Certificates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the maximum charge which a general practitioner is entitled to make to provide a doctor's examination certificate for motor insurance for a patient in receipt of invalidity benefit and mobility allowance.

(2) if he will exempt claimants on disability benefits from insurance certificate charges.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Under their terms of service in the NHS, general practitioners must issue free of charge only certain specified certificates needed by patients to meet statutory requirements, such as those needed to support claims for social security benefits. Doctors may make a charge for providing private certificates including those requested by insurance companies; the amount charged in such cases is for agreement between the doctor and the patient.

General Practice Nurses

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses worked for general practitioners in 1978-79, 1983-84, 1990-91 and at the latest available date, respectively.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of GP practice nurses—whole-time equivalent—in England were: 888 in October 1978; 1,657 in October 1983, and 7,698 in October 1990—the latest figure available.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of hospitals closed in each year since 1979; and what information his Department has on the number of closures in the currrent financial year.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total level of proceeds from the sale of closed hospital sites in each year since 1979; and what information his Department has on proceeds from sales in the current financial year.

Mr. Dorrell: Total capital receipts from the sale of NHS land and buildings in England since 1979 are shown in the table. The latest estimate available for the current financial year is about £200 million.

	£ million
1979-80	9·9
1980-81	15·2
1981-82	19·4
1982-83	18·0
1983-84	31·5
1984-85	48·4
1985-86	82·3
1986-87	145·1
1987-88	197·8
1988-89	265·8
1989-90	221·0
1990-91	159·4

All proceeds have been reinvested in the NHS.

Television

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines or restrictions exist covering the charging by health authorities and health trusts for the use of television by patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Provision of communal television sets is a matter left to the discretion of individual trusts and health authorities. Charging is considered appropriate to meet the reasonable cost involved where patients wish to have a TV facility for their own personal use.

General Practitioners

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by region the ratio of patients to general practitioners in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is given in the table which relates to the average list sizes in England at 1 April 1991, the latest date for which figures are available. The information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Low Income Scheme

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to report on the outcome of the review of the health benefits low income scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We are giving careful consideration to a number of proposals arising from the review. The results will be announced when this process is complete.

West Middlesex University Hospital

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions have taken place between the Houslow and Spelthorne district health authority and the North West Thames regional health authority concerning a new surgical block for the West Middlesex university hospital; on what date the district is expected to submit the formal application to the region; by what date the region expects to decide; what is the expected gross capital cost; what contribution to the cost will be made from the sale of the site of the former South Middlesex hospital following the grant of planning permission for a Tesco shop; and whether the consent of the Secretary of State for health is required.

Mr. Dorrell: I understand that there have been discussions between the Hounslow and Spelthorne district health authority and the North West Thames regional health authority over many months concerning the use of funds of some £29 million from the sale of the former South Middlesex hospital towards the further development of the West Middlesex university hospital. A formal application was submitted in January 1992. Until the final shape and cost of the scheme is decided it is not possible to say whether the scheme will require my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's consent.

Deaths

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths occurred in 1991 from HIV-related illnesses, measles, meningitis, whooping cough and cot death; and what resources are being deployed by his Department to combat these diseases, respectively.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1991, the public health laboratory service communicable disease surveillance centre reported the number of deaths in reported AIDS cases as 816. The actual number, not yet available because of delays in the reporting system, is estimated to be over 1,250. In addition, 46 deaths were reported in 1991 in HIV infected persons without AIDS. This number may also increase as a result of delayed reporting. In 1991 the Government allocated £11 million for the development of AIDS public education, £147·5 million to health and local authorities for the development of AIDS services including diagnosis, treatment, care and prevention, and nearly £2 million to the voluntary sector. The Medical Research Council has been allocated £31 million over five years for programmes on vaccines and drugs for treatment.

Provisional reports indicate that there were no deaths from acute measles or whooping cough in England and Wales in 1991. Immunisation against both diseases is included in the national childhood immunisation programme, and at November 1991, coverage was 90 per cent. of children aged two years for measles and 88 per cent. at 18 months for whooping cough. It is not possible to give the precise cost of these vaccines, but the immunisation publicity campaign in 1991-92 has cost £1·8 million with £2·2 million planned for 1992-93.

Deaths from all forms of meningitis totalled 236 in England and Wales for the first three quarters of 1991. Figures for the final quarter are not yet available. In October a vaccine—"Hib"—against invasive haemophilus disease, one of the main causes of bacterial meningitis, will be added to the programme. A major information and education campaign will precede the launch of Hib vaccine.

In 1990, the latest year for which figures are available, the number of infant deaths in England and Wales with any mention of sudden infant death on the death certificate was 1,280, a welcome reduction from the peak of 1,629 deaths in 1988. Whilst the causes of sudden infant death remain unknown, recent research showing that placing babies down to sleep on their back or side can reduce significantly the risk of cot death led to the launch of the £2 million "Back to Sleep" campaign in December 1991 and the issue of 3 million leaflets on "Reducing the Risk of Cot Death". We hope that this will lead to a continuation of the downward trend we have recently seen. Since 1979, the Government have spent £3·8 million on research into sudden infant death and respiratory distress syndromes through the Medical Research Council.

Pharmacist Contractors' Fees

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the amount paid to pharmacist contractors in England and Wales in respect of fees and on-cost, expressed in pence per prescription and as a percentage of the total amount paid per prescription for each of the last 10 years at actual and constant prices.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The requested information is given in the table:

Fees and oncost—Pence per prescription

Year	Actual prices	Constant prices[2]	Percentage of total amount paid
1981	76·3	136·7	22·4
1982	84·6	141·6	22·4

Note: Lump sum underpayments are included in the year in which they were paid.

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of expenditure on primary health care was paid to pharmacist contractors in respect of fees and on-cost for the last 10 years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information is shown in the table.

Total expenditure on pharmacists' fees and on-costs as a percentage of total expenditure on primary health care services
England

Insulin Injections

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what would be the net extra cost to his Department of supplying insulin injection pen needles for diabetics on prescription.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The addition of insulin injection pen needles to the list of items GPs may prescribe is the subject of continuing negotiations with manufacturers. The price which will be paid for needles when they become prescribable, and therefore the cost to the Department, are part of these negotiations.

English Wine

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will delay the implementations of all those recent environment and health regulations applying to the production of English wine in English vineries until a full assessment has been made by the deregulation unit of his Department of their impact on the industry and effect on unemployment and the industry of obligatory requirements imposed by local authority environmental health officers.

Mr. Dorrell: No new regulations have been introduced relating specifically to the safe production of wine. Wine producers are subject to the general requirements of the Food Safety Act 1990 for hygienic and safe production. As for other food businesses, their premises must be registered with local authorities under the Food Premises (Registration) Regulations 1991. Any enforcement measures should relate to the known risks of the product. In the case of wine production, the risks are generally relatively low.

Road Traffic Accidents

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total amount charged by each health authority for treatment given to patients following road traffic accidents for each of the last 10 years; and if he will give the comparable figures for NHS trusts.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 14 February 1992]: The information requested, which is derived from annual accounts submitted to the Department, is shown in the tables for the financial years to 1990-91—the latest available. Such information is not collected in-year.

Table 1 shows the figures for the 10 years by region and table 2 for each health authority for the most recent three years. A complete analysis to each health authority for the entire 10-year period could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Source: Annual accounts of district health authorities in England and those of the special health authorities for the London post-graduate teaching hospitals. (Predecessor authorities for 1981-82).

Notes:

1. The annual figures are for total income from charges for emergency and further treatment under the Road Traffic Acts (RTA) and represent sums due for the financial year but not necessarily received.

2. The figures also reflect accounting adjustments and RTA charges written-off as bad debts in the year of account. Such adjustments and write-offs include RTA sums due from earlier years and a negative income figure may occasionally result for a particular year (figures shown in brackets in the tables).

3. The annual accounts of the fourteen regional health authorities (RHAs) in England and six of the eight special health authorities (SHAs) for the London post-graduate teaching hospitals record no income from RTA in the period 1988-89 to 1990-91 and are omitted from table 2.

Health Service Finance

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish annex B of Cm 1913 adjusted for input unit costs.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 3 March 1992]: The information requested for the hospital and community health services, family health services and the health service as a whole for the years 1986-87 to 1990-91 is given in the table. Information is not available in this form for other parts of the programme or for later years.

This information measures changes in total inputs at constant factor cost but ignores the continuing success of the national health service in increasing the efficiency with which it uses resources. Therefore, in order to give a complete picture, figures adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator have also been included.

It has not been possible to adjust these figures for certain national health service review related changes. Figures for 1991-92 onwards are therefore not directly comparable with those for earlier years. The main points are:

(i) Sums provided for trust debt remuneration are included in hospital and community health services current in 1991-92 and 1992-93;

(ii) Trusts' capital spending financed via health authorities' payments for services is included in hospital and community health services current for 1991-92 and 1992-93;

(iii) General practitioner fundholders' expenditure on drugs is included in hospital and community health services current in 1991-92 only.

Expenditure figures as they appear in Annex B of Cm 1913 adjusted for changes in input unit costs and by the GDP deflator

Agency Staff

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each district health authority, regional health authority, special health authority, and for England as a whole the amount spent on agency staff for each year since 1987 and for the latest available year.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 12 March 1992]: The information, which is derived from annual accounts submitted to the Department for the financial years 1987-88 to 1990-91—the latest available—is shown in the table.

Annual accounts of regional and district health authorities in England and those of the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals.

Notes:

1. The table excludes the similar but comparatively small costs of staff wholly or mainly concerned with capital projects and which are charged to capital expenditure by the health authorities. Such costs totalled as follows:

	£000 (cash)
1987-88	2,449
1988-89	2,876
1989-90	4,612
1990-91	4,899

2. The table also excludes any expenditure incurred by special health authorities other than those for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Scientists

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to establish a United Kingdom body to retrain nuclear scientists and weapon designers from the Atomic Weapons Establishment in civil development projects.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No.

Hydrographic Office

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for defence what changes he proposes in the budget of the Hydrographic Office defence support agency from 1 April; what consequences for staffing he expects to result; and what consultations have taken place with representatives of the employees.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The 1992-93 business plan for the Hydrographic Office defence support agency is still being prepared, and consequently the budgetary allocation and any staffing implications have yet to be finalised by the chief executive. Discussions between the management and representatives of Hydrographic Office staff will continue by means of well-established local Whitley committee machinery.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has had over the prospect of the Hydrographic Office defence support agency achieving metrication of charts on a world basis by 1999; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A number of representations have been received concerning the metrication of charts by the Hydrographic Office defence support agency, including some from hon. Members. One of the key targets set for the chief executive of the Hydrographic Office is to reduce the number of imperial unit charts in the inventory by at least 90 per year. This will allow the metrication programme to be completed by 2005. By 1999 all imperial charts relating to EC waters will have been converted to metric units of measurement in accordance with an EC directive covering the territories of EC member states and their territorial waters.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on the adequacy of staff numbers employed on marketing by the Hydrographic Office defence support agency.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the automation programme of the Hydrographic Office defence support agency and the likely staff savings (a) before 1995 and (b) after 1995.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Hydrographic Office. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the running costs and (b) the incomes from sales in request of the Hydrographic Office defence support agency in each year since 1971 (i) at current prices and (ii) at 1990-91 prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Hydrographic Office. I have asked him to reply to my right hon. Friend.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that the savings required under current proposals from the Hydrographic Office defence support agency should be based on net rather than total running costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Hydrographic Office defence support agency has been required to achieve a number of economy measures as a contribution to savings needed throughout the fleet support area. The chief executive has been given certain freedoms and flexibilities to deal with these savings measures and will be considering how best to implement them while ensuring that the Hydrographic Office continues to respond effectively to the needs of its customers.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what figures he has been given by the military authorities of the Commonwealth of Independent States forces for (a) the total number of nuclear warheads in the CIS stockpile and (b) the total amount of nuclear explosive material in warheads or in store in the CIS.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Russian authorities have indicated that the former Soviet nuclear arsenal contains in excess of 27,000 warheads but have given no details of the amount of fissile material they possess.

Plymouth Development Corporation

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from which defence vote and subhead he proposes to make funds available to the proposed new urban development corporation in Plymouth; how much he proposes to make available; and what value has been placed on the amounts of development land surplus to his Department's requirements which he proposes to hand over to the proposed corporation.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Ministry of Defence has undertaken to provide £20 million and some surplus land to support the proposed Plymouth urban development corporation announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on the 6 March; this forms part of a package for the disposal of the Royal William yard.

Low Flying

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he hopes to pay Mr. W. Martin of Blackdown Goat farm, Loddiswell, near Kingsbridge, south Devon, compensation as a result of a low-flying service helicopter on 5 February; if he will make a full investigation into the circumstances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Mr. Martin has only recently submitted a claim to my Department for compensation. The matter will be fully investigated and dealt with as quickly as possible.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children in Scotland were growing up in households dependent on income support or supplementary benefit; and what share of the Scottish population aged 16 years and under this represented, in each year since 1974.

Miss Widdecombe: The answer is given in the table. The information requested is not available for the years prior to 1977 and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The figures in the table largely reflect the increased numbers of lone parent families that is a characteristic of Great Britain as a whole and the fact that 60 per cent. of lone parents are either separated or divorced. Members of this group tend to become dependent on income support because of the problems that they face in obtaining appropriate levels of maintenance for their children and also in entering the labour market. This situation will be helped by the two changes in family credit that are to take effect from April; the definition of remunerative work is to be reduced to 16 hours and a £15 disregard is to be introduced for child maintenance from absent parents. In the longer term the Child Support Agency will help lone parents obtain the child maintenance that is due to them.

Sources: Supplementary benefit/income support annual statistical inquiries for 1977 to 1990. Population statistics branch. General Register Office, Scotland.

[1] There was no annual statistical inquiry in 1985: the one due in December that year was deferred until February 1986.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of income support recipients are responsible for a mortgage or home loan and are (a) not in arrears with their payments, (b) more than three months in arrears and (c) more than six months in arrears.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is not available in the form requested. The Benefits Agency is currently undertaking an exercise to identify claimants in difficulties with their mortgage interest payments and to make those payments direct to lenders. From April all claimants receiving help with mortgage interest will have payments made automatically to qualifying lenders.

Benefit Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the reduction in overall expenditure in all welfare benefits, with the exception of child benefit, if all the adult working population including those currently classified as unemployed were deemed to have earned £100 per week.

Mr. Jack: The outcome of the proposal outlined in the question would not result in a benefit saving.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the average expenditure per claimant for each social security benefit at 1991-92 prices for each year since 1979; and what was the percentage increase or decrease each year.

Miss Widdecombe: The available information is in the tables. In considering this data, it must be borne in mind that wholly beneficial benefit enhancements can, by increasing beneficiary numbers, produce an apparent fall in real average payments whereas in reality household real income from social security can be higher—for example, the growing number of married women receiving pensions in their own right. For income-related benefits, amounts paid reflect other income and other benefits, and changes from year to year are the consequence of increases in various benefits made to reflect the Government's concern to help elderly and sick people and families.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which areas of Lancashire have received cold weather payments in the 1991-92 winter; and for what relevant dates.

Mr. Scott: Such information is available in the Library.

Kidderminster Local Office

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the full cost of temporary accommodation with regard to the closure of the Kidderminster integrated local benefit office will be funded centrally; and if a new integrated local office will be established in Kidderminster.

Miss Widdecombe: The provision of benefit offices is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Libary and the Public Information Office.

Social Fund

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated full cost of implementing all of the Social Security Advisory Committee's recommendations on the social fund in Great Britain in 1992-93.

Mr. Scott: The recommendations of the Social Security Advisory Committee propose wide-ranging changes to the social fund. The full information needed to produce a reliable estimate of the cost is not readily available. We are considering this report carefully, including the basis on which sound estimates might be constructed.

Contributions Agency

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many (a) posting query cases, (b) receivership cases and (c) refund requests are currently outstanding at Contributions Agency central operations in Newcastle; and when they will be cleared;

(2) what are the (a) benefit entitlement implications and (b) revenue implications of the current posting query and receivership cases backlog at Contributions Agency central operations in Newcastle.

Mr. Jack: The current state of processing work at Newcastle and the implications this has on benefits and revenue is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Benefits Statistics

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out (a) the number of claimants, (b) the number of claimants' partners and (c) the number of dependants on supplementary benefit and income support in each year from 1979 to the latest available.

Miss Widdecombe: This information is published annually in the supplementary benefits or income support statistics, copies of which are available in the Library.

It is regretted that there was a transcription error in one figure of a previous answer to a similar question, on 5 November 1991, columns 85-86. The number of claimants in May 1987 should have read 4,895,525 not 4,095,525.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1983-84, (c) 1987-88 and (d) 1991-92 the average number of claimants in receipt of (i) benefits paid to disabled people and (ii) benefits paid to retired people.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Maidstone (Miss Widdecombe), on 9 March 1992 at columns 422-23.

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of raising the income support personal allowance to the level of the personal allowance for those aged 25 years and over for people aged (a) 18, (b) 19, (c) 20, (d) 21, (e) 22, (f) 23 and (g) 24 years.

Miss Widdecombe: The estimated disaggregated costs are shown in the table.

2. — Indicates a cost of less than £2·5 million.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of income support who have a child included in their assessment of entitlement are aged (a) 18 to 19, (b) 20, (c) 21, (d) 22, (e) 23 and (f) 24 years.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is shown in the table.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many recipients of housing benefit who are also receiving income support are aged (a) 16-17, (b) 18-19, (c) 20, (d) 21, (e) 22, (f) 23 and (g) 24 years;

(2) how many recipients of housing benefit are aged (a) 16-17, (b) 18-19, (c) 20, (d) 21, (e) 22, (f) 23 and (g) 24 years.

Miss Widdecombe: The available estimates are in the table:

Number of housing benefit recipients in Great Britain—May 1990

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the extent to which local authorities have complied with the requirements of regulation 66 of Housing Benefits (General) Regulations 1987; what is the effect of non-compliance on voted expenditure for subsidies in respect of authorities' benefit expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I am aware that in the years 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92 some local authorities in Great Britain have not complied with the requirements of the regulations and have continued to make awards of benefit without undertaking reviews at the prescribed time. In such cases, the effect of the regulations is that authorities are only entitled to direct subsidy at the rate proper for overpayments resulting from the authorities' error; 15 per cent. of benefit expenditure in respect of allowances and rebates not paid through the housing revenue accounts and nil in respect of rebates paid through the housing revenues accounts. Subsidy which has been paid in excess of these rates has not therefore been paid in accordance with the full requirements of the regulations.

In the vast majority of cases, however, it is likely that the overrun awards represented the claimants' correct benefit entitlements and would have attracted full subsidy had the awarding authorities complied with the review requirements in the regulations. I therefore propose that authorities should examine all overdue review cases and bring them to account by 5 October 1992. In cases where authorities have awarded more benefit than they would if they had carried out reviews at the prescribed time, they will receive reduced subsidy in the normal way. Where, however there would have been no change in benefit following a review at the prescribed time, I propose to allow full subsidy. From 5 October, I propose to introduce a new subsidy penalty for failure to comply with regulation 66, in addition to those already in place for overpayments. The new penalty will be proportionate to the number of cases outstanding and the length of time they remain unreviewed.

Subject to consultation with the local authority associations and the local authorities about these proposals, the necessary provisions will be brought forward in the relevant subsidy order and determinations.

Land Purchase (Blackpool)

Sir Peter Blaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to be able to announce the result of the negotiations between the Information Technology Services Agency and Blackpool borough council regarding the purchase of land at Peel Corner.

Mr. Jack: We are pleased to say that Blackpool borough council has agreed in principle to the sale of land at junction 4 (Peel Hill), Blackpool to the Information Technology Services Agency. Negotiations are continuing and if finalised they should ensure the retention in the area of some 2,500 jobs and the further prospect of some 250 new jobs, over the next few years. We understand that it is hoped that contracts will be exchanged in the next few weeks.

Pension Funds

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what investigations his Department is undertaking into the pension funds managed by members of the family of Jacob and Jeremiah Harouni; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 5 March 1992]: The Department does not undertake investigations into the management of pension funds. The Occupational Pensions Board monitors the ability of contracted-out schemes to meet their guaranteed minimum pension liabilities. From the limited information available the board is unable to trace a contracted-out scheme in which either Jacob or Jeremiah Harouni is involved.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Institute of Chartered Accountants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the inspectors' reports which have been passed to the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales, with the date on which each report was passed to the institute.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is as follows, updating the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 3 July 1991, Official Report, column 160:

Name of company	Report sent	Decision notified
1 Milbury plc Westminster Property Group Ltd.	26 October 1988	17 February 1992

British and Commonwealth

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the cost so far of his Department's investigation into the collapse of British and Commonwealth.

Mr. Redwood: Inspectors were appointed on 15 June 1990 under section 432 of the Companies Act 1985 to investigate and report on the affairs of Atlantic Computers plc and Atlantic Computer Systems plc, companies in the British and Commonwealth group. The cost, so far, of the Atlantic investigation is £3·89 million.

Inspectors Reports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 25 November, Official Report, column 397, what was the cost of each of the reports listed; what auditing firms were criticised in the reports; and to what interested parties he has supplied the unpublished reports.

Mr. Redwood: The cost of the inspections listed in the reply I gave on 25 November is set out below, where available.

The inspections into Dunlop Holdings Ltd., Euroflame Holdings plc and Hartley Baird plc were carried out by departmental staff and cost information is not available. The inspections into British Anzani and Graylaw Holdings Ltd. were linked and cost information is only available for the combined investigation.

Company name	Cost (£)
Bryanston Finance Ltd. (now Ramor Investments Ltd.)	760,301
British Anzani plc Graylaw Holdings Ltd.	474,045
Blue Arrow plc	3,569,800
The Bestwood plc	2,709,446
BOM Holdings plc	1,185,343

Each of these reports is unpublished and it would be inappropriate for me to discuss details of them. Such reports are disclosed, where appropriate, under the Companies Act 1948, as amended, under part XIV of the Companies Act 1985, as amended, and under the Financial Services Act 1986.

Mr. Austiin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of his Department's inspectors' reports published since 1979 contain evidence of audit failures.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to replies I gave on 19 December 1989 Official Report, column 138 and 139, 21 February 1990 Official Report, column 789 and 26 October 1990 Official Report, column 328. Four inspectors' reports have since been published which contain criticism of auditing firms:

Name of company	Date of publication	Name of accountants
Aldermanbury Trust plc	20 March 1991	Levy Gee
South Diffusion plc	1 May 1991	Spicer and Peglar, Gibraltar
Rotaprint plc	24 July 1991	Arthur Young Ernst and Whinney
The Milford Docks Company	16 January 1992	Coopers and Lybrand

Corporate Reports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has opposing the environmental disclosures in annual corporate reports.

Mr. Redwood: The Confederation of British Industry and the Association of British Insurers made representations expressing reservations on the practicability of a recent private Member's Bill, the Corporate Safety and Environmental Information Bill, which, among other things, would have required publication of certain environmental impact information in the directors' report.

Reporting Accountants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the firms which have acted as reporting accountants on any of the companies privatised by his Department.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not held centrally.

Cadbury Committee on Corporate Governance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations his Department has made to the Cadbury Committee on Corporate Governance.

Mr. Redwood: I have made no written representations on matters of substance, but a representative of the Department participates in the committee as an observer.

Staff Training

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will require companies to publish the amount spent on staff training.

Mr. Redwood: The Government, through the Secretary of State for Employment's support for the investors in people initiative and by other means, encourage companies to publish their expenditure on training where this is appropriate to the objectives of companies' business.

Inspectors' Fees

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the fees of his Department's inspectors are agreed.

Mr. Redwood: Fee rates are agreed by negotiation between my officials and prospective inspectors.

Auditing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has plans to propose legislation under which auditing firms would be prevented from designing tax avoidance schemes for their clients and then auditing the same.

Mr. Redwood: No. The provision by auditors of other services to their clients is a matter that is best dealt with by professional rules of conduct.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will propose regulations to impose an obligation on the supervisory bodies listed by him in his answer of 22 November, Official Report, column 346, to allow the public to have access to the minutes of those bodies.

(2) if he will propose regulations to impose an obligation on the supervisory bodies listed by him in his answer of 22 November, Official Report, column 346, to give the public a right of admission to their council meetings.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation to define the expression "true and fair" in audit reports.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Ernst and Young

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a list showing the inspectors appointed by him who were partners of Ernst and Young.

Mr. Redwood: Mr. J. M. Barney and Mr. D. J. Macleod were appointed as inspectors under section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986. Mr. Macleod was also appointed an inspector on 10 February 1987 under section 442 of the Companies Act 1985 to investigate the membership of Bremner plc. No other partners in the firms which combined to form Ernst and Young, or in that firm itself, have been appointed inspectors since 1979.

Polly Peck

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the Polly Peck administrators.

Mr. Redwood: None, apart from those received from the hon. Member.

Maxwell Companies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will initiate an inquiry into the conduct of the Maxwell auditors.

Mr. Redwood: The Serious Fraud Office—SFO—is investigating events leading up to the collapse of the Maxwell group. Whether the role of the auditors may be relevant to those enquiries is a matter for the SFO. If any matters arise which could more appropriately be investigated using my right hon. Friend's powers, we will not hesitate to use them provided this would not impede the SFO's work. The Government's response to the report of the Social Security Committee on pension funds, which refers to the conduct of auditors, will be made in due course.

Intellectual Property Rights

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what intellectual property rights protection is available for companies applying for his Department's funding for research programmes.

Mr. Leigh: Applicants for assistance under Department of Trade and Industry programmes are expected to take appropriate steps to protect intellectual property rights arising from the assisted work. The costs of such protection are not normally supported because they form part of the commercial exploitation phase which follows the Government-assisted research phase. However, the particular difficulties facing small independent firms are recognised by allowing necessary patent costs to be assisted.

Research Funding

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the total of his Department's funded research each year since 1979 in cash terms, real terms on 1979, and as a percentage decrease or increase on the previous year.

Mr. Leigh: Figures are available from 1981-82 to 1989-90 only, as shown below. They are subject to qualification. Their composition has been altered by changes in the structure of government and transfer to the private sector of public corporations for which my Department was formerly responsible, and from 1987 expenditure of up to £50 million per annum was re-classified to other budgets. Real terms figures are readily available only to a 1989-90 base.

British Telecom

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will hold talks with the director general of OFTEL about the replacement of rural telephone exchanges.

Mr. Redwood: British Telecom has invested more than £17 billion since its privatisation in 1984, with the result that more than 75 per cent. of customers' lines are now served by digital or modern analogue exchanges. Ninety-five per cent. of BT's exchanges will have been digitalised by the end of 1995. I meet the director general of OFTEL from time to time to discuss a wide range of telecommunications issues. He fully shares the Government's view that all customers, including those in rural areas, should benefit from the modernisation and expansion of telecommunications networks and services in the United Kingdom.

Maxwell Communications

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what communications he has received concerning actions that could be taken on behalf of constituents involved in pension funds managed by the Maxwell Communications pension fund; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have received a number of letters from hon. Members on behalf of their constituents.

Forced Labour Products

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what controls exist on the import of products produced by forced labour; if these are being applied to imports from the People's Republic of China; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: There are severe practical difficulties in identifying goods allegedly produced using forced labour given the varied and complex channels of production and distribution which exist in international trade. More generally, it is highly doubtful whether the social conditions that give rise to forced labour can be improved by restricting trade: indeed, opening up trade is more likely to contribute to economic growth in the developing world, which is a prime objective of the current GATT Uruguay round negotiations.

The Government do, however, urge all states which have ratified international instruments covering slavery, servitude, forced labour and similar practices to meet their obligations under those instruments, and also urges those states which have not done so to ratify at the earliest opportunity.

Trade in goods produced specifically with prison labour is governed by the Foreign Prison Made Goods Act 1897, as amended in 1988. For enforcement of the Act, the Government have to rely in the main on the private sector or others to supply sufficient evidence to HM Customs and Excise.

English Wine

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make it his policy to serve exclusively English wine at all official receptions and events sponsored by Her Majesty's Government taking place in the British pavilion at Expo 92 in Seville, and in particular on British national day whether in the pavilion or elsewhere in Seville;

(2) if he will make it his policy to display wines from England in the British pavilion at Expo 92 in Seville without requiring a sponsorship fee from the English wine industry.

Mr. Sainsbury: English wines will be included in the British pavilion restaurant wine lists throughout the duration of Expo 92. They will also be offered at official Government receptions in the pavilion, including on British national day.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of regional selective assistance in the Bury/Bolton travel-to-work area.

Mr. Leigh: Since 1982-83, 82 projects with total project costs of £48·4 million have been supported by regional selective assistance in the Bury-Bolton travel-to-work area. The amount of grant accepted was £6·1 million and at the time the offer was accepted the projects were expected to create a total of 1,520 new jobs and safeguard a further 1,364.

Fireworks

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the figures of injuries caused by fireworks in 1991.

Mr. Leigh: According to reports from accident and emergency units in hospitals in England, Wales and Scotland, 723 people required treatment for injuries caused by fireworks during the three weeks leading up to November 5 1991 and the few days after, a decrease of just over 10 per cent. Serious injuries fell by 23 per cent. There was a decrease in injuries to all age groups, but particularly to 16 to 20-year-olds, where the fall was 31 per cent. There were also significant reductions in injuries to those under 16 years of age. There was a decrease of 36 per cent. in injuries from rockets and of 8 per cent. for bangers, but an increase of 9 per cent. from sparklers. Injuries from incidents in the street were down 21 per cent., from large public displays 18 per cent., from small public dislays 3 per cent. and from family firework parties 2 per cent. There were over 110 million fireworks let off in 1990, but we estimate that there were 2 to 5 per cent. less in 1991. The detailed breakdown for 1991 and the preceding four years is as follows:

Inner Cities Task Forces

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what was the budget of the urban task forces covering London councils in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 12 March 1992]: The budget of the Government's inner cities task forces covering London boroughs in 1991-92 was £5,396,000. This was divided among Deptford £1·2 million, north Peckham £1·5 million, west London £1·25 million, Spitalfields £1·3 million and Hackney—which opened in November 1991—£146,000.

The budgets for 1992-93 have not yet been set.

Containerised Cargo Handling

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what is his policy on maintaining competition in containerised cargo handling facilities on the River Thames, east of Tower bridge.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 10 March 1992]: In this as in other commercial activities, the Government's policy is to maintain and promote competition vigorously.

SCOTLAND

Gaelic Language Examination

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table to show the number of students who passed in Gaelic language at (a) GCSE and O-level and (b) A-level in 1989, 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The tables show for the years in question the numbers of awards in bands 1 to 3 for the Scottish certificate of education examinations at ordinary grade and standard grade, and in bands A to C at higher grade.

Schools Expenditure

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of capital expenditure on schools in (a) each regional authority in Scotland and (b) Scotland in total in each year since 1978-79 in constant prices.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information given in the table has been compiled from local authority financial returns. The fall in expenditure in real terms during the period reflects a substantial and progressive decline in school pupil numbers which has reduced the requirement for new school building.

Fur Factory Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mink factory farms are currently operating under licence in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are two licensed mink farms currently operating in Scotland.

Whitson-Fairhurst Houses

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will agree to meet members and officials of Roxburgh district council to discuss ways of financing the re-purchase of the Whitson-Fairhurst houses in Hawick which were sold to sitting tenants under the right-to-buy provisions without notification of the structural design defects;

(2) what action the Government propose to take to safeguard the interests of the purchases of the Whitson-Fairhurst homes in Burnfoot; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The existing law relating to the sale of defective houses safeguards the interests of the purchasers and I have no power to intervene; any matters concerned with the performance or discharge of the seller's obligations are a matter for the sheriff court. I shall however write to the hon. Member about the sale of Whitson-Fairhurst houses by Roxburgh district council.

Supplementary housing capital allocations are made available to local authorities specifically to cover their obligations to owners of defective houses, such as Whitson-Fairhursts, where the circumstances meet the statutory requirements of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987. Decisions on repurchasing houses in other cases are a matter for the district council and such repurchases must be funded from the council's general housing capital allocations. In the circumstances, I see no purpose in a meeting with the council during the general election period.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish a table, analysing the data in appendix 1 of Cm 1915, showing separately for each line for the years 1986-87 to 1994-95 (a) expenditure within the Scottish block and (b) other expenditure;

(2) if he will publish tables, covering the years 1986-87 to 1994-95 and consistent with Cm 1915, analysing (a) the Scottish block by economic category within spending sector, (b) the Scotland programme by economic category within spending sector and (c) the Scotland programme minus Forestry Commission by economic category within spending sector;

(3) if he will publish a table, analysing the data in the "summary cash plans" of Cm 1915 (page vii), showing separately for each line within the sub-total, total Scottish Office and Departments, for the years 1986-87 to 1994-95 (a) expenditure within the Scottish block and (b) other expenditure;

(4) if he will publish tables, analysing for the years 1986-87 to 1994-95, the data in the "summary cash plans" of Cm 1915 (page vii), analysing the component parts of (a) the Scottish block and (b) other expenditure, by

(i) public expenditure (sub) programme and (ii) the functional classification used in the identifiable expenditure figures, appendix E of Cm 1920.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the latest figures available, stating whether they are final outturns, provisional outturns or budget figures, for 1988-89 to 1992-93 on the statistical basis of table 2 (summary analysis of general fund services revenue account), table 3 (summary analysis of housing, trading and special revenue accounts), table 4 (summary analysis of capital accounts) and table 5 (general fund services revenue account: total expenditure) of Scottish local government financial statistics.

Mr. Lang: The information requested will take a little time to assemble and I shall therefore write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Fish Processors

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when he expects to be able to provide application forms to enable small scale fish processors to make applications for the derogation under article 14 of directive 91/493;

(2) if he will make a statement outlining the Government's position on the provisions of article 14 of EC directive 91/493 dealing with temporary relief from officially set health requirements as they affect small-scale fish processors until January 1996;

(3) whether member states are required to amend the existing provision of the Food Safety Acts to enable the derogation scheme under article 14 of directive 91/493 to proceed;

(4) what form of guidance his Department intends to provide to local environmental health officers to enable them to advise prospective applicants for derogations under article 14 of directive 91/493; and how soon he hopes to be able to provide it.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Under article 14 of directive 91/493/EEC, the Commission is to submit a report to the Council on the minimum structural and equipment requirements to be met by small establishments which distribute on the local market and are situated in regions subject to particular supply constraints. It will be necessary to consider the Government's position on such matters once the Commission's proposals are seen. Meanwhile we have sought the views of the industry. It should not be necessary to amend existing United Kingdom legilsation to enable derogations under article 14 to be put in place should such derogations be agreed.

Careers Service

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish guidelines to encourage careers service partnerships between education authorities and local enterprise companies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Guidelines on the formation of careers service partnerships are being issued today. Quality careers guidance is vital if young people are to achieve their potential and take full advantage of the numerous opportunities in education and training. It is also vital that employers play an active and increasing role in the careers service to ensure that the best possible information and advice are available.

Careers service partnerships are a significant move in that direction. The active involvement of local employers will enable the careers service to offer a valuable and flexible service to its clients and one which is fully attuned to local needs and opportunities to help promote partnerships.

Education authorities are being invited to submit applications for finance to assist them in meeting initial development costs of partnerships during 1992-93. Support is likely to range from £5,000 in the smallest authorities to £30,000 in the largest.

The Government are determined to give young people the best possible deal in education and training and in getting themselves a job. The issue of these guidelines is another step towards achieving that goal.

Assisted Places

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any information about the examination performance of assisted places pupils.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The aim of the assisted places scheme, which was set up by the Government in 1981, is to allow children to attend Scottish independent schools which would otherwise be beyond the financial means of their parents.

Some 2,900 children now benefit from the scheme in Scotland and I expect that number to rise to 3,000 in the 1992-93 session.

The examination performance of children on the scheme has also demonstrated once and for all that children from families with low incomes and from a wide social background can, and do, perform just as well as children from better-off families when they are given the same opportunity.

A survey, which has been commissioned by the Scottish Council of Independent Schools, will I am sure, shortly provide further evidence to confound those who have questioned the merit of the scheme. Final results from the survey are expected in July. The scheme is working well. I look forward with interest to the results of the survey.

Set-aside Schemes

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the amount of payments under the set-aside scheme in Scotland which have been recovered or withheld in each region since 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 March 1992]: The information is set out in the table. It takes account of developments since my earlier answers on 20 December 1991 and 13 February 1992 which contained some provisional figures.

Infertility Service

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the National Medical Advisory Committee's report on an infertility service for Scotland will be published; and when he expects its recommendations to be implemented.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 March 1992]: There are a number of matters about the provision of an assisted reproduction service which call for further investigation and I have sought supplementary advice from the NMAC. When these matters have been resolved, the NMAC report will be published and the issues surrounding implementation addressed.

Planning (Guidelines)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give details of guidelines pertaining to notification times given to third parties in planning matters when a reporter is due to inspect a site; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has had regarding the adequacy of guidelines pertaining to notification times given to third parties in planning matters when a reporter is due to inspect a site; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 11 March 1992]: There is no statutory obligation for a reporter to notify third parties when he is due to inspect a site and there are therefore no guidelines. But the Scottish Office inquiry reporters unit normally informs third parties as a matter of courtesy. Site inspections can be arranged at short notice, but the unit normally gives parties two weeks' notice.

The Scottish Office inquiry reporters unit has had representations on a site inspection which was arranged at short notice at Memsie in Banff and Buchan. The two days' notice given to third parties in this case was shorter than normal and arose from the cancellation of another case.

Council Tax

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his best estimate of the numbers of single people with incomes of over £40,000 per annum who will qualify for a 25 per cent. discount under his council tax proposals.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 12 March 1992]: This information is not available.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish his estimate of the total number of discounts for (a) single person households and (b) other eligible groups he expects to be available under his council tax proposals, shown in aggregate and by region.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 12 March 1992]: For the illustrative calculations published in 1991, it was estimated that 30·4 per cent. of households were one adult households. My right hon. Friend is not yet in a position to estimate the incidence of other discounts under the council tax.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each ambulance authority, and for each year since 1987, the number of complaints lodged.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 12 March 1992]: The information is not held centrally in the form requested.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give, for 1987 and 1991, and for each ambulance service in Scotland, the percentage of emergency calls responded to within (a) 7 to 8 minutes and (b) 14 to 20 minutes.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 12 March 1992]: The information is not held centrally in the form requested.

Health Service Staff

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail the numbers of national health service front-line staff for the national health service in Scotland in 1979, 1983, 1987 and the latest available year; and if he will list the percentage change in these figures between each of those years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 12 March 1992]: The information requested is shown in the table.

Direct care staff in the NHS in Scotland: Whole-time equivalent (WTE) as at 30 September

Total[1] Year	WTE	Percentage change Period	Percentage change
1979	72,320·3	—	—
1983	79,928·4	1979-83	[2]5·1
1987	81,588·7	1983-87	2·1
[3]1991	82,550·8	1987-91	1·2

Notes:

[1] Direct care staff include doctors and dentists, nursing and midwifery staff, scientific and PAMs staff, technical staff, hospital pharmacists and opticians, ambulance staff. The figures include some staff who are not involved in direct patient care—for example, those in teaching, administration or public health medicine. Staff in the state hospital are excluded.

[2] Numbers have been adjusted to reflect the change for nursing staff from a 40-hour week in 1979 to a 37·5-hour week in subsequent years.

PRIME MINISTER

Gambling

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on encouraging the demand for gambling.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Home Affairs to my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) on 13 January 1992, at column 460.

Government Objectives

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Prime Minister what are the present objectives of the Government; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government's objectives were set out in the Queen's Speech on 31 October 1991 at columns 5-7.

Progress made on these objectives is detailed in today's Prorogation Speech.

European Union

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister with reference to the changes proposed by the new article 8—citizens of the union—of the revised treaty of Rome, as specified in the draft treaty on European union, what variation will occur between the future status of any citizens of the United Kingdom and that of its monarch.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 March 1992]: There will be no change in the status of citizens of the United Kingdom or that of the monarch. Every person who is a United Kingdom national for European Community purposes will hold citizenship of the union as an additional right.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Statistics, Newham

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish figures for (a) total recorded offences, (b) all violent crimes, (c) burglaries and (d) murders in Newham for each year from 1980-81 to 1991-92.

Mr. John Patten: The available information has been given in the table. Annual figures for murder cannot be provided in time; I shall therefore write to the hon. Member with them shortly.

Notifiable offences recorded in the borough of Newham

Year	Total notifiable offences	Total violent crime	Burglary[1]
1980	18,230	952	4,309
1981	21,465	977	5,267
1982	21,233	1,097	5,695
1983	20,050	1,081	5,411
1984	23,561	1,460	6,180
1985	24,064	1,476	5,845
1986	23,109	1,439	5,150

Gambling

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to raise money for the arts from the proceeds of gambling.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government have decided to establish a national lottery to raise money for good causes, including the arts. On 6 March, we published a White Paper setting out the broad framework for the national lottery and inviting views of interested parties on a number of the practical issues.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Home Office has completed a number of relocation reviews, and a current wider review of the Police National Computer Organisation includes the question of relocation. Some 2,000 posts in Prison Service headquarters and DTELS will move to the east midlands. There are no plans to relocate any posts to Mansfield.

Eavesdropping Devices

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 344, to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn); if he has any plans to restrict the circumstances in which eavesdropping devices may be used; what consideration he has given to the effect of their use on personal privacy; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: No, but the effect of the use of devices which amplify and transmit sound is kept under review.

Parole

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of prisoners in England and Wales eligible for parole, who are awaiting consideration of their applications for parole; and what was the comparable figure at the same time in 1991 and 1990.

Mrs. Rumbold: Central records show that there are now some 4,600 cases under consideration for parole and on which no decision has yet been reached. An additional unknown number of inmates will have had their reviews started locally, but the cases have not yet been received at the centre. At this time last year there were about 5,000 cases being processed at the centre. Figures for previous years are not readily available.

Auto Crime

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Association of Chief Police Officers concerning the methods to be used in the apprehension of those suspected of acts of aggravated vehicle-taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: This is an operational matter for the police.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has for the latest available year of all motor vehicles stolen or broken into, on the number of cases in which the method of entry was via (a) a forced window, (b) a smashed window and (c) a forced door.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 13 March 1992]: The only information held centrally is from the British crime survey. The most recent sweep, conducted in early 1988, showed that of a sample of 1,500 motor vehicles which were stolen or broken into over the past year, entry was as shown below. The survey does not ask for methods of entry in quite the same way as the question specifies. Nor do all victims, particularly those of theft of cars, know the method of entry. The other methods referred to in the third row include entry by unlocked doors and open windows.

	Percentage	Estimated number of crimes
Broken windows	33	811,000
Forced lock	18	445,000
Other methods/not known	49	1,217,000
Total	100	2,473,000

Prisons

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to implement changes in the prison disciplinary system.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have laid before the House amendments to the prison rules and young offender institution rules which will implement, from 1 April, important changes to the prison disciplinary system. These implement commitments in the White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice". On 1 April boards of visitors will cease to have a role in hearing disciplinary cases or in remitting or mitigating any punishment. Governors will in future hear all charges, using their existing powers, and will refer allegations of serious criminal offences committed in prisons to the police for investigation. Guidelines have been agreed with the police and the Crown prosecution service on the referral of such cases. Governors will also be responsible for remitting or mitigating punishments. These changes will free boards of visitors to concentrate on their "watchdog" role.

The amendments to the prison rules also increase the statutory entitlement of convicted adult prisoners to receive visits from one a month to two. This change was implemented administratively in June 1991. In addition, the rule amendments make provision for their application to contracted-out prisons.

Magistrates Courts

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has reached conclusions on the review of magistrates courts procedures initiated in 1989.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have now received the report of the committee invited to review magistrates courts procedure by my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) and have placed a copy in the Library. I am grateful to all those from the magistrates courts service and other bodies who participated in the review. With the exceptions noted below, and subject to deferral of questions relating to liquor licensing for further consideration, I am glad to endorse its recommendations. Some will require primary legislation, and I therefore cannot at this stage indicate when it will be possible to bring the necessary legislative proposals before Parliament. Others can be taken forward through changes to subordinate legislation or guidance to the courts.

The recommendations on which I am not persuaded that action is justified are those that it should be an offence to fail to carry a driving licence when driving, that failure to produce a licence at court should attract a fixed penalty fine and that a review of the witnesses' oath should be undertaken.

With these exceptions, I believe that the recommendations in the report will help to simplify and modernise court procedures in a way which maintains the requirements of justice. They should yield useful improvements in the efficiency of the criminal justice process as well as making court procedures clearer and more convenient for court users, in line with the citizens charter.

Crime, Basildon

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the change in the crime rate in Basildon in each of the last three years.

Mr. John Patten: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Identity Cards

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the implementation of EC identity cards for senior citizens.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Animal Welfare Groups

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial assistance is available for animal welfare groups in Basildon.

Mrs. Rumbold: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Tethering

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been made since the implementation of the Protection Against Cruel Tethering Act 1988.

Mrs. Rumbold: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Taxi Licences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about the issuing of licences to taxi drivers and private car hire drivers in Basildon.

Mr. McLoughlin: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to my hon. Friend.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Training Schemes

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the latest information he has on the destination of people leaving the youth training programme.

Mr. Needham: The most recent information available on the destination of participants leaving the youth training programme is for the period 1 April 1991 to 29 February 1992.

YTP leavers whose destination is known	Number of young people	Percentage of total
To employment	5,583	54

Languages

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will publish a table to show the number of students in each education and library board area who passed in Irish language at (a) O-level or GCSE and (b) A-level in 1989, 1990 and 1991;

(2) if he will publish a table to show how many students in each education and library board area passed at (a) GCSE or O-level and (b) A-level in each language taught, other than English and Irish, in 1989, 1990 and 1991.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested is not readily available by board area. However the overall number of students who passed GCSE—that is, obtained grades A to C—and A-level—that is, obtained grades A to E—in languages other than English was as follows:

GCSE passes (grades A to C)

Department of Economic Development

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the achievements since 1979 of the Department of Economic Development for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: The Department of Economic Development has developed policies to stimulate the development of enterprise, to promote a more enterprising culture and to encourage the competitiveness and growth of small firms.

Since the inception of the Industrial Development Board in September 1982 new investment projects worth a total of £2,740 million have been secured, an overall total of 41,446 new jobs have been promoted and 69,467 jobs safeguarded. Since 1979 LEDU, the small firms agency, has promoted 42,476 jobs.

Harland and Wolff plc was privatised in September 1989 and Shorts Brothers in October 1989.

On 2 April 1990 the Department launched the Training and Employment Agency which has 1,700 staff and a budget of £172 million. It assists employers to improve the competitive position of Northern Ireland companies and delivers programmes designed to provide skills and abilities to unemployed-people and those seeking to enter the labour market.

Against the background of plans for completion of the single European market, the Department adopted a new strategy which was set out in "Competing in the 1990s—the Key to Growth". The new strategy changes the emphasis of Government assistance for business away from grants for capital expenditure towards measures designed to improve business preformance in areas such as marketing, research, exporting, design and innovation.

In March 1992 the Department of Economic Development published a comprehensive research and development strategy for Northern Ireland—"Innovation 2000"—and established a new industrial research and technology unit to improve the competitiveness of industry and strengthen the economy.

The Electricity (NI) Order 1992 made on 11 February 1992, provides for the reorganisation and privatisation of the electricity supply industry in Northern Ireland. Proceeds from the sale of the four generating stations, subject to audit, will amount to about £353 million. The sale of Ballylumford power station will lead to the construction of a gas pipeline between Northern Ireland and Scotland and agreement has also been reached to construct a 240 MW electricity link between these two parts of the United Kingdom.

An estimated 15 per cent. reduction in energy consumption by the public sector has been achieved since 1984.

The Government have considerably strengthened the law against unlawful discrimination in employment in Northern Ireland through the introduction of the Fair

Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989. It represents the most radical anti-discrimination law ever enacted in the United Kingdom. Through the monitoring information which has been gathered and published by the Commission, a clearer picture has emerged of the extent of the problem of inequality in the work force. Already, a small but helpful improvement in the situation is evident.

Department of Education

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the achievements since 1979 of the Department of Education for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: Since 1979 spending on education and related services has increased, in real terms, by over 30 per cent; in 1992-93 the total spend will be £1·2 billion.

Pupil-teacher ratios have improved between 1979-80 and 1990-91 from 23·8 to 22·8 in the primary sector and from 15·5 to 14·9 in the secondary sector. The proportion of 16-year-olds, over school leaving age, and 17-year-olds staying on at schools has increased over that period from 36·7 and 25·5 per cent. to 49·9 and 35·1 per cent. respectively. The proportion of school leavers with at least one A-level increased from 21·1 to 30 per cent., while the proportion leaving with no GCSE/O-level pass has fallen from 27 to 15·3 per cent.

Some £650 million has been invested in capital projects by the Department. This has enabled work to be carried out on more than 210 major building projects at schools and further education colleges and on nine new libraries.

Local management of schools—LMS—arrangements for financing schools, which gave all secondary schools responsibility for their own budgets, were introduced in April 1991.

In further education, the number of students enrolled has increased by almost 30 per cent. Special resource allocations have been made available to improve staffing levels, replace equipment, provide for staff development and to implement a major computerisation programme which will improve management and financial information systems. Boards of governors of colleges have been reconstituted to strengthen the representation from the business world and local management of colleges—LMC—has given colleges responsibility for the management of their resources.

In higher education, the outcome of a review in the early 1980s, led to the removal of the binary divide in Northern Ireland and the establishment of the University of Ulster. The number of full-time NI domiciled undergraduates in higher education rose by 54 per cent. and the proportion of female full-time undergraduate and postgraduate university students in Northern Ireland has increased from 42 and 37 per cent. in 1980-81 to 51 and 46 per cent. in 1990-91.

Expenditure by DENI on recurrent and capital grants for arts, museums and libraries has increased from £17·429 million in 1979-80 to £33·299 million in 1990-91.

The Department has promoted the improvement of community relations in the schools and youth sectors. The cross-community contact scheme was established in 1987, and to date some 420 schools and 300 youth and community groups have been involved. A common curriculum has been introduced in all grant-aided schools.

Department of Health and Social Security

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the achievements since 1979 of the Department of Health and Social Security for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: Since 1978-79, expenditure on health and personal social services in Northern Ireland has increased by 31 per cent. after allowing for general inflation. Cost improvement programmes have also generated savings of nearly £70 million for investment in services to patients and clients.

Over the same period, levels of activity have increased by 33 per cent. Since 1981 the number of hospital in-patients has risen by 10 per cent. from 249,198 to 272,986; the number of day cases has increased fivefold, from 9,853 to 49,724; the number of operations has risen by 20 per cent.; and the number of out-patient attendances has risen by 17 per cent. from 1·7 million to 2 million.

There have also been substantial increases in the numbers of professional staff: there are now 10 per cent. more dentists; 17 per cent. more hospital doctors; 26 per cent. more general practitioners; 9 per cent. more nurses and midwives; and 99 per cent. more qualified social workers. Particular emphasis has been placed on the training and development of professional staff. The training budget currently stands at over £14 million a year.

Since 1979, perinatal and infant mortality rates in Northern Ireland have been reduced from 16·6 and 14·8 to 7·6 and 7·5 respectively. The latest available rates, for 1990, are, for the first time, the lowest in the United Kingdom.

Through the emphasis on developing community services, there have been reductions of 34 and 28 per cent. respectively in the number of patients in psychiatric and mental handicap hospitals.

The charter for patients and clients published on 10 March 1992 places a particular emphasis on quality and sets new, improved standards for the delivery of care and treatment.

The social security benefits system has been maintained and reformed on the same basis as in the rest of the United Kingdom. The cash value of pensions and other long-term benefits have been secured in real terms.

In July 1991 a Social Security Agency was established as part of the next steps initiative. The agency has attracted around 850 jobs to Northern Ireland providing services to the benefit network in Great Britain. Investment in computer technology has enhanced the efficiency of the services provided.

Adoption law and practice were brought broadly into line with the rest of the United Kingdom.

A major reform of gambling and club registration laws has been undertaken.

Since 1979 aid to the voluntary sector has been increased by 69 per cent. in real terms.

Department of Agriculture

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the achievements since 1979 of the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: Since 1979 grants totalling £470 million have been paid to support capital investments on farms.

To facilitate animal disease control the Department has introduced computerised animal health records to enable the movement of animals to be monitored for disease control purposes. The Department has assisted in improving the hygiene standards of milk production resulting in the attainment of STEP II standards under the heat treated milk directive. It has also obtained an extra 65,000 tonnes of milk quota for the Province in 1984 in recognition of the special importance of milk production to the Northern Ireland economy.

Since 1979 significant scientific advances have been made and an extensive research and development programme continues.

Considerable advances have been made in assessing the pollution potential of farm effluents and an enhanced programme of marine and freshwater fisheries research, including the acquisition of a sea-going research vessel, has made a significant impact on national and international fisheries resource management. The advent of an experimental food irradiation facility has led to significant results on the extension of shelf life of food products and to a prospective methodology for the detection of irradiation treatment of foods.

The Department's staff have carried out more than one third of a million personal consultations within the agri-food industry aimed at improving the efficiency of production and marketing and co-operation between individual businesses within the industry as a whole. A quality assurance scheme has been initiated within the agri-food industry designed to promote and sell a quality assured product. The Department has also encouraged farmers and growers to adopt good health and safety practices by a fivefold increase in farm inspections resulting in a 33 per cent. decline in the number of fatal farm accidents.

Since 1979 the Department has catered for a threefold increase in the number of students on full-time and part-time courses at agricultural colleges and in excess of a sevenfold increase in the number of participants on short courses.

Landings of fish into Northern Ireland ports have increased from the 12,800 tonnes in 1979 to 24,400 tonnes in 1991 and the number of persons employed full-time in the catching sector of the industry increased from 700 to 1,050. Numbers employed in the fish processing sector have also increased. Major development works costing some £8·8 million have been carried out at the three main fishery harbours in the Province.

Timber sales by the Department's Forest Service have increased from 54,000 m^3—value £580,000—in 1979 to 184,000 m^3—value £3·6 million—in 1991. In the same period some 9,500 hectares of new afforestation has taken place and 10 new nature reserves have been established on forest land.

A total of £80 million has been spent by the Department on capital projects to improve drainage infrastructure and to assist development. Currently some £17 million per annum is spent on new schemes and maintenance works to alleviate flooding and minimise risk to life and damage to property.

Since 1987 the environmentally sensitive areas scheme has attracted a total of almost 1,000 farmers to enter 18,000 hectares of land in five-year agreements with the Department to use environmentally friendly farming practices.

Some 160 water recreation projects have been completed.

Department of the Environment

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the achievements since 1979 of the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: Since 1979, the Department of the Environment has made substantial progress in conserving and improving the quality of the built and natural environment in Northern Ireland.

Housing condition surveys show that the level of unfitness declined from 14·1 per cent. in 1979 to 8·4 per cent. in 1987 and that the proportion of dwellings lacking at least one basic amenity declined from 17·9 to 5·5 per cent. The level of home ownership, which was 52 per cent. in 1979, is now 65 per cent. The housing situation of people unable to purchase their own dwellings has also improved with a fall in the Housing Executive's urgent waiting list from nearly 19,000 in 1981 to under 10,000 at present.

A total of £347 million has been invested in the further development of the road system, there has been considerable upgrading and expansion of the facilities at Aldergrove airport and extensive improvements at Belfast, Londonderry, Larne and Warrenpoint ports.

In 1989 the Department gained approval from the European Commission for a comprehensive programme for a new transport infrastructure in Northern Ireland, involving total expenditure of over £150 million of which £100 million will come from the European regional development fund.

Belfast city centre has seen a huge expansion of retail opportunities; areas of inner-city deprivation have been helped through the work of nine action teams; the Laganside corporation has been established to regenerate vacant and underused riverside land, and a new weir on the River Lagan is under construction. Londonderry has also seen significant economic improvement, with public and private investment in the last three years either spent or planned totalling over £200 million creating 2,500 full-time and part-time jobs.

An extensive programme of economic and environmental improvement schemes is also being carried out in the provincial towns.

New legislation during the period has helped improve the efficiency, effectiveness and accountability of district councils. The local government auditor has completed seven value-for-money studies. Compulsory competitive tendering and improvements in the conduct of council business will soon be statutory requirements.

As part of the next steps agency policy, a Rate Collection Agency was established in 1991, and an Ordnance Survey Agency and Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency are to come into being from 1 April 1992.

Since 1979, grants of £3·2 million to district councils have enabled 31,000 houses to convert to burn smokeless fuel. Two hundred and fifteen river water quality stations have been installed to monitor and control water pollution. Three major pieces of legislation have been introduced to protect and keep open rights of way; to designate areas of outstanding natural beauty and of special scientific interest; and to protect certain plants and animal species.

In addition, 4,300 buildings of architectural or historic importance have been listed, 700 monuments have been scheduled as being of archaeological or historic importance and 32 monuments have been taken into state care. Four areas of outstanding beauty, covering 147,000 hectares, have been developed and 36 areas of special scientific interest covering 7,550 hectares.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs have been (a) lost and (b) created in manufacturing industry in East Antrim in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Needham: The information in the table relates to redundancies notified to the Department of Economic Development, and its predecessors, involving 10 or more employees in manufacturing at any specific worksite and jobs promoted in manufacturing by Government agencies.

Notes:

Figures for notified redundancies refer to the calendar year in question; figures for jobs promoted refer to the financial year ending in March of that year.

Figures from LEDU are not available for the parliamentary constituency of East Antrim. The figures given above relate to the district council areas of Larne and Carrickfergus.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) job losses have occurred and (b) new jobs have been created in each of the last 10 years in manufacturing industry in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information in the table relates to redundancies notified to the Department of Economic Development, and its predecessors, involving 10 or more employees in manufacturing at any specific worksite and jobs promoted in manufacturing by Government agencies.

1990	1,986	7,100
1991	4,240	4,937

Note:

Figures for notified redundancies refer to the calendar year in question; figures for jobs promoted refer to the financial year ending in March of that year.

Stevens Report

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the main conclusions of the Stevens report into alleged collusion between loyalist paramilitaries and the British military.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary published a summary of Mr. Stevens's report on 17 May 1990 and a copy is in the Library.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will publish a table, consistent with table 1.1 of Cm 1917, showing separately for each sub-programme for the years 1986-87 to 1994-95, (a) expenditure within the Northern Ireland block as defined for the purposes of the application of the 2.75:100 formula, (b) expenditure within the Northern Ireland block as defined for the purposes of the Secretary of State's expenditure-switching discretion and (c) expenditure outside these blocks;

(2) if he will publish tables, analysing for the years 1986-87 to 1994-95, the data in table 1.1 of Cm 1917, analysing the components of (a) expenditure within the Northern Ireland block as defined for the purpose of the application of the 2.75:100 formula and (b) expenditure within the Northern Ireland block as defined for the purposes of the Secretary of State's expenditure-switching discretion, by (i) public expenditure sub-programme and (ii) the functional classification used in the identifiable expenditure figures appendix E of Cm 1920.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 13 March 1992]: The information requested is as follows.

For Northern Ireland, expenditure covered by the 2.75:100 formula is the same as that defined as being within the Secretary of State's switching discretion.

[1] The Departmental programme deals only with expenditure in Northern Ireland which is within the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. There is expenditure in Northern Ireland in other programmes.

[2] The Northern Ireland Block comprises expenditure by the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments excluding National Agriculture and Fisheries Support. The allocation of expenditure for future years among the services included in the Northern Ireland Block (except social security benefit expenditure) may be altered at the discretion of the Secretary of State. Expenditure on national agriculture and fisheries support is not part of the Block because it is influenced to a greater extent than others by national and EC policies.

[3] Includes expenditure financed by receipts from the European Communities. The amounts involved are as follows:

Financed by ERDF receipts	23	46	47	40	49	64	75	84	52
Financed by ESF receipts	53	56	36	46	51	54	52	49	50

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish tables, covering the years 1986-87 to 1994-95 and consistent with Cm 1917, analysing by economic category within spending sector for (a) expenditure within the Northern Ireland block as defined for the purpose of the application of the 2·75 : 100 formula, (b) expenditure within the Northern Ireland block as defined for the purposes of the Secretary of State's expenditure-switching discretion and (c) expenditure outside these blocks.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 13 March 1992]: The information requested is as follows:

For Northern Ireland, expenditure covered by the 2·75 : 100 formula is the same as that defined as being within the Secretary of State's switching discretion.

CIVIL SERVICE

Agencies

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what effect the next steps initiative has had on the quality of service to the public.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what effect the next steps initiative has had on customers.

Mr. Renton: Next steps is improving the quality of service provided to the public. There are many examples of this in the "Next Steps Annual Review"—Cm 1760—published last year. Agencies are set demanding quality of service targets and are increasingly consulting their customers about priorities.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service how many civil servants are currently serving in civil service agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: There are currently 221,000 civil servants in next steps agencies and other organisations operating on next steps lines. I expect this to increase to half the civil service in the next few weeks.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what recent meetings he has had with trade union representatives regarding equal opportunities.

Mr. Renton: None, but my officials have regular meetings with the trades unions on equal opportunity issues. The Council of Civil Service Unions fully supports the programmes on race and disability and the excellent new programme for action on women, published earlier this month following discussions with the trade union side.

Disabled Employees

Mr. Burns: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on opportunities for disabled people in the civil service.

Mr. Renton: The civil service is committed to providing equal opportunities for people with disabilities. Our magazine, Independent, published on 28 February, shows continuing progress. Copies have been placed in the Library.

THE ARTS

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Minister for the Arts what special allocation has been made to help with museums and galleries buildings.

Mr. Renton: I have allocated £196 million in 1992-93 to 1994-95 to the building programme of the National museums and galleries, which I sponsor, and last November within that sum I made a number of special additional allocations amounting to £9·3 million to priority projects.

Arts Support

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister for the Arts what information he has on the level of support for the Arts by private and corporate donations since 1979.

Mr. Renton: Comprehensive figures on donations to arts organisations are not available. I know, however, that they make a much valued contribution to the well-being of the arts. The gift aid scheme introduced in October 1990 has already attracted £200 million in donations to United Kingdom charities. The decision of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor to reduce the minimum threshold on qualifying gifts will provide a further important stimulus to charitable giving from which the arts and other good causes will derive substantial benefit.

Libraries

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Arts what public funds have been made available to libraries during the current year; what the amount was in May 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Expenditure on the public library service in England in 1979-80 was £214 million. The estimated outturn figure for 1991-92 is £590 million, which is a cash increase of £283·6 million and an increase in real terms of 18·6 per cent.

Living Arts

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Minister for the Arts what is his estimate of the contribution to the economy made by the living arts.

Mr. Renton: There is no definitive assessment of the economic importance of the arts. A report by the Policy Studies Institute in 1988 suggested that the arts generated a turnover of around £10 billion and employed almost half a million people. Official figures suggest that in 1990, the arts contributed almost £6 billion to the United Kingdom's balance of payments.

Although it is difficult to be precise, it is clear that the arts are a major sector of economic activity.

Arts Opportunities

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he next intends to visit Battersea to discuss arts opportunities for young people.

Mr. Renton: I visited the Battersea arts centre last year and was impressed by the number of projects concerned with the arts for young people. I am delighted that the London arts board has increased the centre's grant by 40 per cent. I am also well aware of the excellent work with young people being done by other arts organisations in Wandsworth.

Exhibitions

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Minister for the Arts what exhibitions he has in mind to fund in the coming year.

Mr. Renton: The Office of Arts and Libraries does not itself directly fund individual exhibitions. The OAL provides grant-in-aid to the national museums and galleries which mount a number of major exhibitions each year. In addition, the Arts Council provides funds to organisations which arrange exhibitions as part of their programmes.

To celebrate the United Kingdom's presidency of the European Community in the second half of 1992, £6 million has been allocated by the OAL towards a European arts festival. Some of this will be used to mount a variety of exhibitions in both national and regional museums and galleries.

East Midlands Arts

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister for the Arts what recent meetings he has had with East Midlands Arts representatives to discuss local ventures.

Mr. Renton: I met the chairman and director of the East Midlands arts board on a number of occasions last year, when a range of subjects were discussed.

I was delighted to be able to congratulate them personally on 1 October last year when the Arts Council announced that the east midlands region had won the competition to be the venue for the Arts 2000 year of dance in 1993.

New Theatre, Keswick

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received on the funding of a new theatre by the side of Lake Derwentwater at Keswick.

Mr. Renton: I have received no such representations. But I am pleased that planning permission has been given for the construction of a theatre by Lake Derwentwater.

Tourism

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the contribution made by the arts to tourism in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton: The United Kingdom as a tourist venue is a centre of cultural and artistic excellence; and, as year round activities, both the performing arts and heritage venues are major attractions to tourists, whether from within the United Kingdom or from abroad. Attendances at London's west end theatres reached a record high in 1990 at 11·3 million, and remained at around 11 million in 1991. The latest visitor figures for museums and art galleries show that there were 74 million such visits in 1990 throughout the United Kingdom.

Cash Limits

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give details of any proposed changes to the cash limits for his Department's votes for 1991-92.

Mr. Renton: Subject to parliamentary approval of the late spring supplementary estimates, the cash limit for class XII, vote 2, is to be increased by £10,800,000, to £240,092,000, to increase the grant in aid for the Arts Council.

The additional provision will be charged to the reserve and will therefore not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Items in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he will (a) arrange for the issue of an erratum slip with the "Report for 1992 of the Office of Arts and Libraries", Cm. 1912, in respect of the last sentence of paragraph 3.3 of that report and (b) issue a press notice, to draw attention to his answer to the hon. Member for Warley, East of 2 March, Official Report, column 20, on current Government policy in respect of access to the contingency reserve for the purpose of covering acceptances in lieu of tax.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 9 March 1992]: An erratum slip will be issued shortly by my office, amending the two final sentences of paragraph 3.3 of the above Report to read:

> "Lord Gowrie announced in July 1985 that the provision for Acceptance in Lieu may be supplemented by access to the Contingency Reserve for large and important offers. He said that "Looking simply at recent and current levels of acceptance in lieu offers, we would expect to call on the Reserve for around £10 million or so a year, taking one year with another. I must emphasise strongly that this is an estimate; it is neither a target nor a limit, as in any given year the demand could be either less or more."

I see no need to issue a press notice on this matter.

Scottish Arts Council

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Arts what was the annual grant by the Scottish Arts Council to arts organisations and events in the regions of Scotland and the cities of Aberdeen, Glasgow, Edinburgh and Dundee in the financial year 1991-92, and projected for the year 1992-93.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 13 March 1992]: Information for the Scottish regions is not available in the form requested. Projected figures for the cities of Aberdeen, Glasgow, Edinburgh and Dundee for the financial year 1992-93 have yet to be decided. Information for 1991-92 is as follows:

	1991-92 £
Glasgow	10,540,721
Edinburgh	3,959,670
Aberdeen	218,361
Dundee	449,979

The figures for Glasgow and Edinburgh reflect the fact that they are the permanent bases for national organisations such as Scottish Opera, Royal Scottish Orchestra, Scottish Chamber Orchestra and Scottish Ballet, all of which tour throughout Scotland.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Payments to EC Farmers

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals the European Commission has made this year for additional payments to farmers in European Community countries; and if he will list the amounts involved for each country.

Mr. Curry: No proposals have so far been made by the European Commission in 1992 for additional payments to farmers.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: No parts of the Department are currently under review for relocation. Major reviews completed recently have resulted in decisions to move a total of about 1,000 posts to North Yorkshire over the next four years.

Arctic Foxes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) for how long Grange farm, Ovenden wood, Halifax has continuously factory farmed arctic foxes;

(2) how many arctic fox factory farms are currently operating in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Maclean: Information is not collected on the keeping of arctic foxes in England and Wales. There are no arctic fox farms operating in Northern Ireland.

Mink

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink factory farms are currently operating under licence in each county of England and Wales.

Mr. Maclean: No mink farms are currently operating in Wales. Details for England are as follows:

England	As at 12 March 1992
Northumberland	1
North Yorkshire	1
West Yorkshire	3
South Yorkshire	1
Humberside	1
Lancashire	8
Cheshire	1
Staffordshire	1
Norfolk	1
Suffolk	3
Hampshire	1
Isle of Wight	1
Cornwall	2
Total	25

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether neck breaking or an intra-abdominal injection of chloral hydrate are permitted means of killing mink in fur farms.

Mr. Maclean: The Protection of Animals Act 1911 requires any operation performed on an animal, including killing, to be performed with due care and humanity. The Department is not aware of either of the methods described being used on mink farms and intra-abdominal injection of chloral hydrate is not recommended. These methods would not be permitted for the routine slaughter of mink under the proposed Community regulation on protection of animals at slaughter.

Factory Farmers (Prosecutions)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions of factory farmers there have been under the Welfare of Livestock (Intensive Units) Regulations 1978.

Mr. Maclean: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mink and Fox Carcases

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations exist (a) governing the disposal of mink and fox carcases and (b) regarding the use of mink and fox carcases in pet food.

Mr. Maclean: The disposal of mink and fox carcases is controlled under part IV of the Agriculture Act of 1970, the Meat (Sterilisation and Staining) Regulations 1982, and the Processed Animal Protein Order 1989. If they were to be used in pet food these same safeguards would apply.

Meat and Poultry

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the sale as fresh turkeys of originally frozen birds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Ministry has received no such representations.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions have been brought in the last 12 months for selling as fresh meat and poultry previously frozen meat and poultry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Such information is not held centrally.

Farm Produce (Marketing)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance he will give to help establish a farm producers marketing co-operative to sell west country produce to major supermarkets.

Mr. Curry: I refer to the reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) on 3 March 1992, Official Report, column 120.

Any eligible producer groups who wish to seek assistance under the group marketing grant will be entitled to apply.

Leptospirosis

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his Ministry's involvement in the control of leptospirosis, including the testing of cattle for the disease; what information he has about the incidence of the disease for each year since 1980; and whether local veterinarians are expected to pass test results on to his Ministry.

Mr. Gummer: There are no statutory controls relating to Leptospira hardjo in cattle. Precise figures on disease incidence are not available, but it is considered not to be widespread. My officials need not be informed of test results unless the farmer is a member of the voluntary cattle health scheme.

Land Settlement Association

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to provide money to the Land Settlement Association's tenants who did not benefit from the litigation settlement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have no such plans. Legal advice clearly indicates that those tenants who were not party to the litigation are not entitled to receive any money as a result of the settlement.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the sale of the Land Settlement Association headquarters, including the date of sale, the amount the building was sold for; what proportion of this money has been given to the Land Settlement Association's central reserve fund; and what proportion has been used in the litigation settlement with Land Settlement Association tenants.

Mr. Gummer: The headquarters building of the Land Settlement Association Ltd. was the company's private property and the Ministry was not entitled to receive any money arising from the disposal of the building. I believe that the building was sold in August 1985, but I have no information about the sale price. None of the proceeds of the sale were transferred to the Land Settlement Association's general reserve fund or used in the litigation settlement.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the Land Settlement Association central reserve fund, including the amount that was in the fund at the end of each of the past five financial years; whether money in this fund has been used in the litigation settlement to Land Settlement Association tenants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Land Settlement Association general reserve was created in October 1951 as a reserve against losses on the revenue account. Three appropriations were made over the years for that purpose. At the end of March 1982 the funds in the general reserve amounted to £236,277. This money was then absorbed into the revenue appropriation account and the deficit suspense account to cover some of the accumulated losses. The general reserve was nil on 1 April 1983 and no funds have been transferred into it since then. No money from the general reserve has been used to fund the settlement of litigation with Land Settlement Association tenants. Full details are contained in the reports and accounts for the year ended 31 March 1983 and for the nine months ended 31 December 1983 submitted to my Department by the Land Settlement Association Ltd. I am placing a copy of these in the Library of the House.

ADAS

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the Agricultural Development Advisory Service laboratories which have been closed since 1979 giving their location, date of closure and type of laboratory, distinguishing between research and development, veterinary, farm and countryside service or general.

Mr. Gummer: Work has been concentrated on fewer sites in the farm and countryside service, research and development service and veterinary service in order to improve efficiency and hence service to customers. The laboratories that have closed or merged as a result of this since 1979 are as follows:

	Date
Farm and countryside service
Accrington	1 September 1989

Lincoln	September 1991

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of (a) scientists and (b) advisory staff employed by the Agricultural Development Advisory Service for each year since 1979.

Mr. Gummer: The number of staff employed by the Agricultural Development Advisory Service as advisory officers since 1979 is:

	Number
1979	1,252
1980	1,243
1981	1,240

1987	1,069
1988	1,061
1989	1,003
1990	925
1991	876

Details for scientific staff would be available only at a disproportionate cost.

Farming, Basildon

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what special assistance has been made available to help farming in Basildon over the past five years.

Mr. Gummer: Farmers in Basildon, as elsewhere in the United Kingdom, have benefited from the Government's determination to ensure fair treatment for British farmers under the common agricultural policy. This has already led to the virtual eradication of green pound discrimination, it has ensured a growing consensus for a fair alternative to Mr. MacSharry's proposals and it will continue to mean that Britain will not accept measures that distort agriculture to the detriment of our farming community.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the measures which he has taken to ensure there is equality of enforcement and implementation of the common agricultural policy in all EC member states.

Mr. Gummer: At the United Kingdom's instigation a declaration was agreed by member states at Maastricht stressing the need to ensure that Community law is properly implemented and enforced, and changes to the treaty were agreed giving the European Court the power to impose financial penalties on member states that persistently fail to comply with their Community obligations.

We, of course, are still ready to draw to the Commission's attention any failures by other member states to implement and enforce the CAP. For example I recently pressed the Commissioner responsible for agricultural policy and the French Minister of Agriculture on the apparent failure by the French Government to impose charges for poultrymeat inspection at the level required by Community legislation. I will continue to seek an urgent solution.

Water Abstraction

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent appeals his Department has received against the refusal of the National Rivers Authority to approve an abstraction licence application, and with what result.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 12 March 1992]: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has outstanding three appeals against refusal of a licence. These appeals are being held in abeyance while the appellants and the authority attempt to agree terms under which the licences might be granted.

SCOTLAND

Manufacturing Exports

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the value of Scottish manufacturing exports in real terms in each year since 1974.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Scottish Council (Development and Industry) carries out an annual survey of Scottish exporters. This is the most comprehensive source of information on Scottish manufacturing exports. Up until 1984, the survey was only carried out on a triennial basis and coverage was less complete than in later years. These points should be borne in mind when interpreting the series, which is expressed in 1990 constant prices using the council's own suggested deflator; the United Kingdom producer price index for home sales of manufactured goods.

Scottish manufacturing exports 1974-1990

GDP

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of (a) Scottish and (b) United Kingdom gross domestic product was derived from (i) manufacturing and (ii) electronics in (1) 1979 and (2) the most recent figures available.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what share of Scotland's gross domestic product has been invested in education in each year since 1970.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 6 March 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what Scotland's share of United Kingdom gross domestic product has been in each year since 1971 until the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 March 1992]: Information on Scotland's share of United Kingdom GDP since 1971 is set out in the table.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage of Scottish gross domestic product invested in (a) health and (b) education in Scotland in each year since 1979 until the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 March 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Company Statistics

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give (a) the number of new companies established (b) the total number of registered companies and (c) the total number of bankruptcies in Scotland in each year since 1978.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Charing Cross Clinic, Glasgow

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the future of Greater Glasgow health board's Charing Cross clinic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Greater Glasgow health board has no plans affecting the future of the Charing Cross clinic or its location.

NHS Estate

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate for every health authority and trust in Scotland the amount required to bring the national health service estate to a condition B, exhibiting only minor deterioration.

Mr. Lang: The most recent information from health boards relates to 1990-91 and is set out in the table. There were no trusts in Scotland at that time.

Boundary Commission

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the composition of the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Scotland and the date when he expects it to report.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Nebulisers

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of (a) adults and (b) children in Scotland who are on health service waiting lists for nebulisers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the number of nebulisers supplied or awaiting supply is not collected centrally.

Powered nebulisers may be provided by the NHS in cases where a hospital respiratory consultant has judged it to be clinically necessary. Health boards are responsible for meeting the costs of the nebulisers supplied to patients.

Waste Disposal

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 626, if he will list the sites in the Baillieston, Carmyle, Broomhouse and Mount Vernon areas of Shettleston constituency where industrial, commercial and household wastes have been deposited, and the sites where chromium waste has been deposited.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Local Government Commissioner

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in each of the last five years, and for each district council area in Scotland, how many complaints have been referred to the Local Government Commissioner; how many of these have been followed up by the commissioner; and how many have been found in favour of the complainant.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the change in (a) the number of employees in employment and (b) the number of employees in employment in manufacturing in Scotland between June 1979 and June 1991; and what the changes are in percentage terms.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Development Expenditure

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the gross provision for the Scottish Development Agency in every year since 1979 and the non-training element of Scottish Enterprise for 1991-92 and 1992-93 in cash prices.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Exports

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the composition of Scottish-manufactured exports, by standard industrial classification, for each year from 1979.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Council Tax Rebates

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to provide a rebate for carers, under the proposals for the council tax.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Crime

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the crime figures for Grampian region broken down by standard category, including the total figure of crimes and offences, for every year since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information for 1979-90 is set out in the table.

Notes:

Data for 1979 have been regrouped on the basis of the current Scottish Office Home and Health Department classification of crimes and offences which was revised in 1980.

Prior to 1980, the return included crimes and offences reported to the procurator fiscal by agencies other than the police in which a prosecution was taken. Since 1980, these cases have been excluded. In 1982, there were about 6,400 such cases in the whole of Scotland, of a total of 762,483 crimes and offences.

Details of the SOHHD classification are given in the SOHHD statistical bulletin "Recorded crime in Scotland, 1990" a copy of which is in the Library.

Aberdeen Royal Hospitals Trust

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now publish the business plan and details of the application for trust status for the Aberdeen royal hospitals trust.

Mr. Lang: I refer to the reply given to the hon. Member on 18 December 1991, at column 201.

Job Losses, Inverbervie

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he intends to take in relation to job losses in Inverbervie as a result of the closure of Sidlaw's textile mill and the Inlak's seafood processing factory.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Grampian Police

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the number of police officers requested by the chief constable of Grampian police for every year since 1986 and (b) the number of additional officers permitted in response.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Grampian regional council sought the consent of the Secretary of State for increases in the authorised establishment of Grampian police as follows:

Year	Request for increase in police establishment
1986	40
1987	11
1988	61

Year	Request for increase in police establishment
1989	47
1990	42
1991	20

Consent was given in full for each request.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will institute an inquiry into the causes of bankruptcy in individuals in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government are presently reviewing all aspects of the operation of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985. It is clear that the major factor influencing the number of sequestrations in Scotland is the easier access by individuals to the sequestration process following the introduction of the 1985 Act.

The Government are actively considering the need for changes to the present legislation.

Education (Funding)

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received in favour of making an additional grant to Scottish local authorities for the purposes of ensuring a pay settlement for teachers in Scotland for 1992-93 in line with that in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement on his policy on this subject.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what element of the increase in the revenue support grant to Scottish local authorities in 1992-93 was allocated to (a) education spending and (b) pay for teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Sequestration Awards

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, columns 348-50, if he will give gross payments to trustees including outlays, statutory fees, remunerations and VAT but excluding recoveries for each year from 1985 to 1991 in respect of the awards of sequestration granted in that year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost to the public purse.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 21 February, Official Report, columns 348-49, if he will list for each year since 1985 (a) the number of sequestration awards for which the final outcome is known and (b) the number as a percentage of the total number of awards.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is:

	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989	1990
(a) No. of sequestration awards where final outcome is known	—	3	8	24	90	373
(b) No. of sequestration awards	295	437	834	1,457	2,344	4,364
(c) No. of sequestration awards where final outcome is known expressed as a percentage of total number of sequestration awards	—	0·69	0·96	1·65	3·84	8·54

Health Boards

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the reviews conducted by his Department into the accountability of health boards; and when he expects to publish the findings.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The chief executive of the NHS in Scotland carries out accountability reviews of each health board each year. The reviews are primarily intended to agree the board's objectives for the following year. These will be reflected in a variety of published documents, such as the board's local health strategy, local charter for health etcetera.

Sheriff Courts

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each year since 1986 the population of each sheriff court jurisdiction in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not available in the form requested. The table gives population estimates for the sheriffdom and sheriff court districts in 1981. These figures were prepared for a review which confirmed the district areas in 1983.

Private Forestry

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the rate of discount for calculation of compensation has been agreed between the Nature Conservancy Council and the representative body for private forestry as provided for under annex A of the financial guidelines to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The former Nature Conservancy Council did not reach agreement with the representative body for private forestry on the appropriate rate of discount to apply as provided for under the guidelines. There are a number of outstanding cases in Scotland involving afforestation proposals in respect of which application for afforestation grant was submitted prior to May 1989 when it was announced that compensation would no longer be offered for the refusal of grant where it was refused solely on nature conservation grounds. In deciding how such compensation in these cases can most appropriately be determined, the fact that such forestry planting would have been eligible for grant from the Forestry Commission and, prior to the 1988 Budget, to tax allowances, means that in general it should be expected to earn a commercial rate of return comparable to other forms of investment. On the advice of the Forestry Commission, I have concluded that it would have been reasonable for those undertaking such investments to have expected a real return of 6 per cent. on the assumption of no real increase in timber prices and I believe that this figure reflects a realistic view of the rate of return that investors in forestry might have been seeking. I am accordingly advising NCCS—and, as from 1 April 1992, Scottish Natural Heritage—that this figure should be used in negotiating management agreements in any of the outstanding cases where application for forestry grant was submitted before 10 May 1989.

In general, I would find it hard to justify compensation under paragraph 3 of annex A of the guidelines based on a calculation of net revenue forgone which exceeded an estimate of the unrestricted value of the land and its crop, unless some exceptional circumstances so warranted.

The review of the guidelines which will be undertaken later this year will take account of this change.

Inheritance Tax

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any works of art accepted in lieu of inheritance tax have been allocated since he last made an announcement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts announced on 26 April 1991 that the following items had been accepted in lieu of inheritance tax.

Items	Amount of tax satisfied
Portrait of Thomas Lamb by Allan Ramsay; two paintings and two volumes of drawings by Alexander Runciman	£196,000

I am pleased to announce that I have decided to allocate these items to the national galleries of Scotland.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many apprenticeships there were in Scotland and in what trades, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Allan Stewart [holding answer 11 February 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Traffic Offences

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the annual figures for (i) road deaths and (ii) injuries for each year since 1981, including the number of (a) children and (b) adults who have been hit by cars on or near pedestrian crossings.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 February 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Adult Students

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many adult students have been, or are at present, on access courses leading to higher education during the years 1989-90, 1990-91, and 1991-92 in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 25 February 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Agricultural Investment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the figures for the investment in agriculture in Scotland for each of the last eight years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 9 March 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a reconciliation between the local authority expenditure and (a) its financing figures contained in tables 9.1, 9.2 and 9.4 and chart 9.3 of Cm 1920, and (b) the figures announced in the latest revenue support grant and other settlements.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 March 1992]: The information, based on total relevant local authority non-housing expenditure for the years 1986-87 to 1991-92 is as follows:

	1986-87			1987-88			1988-89
	Current £ million	Capital £ million	Total £ million	Current £ million	Capital £ million	Total £ million	Current £ million	Capital £ million	Total £ million
Government support	3,007	369	3,376	3,146	372	3,518	3,519	426	3,945
Expenditure	3,730	408	4,138	4,024	416	4,440	4,364	455	4,819
Self-financed expenditure	723	39	762	878	44	922	845	29	874

	1989-90			1990-91			1991-92
	Current £ million	Capital £ million	Total £ million	Current £ million	Capital £ million	Total £ million	Current £ million	Capital £ million	Total £ million
Government support	3,810	453	4,263	3,956	456	4,412	4,791	493	5,284
Expenditure	4,654	500	5,154	5,119	487	5,606	5,592	552	6,144
Self-financed expenditure	844	47	891	1,163	31	1,194	801	59	860

Notes:

1. Government support for current expenditure consists of rate support grant (for 1986-87 to 1989-90), revenue support grant (from 1989-90 to 1991-92), community charge grant (from 1991-92), non-domestic rate income (for the years 1986-87 to 1989-90 local authorities were responsible for setting the level of non-domestic rates but since 1990-91 the Government have determined the level to be set), specific grants within aggregate external finance (AEF) and AEF grants outside the Secretary of State's responsibility. The figures in Cm 1915 represent the amounts paid in the respective year, not necessarily in respect of that year.
2. Government support for capital expenditure represents the net capital non-housing allocation.
3. The current expenditure figures are total relevant expenditure figures including loan and leasing charges and are final outturn figures for the years 1986-87 to 1989-90, near final outturn for 1990-91 and is a budget estimate for 1991-92.
4. The capital expenditure figures are net of receipts and are final outturn for the years 1986-87 to 1990-91 and estimated outturn for 1991-92.
5. The self-financed expenditure in relation to current expenditure is financed by way of domestic rate income for the years 1986-87 to 1988-89 and community charge income for the years 1989-90 to 1991-92.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table, covering the years 1986-87 and consistent with Cm. 1915, showing by sub-programme (a) total local authority expenditure in Scotland, (b) local authority expenditure in Scotland on services for which he has policy responsibility and (c) an analysis of the diferences between (a) and (b).

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 March 1992]: The information requested is contained in tables 9.4 and 9.5 of Cm. 1915. It should be noted that due to a printing error, the last column in table 9.4 is erroneously headed "1991-92 Outturn"; it should read "1991-92 Budget Estimate".

Crime Survey

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the British crime survey for Scotland before Monday 16 March; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 March 1992]: Work on the survey is not yet complete. The results will be published as soon as possible.

Fish Processers

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement outlining the Government's position on the provisions of article 7 of EC directive 91/493 dealing with derogations for small-scale fish processors.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 13 March 1992]: Detailed guidance and application forms for derogations under article 7 of directive 91/493/EEC are being prepared. It is hoped to send these to local authorities early in April.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to be able to provide guidance to environmental health officers to enable them to advise small-scale fish processors of the opportunities open to them to be exempt from the officially set health requirements as detailed by EC directive 91/493.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 13 March 1992]: Small-scale fish processors are not exempt from the provisions of EC directive 91/493. However under article 7 of that directive fish processors may seek temporary derogations from certain structural and equipment requirements. It is hoped to issue guidance and application forms to local authorities early in April.

In addition, under article 14 of the directive, there is a prospect that minimum structural and equipment requirements may be set for small establishments which distribute on the local market and are situated in regions subject to particular supply constraints. This possibility is largely dependent on the content of a report to be submitted to the Council by the Commission by 1 July 1992 and the outcome of subsequent discussions.

Arts Grants

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the annual grant to arts organisations and events in the regions of Scotland and the cities of Aberdeen, Glasgow, Edinburgh and Dundee for the financial year 1991-92 and projected for the year 1992-93.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 March 1992]: For those areas of expenditure on the arts for which the Scottish Office Education Department is responsible I set out the grants made to the national institutions and arts organisations in 1991-92 and those expected to be made in 1992-93.

	199-92 £ million	1992-93 £ million
National Museums of Scotland	13·355	15·804
National Galleries of Scotland	7·379	8·569
National Library of Scotland	11·801	15·994
Scottish Museums Council	0·665	0·731
Scottish Film Council	0·619	0·686
Scottish Film Production Fund	0·087	0·090
Scottish Community Drama Association	0·025	0·025
Scottish Youth Theatre	0·053	0·055
National Youth Orchestra of Scotland	0·034	0·035

The majority of the grants to the national institutions will be spent in Edinburgh. Grants to other organisations are to support their work throughout Scotland.

In addition to the above grants, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland announced on 28 February that he would make an exceptional payment of £500,000 to Scottish Opera in the financial year 1992-93 to reduce their current deficit.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Passes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 99, if he will request those hon. Members who have places on the research assistants' list which are currently not filled to release them in order to reallocate spare places to the hon. Members who require a researcher's pass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: There are 172 actual pass holders, out of the 230 places allowed, which means that 58 Members are currently not filling their places. I suspect that this has come about because of the imminence of the general election and some Members who have places are not filling them until they know whether they will need their places after the general election.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make it his policy not to allow any hon. Member to have two full researchers passes until all hon. Members requiring only one such pass have been allocated one; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Only the leaders of the official Opposition and of the Liberal Democrats have two full researchers' places, and, due to the imminence of the general election, I did not think that we could consider changing their entitlements.

I am sure that the situation over Members' research assistants' places will sort itself out in the aftermath of the general election. However, if it does not, I think that it would be an appropriate subject for the Administration Committee to investigate.

Evacuation (Westminster)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what account is taken, during the evacuation of Westminster station due to bomb threats, of the need to alert or evacuate staff in St. Stephen's house overlooking the station.

Mr. MacGregor: Full account is taken of the need to alert—or to evacuate if necessary—all staff in the vicinity of any bomb threat.

European Delegates

Mr. Harris: To ask the Lord President of the Council what are his plans for the appointment of the delegation for the 1992-93 session of the Council of Europe/Western European Union.

Mr. MacGregor: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister will be making the appointments to the delegation at the end of April and will announce them to the House as soon as practicable thereafter.

Office Costs Allowance

Mr. Harris: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he received the Top Salaries Review Body report on the office costs allowance; and what implications it has for the uprating of the office costs allowance on 1 April.

Mr. MacGregor: I have recently received the TSRB's report on the office costs allowance. It makes a number of important recommendations which it should be for the new Parliament to consider. Accordingly copies will be placed in the Vote Office and Library early in the new Parliament.

The House will wish to know that the report recommends no immediate change in the uprating mechanism. It will be for the new House to decide what recommendations in the report it wishes to implement and in what time scale. Meanwhile, under the resolution of this House of 21 July 1987 the OCA will, as in recent years, be uprated from 1 April 1992 in line with the increase in the maximum point on the scale for civil service senior personal secretaries in receipt of inner London weighting. The uprating will be implemented as soon as a settlement is reached covering senior personal secretaries in the civil service.

EMPLOYMENT

Training Guarantee

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps have been taken to ensure that the training guarantee to young and unemployed people in Greenwich can be met during the next 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Our officials and their counterparts in the South Thames training and enterprise council have been seeking agreement on the level of youth training—YT—provision needed in 1992-93 in Greenwich and other areas for which the TEC is responsible. The aim is to agree a business plan sufficient to support the guarantee of the offer of a suitable YT place to young people under 18 who are unemployed and are seeking training.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the occupational distribution of the number of persons employed in second jobs, including both employees and the self-employed, in the labour force survey for the latest year for which figures are available, giving the information by males, married females, other females and all persons.

Mr. Forth: Estimates for Great Britain from the spring 1991 labour force survey are as follows:

Employees and self employed persons (aged 16 or over) with a second job by sex, female marital status and occupation of second job: Spring 1991

Great Britain Thousands

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total average hours worked per week by those with second jobs, broken down by occupational group, for employees and the self-employed, in the labour force survey for the latest year for which figures are available, giving the information by males, married females, other females and all persons.

Mr. Forth: Estimates for Great Britain from the spring 1991 labour force survey are as follows.

Collier Industrial Waste Ltd.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action the Health and Safety Executive factory inspectorate has taken following the incident on 2 August 1991 when a worker in the paint shop at Collier Industrial Waste Ltd. collapsed, was hospitalised and diagnosed as suffering from isocyanate-induced asthma; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Executive's factory inspectorate has received no notification of an incident on 2 August 1991 at Collier Industrial Waste Ltd., Trafford Park, in which a worker collapsed in the paint shop and was diagnosed as suffering from isocyanate-induced asthma.

However, on 8 August 1991 an employment medical adviser from HSE interviewed an employee who had a medical history consistent with isocyanate-induced asthma. An inspector subsequently visited the company and wrote to it to confirm the precautions to be observed during the spraying of isocyanate paint.

A follow-up visit was also paid.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information has been laid against Collier Industrial Waste Ltd., Trafford Park and P. J. Collier Ltd., Rixton by the Health and Safety Executive since January 1989.

Mr. Forth: None.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what prosecutions have been taken and what convictions gained against Collier Industrial Waste Ltd., Trafford Park and P. J. Collier Ltd., Rixton by the Health and Safety factory inspectorate since January 1989.

Mr. Forth: None.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what injuries, diseases and dangerous occurrences were reported to the Health and Safety Executive by Collier Industrial Waste Ltd., Trafford Park and P. J. Collier Ltd., Rixton since January 1989.

Mr. Forth: Since January 1989, Collier Industrial Waste Ltd., Trafford Park has reported no diseases or dangerous occurrences but has reported to the Health and Safety Executive the following three injuries:

in 1989 a tyre fitter sustained an injury to his forehead;
in 1990 an employee tripped and broke his arm;
in 1991 a fitter/welder received bruises to his arm and leg.

No injuries, diseases or dangerous occurrences have been reported to HSE by P. J. Collier Ltd., Rixton, since January 1989.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what notices have been issued against Collier Industrial Waste Ltd., Trafford Park and P. J. Collier Ltd., Rixton, by the Health and Safety Executive Factory Inspectorate since January 1989.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Executive's factory inspectorate has issued one improvement notice against Collier Industrial Waste Ltd., Trafford Park, since January 1989, in respect of machinery safety.

The factory inspectorate has issued no notices against P. J. Collier Ltd., Rixton, since January 1989.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action was taken since February 1991 by the Health and Safety Executive factory inspectorate to ensure that paint shop workers at Collier Industrial Waste Ltd. were not exposed to dangerous isocyanate fumes, by taking action including carrying out dust sampling and consideration of the use of alternative paints in the paint shop and consideration of the adequacy of respiratory protection.

Mr. Forth: Under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 and associated regulations, it is the legal responsibility of Collier Industrial Waste Ltd. to ensure that its paint shop workers are not exposed to risks to their health and safety. This includes the risk of exposure to dangerous isocyanate fumes. Since February 1991, the Health and Safety Executive's factory inspectorate has visited the premises at Trafford Park on two occasions and has drawn the company's attention to its legal obligations, including the duty to comply with the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988. In particular the company's attention has been drawn to the need to assess exposure to dust in the paint shop, to consider using alternative paints and to check the adequacy of the respiratory protective equipment provided.

Hazardous Waste (Disposal)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures are being taken by the Health and Safety Executive factory inspectorate and the employment medical advisory service to investigate reports of ill-health by employees of hazardous waste disposal companies.

Mr. Forth: Regulation 5 of the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 requires certain occupational diseases to be reported to the appropriate enforcing authority. The information on all reports of diseases made to the Health and Safety Executive, including those in respect of employees of hazardous waste disposal companies, is verified by HSE's Employment Medical Advisory Service to ensure that it is accurate and complete. EMAS investigates all reported exposures to toxic substances. Other incidents are selected for investigation if in the judgment of the employment medical adviser, intervention may secure prevention or recurrence, prevent exposure of other workers, or derive new information about the cause or prevention of occupational ill health.

EMAS liaises closely with HSE's factory inspectorate, which also determines, using similar criteria, whether a report of an occupational disease should be investigated. The subsequent investigation of those reports selected may be carried out either independently by factory inspectors, jointly by factory inspectors and EMAS, or by EMAS at the request of the factory inspectorate.

A current priority of HSE's field operations division is to raise awareness of occupational health in industry.

Unfair Dismissal

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number and proportion of reinstatements for cases of unfair dismissal over the last five years.

Mr. Forth: The number and proportion of reinstatement and re-engagement orders made by industrial tribunals over the last five financial years are as follows:

Year	Number of reinstatement/ re-engagement orders	Percentage of unfair dismissal cases proceeding to a hearing
1990-91	63	1·0
1989-90	59	1·0
1988-89	58	1·0
1987-88	83	1·1
1986-87	103	1·1

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the numbers of claims for unfair dismissal by (a) trade union safety representatives and (b) trade union representatives for the last five years; and what was the average settlement for each group.

Mr. Forth: We do not have this information for the period before 1989-90. For the period 1989-90 and after, this information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Hazardous Substances

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures are being taken by the Health and Safety Executive factory inspectorate to ensure that companies which handle hazardous waste are fully implementing the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations.

Mr. Forth: Inspectors seek compliance with the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1985—COSHH—at all premises and work activities for which they have enforcement responsibility for health and safety legislation and to which the regulations apply, including those of companies which handle hazardous waste. Enforcement of the regulations has been integrated into normal inspection arrangements and inspectors take whatever action is appropriate to ensure that those responsible comply with their duties under the legislation.

Inspectors give a high priority to exaimining employers' action to comply with COSHH when there is exposure to hazardous substances, and liaise with the Health and Safety Executive's employment medical advisory service on matters relating to health risk and medical surveillance. The action taken by inspectors to secure compliance can range from giving advice to the use of enforcement notices and legal proceedings in those circumstances where there is a disregard for health and safety. Inspectors enforce the regulations vigorously and pursue their inquiries to the highest levels in companies which do not meet the required standards.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 6 November 1989, Official Report, columns 471-72, to the hon. Member for Roxborough and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood).

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many, and which, training and enterprise councils have notified his Department in writing about a failure to deliver (a) the youth training guarantee or (b) the employment training requirement as required under the TEC contract for 1991-92; how many individual youth training and employment training cases this involved; how the problems were resolved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The delivery of the YT and ET guarantee is a contractual commitment upon the TECs. Additional funds have been provided in the year 1991-92 to the following TECs:

Essex
Milton Keynes and North Buckinghamshire
Somerset
Avon
Dudley
Hereford and Worcester
Sandwell
Shropshire
Walsall
Sheffield
Rochdale
Bolton and Bury

This is consistent with maintaining the delivery of the guarantees. Meanwhile, the existence of a procedure under which individuals may register problems covering their treatment under the training guarantees is an important aspect of the policy in guarantees, and will continue under the new TEC operating agreement for 1992-93.

Training Initiatives

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what training initiatives have been introduced in Basildon in each of the last two years.

Mr. Jackson: Over the last two years Essex TEC has carried out the training initiatives specified in its contract, including youth training, employment training, enterprise allowance scheme, high technology national training, business enterprise training and various education programmes, such as education business partnerships. TECs have also been given the flexibility to introduce other initiatives to meet specific local needs and information on these can be obtained by contacting Essex TEC direct.

European Grants

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what European grants have been made to Basildon in the last year.

Mr. Jackson: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Self-employment

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his current estimate of the number of self-employed people in the northern region.

Mr. Forth: In September 1991 there were 115,000 self-employed in the northern region.

Tourism

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what help is available for tourism in Basildon.

Mr. Forth: Basildon is within the area of the East Anglian tourist board which, with the help of financial support from the English tourist board, encourages the development and promotion of tourism within its region.

Small Businesses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what help is available to help small businesses start up in Basildon.

Mr. Forth: The Essex training and enterprise council provides a wide range of help and advice to small business. This includes a business start-up programme which in 1991-92 will assist some 800 people throughout the county. In addition, my Department operates a loan guarantee scheme to help viable small businesses obtain loans where conventional funding would not otherwise be available.

ENERGY

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what have been his Department's achievements in the development of combined heat and power since 1979; and what plans he has to further advance the development of combined heat and power in the next five years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The main achievements of my Department in the development of CHP since 1979, mainly through the programmes of the Energy Efficiency Office and in conjunction with industry and other Government Departments, have been:

The 'Lead City' programme to evaluate the potential for large scale CHP/Community Heating (CHP/CH). This stimulated widespread interest in the potential for CHP/CH which is culminating in schemes such as that recently announced by Citigen.

To develop and demonstrate the use of small-scale packaged CHP for buildings, leading to an unprecedented rise in the installation of such units.

The development and encouragement of the use of cost effective CHP applications in industry based on the use of modern gas turbines.

The environmental benefits of CHP have been assessed and the potential of the technology to reduce environmentally harmful emissions is now widely acknowledged.

The privatisation of both the electricity and gas industries has led to the creation of new competitive markets. CHP operators can obtain gas on a non-discriminatory basis and they have a market into which they can sell surplus electricity. The majority of genuine on-site CHP operators generating for own use are free to continue to do so without the need for a licence and, therefore, do not have to pay the fossil fuel levy. This has provided a commercial environment which is stimulating interest in CHP not only from the privatised companies but from energy users in all sectors of the economy. The Pooling and Settlement Agreement now enables companies generating their own electricity to sell only surplus power to the pool, instead of having to sell all they generate and buy back their own requirements.

Measures have also been provided, where appropriate, to assist the development of CHP. Under the 1989 Electricity Act CHP operators as licensed generators may have powers to break streets to lay heat and power mains. There are special provisions for the treatment of CHP in the Department of Environment's Integrated Pollution Control regulations. Equitable treatment for CHP/CH schemes in the Department of Environment's rating formulae has been secured.

The Department has produced a wide range of publications and two videos highlighting successful applications of CHP technology. The Department has also successfully collaborated with industry on the promotion and marketing of CHP, particularly with the CHPA on their Power Plus campaign. These activities have helped to raise the profile and awareness of CHP in industry, commerce and the public sector to a record level.

Throughout the remainder of the 1990s the EEO will continue to vigorously promote the technology through its best practice programme and will aim to achieve the environment White Paper commitment to double CHP capacity to 4,000MWe by 2000.

British Coal

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what figures he has for the change in the level of productivity in British Coal since 1983-84.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Since 1983-84 productivity at British Coal's deep mines has increased by 110 per cent.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: My Department carries out an annual relocation review as part of the public expenditure survey. An independent assessment of the case for and against the relocation of my Department's petroleum engineering directorate to Aberdeen is currently being undertaken. No posts are currently being considered for relocation to the east midlands.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Thames Polytechnic

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what public resources are made available to Thames polytechnic.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council—PCFC—has made the following public funds available to Thames polytechnic for the financial year 1991-92:

Main allocation	19,307,579
Equipment	1,933,332
Hunter capital	541,700
Minor works	424,000
Research	250,000
Total	22,456,611

In addition the polytechnic's publicly funded tuition fee from funded places is expected to be £11,944,000. Total public funds available to the polytechnic are therefore £34,400,611. Institutions are free to recruit additional students who do not attract PCFC grant but who bring with them the publicly funded tuition fee, averaging £2,200 in the PCFC sector in 1991-92.

Handicapped Pupils

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the latest developments in Government policy to ensure the integration of handicapped children into the maintained school system.

Mr. Fallon: The Government's policy on the intergration of children with special needs in mainstream schools is reflected in the provisions of the Education Act 1981. The Act requires local education authorities to educate children with statements of special educational needs in ordinary schools wherever possible.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Department is considering the scope for relocating some 50 posts from London to Darlington in 1992.

Seven-year-olds

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, columns 374-76, if he will list by local education authority (a) the proportion of usable return from maintained schools for seven-year-olds and (b) the number of children seven plus years old included in the seven-plus league tables of usable returns as a percentage of the total number of seven-plus pupils in maintained schools.

Mr. Eggar: Tables showing this information were provided in written answers to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 15 January, Official Report, columns 580-82, and the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) on 17 February, Official Report, columns 35-36.

The following tables have been updated to incorporate details for Lambeth and Tower Hamlets, which were not included in the original tables.

Expenditure, Eastern England

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the GM-relevant costs less the expenditure on school meals in each of Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex local education authorities.

Mr. Eggar: Using the definition of GM-relevant costs set out in the reply to my hon. Friend on 17 December 1991, Official Report, columns 114-16, the information, taken from the LEAs' section 42 budget statements for 1991-92, is as follows:

Norfolk	172,117,000
Suffolk	149,632,000
Essex	364,119,000

Note:

The GM-relevant costs constitute the total budget in respect of the LEA's maintained schools which corresponds to the total annual maintenance grant—AMG—of grant-maintained—GM—schools, ie the general schools budget less expenditure on items for which provision is made outside the AMG of GM schools, those items being: central Government specific grants; capital expenditure; and expenditure on home to school transport, education welfare officers and psychologists, pupil support, statemented pupils and special units.

Ethnic Minority Teaching

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 116, if he will send the letter referred to, to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, before the dissolution of Parliament; and what is the reason for the delay.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. and learned Friend wrote to the right hon. Member on 13 March confirming his decision.

Higher Education

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many children went into higher education in each of the last two years in Basildon.

Mr. Eggar: Information for the Basildon area is not available centrally.

The estimated numbers of school leavers from maintained schools in the Essex local education authority area whose intended destination was further or higher education for the academic years 1988-89 and 1989-90, the latest years available, were 5,000 and 6,150 respectively. Information for higher education is not available separately at local authority level.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will give the numbers attending full-time and sandwich courses at universities and polytechnics in the northern region in 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Eggar: The number of home and overseas domiciled students attending full-time and sandwich higher education courses at the three polytechnics in the northern region in 1990 was 18,900, and the number attending similar courses at the two universities in the region was 14,700.

Operating Initiatives

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what operating initiatives have been launched in Basildon in each of the last five years.

Mr. Eggar: The main on-going initiative launched by Essex education authority in Basildon was the establishment of Basildon tertiary college and the consequent abolition of school sixth forms in the area. More recently, in response to local demand, my right hon. and learned Friend accorded grant-maintained status to Chalvedon school, and re-established its sixth form.

ENVIRONMENT

Consultants

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each private sector consultancy firm which has been retained by each agency within his Department, and for his Department as a whole, for the purposes of advising on the market testing programme; and whether the appointment in each case was the result of competitive tendering.

Mr. Heseltine: To date no private sector consultancy firms have been retained by my Department, or any of its agencies, to advise on the market testing programme as a whole. However, Messrs Donaldson are advising on the preparation of contractual documentation for market testing property management services. Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte are advising on, among other things the value for money of alternative arrangements for providing the services offered by the Government car service and the interdepartmental dispatch service. Watts and Partners are advising on documentation for royal parks works contracts. All these contracts were let by competitive tender.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest information about the (a) percentage of people who have made a payment of the community charge, (b) percentage of community charge collected by 31 December, (c) percentage of community charge collected for the financial year ending 5 April and (d) level of community charge for 1991-92 and 1992-93 for the boroughs of Gedling, Rushcliffe, Broxtowe and the City of Nottingham.

Mr. Key: The latest information concerning the percentage of people making community charge payments in 1991-92, and the collection rates to December 1991-92 for all authorities who have provided information, is listed in the departmental press release No. 164 which was placed in the Library on 27 February 1992.

Charging authorities have until 18 March to make their "Demands and Precepts Return" to the Department and until 1 April to set a 1992-93 community charge. The available community charge information is as follows.

	1991-92 Average Community Charge £	1992-93 Average Community Charge £
Gedling	266·58	No return
Rushcliffe	265·11	No return
Broxtowe	265	278·54
Nottingham	295	316

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when rates or the community charge have been capped in Basildon since 1983;

(2) what is the proposed level of community charge in Basildon; and at what levels it or rates have been set in each of the last five years.

Mr. Key: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the revenue support grant per capita for 1992-93 in the Wandsworth, Westminster and Rotherham local authorities; and if he will state the community charge which has been determined by each of these authorities for 1992-93.

Mr. Key: Many authorities have yet to make a return to the Department giving information about community charges. Charging authorities have until 18 March to make their "Demands and Precepts Return" to the Department and they have until 1 April to set a charge.

The available information is as follows:

	1992-93 revenue support grant £ per adult	1992-93 community charge £ per adult
Westminster	1,263	36
Wandsworth	975	No return
Rotherham	406	No return

Orimulsion

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will hold a public inquiry regarding the application by National Power to burn orimulsion at Padiham power station before allowing a decision to be made on the said application; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I am satisfied that the public have been made aware of this application. HMIP has received a number of representations which it will take into account in determining the application.

It remains open to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to direct that the application should be referred for his determination. In that event, he would consider whether a local public inquiry would be appropriate.

A299

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the proposed route for the A299 Thanet way between Whitstable and Herne Bay will be the subject of a public inquiry.

Mr. Yeo: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Community Charges

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the proposed level of community charges in London in 1992-93.

Mr. Key: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Wild Birds

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to establish a new inspection and enforcement service to ensure adequate safeguards for the trade in wild birds.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 9 March 1992, Official Report, at column 372.

New Homes

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will initiate discussions on the future use of public sector sites which are no longer needed, as areas for new homes construction.

Mr. Yeo: I will write to my hon. Friend.

EC Habitats Directive

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice is available to local authorities concerning the need to assess the effect that plans or projects may have on special areas of conservation designated under the new EC habitats directive.

Mr. Trippier: Our obligation under the forthcoming directive to assess the effect of plans and projects on designated special areas of conservation is covered in the draft planning policy guidance on nature conservation. This was circulated for consultation by the Department of the Environment on 27 February.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action is being taken to identify those areas in the United Kingdom which should be considered for designation as special areas for conservation under the forthcoming EC habitats directive.

Mr. Trippier: The Government and their scientific advisers are currently examining the criteria set out in annex III of the forthcoming EC habitats directive with a view to evaluating the eligibility of sites for inclusion on the United Kingdom's proposed national list of SITES of Community importance. While I expect it to be some time before I am in a position to determine the full list, the Government intend to comply with the timetable set by the directive.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he intends to introduce in order to comply with article 6.2—avoidance of the deterioration of the habitats—of the EC directive on the conservation of natural and semi-natural habitats and of wild fauna and flora—the habitats directive.

Mr. Trippier: Officials are currently consulting the statutory nature conservation agencies and other Government Departments about the legislative, regulatory and administrative provisions through which the forthcoming directive is to be implemented in the United Kingdom. The measures already in place under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, as amended, give considerable protection to the important wildlife habitat in this country. A recent further welcome step has been the launch of English Nature's wildlife enhancement scheme to secure more positive management of sites of special scientific interest.

Aqueous Cleaners

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to tackle the increase in effluent from disposal of increased amounts of aqueous cleaners used to replace CFC-G113; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Such discharges would be subject to existing statutory authorisation procedures as appropriate under section 88 of the Water Resources Act 1991, sections 118 and 120 of the Water Industry Act 1991, and section 6 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the reference to little weight being attached to the loss of moderate and poor quality agricultural land in paragraph 2.5 of planning policy guidance note 7 "The Countryside and Rural Economy" refers only to that aspect of paragraph 2·4 which deals with the agricultural value of land; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Yes. When paragraph 2.5 of PPG7 says that "little weight" should normally be attached to the loss of lower grade agricultural land it means little weight in terms of agricultural value; other factors such as landscape and nature conservation need to be taken fully into account. The PPG explains the Government's policy of encouraging rural enterprise, while ensuring that the environment is protected. It reminds planning authorities of the need for a balanced approach to rural development and conservation. The planning system helps to integrate development necessary to sustain the rural economy with protection of the countryside for the sake of its beauty, its diversity of landscape, its wealth of natural resources and its ecological, agricultural and recreational value.

Local Government Superannuation Scheme

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to complete the consultation exercise prior to amending the local government superannuation regulations concerning the treatment of war service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Local Government Superannuation (Amendment) Regulations which came into force on 28 February 1992 include a provision enabling certain probation officers to count their war service for superannuation purposes. No formal request has been received to make further amendments to the provisions on war service already included in the regulations and no consultation exercise is planned.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his letter of 4 March, what consideration he has given to banning immediately the production of ozone-depleting substances and filling essential applications, including asthma inhalers, from existing stocks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Government are firmly committed to phasing out CFCs by the end of 1995 at the latest. An immediate phase-out of these substances would not be possible, because substitutes for some relatively high volume uses of CFCs still require further development before the overall demand will be low enough to be met by existing stocks.

Unleaded Petrol

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect on emissions of (a) carbon dioxide and (b) carcinogens of the increased use of unleaded petrol.

Mr. Trippier: Increased use of unleaded petrol will result in a modest increase in carbon dioxide emissions from refineries. Any effect on carcinogenic emissions is likely to be very small, but a detailed assessment of hydrocarbon emissions from cars using leaded and unleaded fuel is in progress and results are expected in the autumn. Catalytic converters will be mandatory on all new petrol-engine cars from the end of this year and will secure dramatic reductions in all harmful emissions, including carcinogens. Cars equipped with catalysts can run only on unleaded petrol.

Waste Carriers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the level of registration for waste carriers; what information he has on how many waste carriers have received information on duty of care regulations; whether he has had any discussions with the Institution of Environmental Health Officers about the practicability of meeting the 1 April deadline for registration of waste carriers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

Buildings (Disabled Persons' Access)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the latest developments in Government policy to ensure maximum mobility and access to buildings by registered disabled persons on visits to buildings and installations in both the public and private sectors.

Mr. Yeo: The Government have introduced revised Building Regulations relating to access and facilities for disabled people which come into force on 1 June this year and apply in both the public and private sectors. The requirements have been extended to cover all floors of new non-domestic buildings and most extensions to such buildings. They now, for the first time, address some of the needs of people with impaired hearing and sight.

Pollution Control

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the 1992-93 schemes for recovery of pollution control costs in England and Wales.

Mr. Trippier: Cost-recovery charging to cover the costs of regulating processes under integrated pollution control, under local authority air pollution control, and premises subject to regulation under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 were introduced in April 1991, under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Radioactive Substances Act 1960.

With the agreement of the Treasury, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has now made revised charging schemes to introduce the 1992-93 scales of fees and charges, which will take effect from 1 April 1992. I have placed copies of the revised schemes in the Library.

The schemes have been prepared following consultation with industry and other bodies.

The form of the schemes remains the same. For integrated pollution control—IPC—the scheme comprises an application fee to cover the cost of assessment of the operator's proposals and preparation of the authorisation; an annual subsistence charge for holding an authorisation, to cover the costs of inspection and oversight of the plant; and a variation fee to cover the costs of assessment of any proposals for substantial variation to a process.

The application fee for 1992-93 is £2,450 per component for processes which have previously been subject to air pollution control; £3,650 per component for processes coming under regulation by HMIP for the first time. These fees reflect the amount of time and cost involved in the assessment of IPC applications in 1991-92, which has proved to be higher than the estimates on which the 1991-92 fees were based. However, HMIP has set itself the objective for 1992-93 of reducing its average application handling time by 12½ per cent., and the fee levels allow for this efficiency target.

HMIP is publishing extensive technical IPC guidance notes, and is also organising a programme of local seminars for industries currently involved in preparing IPC applications. These steps will ensure that industry has all the necessary information, and will help to achieve speedier authorisation, and reduce application handling further.

The variation fee is £1,200 per component—one third of the application fee.

On 8 November 1991 I announced a further substantial strengthening of HMIP's complement for 1992-93, to ensure that the inspectorate is able to maintain rigorous levels of inspection and oversight, and provide the high degree of public confidence which industry requires to be able to conduct its business. The annual subsistence charge of £1,500 per component reflects the costs of the higher level of oversight which HMIP will be able to provide in 1992-93.

As noted, the IPC fees for 1991-92 underestimated the time involved in assessing IPC applications, the cost of which was therefore not fully recovered. The legislation governing the charging scheme requires that costs and income are balanced, taking one financial year with another. It is therefore necessary to recoup the under-recovery of costs in 1991-92. However this recoupment will be spread over the remaining four years of the IPC implementation period. It will be carried out by way of an additional charge applied only to authorisations related to applications submitted during 1991-92. The additional charge in 1991-92 will be £410 per component for processes previously under air pollution control, £610 per component for others.

The charges payable on a plant are related to its complexity and scale by being linked to the number of defined components which the plant contains. The schedule of components has been reviewed in consultation with industry, in the light of experience in operating the charging scheme, and revised for 1992-93.

For the longer term, we wish to consider the option of moving to a system of direct charging for IPC applications according to the time and costs incurred in dealing with each application.

For local authority air pollution control, the application fee is increased to £900, and the annual subsistence fee to £550, taking account of the local authority associations' submissions to the Department reporting that local authorities' staff are spending more time than expected in implementing part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The substantial change fee and the fee for processes already registered under the Alkali Act are increased to £580. Fees and charges for small waste oil burners, which reflect a simplified authorisation procedure, remain unchanged at £100.

The form of the radioactive substances regulations—RSA 60—charging scheme also remains the same. Nuclear licensed premises will be billed individually on the basis of regulatory time spent and costs incurred at each site. Non-nuclear premises are charged on the basis of flat-rate fees similar to the IPC scheme, relating to applications, substantial variations, and the subsistence of consents to cover inspection and oversight costs.

For premises authorised to accumulate and dispose of radioactive waste—"band 3 premises", for example, research establishments, major universities—the application and variation fee will be £1,350 and the annual subsistence charge £800. For premises registered to keep and use radioactive material—"band 4 premises", for example industrial users of radioactive sources—the application and variation fee will be £500. The annual subsistence charge will be £80, but this will apply only to holders of larger sources. The majority of registration holders, using smaller closed sources, will not pay any annual subsistence charge, since these sources do not require routine inspection.

As with the IPC scheme, the RSA60 application fees set for 1991-92 underestimated the time involved in assessing applications, and costs were under-recovered. This scheme is also subject to a statutory requirement to balance income and costs. As for the IPC scheme, it has been agreed with the Treasury that the recovery will be spread over four years, through an additional charge applying to consents related to applications made in 1991-92, which will be £210 for band 3 authorisations, and £80 for band 4 registrations.

Charging schemes for Scotland will be made in due course.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many replies were received in response to the consultation paper "Genetically Modified Organisms (GMOs): Proposed New Regulations"; and if he will make the responses publicly available.

Mr. Baldry: Copies of the 181 responses received have been placed in the Department's library, where they are available for public inspection. A list of responses received has also been placed in the Library of the House, through which copies of individual responses may be obtained.

Urban Areas

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent by his Department in revitalising the urban and inner-city areas of the northern region since June 1987.

Mr. Key: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Historic Churches, Basildon

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what grants are available to restore historic churches in Basildon.

Mr. Yeo: English Heritage provide grants for the repair of outstanding historic churches from grant in aid provided by my Department. The church grants budget proposed for 1992-93 is some £9 million. Local authorities also have discretionary powers to provide assistance.

Pitsea

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what moneys are available to clean up Pitsea creek;

(2) what response he has made to the Environment Committee's report on dumping on Pitsea tip, seventh report of 1990-91, HC 263;

(3) what recent representations he has received; and what response he has made about dumping on Pitsea tip.

Mr. Baldry: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Council House Sales

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council and Commission for the New Towns houses have been sold in Basildon since (a) 1979 and (b) 1983.

Mr. Yeo: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Rochester upon Medway City Council (Housing Stock)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive the report of the district auditor into the sale by Rochester upon Medway city council of its housing stock to the Medway housing society; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 5 March 1992]: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Homeless Families

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the comparative public sector revenue costs of housing homeless families in (a) Greater London, (b) other metropolitan authorities and (c) English non-metropolitan areas by (i) providing them with newly built council dwellings, (ii) providing them with council dwellings newly acquired from the private sector and improved for letting and (iii) providing them with bed-and-breakfast accommodation; and if he will publish these figures on a comparable basis with those in his answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 23 February 1989, Official Report, column 741.

Sir George Young [holding answer 11 March 1992]: I have looked carefully at the basis on which such an answer can be given and have concluded that the information is not available in a form which enables a valid comparison to be made.

Expenditu[illegible] London

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the budget and forecast actual expenditure of his Department's London region office in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 12 March 1992]: The London regional office's budget for pay and day-to-day running costs, excluding accommodation which is centrally funded, was £3·184 million for 1991-92. Forecast actual expenditure for the year is £3·092 million. The budget for 1992-93 has not been finalised.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the expenditure of the London residuary body on administration in each year from 1986-87 to 1991-92, at current prices.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 12 March 1992]: Expressed in current prices, net expenditure by the London residuary body on general management or administrative services, including preparation and transfer of records to successor bodies by the LRB's administration department, was as follows in the years 1986-87 to 1991-92:

1986-87	6,874
1987-88	4,164
1988-89	3,597
1989-90	2,962
[1]1990-91	7,365
[2]1991-92	3,466

[1] On April 1 1990 the LRB took on responsibility for winding up the affairs of the Inner London Education Authority.

[2] The figures for 1991-92 are from the LRB's 1991-92 original budget while information for other years comes from the LRB's Annual Report and Accounts for the relevant year.

Further details may be found in the London residuary body's annual report and accounts.

Birds

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recommendations he has received from the chairman of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee relating to United Kingdom nature conservation and land use policies arising from the publication of the recent reports sponsored by the Joint Nature Conservation Committee on birds and pastoral agriculture in Europe; the conservation of lowland dry grassland birds in Europe; and breeding waders on wet grassland.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 13 March 1992]: None. However, the studies and recommendations contained in the reports will make a valuable contribution to our consideration of countryside policies in the United Kingdom and Europe.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the sum allocated by the London Docklands development corporation for its sponsorship of the Sports Scholarship Foundation for sports scholarships in the United States of America; the sum it is likely to expend in its trial event to be held in Florida in July next; the residential and other qualifications it expects of those it intends to sponsor at the trial event and the particulars of the persons there present who will make the selection for scholarship awards, together with details of any charges met in cash or kind for the trial event or the scholarships from individuals or bodies other than the corporation.

Mr. Key [holding answer 13 March 1992]: The corporation has made provision for expenditure of £3,000 for the sponsorship of local young people attending the scholarship trials in Florida this year. From those urban development association residents selected by LDDC as suitable to attend the trial, a number who would otherwise be unable to take part will receive financial assistance.

The Sports Scholarship Foundation—an independent body—is entirely responsible for the running and organisation of the sports trial event. Assessment of an individual's sporting ability and the related costs are matters for the foundation.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the expenditure of the London Docklands development corporation on administration, research and planning for each year since its creation, at current prices.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 12 March 1992]: Expenditure by the London Docklands development corporation on administration, research and planning, at current prices, is as follows:

£ million (rounded)

Year	Amount
1981-82	4
1982-83	10
1983-84	10
1984-85	12

It is not possible to separate the amount specific to each item.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect on businesses in Greater Manchester of the introduction of the uniform business rate.

Mr. Key [holding answer 13 March 1992]: The table shows the average change, between 1989-90 and 1990-91, in non-domestic rates bills in Greater Manchester flowing from the introduction of the uniform business rate and the 1990 revaluation, but taking no account of the transitional arrangements.

District	Average effect on rates bills per cent.

Boundary Commission

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in respect of the Local Government Boundary Commission's recommendations that Thamesmead East ward be transferred from the London borough of Bexley to the London borough of Greenwich.

Mr. Key [holding answer 13 March 1992]: Seventy-six representations from hon. Members, local groups, members of the public and other interested persons have been received. Most of these oppose the proposed transfer.

DEFENCE

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of contracts awarded by his Department in each of the four calendar years to 31 December 1990 to (a) GPT Ltd. Strategic Communications Systems, (b) Rolls-Royce Industrial and Marine Gas Turbines Ltd., (c) Lucas Aerospace Ltd., (d) Dunlop Aviation Division, (e) Alvis Ltd., (f) Abbey Panels Ltd., (g) Commercial Hydraulics Keelavite Ltd., (h) Cornercroft Ltd., (i) Neol Penny Turbines Ltd., (j) J. S. Chinn Ltd., (k) Rotherhams Ltd., and (l) Self-Changing Gears Ltd.; and if he will list the total amount paid to each company in each of those years.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information the hon. Gentleman requests is commercially sensitive and cannot be released.

1 Submarine Squadron

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the home addresses of the 350 naval personnel committed to the 1 Submarine Squadron; and whether they are home owners or tenants.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information on home addresses is held locally on all service personnel who work for the 1 Submarine Squadron. About one third are home owners, the remainder are either private tenants or occupy RN accommodation. It is not possible at this stage to say which personnel will move to Devonport.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of relocating the 1 Submarine Squadron from Gosport to Devonport.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The estimated cost is some £3·5 million. With annual savings in running costs of some £2 million per year, we expect to recoup these costs within two years.

HMS Dolphin

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of the type 2400 Upholder class submarine maintenance facilities at HMS Dolphin, Gosport.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since the mid-1980s some £4·4 million has been spent on the provision of facilities at HMS Dolphin specifically for the maintenance of Upholder class submarines.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number and nature of the workers who will be transferred from Gunwharf, Portsmouth to HMS Dolphin, Gosport as envisaged in the Minister of State for the Armed Forces' letter of 10 March to the hon. Member for Gosport.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A total of around 100 service and civilian posts are expected to relocate from Gunwharf to HMS Dolphin in the mid-1990s, although further work still needs to be done on our detailed plans. The following units are expected to transfer:

the Royal Engineers Diving Establishment;
the Minewarfare and Maritime Trade School;
the DNIS Management Systems Group and Small Systems Group;
the Fleet Diving Group;
the Portsmouth Area Clearance Diving Unit.

Green Rover

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the sale of the former Royal Navy ship Green Rover to Indonesia; and what restrictions have been placed on its use.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Indonesian Government are purchasing the surplus Royal Fleet Auxiliary ship Green Rover. She is a replenishment ship for fresh water, fuel and refrigerated goods. She has no offensive capability. Restrictions on her use would be irrelevant.

Telecommunications Station, Outhmuir

Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the proposed telecommunications station being built at Outhmuir, Fife, giving details of the costs and the purpose of the system in terms of overall operation.

Mr. Alan Clark: The installations under construction at Outhmuir, Fife, are components of the Uniter communications system and the associated bearer network, Boxer. The estimated total costs of Uniter and Boxer at 1991-92 prices are about £410 million and £230 million respectively.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Much work is going on within the Ministry of Defence to determine future locations for both service and headquarters personnel. The aim is wherever possible to rationalise and concentrate personnel on existing defence sites away from London and the south-east. Certain RAF recruitment activities will transfer to RAF Cranwell, with the addition of 89 service and 70 civilian jobs for the region. At present, no posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield.

Submarine Notification Scheme

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has come to a conclusion on the extension of the submarine notification scheme to cover the whole of the Minches.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Extension of the SUBFACTS notification scheme is one of the subjects covered in a consultation document on submarine operations and fishing vessels which has recently been circulated to fishing industry representatives, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. A decision on the areas to be covered by the extended arrangements will be made once this consultation has been completed.

Cwrt-y-Gollen Camp

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision will be made in the near future by the Ministry of Defence to ensure the education of the children of service personnel shortly to move into Cwrt-y-Gollen camp, Crickhowell.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The responsibility for making provision for the education of the children of service personnel in the United Kingdom rests with local education authorities.

Defence Contracts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what defence contracts have benefited Basildon in each of the last three years.

Mr. Alan Clark: The number and value of defence contracts placed in the Basildon/Southend-on-Sea area are as follows:

1990-91—311 contracts valued at £34·733 million.

1991-92—280 contracts valued at £18·175 million to end January.

Figures for earlier years could not be provided without disproportionate cost and effort.

Pacific Atomic Tests

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of whether former service man Andrew Dickson, now of Wakefield, was contaminated from radioactive fallout from atomic bombs tested in the atmosphere over the Pacific in 1959; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 9 March 1992]: In general it is not the policy of this Department to detail individual dose records which are medically confidential. Almost all participants in the United Kingdom nuclear test programme, however, were not exposed to ionising radiation from the tests. An independent study by the National Radiological Protection Board showed neither a loss of life expectancy nor an overall increase in the incidence of malignant disease.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Basildon Crown Court

Mr. Amess: To ask the Attorney-General when he proposes to start the building of a Crown court in Basildon.

The Attorney-General: It is expected that construction of a Crown court in Basildon will commence in the summer of 1993.

HEALTH

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds (a) in each individual health authority in England and (b) in each health trust in England and were designated (i) for intensive care and (ii) for children's intensive care; how many of such beds were closed or otherwise not available for use on 31 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is not available in the form requested.

Organ Transplants

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further steps he intends to take to encourage more organ transplant donors.

Mr. Dorrell: We are continually looking at ways of improving the supply of donor organs.

Hospital Beds, Leeds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) acute and (b) long-stay hospital beds there were in the Leeds metropolitan district in each year since 1979 shown (i) in total and (ii) by hospital.

Mr. Dorrell: Details requested about acute beds for each year from 1979 are given in the tables. Information about the total number of long-stay beds and the number of long-stay beds by hospital is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mrs. P. Smith, the chairman of Leeds health authority, for details.

NHS Estate

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate for every district health authority and trust in England the amount required to bring the national health service estate to a condition B, exhibiting only minor deterioration.

Mr. Dorrell: I will write to the hon. Member.

Hospital Services, London

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the report on hospital services in London.

Mr. Dorrell: In October 1991, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science appointed Sir Bernard Tomlinson, assisted by a small team of experts, to advise us on London's health services, and on medical education and research issues in the capital. This appointment is for about 12 months. During that time Sir Bernard will provide us with advice on the many aspects of his remit. We have not requested the production of a single report.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on recent changes in waiting lists and waiting times in Greenwich.

Mr. Dorrell: Provisional figures for January 1992 show that since last March, the number of patients waiting over two years in Greenwich health authority has fallen by 91 per cent. and the number over one year by 41 per cent. The authority—along with all other authorities—expects to have no patient waiting more than two years by 31 March.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the spending, in real terms, each year since 1974 on the family health services authority and on the hospital services in the Greenwich area.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested for the years since 1 April 1982, which is derived from annual accounts submitted to the Department, is shown in the table. This shows overall, real-terms increases, measured at 1991-92 prices, in revenue expenditure between 1982-83 and 1990-91 of 29·9 per cent. for family health services and 3·6 per cent. for hospital and community health services, Greenwich 1·2 per cent. and Bexley 7·7 per cent.

Expenditure figures for individual health authorities are not readily available centrally for 1974-75. However, for Greenwich and Bexley taken together the relevant annual accounts record total revenue expenditure on hospital and community health services—HCHS—and family health services—formerly family practitioner services—of £44·4 million cash in 1975-76, £62 million cash in 1978-79 and £181·3 million cash in 1990-91, the latest year available.

The figures represent increased expenditure in 1990-91 in real terms of 12·5 per cent. on 1975-76 and 15·2 per cent. on 1978-79, measured at 1991-92 prices.

Annual accounts of the Greenwich and Bexley Health Authorities and the Greenwich and Bexley Family Health Services Authority. (Predecessor Greenwich and Bexley Area Health Authority: Greenwich and Bexley Family Practitioner Committee).

Notes:

1. The figures have been expressed at 1991-92 prices by the use of Gross Domestic Product deflators.
2. HCHS covers total expenditure managed or accounted for by the health authorities during the years concerned and includes hospital, community health and other services.
3. All expenditure on family health services—FHS (formerly family practitioner services) is essentially regarded as current (ie revenue) expenditure. It is not strictly attributable to particular districts and is recorded in annual accounts after the deduction of charges to patients.

4. The FHS figures for the years since 1 April 1985 also include the administrative expenses of the Greenwich and Bexley Family Health Services Authority which are shown below. Prior to 1 April 1985 the Greenwich and Bexley Family Practitioner Committee was associated with the Bexley Health Authority/Greenwich and Bexley Area Health Authority and its administrative costs formed a comparatively small part of those health authorities' total expenditure and are not separately identifiable.

NHS Trusts

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the work of the Royal Free trust.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We receive information on all the first wave NHS trusts and we are glad to say that the Royal Free is doing well. We are especially pleased to note that since becoming a trust the Royal Free has opened a new AIDS day care, out-patient, and counselling centre. It is also pleasing to note that the Royal Free has sucessfully devised and launched its own "Learning from Patients" initiative. This scheme sits particularly well with the spirit and aims of the patients charter.

We are delighted to note the increase in admissions which the Royal Free has achieved since becoming a trust. This is illustrated by the fact that in the trust's first year ordinary admissions increased by 4·2 per cent. We are very pleased to note the trust's success in reducing its waiting lists. For example in June 1991 there were 560 people waiting over a year for general surgery, currently no one has to wait over a year, a reduction of 100 per cent. in seven months.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provisions prevent a hospital trust or other trust from seeking to leave the national health service.

Mr. Dorrell: By virtue of section 5(a) of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is empowered to establish NHS trusts to assume responsibility for the ownership and management of hospitals or other establishments or facilities previously provided by health authorities. The order establishing the trust sets out its functions and it may only undertake to treat private patients and generate income to the extent that this does not interfere with the performance of its obligations under any NHS contract or the obligations imposed on the trust by its establishment order.

Brook Hospital

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received since July 1991 on the future of the Brook hospital from the Brook Hospital Defence Campaign.

Mr. Dorrell: We have not received any representations from this organisation.

St. Thomas's Hospital

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the timetable for St. Thomas's hospital to become an NHS trust.

Mr. Dorrell: St. Thomas's was established as a NHS trust on 1 November 1991 and will, subject to the recommendations to be made to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State by the inquiry headed by Sir Bernard Tomlinson, become fully operational on 1 April 1993.

Childhood Diseases

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on recent changes in the levels of child protection against avoidable illnesses or diseases.

Mr. Dorrell: The latest estimates for national childhood immunisation uptake are:

Diphtheria, Tetanus and Polio vacines—93 per cent. at 18 months.

Whooping cough—88 per cent. at 18 months.

Measles, Mumps and Rubella—90 per cent. at 24 months.

Notifications of these diseases are now running at exceptionally low levels, and provisional returns show that in 1991 no child died from acute measles or whooping cough. The introduction of measles, mumps and rubella immunisation in October 1988, the GP targets scheme in April 1990 and the accelerated infant schedule in May 1990, have all contributed to this success. We plan to add another vaccine, "Hib", to the programme from October 1992. This will protect young children against invasive haemophilus disease, a major cause of bacterial meningitis.

Human Organs

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with his counterparts in other EC countries about establishing an EC directive banning the sale of human organs.

Mr. Dorrell: None. The sale of human organs for transplantation is prohibited in the United Kingdom by the Human Organ Transplant Act 1989.

Nurses

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses are currently employed by the national health service; how many there were five years previously; and how many in 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The whole-time equivalent number of nursing and midwifery staff, including agency staff, employed by the NHS in England was 402,100 at September 1990, 401,200 at September 1985 and 358,400 at September 1979. These figures are derived from the Department's annual census of non-medical manpower. They have not been adjusted for the reduction in nurses' working hours during 1980-81 from 40 to 37·5 hours per week.

Adoption

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking in relation to children coming to this country from Romania for adoption.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I understand that the Romanian Adoption Committee is not at present authorising arrangements for overseas adoption pending agreement with foreign Governments on the arrangements to be made. A delegation of officials from the Department is at present in Romania and I hope that a voluntary working arrangement can shortly be agreed on behalf of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will establish a helpline for local authorities and prospective adopters seeking information on adoption from overseas.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made with setting up a helpline for inter-country adoption; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have now reached an agreement with the Bridge Child Care Consultancy who will host the project to start as soon as possible. The Bridge is a well-established registered charity with a reputation for work with children in substitute families and I am confident that they will provide an excellent base for this project. The objective of the project is to provide a service of sound information on intercountry adoptions and for prospective adopters themselves. The project will not arrange adoptions for particular children.

The grant of the order of £43,000 will be for six months in the first instance during which time requirements for the service will be assessed.

The project will be steered by a board on to which I am inviting members from statutory and voluntary sector.

GPs (Referrals)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to the number of written referral requests by general practitioners to consultant ophthalmologist out-patient clinics for each of the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley The information available centrally is given in the table.

Consultant Ophthalmology Out-patient clinics, NHS hospitals, England

Year	General practitioner written referral requests
1987-88	451,006
1988-89	467,371
1989-90	462,710
1990-91	478,141

Eye Tests

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether his Department has been monitoring the costs charged by optometrists for a private eye test; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will conduct any further surveys into the numbers of people having their eyes tested.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department collects information on NHS sight tests only. Other sight tests are private transactions and, as such are inappropriate for Government information gathering. Surveys conducted by the optical profession indicate that the total number of sight tests has returned to 1987 levels, the last typical year before changes in the sight testing arrangements were announced.

Hypertension and Diabetic Clinics

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives have been taken by the Government in developing specialist hypertension and diabetic clinics.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Clinics are held by hospital consultants and by some general practioners for the treatment of diabetes. Some hospitals have specialist hypertension clinics and some GPs run clinics which include screening for hypertension.

Kevin Rooney

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the case of Kevin Rooney.

Mr. Dorrell: An independent inquiry has been established by the North East Thames regional health authority. The chairman is Mr. Andrew Collins QC. The other members are Dr. Oscar Hill, consultant psychiatrist, St. Luke's Woodside hospital, and Mr. Michael Taylor, director of social services, London borough of Hillingdon. The committee will seek other professional advice as the need arises.

The terms of reference are:

> "To inquire into the arrangements for the assessment, care, discharge and follow-up of Mr. Kevin Rooney by the mental health and related services in City and Hackney Health Authority and North East Thames Region;
>
> To consider the adequacy of these arrangements;
> To report their findings and to recommend any action which, in the light of these, might assist the assessment and care of mentally disordered patients and the protection of those patients and the public from the risk of harm."

The committee has been asked to report by July 1992.

Infant Deaths

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the numbers of infant deaths each year between 1974 and the most recent year for which figures are available (a) in numbers and (b) as a rate per thousand live births.

Mr. Dorrell: The information for the period 1974-1990, is given in the table.

Infant deaths, England and Wales 1974-1990: (a) Numbers; (b) rates (per 1,000 live births)

Waiting Lists

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the change in waiting lists in all specialties of health care in each of the last three years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give, by specialty and by region, the decrease in the numbers of people waiting over two years during his recent initiative to reduce long waits.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 February 1992]: The latest information available centrally by region and specialty is given in the table. Provisional figures for January show that since last March the number of patients waiting over two years in all specialties has fallen by a further 30,730—60 per cent. in January alone, over-two-year waiters fell by 30 per cent.—the largest monthly fall ever.

Includes ordinary admissions and day case waiting lists.

n/l denotes no one waiting over two years at March 1990 and March 1991.

Positive values indicate an increase from March 1990 to March 1991.

Negative values indicate a decrease from March 1990 to March 1991.

Drugs Abuse, Basildon

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives and programmes have been launched over the past five years to prevent drug abuse in Basildon.

Mr. Dorrell: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Disabled Organisations, Basildon

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what grants and help has been made available to disabled organisations in Basildon in each of the last five years.

Mr. Dorrell: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Patient Statistics

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will give the number of in-patients, out-patients and day patients treated in the northern region in 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Dorrell: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Lead

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to amend the law relating to lead levels in the light of recent research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department keeps under review the results of research into the effects of lead on health and advises as necessary those Departments that are responsible for legislation to control exposure to lead.

I understand that there are no proposals currently to amend any regulations or guidelines relating to lead levels.

Measures already taken have reduced lead exposure through petrol, water, air, food, industrial emissions, paint, cosmetics, ceramic glazes and toys, and monitoring programmes have shown a continuing fall in blood lead levels in children and adults.

The Government's policy remains to contain and reduce exposure to lead wherever practicable.

Community Pharmacists

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the factors taken into account in attributing the profit of £20·6 million under the community pharmacists balance sheet in its final year of operation 1988-89.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Pure profit was calculated at 1 per cent. of the total cost of labour, overheads, interest charges, ingredients and containers.

Children

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to give assistance to the international initiative, Children Youth Families; what help he is giving to the Boys and Girls Welfare Society in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: During 1992-93, the Department will relocate to Leeds around 1,100 posts in the National Health Service Management Executive and the National Health Service Estates Agency. There are no plans at present to relocate further posts, to Leeds or elsewhere.

Immunisation

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reports of serious adverse reactions to immunisation there have been in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The reports were as follows:

Year	Number of reports
1982	125
1983	104
1984	165
1985	160
1986	162
1987	121
1988	242
1989	272
1990	210
1991	159

A report of a suspected adverse reaction does not necessarily denote a causal association between the reaction, the outcome and the vaccine.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reports of serious adverse reactions to the measles, mumps and rubella vaccine there have been in each year since it has been widely used.

Mrs. Viginia Bottomley [holding answer 2 March 1992:] Measles, mumps and rubella vaccine was introduced in this country in October 1988. Reports of suspected serious adverse reactions since then have been as follows:

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the ratio of intensive care beds per 1,000 of the population or other convenient measures, in Coventry, the west midlands, and the United Kingdom; and what is the ratio of intensive care beds to the total number of national health service beds in Coventry, the west midlands and the United Kingdom at (a) the latest convenient date, (b) three years ago, (c) seven years ago and (d) 12 years ago.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 9 March 1992]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Health Service, York

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many registered private hospital and nursing home beds there were in the York health authority area, and previously in York health district, in 1979 and each year since then.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 11 March 1992]: The information available centrally is given in the table. Information prior to 1985 is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the York health authority for details. Private hospitals, homes and clinics registered under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984, in York health authority area are as follows:

Number of beds in private institutions

Year	Nursing Homes	[1]Hospitals
1985	414	24

1990-91	1,218	34

[1] Private institutions with operating theatres.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many full-time equivalent hospital doctors worked in York health authority hospitals, and previously in York health district hospitals, in 1974 and each year since then;

(2) how many national health service staff, expressed (a) in terms of a full-time equivalent and (b) in terms of total hours worked, were employed by York health authority, and previously in York health district, in 1974 and each year since then.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 11 March 1992]: The available data are shown in the following table:

TRANSPORT

Marine Accidents (Reports)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to publish the marine accidents investigation branch report into the Wilhemina J and the Zulficar.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents expects to submit his report to the Secretary of State around mid April; following which it will be published.

Quality Assurance

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will restrict the awarding of his Department's contracts to companies with accredited quality assurance;

(2) if he will make a further statement on his policy regarding quality assurance and companies tendering for his Department's contracts;

(3) what favourable consideration he gives when awarding his Department's contracts to companies which have accredited quality assurance.

Mr. Chope: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Seafreight Freeway

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North with a copy of all reports relating to the Seafreight Freeway incident of 1988.

Mr. McLoughlin: The investigation into the engine room fire on board the Seafreight Freeway on 23 May 1988 was carried out by the Department on behalf of Bermuda, the flag state. A report was produced for the Bermudian authorities, but was not generally released.

Road Improvement Schemes

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the value of road improvement schemes for Yorkshire/Humberside between (a) 1979 and 1987 and (b) 1987 and 1991; and how much is due to be spent over the next five years.

Mr. Chope: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Red Routes (London)

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend the consultation period on the red route proposals for London.

Mr. Chope: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Taxis

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he plans to make any adjustments to the existing policy of supply of taxi services to registered disabled persons by licensed taxi cab operators in the Greater London area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: No. This is a matter for the London boroughs, which operate the London taxicard scheme.

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on Government policy on subsidies for the transport by taxis and similar vehicles of registered disabled persons making essential journeys.

Mr. McLoughlin: Throughout the country the provision and funding of concessionary fares schemes for elderly and disabled people and special service transport —for example, dial-a-ride services—are responsibilities of local authorities. Some special services in London are also provided by London Transport.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library copies of the working papers produced by his Department and British Rail for the high-level forum on the channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Rifkind: No papers were produced for the inaugural meeting of the high-level consultative forum on the rail link held on 17 February. Some of the material for subsequent meetings will need to be confidential to forum members so as to avoid generating unnecessary blight.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: One formal relocation review—of part of the Department's highways, safety and traffic command—is currently in progress.

The review has only recently begun and a short list of locations has yet to be drawn up.

M3

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was his original estimate of the cost of the M3 extension from Bar End to Compton; what is his current estimate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Basildon

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to place "Welcome to Basildon" signs on trunk roads and motorways in the Basildon area.

Mr. Chope: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Citizens Charter

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the impact of the citizens charter on the standards of rail services delivered to Pitsea, Basildon and Laindon stations.

Mr. McLoughlin: The objective of BR's passengers charter is to raise standards on all lines, including the London, Tilbury and Southend line. To this end it outlines a range of measures to encourage efficient management and to make BR more responsive to customers' needs. On the London, Tilbury and Southend line a further key factor in achieving a significant improvement in quality of service will be the £50 million resignalling programme for which BR intends to let a contract shortly.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Village Halls

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to date of zero-rating the construction of new village halls and those buildings which are similarly treated for VAT purposes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that this information is not available because builders do not have to identify the value of this work separately in their VAT returns.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many refunds of VAT under section 20 of the Value Added Tax Act 1983 have been made to parish councils in connection with building work for voluntary village halls, carried out as part of the council's non-business activity; and what is the value of these refunds.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This information is not available. Local authorities are not required to distinguish, in their VAT returns, the tax refunded under section 20 from the tax deducted on their business inputs; nor are they required to itemise the section 20 tax to reveal the sort of information requested by my hon. Friend.

VAT

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which organisations have so far been recognised by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise as falling within schedule 3 S.I. note 4(1) Finance Act 1989 relating to charging of VAT at zero rate on the construction of a new building for a charity use.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Customs and Excise do not have any formal system of "recognition". Any charity constructing a new building for the use specified in note (4) to group 8 of schedule 5 to the VAT Act 1983, as amended by the Finance Act 1989, is eligible to claim zero-rating by giving a certificate to the building contractor or developer.

Civil Servants (Travel Expenses)

Mr. Bevan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each Government Department, including executive agencies, their estimated expenditure on travel and associated expenses incurred by civil servants in the current year.

Mr. Maples: This information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of civil servants in each of the last five years.

Mr. Maples: This information can be found in the publication "Civil Service Statistics" 1991 edition, which is held in the House of Commons Library.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those parts of his Department including the Inland Revenue and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation; to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Among the Chancellor's departments, a relocation review is currently in progress in the Registry of Friendly Societies, though none of the posts are expected to go to the east midlands. Under the current policy, departments review the location of their work regularly and systematically with a view to making best use of resources. As a result, the Chancellor's departments have announced relocation decisions involving more than 9,300 posts, of which more than 2,300 Inland Revenue posts are relocating to the east midlands, including 2,100 to Nottingham and 160 to Leicester.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, columns 163-64, if he will list by Department the distribution of the 24,000 Government Department posts still under review for relocation; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The departmental distribution of the 24,000 posts which were in the relocation review process in June 1991 is as follows:

Department	Review started	Review planned
Trade and Industry	3,110	—
Property Holdings	—	1,640
Defence	2,280	12,000

National Income

Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the latest Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development figures for per capita national income for the 20 most prosperous countries.

Mr. Maples: Following are the latest OECD estimates of gross domestic product per capita in 1991, using purchasing power parities for the 20 most prosperous OECD countries.

Low Incomes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what definition of low incomes he used to determine that 4 million people on low incomes will pay income tax at only the 20p rate; and how many of those 4 million people will lose benefit as a result of the new 20 per cent. lower tax rate.

Mr. Maude: The new 20 per cent. tax rate applies to the first £2,000 of taxable income in 1992-93. Nearly 4 million taxpayers will pay tax only at this new rate as their taxable income is £2,000 or less.

Of these, about half a million will be entitled to a smaller amount of income-related benefit as a result of the introduction of the lower rate band, when their benefit is next assessed.

TESSA

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 28 November 1991, Official Report, column 588, if, in his regular review of the tax-exempt special savings account scheme, he will consider what measures may need to be taken to attract new money to the scheme rather than funds switched from other savings products.

Mr. Maude: The objective of TESSA was to encourage the culture of thrift and, by giving tax relief only to accounts held for five years, to make savings less liquid. The proportion of new savings attracted into the scheme is likely to increase. The TESSA rules are designed to be as simple as possible and I have no current plans to change them.

Budget

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from pensioners in Basildon about the Budget.

Mr. Maples: A large number of Budget representations have been received from pensioners, but we cannot separately calculate the number from Basildon except at excessive cost.

Pensions

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the most recent estimates of the number of people who are (a) under state retirement age and (b) over state retirement age, and receiving (i) an occupational pension and (ii) a personal pension, giving in each case the number who are (1) non-taxpayers, (2) basic rate taxpayers and (3) higher rate taxpayers in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 13 March 1992]: Available estimates for 1992-93 for taxpayers with occupational pensions are as follows. I regret that information on personal pension recipients is not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Research Funding

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria he uses in determining whether or not research applications for his Department's funding are near market.

Mr. Leigh: The DTI does not normally support near-market R and D under its innovation programmes. Research and development work is prima facie near-market if its primary objective is the development of a specific product or process for commercial sale or use. Typically, near-market R and D will display low technological risks, and the returns from the project will mostly accrue to the firm itself, with externalities or wider benefits being relatively minor. Such risks as there are will largely be commercial. Commercial risks are generally inappropriate for Government to underpin.

However, exceptions may be made where, for instance, enterprises may lack some of the necessary information to enable them to make a sensible judgment on their competitive position or on the way the market will develop, for example in the case of small firms, or where commercial outcomes may be significantly affected by future United Kingdom, foreign or international legislation. Moreover, Government support may be considered if a project exhibits a significant degree of both technical risk and wider benefits, or if it exhibits one of these characteristics to a very marked degree, or for other policy reasons such as the promotion of international collaboration or the facilitation of exports. The case for support would be strengthened if other forms of market failure were shown to exist. The project would also need to satisfy established criteria such as additionality, viability, degree of innovation and value for money.

China

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the export from the United Kingdom of surveillance equipment and instruments of torture to the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Sainsbury: The export of a range of equipment that may be used for surveillance is controlled by the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1991. As to "instruments of torture" I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 23 January, Official Report, columns 293-94.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: The locations of some 300 posts in the Radiocommunications Agency and 120 in parts of the Insolvency Service are currently under review. None of these is planned for relocation to the east midlands.

Scottish Bankruptcy System

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the cost to date of the evaluation process of the Scottish bankruptcy system initiated in March 1990; and whether the inquiry has considered (a) the provision of insolvency advice to the public by means of helplines or otherwise and (b) procedures in (i) other European countries, (ii) the United States of America and (iii) Canada.

Mr. Redwood: No specific figures are available for the cost of the evaluation process. The details of the review are confidential, but all points raised by those who submitted comments have been taken into consideration.

Newspaper Recycling

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to offer financial support for investment in newspaper recycling at Aylesford, Kent.

Mr. Lilley: Having consulted my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, I decided to consider an application from the Swedish paper-making company, SCA, for a grant under the assistance to exceptional projects facility. I took that decision primarily because of the significant environmental benefits which the proposed new mill, at Aylesford in Kent, would provide.

After thorough appraisal, we propose to offer a £20 million grant to the company to encourage it to invest £260 million in a newspaper recycling plant at Aylesford. Our proposal will require the approval of the House and the agreement of the European Commission which has been told about the project.

This investment will quadruple the amount of newsprint currently produced at Aylesford from 100 per cent. recycled fibre. The plant will consume 430,000 tonnes of waste paper a year, much of it from household waste paper. This will make a vital contribution to the achievement of the Government's recycling targets.

The Aylesford project would be the first to produce this volume of newsprint from 100 per cent. recycled waste and it will have the immediate environmental benefit of reducing the need for landfill.

Section 8(8) of the Industrial Development Act 1982, requires that the assistance proposed be authorised by a resolution of this House. The resolution will offer an opportunity to give more details about the project and to debate its merits.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Local Offices

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many offices providing public access for the purpose of claiming benefit, including unemployment benefit, were in operation on 1 April 1979, and at the latest available date, in Great Britain.

Mr. Jack: The payment of social security benefits, excluding unemployment benefit, is the responsibility of the Department of Social Security. We are unable to supply precise figures for social security offices for 1979, as records are not readily available, but it is estimated that there were about 800 offices open to the public at that time. These included both national insurance offices and area offices which dealt solely with supplementary benefit.

At 30 September 1991, the latest available date for which figures are held, there were 694 offices providing public access. This reduction was in part due to the creation of integrated local offices, combining some former national insurance offices and area offices. Overall there has been an increase in the accessibility to the service available including the provision of improved telecommunications, better publications and services such as Freeline.

I understand from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment that precise figures for 1979 are not held centrally, but there were about 1,000 unemployment benefit offices open to the public at that time. At 31 January 1992, the latest date for which figures are held, there were 1,028 such offices.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if will update the figures provided for the hon. Member for Jarrow (Mr. Dixon) on 7 February 1985, Official Report, columns 685-86, on the level of state old age pensions as a percentage of current gross average earnings.

Mr. Jack: There are no meaningful, updated comparable statistics available on average earnings in the member states of the European Community, and I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 14 January at column 552.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answers to the hon. Member for Brighton, Kemptown (Mr. Bowden) of 27 March 1990, Official Report, column 161-62, using the 1989 family expenditure survey on pensioner incomes.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested for 1989 is not yet available. In 1988, 16 per cent. of pensioner units received all their income from state benefits compared with 23 per cent. in 1979. The original tables have been updated (a) to include details of the information held using the 1988 family expenditure survey and (b) with medians rather than means used to calculate the average incomes in each quintile and decile. The updated tables are as follows:

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many additional pensioners will be brought into means testing by becoming eligible for income support as a result of the proposed addition to the income support pensioner premium.

Miss Widdecombe: It is estimated that up to half a million pensioners on low incomes will become newly entitled to claim income-related benefits from October. Around three quarters of these will qualify for income support, and the remainder for housing benefit and or community charge benefit.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of the real-terms increase in benefit expenditure on the elderly is attributable to the commencement and growth of spending on additional pensions with contributory benefit between 1978-79 and the latest available date.

Miss Widdecombe: Benefit expenditure on the elderly rose by 32·6 per cent. in real terms between 1978-79 and 1991-92. Additional pensions account for 4·4 per cent. real terms growth between those years, and all other benefits account for 28·2 per cent. real terms growth.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Brighton, Kemptown (Mr. Bowden) of 3 July 1990, Official Report, columns 513-16 concerning the income of retired households, using the 1989 family expenditure survey.

Miss Widdecombe: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer to the right hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Sir I. Gilmour) of 2 December 1991, Official Report, column 51, on pensioner incomes, using the information in the 1989 family expenditure survey.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is not yet available.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion and number of pensioners will benefit from the addition to the income support pensioner premium.

Miss Widdecombe: It is estimated that some 5 million people aged over 60 will stand to gain from the increases announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 10 March. About half these will gain from income support and about half from housing benefit and community charge benefit. Nearly half of all those over pension age will be entitled to extra benefit as a result of the increase.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Brighton, Kemptown (Mr. Bowden) of 18 October 1991, Official Report, columns 273-74, regarding pensioners' living standards, to take account of the 1989 family expenditure survey results.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is not yet available.

Income and Benefits Statistics

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give, for each uprating date since November 1979, (a) the cash level, (b) the percentage increase on the previous year, (c) the percentage increase in the retail prices index since the previous year, (d) the percentage increase in adult male gross average full-time earnings since the previous year, (e) the percentage increase in adult male average full-time earnings net of national insurance and income tax since the previous year, for (i) unemployment benefit, (ii) sickness benefit, (iii) statutory sick pay since its introduction, (iv) child benefit, (v) retirement pension, (vi) invalidity benefit, (vii) one-parent benefit and (viii) maternity benefit at the single and couple rate, where appropriate.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is in the tables. As the information requested in (c), (d) and (e) is identical for all the benefits—with the exception of statutory sick pay, which was uprated on a different month from the other benefits mentioned here from 1983 until 1987. This is given once in table 1.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 510, on the number of households claiming a social security benefit, if he will indicate in what form information is available.

Mr. Jack: Broad estimates of households' receipt of benefits including retirement pension could be made from the family expenditure survey, subject to some difficulties such as underreporting of certain benefits. These estimates could be obtained for the sequence of years 1979, 1981, 1983, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989 only at disproportionate cost. For the other years, data are not readily available in the form requested and would involve significantly more work, again at disproportionate cost.

Reliable information on households' receipt of benefits excluding retirement pension is not available for any year because survey data do not distinguish accurately between receipt of supplementary benefit/income support by pensioners and contributory retirement pensions.

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of income support who are entitled to a disability premium are aged (a) 18 to 19, (b) 20, (c) 21, (d) 22, (e) 23 and (f) 24 years.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is shown in the table.

Age group	Number of recipients (thousands) Disability premium	Severe disability premium	Total
18-19	10	—	10
20	6	*	6
21	6	*	6
22	6	*	6
23	5	*	5
24	6	*	6

Notes:

1. All figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Number of claimants * denotes fewer than 499.
3. Included in the above table are 2,000 lone parents who receive income support at the rate appropriate to a person aged 25 or over.

Source: Annual statistical inquiry May 1990.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give his estimate of the number of separate households comprising 16 and 17-year-olds not eligible for income support.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households are currently receiving income support premiums under the Social Security Act 1986; and how many households he estimates would be eligible for this help but for their lack of accommodation.

Miss Widdecombe: In May 1990, 2,898,000 income support claimants were in receipt of one or more premiums. The number of income support claimants without accommodation was 8,000, but it is not possible to estimate how many of these would have been entitled to a premium if they had entered accommodation.

Residents of boarding establishments and hostels, including homeless families placed in temporary accommodation by local authorities, are entitled to the full range of income support premiums.

Source: Income support annual statistics inquiry May 1990.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) of 5 November, Official Report, column 84, on premia paid with income support, if he will give the total number of claimants for each of the premia.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is given in the table:

Premium	Total number of recipients
Higher pensioner	688,000
Enhanced pensioner	314,000
Pensioner	496,000
Severe disability (higher)	13,000
Severe disability (lower)	50,000
Disability	331,000
Lone parent	793,000
Disabled child	18,000
Family premium	1,144,000

Note: Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
Source: Annual statistical inquiry May 1990.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support claimants there were with deductions (a) for arrears of community charge and (b) for recovery of social fund loans, at the end of the most recent months for which figures are available.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 2 March 1992]: The latest information of the number of income support claimants with deductions for arrears of community charge deductions is contained in the Department's management information statistics for the quarter ending November 1991, a copy of which is available in the Library. The number of social fund loan recoveries made in the most recent month for which figures are available, January 1992, is 693,353. The figures are based on the number of people making repayments during the whole of January and not at the end of that month. It is not possible to exclude from these figures repayments made by people not in receipt of income support.

Home Visits

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 9 March 1992, Official Report, column 423, what information he has concerning the number of home visits, including specialist visits, excluding those for the purpose of investigating fraud, that were made per 1,000 claimants in 1991-92.

Mr. Jack: The administration of benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Staffing

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 6 March 1992, Official Report, column 318, regarding staffing, if he will give the total number of full-time equivalent staff in each year.

Miss Widdecombe: The total number of full-time equivalent staff administering the social security programme for the years 1979-80 to 1990-91 is in the table.

	Number
1979-80	88,429
1980-81	87,902
1981-82	87,578
1982-83	85,698
1983-84	82,975
1984-85	82,527
1985-86	83,869
1986-87	85,276
1987-88	89,023
1988-89	87,137
1989-90	81,633
1990-91	79,715

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the maximum daily amount an employed person was allowed to earn per day without loss of entitlement to unemployment benefit in 1979-80 and 1991-92.

Mr. Jack: Unemployment benefit is primarily for those who are entirely without work. However, a day on which an unemployed person does a small amount of work in a subsidiary occupation can still count as a day of unemployment provided he satisfies the usual conditions and earnings for that day do not exceed the daily limit. In 1979-80 the limit was 75p a day and in 1991-92 it is £2 a day.

This represents an increase above the rate of growth in the retail prices index.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to change the 21-hour rule which enables unemployed claimants to study part time; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 11 March at column 527.

Transitional Payments

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his best estimate of the numbers who will still be in receipt of transitional additions in 1992-93; and if he will break it down by pensioners, families with children, lone parents and others.

Miss Widdecombe: It is estimated that immediately following the April 1992 uprating there will only be 10,000 people in receipt of income support transitional additions. The total can be broken down as follows:

	Number
Pensioners	2,000
Lone parents	1,000
Couples with children	[1]
Others	5,000

[1] Denotes a caseload of fewer than 500.
Note: Numbers have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Loss of Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what number and proportion of people affected by the proposed 20 per cent. income tax lower rate will lose benefit as a result.

Mr. Jack: On the introduction of the 20 per cent. income tax rate, all those receiving income-related benefits and who pay tax will be better off. In time the increased net earnings of those eligible for income-related benefits will result in the normal reductions in benefit levels which occur when net earnings are increased. The complex interaction of benefit upratings, tax changes and changes in personal circumstances at April 1992 make it difficult to determine with precision the number of people who will be affected, but we estimate that individual benefit levels will be reduced for around 1 million people out of the 25 million people who will benefit from the lower tax band.

Bickleigh Down Clinic

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which hon. Members were invited to inspect the site last month of the future Bickleigh Down clinic in the constituency of South Hams; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: We are not aware of any hon. Members from this Department invited to inspect a clinic at Bickleigh Down, but at the invitation of Plymouth city council I attended and performed its turf cutting ceremony at the site of the Plymouth Child Support Agency centre. All invitations for this event were issued by Plymouth city council, and my right hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mr. Clark) attended.

Students

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many full-time students are currently receiving housing benefits and income support, by entitlement category; and if he will express the total as a proportion of all full-time students who would be entitled to these benefits if they were not students.

Miss Widdecombe: The latest available data for term-time indicate that in May 1991, 5,200 students were receiving housing benefit. Of these, 1,200 were also in receipt of income support. Data for August 1991 show 3,100 students were receiving housing benefit of whom 1,600 were also in receipt of income support.

A breakdown of the different categories of student claiming and information about the number of students on income support but not on housing benefit are not available. Similarly, information on the number of students who would be eligible for benefits but for their student status is not available. However, previous survey data have shown that only a minority of students claimed benefits.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give his estimate of the number of households, by tenure, whose housing benefit is reduced because of non-dependants deductions; and if he will sub-divide this number by 16 to 17-year-old, 18 to 24-year-old, and 25 years old and over age groups.

Miss Widdecombe: Such information as is available is in the table.

Recipients whose Housing Benefit is reduced through non-dependent deductions: May 1990

Age of claimant	HB with non dependent deductions LA tenant	HB with non dependent deductions Private tenant	All cases
Non-IS cases

Disability

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households are currently receiving disabled living allowance and whether he will make a statement as to the effect of housing costs being excluded from calculations for this allowance.

Mr. Scott: Disability living allowance will not begin to be paid until 6 April 1992.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many inquiries were made through the benefit inquiry line by the end of February; and how many were concerned with (a) disability living allowance, (b) disability working allowance, (c) other disability benefits and (d) a combination of the above.

Mr. Scott: The provision of the benefit inquiry line is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and Public Information Office.

Relocation

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those parts of his Department which are currently under review for relocation; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to the east midlands; how many of these posts are being considered for relocation to Mansfield; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: During 1992-93 the Department of Social Security will relocate around 700 Benefits Agency staff to Leeds. Around 3,000 Child Support Agency staff will be located in centres at Falkirk, Belfast, Birkenhead, Dudley, Hastings and Plymouth during 1993.

The Contributions Agency has recently reviewed the effectiveness of its activities in local offices and there may be localised relocation of a small number of staff. In those locations where the Contributions Agency has plans to redeploy its resources, a departmental reception service will continue to be provided. There are no significant numbers moving to the east midlands, although there are proposals to increase staff in Mansfield by around six posts.

Benefits Claims, Scotland

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the target time scale for benefit claims to be dealt with in each region in Scotland.

Miss Widdecombe: The setting of targets in the Benefits Agency area directorates is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Social Fund

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many successful and unsuccessful applications were made to the social fund, in the last period for which figures are available, for help with (a) the cost of furniture and other essential household items, (b) rent in advance and (c) other items, by category, and where the application was successful, whether the assistance was provided by way of grant or loan, and the average amount of such assistance.

Mr. Scott: The available information for the period 1 April 1991 to 29 February 1992 is in the tables. Information regarding unsuccessful applications for specific items or services could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Social Fund Loans

	Number of awards	Size of average award (£)

Living expenses	924	77
Clothing and footwear	26,503	152
Bedding	6,152	156
Other	4,052	179

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of (a) crisis loans, (b) budget loans and (c) all loans from the social fund have gone to people aged 60 years and over.

Mr. Scott: The table shows the percentage of social fund loans awarded to people aged 60 and over from 1 April 1991 to 31 January 1992.

	Per cent.
Crisis loans	1·05
Budgeting loans	3·96
All loans	2·66

Carers

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how long is the average delay in application for carers' benefits in Scotland, by region, since 1989.

Mr. Scott: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would have been the gross additional cost, in cash terms and at 1991-92 prices, of uprating child benefit fully in line with inflation assuming each child in the family receives the same rate, in April of each year from 1988 to 1992.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 February 1992]: In 1992-93 we estimate that gross expenditure on child benefit will be £5·7 billion. If child benefit had been uprated each April from 1988 in line with the retail prices index, the rate payable for each child from April 1992 would be £9·95. It is estimated that to pay child benefit at this rate in 1992-93 would cost an additional £720 million gross or £470 million net, after allowing for the normal adjustments to other benefits. The extra help that has been made available to less well-off families since 1988 through the income-related benefits will be worth around £620 million in 1992-93.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

China

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the current number of political and religious prisoners of conscience held in the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Chinese authorities have said that there are 1·1 million inmates in prisons and reform camps in China, of whom 0·5 per cent.—5,500 people—have been indicted for so-called counter-revolutionary offences. Such offences often relate to those regarded in the west as prisoners of conscience. Some foreign researchers estimate that the real figures are much higher, but this cannot be verified.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the present BBC World Service broadcasts to the People's Republic of China; and if he has any plans to increase the service.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Broadcasting to China is a high priority. Broadcasts in Mandarin and Cantonese total 24 ½ hours and 5 ¼ hours a week respectively. The former will be increased by 3 ½ hours a week in early 1993, when the World Service has recruited the necessary specialist staff. World Service broadcasts in English are also audible in China.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has of the number of executions in the People's Republic of China last year.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: According to Amnesty International, there have been published accounts of more than 1,000 executions while unofficial sources suggest that up to 20,000 executions may have taken place in 1991. We have no means of verifying such figures.

Insolvency, France

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens currently imprisoned in France are presently seeking to prove insolvency under articles 752 and 756 of the French code of penal procedure.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We do not have the requested statistics. British nationals are not obliged to inform consular officers that they or their lawyers are negotiating a reduction or waiver of customs fines imposed by French courts.

Maastricht Treaty

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the reasons for the variation in the English translation of article 198a of the treaty agreed at Maastrict on 11 December 1991.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The first English version of article 198a referred to > "representatives of regional and local authorities"

but in the version signed at Maastricht the word "bodies" was substitited for "authorities". Jurists/linguists decided that the term "bodies" translated better the word "collectivités" in the French text.

Geneva Convention

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is now in a position to state when he will sign the additional protocols of the Geneva convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Not yet. Our consultations are still not complete.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about growth in overseas aid since 1986-87.

Mrs. Chalker: Between 1986-87 and 1990-91, the aid programme grew by 33·7 per cent. in cash terms, and 2·5 per cent. in real terms.

Additional Aid

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commnwealth Affairs what proposals have been made by the European Community for additional subsidies, grants and loans to north African countries and Jordan; and if he will state the amounts involved.

Mrs. Chalker: As part of the Community's new Mediterranean policy, European Community Foreign Ministers agreed in 1991 to the following new series of financial protocols for 1992-96;

	Grants and risk capital		Loans
	ecus million	£ million	ecus million	£ million
Algeria	70	[1]49	280	196
Morocco	218	153	220	154
Tunisia	116	81	168	118
Egypt	258	180	310	217
Jordan	46	32	80	56

[1] Approximate.

The above countries and others are also eligible for 300 million ecu—£210 million—in grants in support of structural adjustment; and for 230 million ecu—£161 million—in grants and 1,800 million ecu—£1,260 million—in loans for horizontal co-operation—projects benefiting more than one country in the region.

Bolivia (Soya Beans)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs further to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, column 167, what were the previous uses of the area now under cultivation for soya bean production.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 27 January 1992, Official Report, column 421.

WALES

Village Halls

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the village halls in Wales which have been assisted financially by the urban aid programme since June 1979, with an indication of the grant given to each, respectively.

Mr. David Hunt: The village halls assisted by the urban programme in Wales since June 1979 are listed in the table:

Name	Grant £	Financial year
Penybryn village hall, Rhymney Valley	72,000	1982-83
Gilwern village hall, Blaenau Gwent	3,789	1985-86
St. Brides village hall, Newport	79,500	1991-92
Pontneath Vaughan village hall, Brecknock	25,000	1991-92

Singleton Hospital

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce his decisions about the night casualty service at Singleton hospital.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend's policy is to allow at least two to three months after the end of the one-month appeal period for careful consideration of any representations made to him about a service change. The appeal period in respect of the Singleton hospital night-time casualty service ended on 28 February.

Conservation Areas

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance he proposes to issue to local authorities regarding the impact of large-scale retail development in conservation areas and on unlisted buildings in conservation areas.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Guidance on development proposals within conservation areas is provided in Welsh Office circular 61/81: "Historic Buildings and Conservation Areas". The Department has also issued guidance on large-scale retail development in planning policy guidance note 6: "Major Retail Development".

Copies of both documents are available in the Library of the House.

Roads

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total spending by central Government on roads in Wales since 1979; and how many miles of motorway and trunk roads have been laid since that year.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the spending per capita on roads in Wales.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total value of road starts in Wales planned in the next two financial years.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Since 1979, total net spending by central Government on the roads programme in Wales is almost £2 billion; including £360 million transport grant. Twenty-two miles of motorway and 145 miles of trunk road have been completed. Seven schemes totalling almost 18 miles are presently under construction. Twenty-three local authority schemes are being sponsored by transport grant.

Total expenditure on roads in Wales per head of population in 1990-91 was £145·49.

Six major trunk road scheme starts are planned for 1992-93. The total cost of these schemes is estimated to be £204 million. Starts in 1993-94 have not yet been announced, but 20 schemes, costing £391 million, are indicated over the next three years in the 1992 supplement to roads in Wales published in February.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the number of male and female unemployed in Ogmore, Mid-Glamorgan and Wales at the latest available date, together with the figures for the same areas in May 1979.

Mr. David Hunt: Figures that are consistent between 1979 and 1992 are available for Wales only. The seasonally adjusted figures in January 1992 were 97,100 males and 26,500 females. Corresponding figures for May 1979 were 49,800 and 19,000 respectively.

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were in work in Wales in May 1979; and what the figure is at the latest available date.

Mr. David Hunt: The number was 1,157,000 in June 1979, which has now increased to 1,175,000 on the latest available figure.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what figures he has for rural unemployment for (a) Clwyd South West and (b) Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: There is no classification by which unemployment can readily be categorised as rural.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state the number of male unemployed in Newport, Gwent and Wales at the latest available date.

Mr. David Hunt: In January 1992, there were 5,712, 16,063 and 101,149 unemployed male claimants in the Newport district, Gwent and Wales respectively.

Clwyd Health Authority

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the number of administrative staff employed by the Clwyd health authority; what percentage this is of the total number of staff employed; and what were the equivalent figures for 1979.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Between 1979 and 1990 the numbers of administrative and clerical staff and senior managers increased by 2 per cent. as a proportion of the total work force employed by the district health authority and the family health service authority in Clwyd.

This compares with the 3 per cent. increase in numbers of nurses and midwives over the same period.

Health Service Pay

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the difference between the amounts paid by the Welsh Office to Welsh area health authorities to pay for agreed pay rises in 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990 and the actual costs of the pay rises.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: Health authorities must meet the cost of pay awards from within the totality of the resources available to them. They receive a cash increase each year and may receive further funding in-year as a contribution toward the excess costs of review bodies' recommendations. These resources, together with the cash released from cost improvement programmes and income-generation schemes, have not only been sufficient to meet the cost of pay and price rises over the period since 1987 but permitted a sustained expansion in the volume of services.

The figures relating to the funding available to health authorities and the actual cost of pay awards is as follows:

	Purchasing power of health authorities[1] £ million	Actual cost of pay awards[2] £ million
1987-88	67·9	44·5
1988-89	83·8	[3]71·2
1989-90	65·6	49·0
1990-91	80·4	56·1

[1] Welsh Office and value for money unit, Welsh Health Common Services Authority.

[2] Health authorities in Wales.

[3] Includes the cost of the clinical regrading of nursing staff.

Hospital Trusts

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospitals in Wales have expressed an interest in applying for trust status.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: My right hon. Friend has invited applications from 14 health units for NHS trust status in April 1993. These cover 82 hospitals, 11,000 beds and contractual income of some £600 million. Including Pembrokeshire, some 65 per cent. of acute services and 60 per cent. of community services in Wales could be NHS trust based in 1993.

Small Businesses

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of the recession on small businesses in Wales; and what new initiatives he has taken to help local authorities help Welsh companies.

Mr. David Hunt: The number of VAT registered businesses in Wales increased by over 10 per cent. in the years 1988 to 1990—the latest year for which figures are available—to 8,250. Government policy to assist this sector is clearly working and the Welsh economy is strongly placed to respond to the economic upturn.

Environment Report

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish an annual report on the state of the environment in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The Welsh Office already publishes the "Environmental Digest for Wales." In addition my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales last September published the "Environment in Wales" report which described progress on environmental matters in Wales since the publication of the Government's White Paper "This Common Inheritance."

Local Government Finance

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met leaders of local authorities in Wales to discuss local government finance.

Mr. David Hunt: I chaired a meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance on 24 February to discuss implementation of the council tax.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the percentage change in the amount paid per household under community charge in Wales compared to the last year of domestic rates in real terms.

Mr. David Hunt: Average domestic rates per household in Wales for 1989-90, after domestic rate relief, were £327 or around £380 at 1991-92 prices, using the GDP deflator. The average community charge set for 1991-92 after community charge reduction grant was £92, or £184 per two charge payer household—52 per cent. less than the average domestic rates figure for 1989-90.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give an estimate of how much money could be saved by moving to unitary local government in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: My proposal for a structure of 23 unitary authorities is estimated to be cost neutral; I am placing in the Library of the House and in the Vote Office copies of the report submitted to me by financial consultants.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he has made to consult with hon. Members on options for local government reorganisation.

Mr. David Hunt: I have invited hon. Members to submit their views to me, and have held meetings with every Member who has requested one.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the South Glamorgan health authority concerning hospital closures.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: None.

Coal and Steel Industries

Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales were employed in the coal and steel industries in 1979; and what is the total at the latest available date.

Mr. David Hunt: In December 1979, 55,200 were employed in the steel industry in Wales. The current figure is some 18,000. In March 1979, 31,000 people were employed in the coal industry in Wales. The latest available figures show that some 2,800 people now work in the industry.

Buses

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from bus operators in Wales on the question of the dual sourcing of buses.

Sir Wyn Roberts: We have received no such representations.

Secure Accommodation

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce his proposals for the provision of secure accommodation.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: I announced in August 1991 proposals for the provision of a new secure unit in Wales. I made a further announcement on 25 February following consideration of the responses received to those proposals.

Rail Investment

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to meet the chairman of British Rail to discuss investment in rail services in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend is to meet Sir Bob Reid in the near future.

Housing Expenditure

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of the total expenditure by the Welsh Office on housing during the current financial year; and how this compares with similar expenditure in real terms in (a) 1979 and (b) 1987.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: The latest estimate of expenditure on housing in Wales in 1991-92 is £591 million, an increase of more than 7 per cent. in real terms on the comparable figures for 1987-88. No comparison is possible with expenditure in 1979-80, as figures for that year are not available on a consistent basis.

Eryri Hospital

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects work to take place on upgrading the Eryri hospital at Caernarfon into a full community hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Bennet: It is a matter for Gwynedd health authority to decide when work on the upgrading of Eryri hospital should start.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to strengthen the guidelines governing conflicts of interests involving board members and staff of the Welsh Development Agency and the agency's clients.

Mr. David Hunt: Requirements concerning board appointments and procedures are set out in the Welsh Development Agency Act 1975. Guidance is also contained in "Non Departmental Public Bodies: A Guide for Departments". The guide is kept under review.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency concerning the number of craft workshops available at the Old Cornmill, Porthmadog.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the Welsh Development Agency's Bangor regional office routine monitoring report dated 11 April 1989 in relation to the Old Cornmill, Porthmadog development and of the communication from the Bangor regional office to the agency's head office in December 1989, and of the chairman's first letter to the then agency chief executive referred to in his second letter to the present chief executive dated 25 November 1991 concerning the same development.

Mr. David Hunt: No.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he or his ministerial colleagues were informed of (a) the application for, and payment of, a rural conversion grant to Mr. Gwyn Jones, chairman of the Welsh Development Agency, (b) the request to Mr. Jones for a partial refund of the grant and (c) the basis on which the refund was assessed and its amount.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is:

(a)—on 13 January 1992

(b)—I was informed on 13 January 1992 that Dr. Jones had requested advice on the level of partial refund that might be involved.

(c)—on 18 February 1992.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Development agency on improving procedures in making senior agency appointments.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

Power Stations

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on licensing policy for gas-fired power stations by (a) PowerGen and National Power and (b) independent generators.

Mr. David Hunt: All proposals for new power plant are considered on their merits. All such projects are subject to the relevant provisions of the electricity and town and country planning Acts and also to the pollution controls operated by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the National Rivers Authority. These procedures ensure that power station projects take full account of general planning and environmental protection considerations.

Welsh National Opera

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the proposals for a new home for the Welsh National Opera Company.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The report of the feasibility study for a Cardiff Bay opera house is still under consideration and no firm decisions have yet been reached.

NHS Estate

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate for every health authority and trust in Wales the amount required to bring the national health service estate to a condition B, exhibiting only minor deterioration.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: District health authorities in Wales are required to review the cost of backlog maintenance annually and for 1990-91, they estimated that it would cost £186·3 million to bring the whole of the NHS estate in Wales to a standard where it is exhibiting only minor deterioration. There were no trusts in Wales at that time. This sum may be broken down by district health authority as shown in the table:

DHA	£ million

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 205

SESSION 1991–92

2nd March—16th March 1992

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
